(b) The absence of supported decision-making mechanisms for persons with disabilities to exercise their legal capacity on an equal basis with others.

20. The Committee recommends that in line with its general comment No. 1 (2014) on equal recognition before the law, the State party:

(a) Review and repeal provision in its legislation, particularly the Family Code, Criminal Code and Civil Code, with a clear timeframe, to guarantee the right of all persons with disabilities, particularly for persons with psychosocial or intellectual disabilities, to equal recognition before the law and establish supported decision-making mechanisms in all areas of life to ensure that persons with disabilities are not denied the right to exercise their legal capacity on the basis of a third party's analysis of their "best interests and that practices associated with "best interests" determinations should be replaced by the standard of "best interpretation of the will and preferences" of the person;

(b) Develop awareness-raising campaigns and capacity-building programmes, in consultations with organizations of persons with disabilities, for all stakeholders, including the families of persons with disabilities, community members, public officials, the judiciary and members of the Parliament on the recognition of the legal capacity of persons with disabilities and supported decision-making.

France (2021)

25. The Committee notes with concern:

(a) Legal provisions, particularly article 459 in the Civil Code denying the right of persons with disabilities to equal recognition before the law and establishing deprivation of legal capacity and autonomy through guardianship and wardship, on the basis of medical assessments of person's mental capacity;

(b) The absence of supported decision-making mechanisms compatible with the Convention, and measures that perpetuate substitute decision-making and fail to recognise the will and preferences of persons with disabilities.

26. The Committee recommends that the State party, in line with the Committee's General comment No. 1 (2014) on equal recognition before the law:

(a) Review its understanding of legal protection measures and adopt the human rights model of disability ensuring the equal recognition of persons with disabilities before the law and repealing provisions allowing for substituted decision-making;

(b) Redirect organisational and financial resources from the substituted decision-making to develop supported decision-making mechanisms that respect dignity, autonomy, will and preferences of persons with disabilities, regardless the level or mode of support they may require.

Estonia (2021)

23. The Committee notes with concern:

- (a) The State party's interpretative declaration made to article 12 of the Convention, upon ratification, and the provisions set out in the Civil Code, maintaining guardianship and the substitute decision-making regime, and limiting the active capacity of persons with disabilities on the basis of psychosocial, and intellectual impairment;
- (b) The absence of supported decision-making mechanisms for the exercise of legal capacity by persons with disabilities, on an equal basis with others;
- (c) The lack of disaggregated statistics about persons with disabilities placed under substitute decision-making regime, and the lack of measures for them to regain their legal capacity.

24. The Committee recommends that the State party:

- (a) Review its interpretative declaration on article 12 of the Convention, and guarantee the right of all persons with disabilities to equal recognition before the law, and supported decision-making, in all areas of life;
- (b) Amend the Civil Code to repeal the guardianship regime, and develop a system of supported decision-making for all persons with disabilities, in line with the Committee's general comment No. 1 (2014) on equal recognition before the law. Supported decision-making mechanisms must respect dignity, autonomy, will and preferences of persons with disabilities in the exercise of legal capacity by all persons with disabilities;
- (c) Adopt a plan of action to restore the full legal capacity of all persons with disabilities, irrespective of impairment.

Albania (2019)

23. The Committee is concerned about the insufficient progress made to amend all national legislation that denies or restricts the legal capacity of persons with disabilities, including the Civil Code, Civil Procedure Code, Family Code and the Mental Health Law, and on existing or planned mechanisms for supported decision-making. It is also concerned about the inadequacy of the State party's legal measures for ensuring the rights of persons with disabilities, in particular persons with intellectual or psychosocial disabilities, to make choices about their lives and enjoy the right to equal recognition before the law.

24. Recalling its general comment No. 1 (2014) on equal recognition before the law and the report of the Commissioner for Human Rights of the Council of Europe following her visit to Albania (para. 74), the Committee recommends that the State party harmonize its legislation to adhere to the Convention, repeal all laws that restrict the legal capacity of persons with disabilities, in particular persons with psychosocial or intellectual disabilities, replacing substituted decision-making with supported decision-making regimes that respect the person's autonomy, will and preferences and establishing transparent remedies for persons with disabilities whose legal capacity has been removed, throughout the State party.

