Barbara Hess

Teaching Asisstant
Kindergarten

“The well-being of children is particularly close to my heart. It is very important to me that children feel safe, accepted, and comfortable. As a mother, I also have a great deal of practical experience in raising children.
It’s wonderful to see how children learn new things, make progress, and become more independent over time. The little moments—a smile, a success, or a “I can do it!”—make working with children especially rewarding.
I particularly enjoy arts and crafts and painting, and I use these creative activities specifically to support children in their development.”
