

Have you ever challenged yourself trying to support a loved one? I was only 11 years old when my sister lost her hearing. I couldn't stand the idea that we might lose our bond. So I started learning American Sign Language to support her and maintain our connection. The progress was slow. But I got through it for a person I love. My commitment has paid off completely, and now I dream about designing communication systems that focus on inclusivity.