23. Despite the recommendations of the Australian Law Reform Commission, the Committee is concerned about the lack of progress made to abolish the guardianship system and substituted decision-making regime, particularly in decisions concerning forced psychiatric treatment, and at the lack of a time frame to completely replace that regime with supported decision-making systems.

24. Recalling its general comment No. 1 (2014) on equal recognition before the law, the Committee recommends that the State party:

- (a) Repeal any laws and policies and end practices or customs that have the purpose or effect of denying or diminishing the recognition of any person with disabilities as a person before the law;

(b) Implement a nationally consistent supported decision-making framework, as recommended in a 2014 report of the Australian Law Reform Commission entitled Equality, Capacity and Disability in Commonwealth Laws.

Ecuador (2019)

25. The Committee is deeply concerned at the fact that the Civil Code and the Organic Code of General Procedure continue to provide for guardianships and wardships.

26. The Committee recommends that, bearing in mind its general comment No. 1 (2014) on equal recognition before the law, the State party:

(a) Bring the Organic Code of General Procedure into line with the Convention without delay by, inter alia, eliminating restrictions on the legal capacity of persons with disabilities;

(b) Replace substitute decision-making systems, including guardianships and wardships, with supported decision-making systems, take all appropriate measures for the provision of individualized support, properly inform persons with disabilities about such alternatives and train the relevant personnel in accordance with article 12 of the Convention;

(c) Ensure the effective, independent participation of persons with disabilities through their representative organizations in the reform process.

El Salvador (2019)

24. The Committee is concerned that no progress has been made to repeal article 74 of the Constitution, which suspends citizenship rights due to “mental alienation” and “judicial interdiction”, and which severely restricts the rights of persons with disabilities, particularly persons with intellectual or psychosocial disabilities and persons with hearing impairments, whose equal recognition before the law is restricted.

25. The Committee recalls its general comment No. 1 (2014) on equal recognition before the law, and recommends that the State party repeal the regime of declaration of incapacity in its legislation, particularly in the Constitution and the Family Code. The Committee also recommends that the State party allocate human and budgetary resources to replace substituted decision-making with a supported decision-making regime for persons with disabilities, particularly persons with psychosocial, intellectual or hearing disabilities.

17. The Committee is concerned about the lack of measures taken to abolish the denial or restriction of legal capacity, and to ensure that supported decision-making measures are available for persons with disabilities. It is also concerned about the practical obstacles faced by persons with disabilities when exercising their legal capacity due to, inter alia, the absence of specific guidelines and the shortage of officials and service providers trained in the provision of the necessary support to persons with disabilities in decision-making.

26. The Committee is concerned that the Rights of Persons with Disabilities Act (sect. 14) allows for “limited guardianship” and a “system of joint decision” affecting persons with disabilities, particularly deafblind persons and persons with intellectual or psychosocial disabilities. It is also concerned that the State party understands guardianship as a form of support (CRPD/C/IND/Q/1/Add.1, para. 62), a perception that is not in accordance with the Convention. It is further concerned about the de facto guardianship imposed on persons affected by leprosy, and the absence of measures to introduce supported decision-making.

27. The Committee recommends that the State party, guided by the Committee's general comment No. 1 (2014) on equal recognition before the law:

(a) Eliminate all types of guardianship from its national and state legislation and practices, including in the Rights of Persons with Disabilities Act (sect. 14), the Mental Health Care Act (sect. 4) and the National Trust for the Welfare of Persons with Autism, Cerebral Palsy, Mental Retardation and Multiple Disabilities Act;

(b) Introduce supported decision-making systems that are respectful of the autonomy, will and preferences of all persons with disabilities, and provide information to persons with disabilities about these systems;

(c) Raise awareness in society, including families of persons with disabilities, about the right to equal recognition before the law, and about how to realize the right to legal capacity of persons with disabilities, including persons affected by leprosy, deafblind persons and persons with intellectual or psychosocial disabilities. The State party should train public officials on the right of persons with disabilities to equal recognition before the law and on supported decision-making arrangements, in line with the Convention.

23. The Committee is concerned about:

(a) The guardianship regime in relation to persons with psychosocial or intellectual disabilities set out in articles 46 (2) and 104 of the Civil Code (Law No. 40 (1951)), and also about the fact that articles 94, 95, 107 and 108 of the Civil Code and article 7 of Law No. 188 (1959) do not recognize the legal capacity of persons with intellectual or psychosocial disabilities;

(b) Reports of instances in which the legal capacity of persons with hearing or visual impairments has not been recognized in financial matters.

