About Minerva Project

Minerva Project is the educational reformer founded by Ben Nelson in 2011. Its mission is to nurture critical wisdom for the sake of the world, beginning with the creation of its original prototype, Minerva University. Today, Minerva partners with higher education leaders to help create new, transformative programs or launch entirely new universities by integrating educational science with advanced technology. Its collaborations with 30 higher education partners across 12 countries have reached more than 50,000 learners, trained over 1,000 faculty, and established programs on five continents. That impact continues to grow. The Minerva Baccalaureate extends access to fully active, skill-focused learning to middle and secondary schools, and the Minerva University System enables the rapid creation of new institutions that deliver exceptional programming.
