New York City's budget is a moral document, but it's also an IQ test. The lessons of the COVID-19 pandemic require that we be smart about how to invest – prioritizing what works, not what's-been-done. We must invest in housing that builds wealth, schools that enrich, mental health programs that uplift, and healthcare that addresses Harlem's holistic needs – because we know that the most vibrant neighborhoods are not the ones that are most policed, but the ones that are the most invested in.