24. The Committee recommends that the State party:

(a) Expedite the amendment of Law No. 38 (2013) and other relevant legislation to guarantee the equal recognition of persons with disabilities before the law and develop a system of supported decision-making for all persons with disabilities, in line with the Committee's general comment No. 1 (2014) on equal recognition before the law;

(b) Raise awareness among society, including families, on how to respect the legal capacity of persons with disabilities in all areas of life.

24. The Committee is concerned about restrictions in legislation to equal recognition before the law and about:

(a) The inclusion of substituted decision-making provisions for persons with disabilities, particularly those with psychosocial or intellectual disabilities, in, among others, article 109 of the Civil Code, and that the inclusion of such provisions deprives persons with disabilities of their legal capacity without providing them with sufficient measures to support them in making decisions;

(b) Barriers faced by persons with disabilities in the exercise of their full legal capacity in all areas of life, including the mandatory assistance of a third person to enable a blind person to open a bank account, among other commercial transactions.

25. Recalling its general comment No. 1 (2014) on equal recognition before the law, the Committee recommends that the State party:

(a) Review its legislation, including the Civil Code and Act No. 8/2010, to repeal substituted decision-making regimes, replace them with a supported decision-making regime and introduce supported decision-making mechanisms;

(b) Remove all practical barriers faced by persons with disabilities in the exercise of their legal capacity on an equal basis with others, including in relation to property, banking and asset management.

23. The Committee is concerned about the legislation in the State party that restricts the legal capacity of persons with disabilities on the basis of actual or perceived impairment, such as the Guardians and Wards Act or the “Lunacy” Act, which provide for substituted decision-making regimes.

25. The Committee is concerned that the State party’s legislation, such as articles 30, 31 and 67 of the Civil Code (1987) and articles 137 and 138 of the Family Code (1975), limit the ability of persons with disability to fully exercise their legal capacity, and provide for substituted decision-making instead of supported decision-making.

26. In keeping with article 12 of the Convention and its general comment No. 1 (2014) on equal recognition before the law, the Committee recommends that the State party:

- (a) Expedite the review of its national legislation to repeal all legal provisions and end all practices that partially or completely limit the legal capacity of persons with disabilities;
- (b) Take tangible steps to establish a supported decision-making system that respects the autonomy, wishes and preferences of persons with disabilities;
- (c) Ensure that there are no practical barriers and that persons with disabilities are able to exercise their right to legal capacity on an equal basis with others.

Niger (2019)

19. The Committee is concerned that:

- (a) Certain national laws are discriminatory in nature and deprive persons with disabilities, in particular persons with psychosocial or intellectual disabilities of their legal capacity, including articles 489 to 512 of the Civil Code;
- (b) The lack of supported-decision making regimes for persons with disabilities respecting their will and preferences.

20. The Committee recommends that the State party in line with the Committee’s general comment No. 1 (2014) on equal recognition before the law:

- (a) Repeal the provisions of the Civil Code, including articles 489 to 512 that restrict the legal capacity of persons with disabilities, especially persons with psychosocial or intellectual disabilities;
- (b) Develop supported-decision making mechanisms for persons with disabilities respecting their autonomy, rights, will and preferences;
- (c) Design capacity building programmes for public officials, including the judiciary and legislature, raise awareness among persons with disabilities, their families and community members about the right to equal recognition before the law of persons with disabilities, the supported decision-making regime, and the legal capacity of persons with disabilities in consultation with organizations of persons with disabilities.

Norway (2019)

19. The Committee is concerned that:

- (a) The substituted decision-making regime has not been yet replaced with supported decision-making regimes, including for persons with psychosocial or intellectual disabilities;
- (b) County governors are still appointing guardians for persons with disabilities;
- (c) Persons receiving support lack training so they can decide when less support is needed or when they no longer require support in the exercise of their legal capacity;
- (d) There is an absence of effective safeguards for the exercise of legal capacity and knowledge about the scope of support for decision-making.

