The crane is heritage in the highest rank (RCE Classification). After years of restoration, we have saved the monumental icon from destruction. The restoration has been a challenge with major constructive challenges. Faralda Crane Hotel stands as a leading example of sustainability in practice. Since the restoration, the crane has become an iconic example for restructuring and sustainability projects worldwide. At numerous universities, the crane is used as a study example.

It goes far beyond the award-winning restoration of a monumental industrial landmark — sustainability is embedded in every layer of the project. From the intelligent reuse of materials to the pioneering business model and financing structure, every aspect reflects a deep commitment to long-term value and social impact.

Faralda proves sustainability isn't a limitation, it's the future.

The restoration and sustainable redevelopment of the monument has been used as a case study at several universities. The crane has received numerous international awards, something we're quite proud of.

Model of Sustainable Innovation

Faralda Crane Hotel is a globally celebrated icon of sustainable transformation. More than an award-winning restoration of a monumental landmark, Faralda represents a bold vision where sustainability runs through every layer, from circular construction to a pioneering financial model.

At its core: Return on Social Investment (RSI). Faralda doesn't just preserve heritage — it reinvents it, creating cultural, social, and economic value from what was once deemed impossible. While many projects collapse under ambition, Faralda thrived through vision and pragmatism. Every challenge was tackled head-on, making the seemingly unfeasible a celebrated reality. Its impact: global recognition, and more importantly, enduring influence. Founder Edwin Kornmann Rudi introduced a business model where culture meets commercial success.

Faralda Crane Hotel – A Model of Sustainable Innovation

This isn't theory. It's a working model. While many projects falter on the threshold of ambition and financial reality, Faralda succeeded by approaching challenges with vision and pragmatism. Every structural and financial obstacle was solved — not avoided. Through this approach, a seemingly impossible redevelopment became a celebrated achievement.

The Faralda Restoration Fund actively contributes to the conservation of monumental and industrial heritage through responsible restoration and innovative reuse. The goal: to inspire others to embrace complexity, to see beyond limitations, and to shift the focus from problems to solutions.

Driven by passion and purpose, owner and visionary Edwin Kornmann Rudi has been at the forefront of numerous
