

I have always strived to help others using my knowledge.

Raised in a bilingual family, I found a way to do this by helping my classmates translate school forms for their non-English-speaking parents. Working with forms, I realized the massive value of accuracy. A single mistake could cost time, which makes it even more important to provide reliable support to families that need it.

I'm looking to obtain a law degree to help people overcome the administrative hurdles they face.