20. Recalling its general comment No. 1 (2014) on equal recognition before the law, the Committee recommends that the State party:

- (a) Given that the Guardianship Act is under revision, consider systemic change by replacing guardianship and all other forms of substituted decision-making with supported decision-making for all persons with disabilities regardless of support requirements;
- (b) Repeal the Guardianship Act, which denies legal capacity based on impairment, ensure that no person is placed under guardianship and increase training about the recognition of full legal capacity of all persons with disabilities;
- (c) Establish a legal procedure aimed at restoring the full legal capacity of all persons with disabilities, and ensure that the supported decision making regimes respect the autonomy, will and preferences of the person concerned;
- (d) Create appropriate and effective safeguards monitored and supervised at the county level for the exercise of legal capacity to ensure the respect of the person's rights, will and preferences and protecting persons with disabilities from undue influence;
- (e) Conduct capacity building activities for public officials on the right to equal recognition before the law of persons with disabilities and supported decision-making arrangements and for persons receiving support so that they can decide when less support is needed or when they no longer require support in the exercise of their legal capacity.

23. The Committee is concerned that legislation, such as article 150 of the Law Governing Persons and Family, and Article 4(2) of the Law Governing Contracts, provides for the discriminatory restriction of legal capacity of persons with disabilities on the basis of impairment. The Committee is concerned about the existence of substituted decision-making and guardianship regimes for persons with disabilities.

Saudi Arabia (2019)

21. The Committee is concerned that persons with psychosocial or intellectual disabilities are deprived of equal recognition before the law, resulting from the practice of evaluating the decision-making capacity of persons with disabilities. It is moreover concerned at the absence of measures taken to grant the necessary support to persons with disabilities for the exercise of their legal capacity.

22. The Committee recommends that the State party, in line with the Committee's general comment No.1 (2014) on equal recognition before the law:

- (a) Take legislative measures to recognize the full legal capacity of persons with disabilities on an equal basis with others, and abolish substitute decision making regimes;
- (b) Introduce supported decision making mechanisms that respect the autonomy, will and preferences of persons with disabilities in all areas of life;
- (c) Create and implement awareness-raising programmes about supported decision-making and the legal capacity of persons with disabilities for persons with disabilities, their families, community members, social workers, the judiciary and the legislature;
- (d) Consult with organizations of persons with disabilities, as well as other relevant stakeholders, in these legislative and policy processes.

Senegal (2019)

21. The Committee is concerned about:

- (a) The absence of measures to replace substituted decision-making regimes with supported decision making regimes that respect the autonomy, rights, will and preferences of persons with disabilities in all areas of life;
- (b) The lack of legislation and other policy measures to ensure that persons with disabilities, particularly persons with psychosocial or intellectual disabilities, enjoy their legal capacity on an equal basis with others, including to enter into contracts, open bank accounts and take bank loans and mortgages and to marry a partner of their choice;
- (c) The lack of data on persons with disabilities still under guardianship, disaggregated by age, sex and type of impairment.

22. Recalling its general comment No. 1 (2014) on equal recognition before the law, the Committee recommends that the State party:

- (a) Repeal all legislation that allows for restricted legal capacity and substituted decision-making, and adopt legislation on supported decision-making;
- (b) Develop awareness-raising campaigns, in consultation with representative organisations of persons with disabilities for all stakeholders, including their families and community members, civil servants, judges and social workers, on the recognition of the legal capacity of persons with disabilities and supported decision-making.
- (c) Adopt measures to collect data on persons still under guardianship, disaggregated by age, gender and type of impairment with a view to restoring full legal capacity of all persons with disabilities.

22. The Committee is concerned that the Civil Code of the State Party provides for deprivation of legal capacity of a person on the basis of disability, and maintains the substitute decision-making.

Türkiye (2019)

25. The Committee is concerned about:

- (a) The guardianship regime in the Civil Code limiting the capacity to act of persons with disabilities on the basis of psychosocial, intellectual, or hearing impairments, and that at least 13,934 persons with disabilities are reported to remain under guardianship and institutionalized in public and private institutions;
- (b) The reported continuing practice of two witnesses for notarial acts for persons with visual, hearing or speech impairments, despite amendments to the Notary Law prohibiting it;
- (c) The lack of transparent and effective data on safeguards and remedies, as well as access to information in cases of violations of the right to legal capacity of persons with disabilities, particularly with regard to the right to marry and to vote.
- (d) The lack of information on the planned transition from substitute decision-making to supported decision-making;

