The presidential vote and English language

Even more extremic and less credible is the allusion of the presidential vote to the growth of English speaking in Puerto Rico. This argument has little base if it is realized that there is no opposition to the diffusion of the knowledge of English, as a second language, from any potential group in Puerto Rico, save the ultra-nationalist fringe. The desirability of Puerto Ricans knowing both Spanish and English is highly cherished. In fact, it is deplored that economic limitations led, during the period of rapid expansion of elementary ans secondary school enrollment to an scarcity of effective teaching of English which led to a relative loss in proficiency in that language as compared to the period when a much smaller proportion of school children attended school and continental or local teacher, proficient in English, could be employed at the salaries prevalent in the Puerto Rican school system. That the slight addition of English speeches that may be brought about by the presidential vote may have been consequential in the face of the present volume of English communication now in existence leds this committee to conclude that this negative argument should not be given thought.

THE PRESIDENTIAL VOTE AND INCORPORATION

We heard arguments that the presidential vote would convert Puerto Rico into an incorporated territory. Incorporated territories have all paid federal taxes and have been regarded as candidates for statehood whenever this should become convenient - whenever, usually, their population warranted the status of statehood. However, U.S. citizens in incorporated territories never voted for Presiden or Vice-President of the United States.

The distinction of the unincorporated territories was only made after 1898 when the United States found itself with territories different from those of the empty western lands of the 19th century. These new territories never fit well within the Constitution and democracy of the United States, for the Federal Goverment was reluctant either to rule them as subjects or to make them citizens awaiting statehood. We did not evaluate the controversial judicial and political history of unincorporation, but we did conclude that the issues of statehood, federal taxes, and the presidential vote were easily distinguished as separate questions which both Puerto Rico and the United States would certainly determine on their own merits, regardless of whether one could still argue that Puerto Rico was or was not incorporated. The utility of the unincorporated concept, we believe, has disappeared (except as an issue for argument among scholars). With or without the presidential vote, the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico exists and must be defined according to its Constitution, laws, and precedents as well as those of the union of which the Commonwealth is a permanent associate.

e presidential vote and Puerto Rico's cultural identity

There is probably more confusion and disagreement about this pic - as exemplified by the testimony of witnesses than about any her. The presidential vote as a threat to Puerto Rico's cultural lentify was freely alluded to by the opponents to this measure. at testimony made very little if any impression on this group. begin with there is very little distinction of what is meant by U.S. ltural influences and the cultural impact of the technology and y of life common to all the developed western societies in a tage of mass production and mass consumption of goods, coupled ith a high degree of application of science to economic processes nd pronounced urbanization. In the second place, Puerto Rico s is true of the entire world in general and of the Caribbean basin n particular has been the subject of that influence for a long time, nteceding the entrance into the American system and during 72 ears of association. What added strength to such influence may be roduced by the presidential vote - as compared to the Commonwealth s it has operated since its inception is insignificant, negligible nd inconsequential. Those advocating protection to cultural dentify have little ~~nx~~ if anything to fear from the addition~~x~~ f the presidential vote.

"Anyway I think the links of Puerto Rico to the mainland of the nited States are today so close and intended to be so close that it eems to me nearly grotesque to pretend that a further link such as he presidential vote would make a substantial difference in the cultural phere. I am leaving aside the arguments of the Independentistas, that is something else again.

MIGRATORY COTTON PICKERS IN ARIZONA

"PUERTO RICANS"

In 1926, the Arizona growers experimented with the recruiting of Puerto Ricans in the hope of securing a steady supply of cheap labor not subject to the United States Bureau of Immigration restrictions. The Bureau of Insular Affairs of the Department of the Interior and the Assistant Commissioner of Agriculture and Labor of Puerto Rico co-operated in a plan to bring three shiploads of agricultural workers from San Juan, P. R. According to a person (speaking in 1938) who he adventure, the attempt was a failure:

TRANSLATION

No. 5/2134

Subject: Meeting in behalf of the Spanish Popular Front

To: Chief of the Insular Police,
San Juan, Puerto Rico

1. This is to inform you that last night, from 6:30 to 10:45 o'clock, on a written permit issued by Mr. Joaquín Márquez, Mayor of this City, to Mr. Ventura Mijón and Mr. Juan Peña Reyes, of Humacao, a meeting in behalf of the Spanish Popular Front was held at the Muñoz Rivera square, this City, the following speakers taking part in the said act: Juan B. Matos, of Humacao, August Cueto, Bernard Jaffe, continental American, who, according to our information, works as a lawyer for the PRRA in San Juan, Juan Bautista Pagán, who was the latter's interpreter, Julián G. Ondina, Guillermo Atiles Mendoza and Esteban Martínez, all from San Juan.

