PRINCIPAL RISKS
Investing in the Fund involves a high degree of risk, including the risk that a shareholder may receive little or no return on their investment or may lose part or all of their investment. Shares are speculative and illiquid securities appropriate only for investors who can tolerate a high degree of risk, do not require a liquid investment, and for whom an investment in the Fund does not constitute a complete investment program. Below is a summary of some of the principal risks of investing in the Fund:

No Operating History. The Fund is a recently organized, non-diversified, closed-end interval fund with no meaningful operating history. Its operating expenses may be significant and are typically higher than the expenses of similarly situated established funds.

Limited Liquidity of Shares. Shares are not listed on any securities exchange and no secondary market is expected to develop. Liquidity is provided only through quarterly repurchase offers of no less than 5% of the Fund's outstanding shares. Repurchase offers in excess of the minimum are at the discretion of the Board and are not guaranteed, and there is no guarantee an investor will be able to tender any or all of the shares the investor desires to tender. Shares should be considered an illiquid investment.

Non-Diversified Status. The Fund is classified as "non-diversified" under the Investment Company Act of 1940 and may invest a greater portion of its assets in a limited number of issuers or Underlying Funds, which may subject the Fund to greater risk and volatility than a diversified fund.

Multiple Levels of Fees and Expenses. Shareholders bear two layers of fees and expenses: the management fee and expenses at the Fund level, and asset-based fees, incentive allocations or carried interest, and expenses at the Underlying Fund level. These fees and expenses will reduce the Fund's returns.

Reliance on Underlying Managers; Limited Information. The Fund invests primarily through Underlying Funds and accounts managed by third-party managers. The Fund relies on the underlying managers' judgment, has limited ability to influence their decisions, and may receive limited or delayed information concerning their portfolios and valuations.

Valuation Risk. Most of the Fund's investments do not have readily available market prices and are valued in significant part based on estimates and information provided by Underlying Fund managers, which may be delayed, unaudited, or subject to later adjustment. Valuations used to strike the Fund's NAV may differ from the amounts ultimately realized.

Illiquidity of Underlying Investments. The Fund's underlying investments—including private credit, private equity, real estate, real assets, and uncorrelated strategies such as life settlements, litigation finance, reinsurance, and royalties—are themselves illiquid and restricted, and the Fund may be unable to dispose of them at favorable times or prices, which may in turn constrain the Fund's ability to fund repurchase offers.

Credit and Interest Rate Risk. A significant portion of the portfolio is allocated to private credit and other fixed-income-related strategies, which are subject to borrower default, deterioration in credit quality, prepayment and extension risk, and changes in interest rates.

Leverage Risk. The Fund and the Underlying Funds may use leverage, which magnifies the potential for gain or loss and increases the risk of investing in the Fund.

Asset Allocation and Strategy Risk. The Fund's multi-strategy allocation may not perform as intended; certain strategies (including hedge fund, venture capital, sports-related, and specialty finance exposures) involve speculative techniques, concentrated positions, and a high degree of business and financial risk.

Distribution and Tax Risk. There is no assurance the Fund will pay distributions at a particular level, and distributions may include a return of capital. The Fund's ability to qualify and remain eligible for tax treatment as a regulated investment company depends in part on information from, and the activities of, Underlying Funds that the Fund does not control.

Investors should consider a fund's investment goal, risks, charges, and expenses carefully before investing. The prospectus and/or the applicable summary prospectus contain this and other information about the fund, are available at <https://www.sec.gov/edgar/browse/?CIK=2120416>, and should be read carefully before investing. Investing involves risk. Principal loss is possible. This communication is not an offer to sell fund shares and is not soliciting an offer to buy fund shares in any state where the offer or sale is not permitted.