26. The Committee, recalls its general comment No. 1 (2014) on equal recognition before the law and recommends that the State party:

- (a) Amend the relevant laws to abolish restrictions of the legal capacity of persons with disabilities and replace the guardianship regime with support decision-making mechanisms;
- (b) Introduce an effective moratorium on new institutionalization of persons with disabilities under guardianship;
- (c) Ensure compliance with the Notary Law, as amended to ensure equal recognition before the law for all persons with disabilities;

(d) Revise legislative measures in the Civil Code and in other laws that subject the right to marry and the right to vote of persons with intellectual impairments to medical authorization;
(e) Build the capacity of civil servants, law enforcement officials and judges as well as social workers on the recognition of the legal capacity of persons with disabilities and on safeguards and good practices to provide supported decision-making. The State party should meaningful consult and involve persons with disabilities through their representative organizations and the Ombudsman, at the national, regional and local levels for developing trainings and awareness-raising about the supported decision-making.

Vanuatu (2019)

22. The Committee is concerned that persons with disabilities, particularly those with intellectual or psychosocial disabilities, continue to be denied their legal capacity on the ground of disability in law and in practice.

23. Recalling its general comment No. 1 (2014) on equal recognition before the law, the Committee recommends that the State party:

(a) Repeal and amend, without delay, all legal provisions that restrict the legal capacity of persons with disabilities on the basis of impairment;

(b) Replace all substituted decision-making regimes with supported decision-making mechanisms that respect the autonomy of persons with disabilities and increase awareness among persons with disabilities, their families and relevant officials, including the judiciary, about the rights of persons with disabilities particularly equal recognition before the law.

24. The Committee is concerned that national legislation, particularly the Civil Code (arts. 40, 42, 44 and 78) and the Family Code arts 81, 85 et 86, Chapter 5 Art 99, Chapitre 1 are inconsistent with the Convention in as much as they deny the legal capacity of persons with disabilities completely or partially, and provide for substituted decision making instead of supported-decision making. It is also concerned by the lack of data on persons still under guardianship, disaggregated by age, gender and type of impairment.

25. The Committee recommends that the State party immediately repeal or amend discriminatory legislation, recognize the full legal capacity of all persons with disabilities on an equal basis with others, and introduce supported decision-making mechanisms that respect the autonomy, will and preferences of persons with disabilities in all areas of life, in line with the Committee's General Comment No. 1 (2014) on equal recognition before the law. It also recommends that the State party adopt measures to strengthen data collection on persons still under guardianship, disaggregated by age, gender and disability.

29. The Committee is concerned about the State party's legislation still restricting legal capacity of persons with disabilities and providing for guardianship for persons with psychosocial and persons with intellectual disabilities. It is also concerned about the delay in approving the draft Natural Persons and Support Measures Act aimed at recognising the rights to legal capacity of persons with disabilities.

30. The Committee recommends that the State party amend its legislation and adopt the Natural Persons and Support Measures Act, and fully upholds and recognise full legal capacity for all persons regardless impairment, following the guidelines of the Committee's General comment No. 1 (2014) Equal recognition before the law. It also recommends that the State party establish support-decision making procedures, in consultation with organizations of persons with disabilities, and provide continuous training on article 12 of the Convention to different stakeholders, including members of the judiciary, health care and social protection professionals.

Philippines (2018)

24. The Committee is concerned that:

(a) The State party legislation still denies legal capacity of persons with disabilities to express their will and preferences concerning all aspects of their lives, and establishes guardianship and restricted capacity to exercise rights by persons with intellectual and persons with psychosocial disabilities;

(b) The ongoing deliberations at the Congress on the selective provision of support for decision-making, and on the “legal representatives” acting virtually as substitute decision-makers, which shall result in non-compliance of the right to equality before the law;

(c) Persons with disabilities face difficulties in accessing the legal system due to the absence of legal practitioners able to communicate with persons with disabilities, in particular persons with hearing impairments.