2. The continental American, Bernard Jaffe, who was interpreted by Juan Bautista Pagán, after speaking about the Spanish situation, said that just what had happened in Spain during the monarchical government which, along with the corporations, had vilely exploited the workers and the suffering Spanish people, was at present happening in Puerto Rico and in the United States. He stated that he had observed how in Puerto Rico, those working men who in some way or other requested increase in wages were beaten in the streets by the police, and that there hardly was any freedom of speech, which was proved by the acts of the Government on April 16. The undersigned personally called the interpreter's attention and warned him that he might as well refrain from commenting the Ponce events there.

3. This act was personally attended to by the undersigned, Corporal Benigno Soto, Lance Corporal José R. Torres No. 489 and Policemen José Ferrand No. 25, Eduardo Reyes Millán No. 704 and Vicente Ortiz Poggi No. 405, and ended at the hour indicated above within complete order.

Time of death 11:50 P.M. (Hour and minute, a. m. or p. m.) Place of death Naval Station, San Juan, P.R.
Date of burial July 22, 1905. 190 Place of burial Deposited at Navy Yd., San Juan awaiting transfer to U. S.
Cause of death FRACTURA. (Taken from nomenclature, Form K.)

I HEREBY CERTIFY that Hunt, William Albert (Name in full, surname first.) Private, U.S.M.C., U. S. Navy, died while attached to the U.S. Naval Hospital, San Juan, Porto Rico. as set forth in the record of his case, as follows:*

At about 11:20 P.M. July 21, '05, a telephone message was received at this Hospital from the Penitentiary, stating that a private of the U. S. Marine Corps had fallen from the top of the city wall into the grounds of the Penitentiary (67 feet below), that he had received severe injuries about the head and neck, and that he was being taken to the Dispensary at the Navy Yard, the latter place being only a short distance from the Penitentiary. The Hospital ambulance and a medical officer went immediately to the Navy Yard to bring patient to Hospital. When the doctor reached the Yard he found patient in a comatose condition, with jaw fractured, face and neck much contused and swollen, and bleeding profusely from a deep lacerated wound on right side of lower jaw. His breathing was difficult and pulse almost imperceptible. Attempts were made to dispel stupor and alleviate his condition, but without avail, and patient died at 11:50 P.M. AUTOPSY revealed: Comp. comminuted fracture of inf. max.; fracture of r. sup. max.; fracture of base of skull; displacement and fracture of 3rd cervical vertebra; contusion, of r. shoulder, thigh, & knee.

There is no evidence that the disease (or injury) causing death was in line of duty, the facts being as follows: It appears that diseased had been drinking heavily during the day; and, shortly before the accident he was seen under the influence of liquor. At 11:00 P.M. he was seen sitting on the wall above the Penitentiary, an improper and dangerous place.

My dear Admiral:--

Many thanks for your kind letters and good wishes.

Another small revolution broke out in this province on the 12th, and has not as yet been put down. The authorities are beginning to act, however, and I am in hopes that things will quiet down within a short time.

The Governor here informed me that he had reliable information that Arias, with a party of malcontents, had landed at Turk's Island, and intended to start a revolution in this province. I did not place much credence in this report, but, being anxious not to see any more revolutionary business here, I thought it wise to telegraph you as to the whereabouts of Arias. Your reply was very welcomed. In the meantime, I sent the NASHVILLE over th Turk's Island, to find out what was really going on there, and she reports by wireless that there are only two old-time refugees there, and that no others are expected.

The EAGLE got here this morning, and will now