(a) Review Articles 37-39 of the Civil Code of the Philippines (R.A. No. 386), Article III Section 11 of the 1987 Philippine Constitution and R.A. No. 9406 Civil Code and enact legislation recognizing full legal capacity of persons with disabilities in line with the Committee’s general comment No. 1 (2014) on equal recognition before the law;

(b) Provide training, in consultation and cooperation with persons with disabilities and their representative organizations, at the national, regional and local levels for all actors, including civil servants, judges and social workers, on the recognition of the legal capacity of persons with disabilities and on the principles of supported decision-making;

(c) Establish a system of supported decision-making for persons with disabilities, in line with the freedom of choice of per

19. The Committee is concerned about the State Party’s interpretative declaration on article 12 and the Civil Code’s provisions allowing for deprivation of legal capacity of persons with psychosocial and/or intellectual disability and assignment of guardian or “curator” to make decisions on their behalves, as well as about the large and growing number of persons with disabilities deprived of their legal capacity.

20. The Committee calls the State Party to withdraw its interpretative declaration on article 12 of the Convention and, recalling its general comment No. 1 (2014) on Equal recognition before the law, to repeal all discriminatory provisions under the Civil Code and other legal acts, allowing for deprivation of legal capacity of persons with disabilities, considering that legal capacity includes the capacity to be both, a holder of rights and an actor under the law, and capacity to legal acts, as it is defined in legislation. It further recommends to establish a procedure aimed at restoring full legal capacity of all persons with disabilities, and to develop supported decision-making mechanisms that respect the autonomy, will and preferences of the person.

19. The Committee is seriously concerned that persons with disabilities are still deprived of their legal capacity and are still subject to multiple forms of discrimination, as per the Civil Code (Cap. 16), the Code of Organization and Civil Procedure (Cap. 12) and the Code of Organization and Civil Procedure and the Civil Code (Amendment) Act (“Guardianship Act”) (2012) which provide for substitute decision-making regimes. It is also concerned that persons with disabilities, in particular persons with psychosocial and/or intellectual disabilities, are still placed under Interdiction and Incapacitation orders, and that the Personal Autonomy Bill which is currently being drafted may deprive persons with disabilities of their legal capacity, by introducing concepts and mechanisms, such as “safeguarding”, “co-decision making” and “representation agreements”.

20. Recalling its general comment No. 1 (2014) on equal recognition before the law, the Committee recommends that the State party, in close cooperation with persons with disabilities, through their representative organizations:

(a) Amend all discriminatory legal provisions, including provisions of the Civil Code (Cap. 16), the Code of Organization and Civil Procedures (Cap. 12), and the Code of Organization and Civil Procedure and the Civil Code (Amendment) Act (“Guardianship Act”) (2012), with a view to abolishing substitute decision-making regimes;

- (b) Restore the full legal capacity of all persons with disabilities and review its guardianship system and all remaining Interdiction and Incapacitation orders;
- (c) Introduce supported decision-making mechanisms that respect the autonomy, will and preferences of persons with disabilities, and adopt and implement a Personal Autonomy Bill in line with article 12 of the Convention;
- (d) Improve data collection and disaggregation about persons who are still under substituted decision-making regimes and Interdiction or Incapacitation orders, with a view to improving public policies designed for social inclusion.

South Africa (2018)

22. The Committee is concerned about:

- (a) The current guardianship and mental health laws, which maintain a substitute decision making regime and the absence of legislation and supported decision-making mechanisms for persons with disabilities that uphold the autonomy, rights, will and preferences of persons with disabilities in all areas of life;
- (b) The lack of data on persons with disabilities under guardianship, disaggregated by age, gender and type of impairment.

23. Recalling its general comment No. 1 (2014) on equal recognition before the law, the Committee recommends that the State party:

- (a) Repeal all legislation that allow for substituted decision-making, and adopt legislation on supported decision-making and measures to strengthen data collection in this respect, disaggregated by age, gender and type of impairment;
- (b) Provide training, in consultation with representative organisations of persons with disabilities for all stakeholders, including their families and community members, civil servants, judges and social workers, on the recognition of the legal capacity of persons with disabilities and on existing good practices in supported decision-making.

North Macedonia (2018)

24. The Committee is concerned that the laws in the State party deprive or restrict the legal capacity of persons with disabilities, especially the existing guardianship system, with restrictions on decision making and right to choice.

25. The Committee recommends that the State party:

- (a) Repeal all discriminatory provisions that allow deprivation of legal capacity based on impairment and develop and replace these with supported decision-making mechanisms that respect autonomy, will and preferences of the person concerned;
- (b) Conduct capacity building activities for public officials on the right to equal recognition before the law of persons with disabilities and supported decision-making arrangements.

22. The Committee notes with concern existing laws such as articles 399 to 424 of the Civil Code, and article 266 of the Code of Criminal Procedure which predate the entry into force of the Convention and deny persons with disabilities their legal capacity. It is concerned that persons under guardianship and curatorship regimes, in particular persons with psychosocial or intellectual disabilities, are deprived of the right to exercise their legal capacity. It is also concerned about the lack of knowledge about supported decision-making regimes.

23. The Committee recommends that the State party, in accordance with its general comment No. 1 (2014) on equal recognition before the law:

- (a) Repeal all legal provisions that restrict the legal capacity of persons with disabilities, particularly persons with psychosocial or intellectual disabilities;
- (b) Replace all guardianship regimes with supported decision-making mechanisms for persons with disabilities, which respect their autonomy, rights, will and preferences;
- (c) Develop capacity-building programmes for government officials on the right of persons with disabilities, equal recognition before the law and supported decision-making system, and raise awareness among persons with disabilities, their families and society in general.

21. The Committee is concerned that no changes of legal provisions to replace substituted decision-making with supported decision-making, which respects the person's autonomy, will and preferences of persons with disabilities, in full conformity with article 12 of the Convention and general comment No. 1 (2014) have been undertaken. The Committee is particularly concerned that while the State party is making efforts to implement supported decision making, substituted decision making is still used in the State party. The Committee is further concerned at reports that persons with intellectual or/psychosocial disabilities are sometimes expelled from governmental, judicial, institutional or private enterprises, and accordingly their equal recognition before the law is denied, contrary to the provisions of article 12 of the Convention.

22. The Committee recommends that the State party revise its legislation in order to recognize the full legal capacity of all persons with disabilities, notwithstanding their impairment, on an equal basis with others, and introduce supported decision-making mechanisms in line with the Committee's general comment No. 1 (2014) on equal recognition before the law. The Committee further recommends that the State party provide training, in consultation and cooperation with persons with disabilities and their representative organizations, at the national, regional and local levels for all actors, including civil servants, judges and social workers, on the recognition of the legal capacity of persons with disabilities and on the principles of supported decision-making.

25. The Committee is concerned that:

(a) Various national laws deprive persons with disabilities, in particular persons with intellectual and/or psychosocial disabilities, of their legal capacity, contrary to article 12 of the Convention;

(b) There is a lack of data on persons under guardianship, disaggregated by age, gender and type of impairment.

26. The Committee recommends that the State party:

(a) Amend its legislation, in particular articles 41, 42 and 44 of the Civil Code of 2013 so as to recognize the full legal capacity of persons with disabilities on an equal basis with others, and introduce supported decision-making mechanisms that respect the autonomy, will and preference of persons with disabilities in all areas of life, in line with the Committee's general comment No. 1 (2014) on equal recognition before the law;

(b) Create awareness-raising programmes for persons with disabilities, their families and community members, the judiciary and legislature on supported decision-making and legal capacity of persons with disabilities in consultation with organizations of persons with disabilities;

(c) Adopt measures to strengthen data collection on persons under guardianship, disaggregated by age, gender and type of impairment.

Russian Federation (2018)

26. The Committee notes with concern that the State Party's legislation, especially the Civil Code and the Civil Procedure Code, uphold substitute decision-making and that the State party's legislation does not provide for supported decision making mechanisms for such persons.

27. The Committee recommends that the State Party amend its legislation, especially the Civil Code and the Civil Procedure Code, including by introducing the concept of supported decision making, and fully harmonize its legislation with provisions of article 12 of the Convention, as elaborated in the Committee's General Comment No. 1 and recognize full legal capacity to all persons with all types of disability.

18. The Committee notes with concern the discriminatory legal provisions in the non-litigious civil procedure act and Family Code, and allowing for deprivation of legal capacity, including business and procedural capacity, of persons with psychosocial and/or intellectual disabilities. It is also concerned that the State party considers guardians as a form of support although they are appointed to substitute the decision-making power of persons with disabilities in various areas of life. It is also concerned about the absence of mechanisms to replace the substituted decision-making with a supported decision-making regime.

19. The Committee recalls its general comment No. 1 (2014) on equal recognition before the law, and recommends that the State party repeal all discriminatory provisions allowing for deprivation of the legal capacity on the basis of impairment, and ensure that the amendment to the Family Code withdraws any form of substituted-decision-making for persons with disabilities, in any area of life. It also calls upon the State party to establish a procedure aimed at restoring full legal capacity of all persons with disabilities, and to develop and implement supported decision-making mechanisms that respect the autonomy, will and preferences of the person.

18. The Committee notes with concern the discriminatory legal provisions in the non-litigious civil procedure act and Family Code, and allowing for deprivation of legal capacity, including business and procedural capacity, of persons with psychosocial and/or intellectual disabilities. It is also concerned that the State party considers guardians as a form of support although they are appointed to substitute the decision-making power of persons with disabilities in various areas of life. It is also concerned about the absence of mechanisms to replace the substituted decision-making with a supported decision-making regime.

19. The Committee recalls its general comment No. 1 (2014) on equal recognition before the law, and recommends that the State party repeal all discriminatory provisions allowing for deprivation of the legal capacity on the basis of impairment, and ensure that the amendment to the Family Code withdraws any form of substituted-decision-making for persons with disabilities, in any area of life. It also calls upon the State party to establish a procedure aimed at restoring full legal capacity of all persons with disabilities, and to develop and implement supported decision-making mechanisms that respect the autonomy, will and preferences of the person.

23. The Committee is concerned about laws in the State party continuing to deprive or restrict the legal capacity of persons with disabilities in many areas of life, in particular to persons with intellectual and/or psychosocial disabilities, such as the Personal Status Act of 1991, the Public Guardianship Act of 1837, article 202 of the Code of Criminal Procedure of 1991, and articles 57 to 61 of the Civil Transactions Act of 1984.

24. The Committee recommends that the State party:

- (a) Review its legislation, including the above mentioned Acts, to abolish the deprivation of legal capacity on the basis of impairment;
- (b) Introduce supported decision-making arrangements that respect persons with disabilities autonomy, will and preferences and raise awareness among persons with disabilities, their families and society about them;
- (c) Conduct capacity building activities for public officials on the right to equal recognition before the law of persons with disabilities and supported decision-making arrangements.

Latvia (2017)

20. The Committee notes with concern that the amendments to the civil law in 2013 concerning legal capacity preserve discriminatory provisions, including temporary guardianship and partial legal capacity. It also notes with concern that, in practice, courts generally apply substituted decision-making due to a lack of understanding of legal alternatives to the restriction of legal capacity.

21. Recalling article 12 (2) of the Convention, which states that persons with disabilities enjoy legal capacity on an equal basis with others in all aspects of life, and its general comment No. 1 (2014) on equal recognition before the law, the Committee recommends that the State party repeal the legal provisions in civil law concerning substituted decision-making and restore the full legal capacity of all persons with disabilities through a supported decision-making regime that respects the autonomy, will and preferences of the person.

Luxembourg (2017)

24. The Committee notes with concern the discriminatory legal provisions still in place, such as article 490 and Chapter III of the Civil Code and the Guardianship Act of 1982 providing for substitute decision-making regimes. It is concerned by the lack of disaggregated data on the number of persons with disabilities still deprived of their legal capacity and subject to substitute decision-making regimes.

25. Recalling its general comment No. 1 (2014) on equal recognition before the law, the Committee recommends that the State party, in close cooperation with persons with disabilities, through their representative organizations:

(a) Repeal and/or amend all discriminatory legal provisions, including article 490 and Chapter III of the Civil Code and the Guardianship Act of 1982, with a view to abolishing substitute decision-making regimes;

(b) Restore the full legal capacity of all persons with disabilities and review its guardianship system;

(c) Introduce supported decision-making mechanisms that respect the autonomy, will and preferences of persons with disabilities, such as the mechanism of “person of trust” currently existing in the health sector for persons not denied legal capacity;

(d) Improve data collection and disaggregation about persons who are still under substituted decision-making regimes, with a view to improving public policies;

(e) Adopt professional quality standards for supported decision-making mechanisms;

(f) Together with persons with disabilities, particularly persons with psychosocial and/or intellectual disabilities, through their representative organizations, develop and carry out training to all relevant actors at the national and local levels, including civil servants, judges, social workers, health and social services professionals and the wider community on the recognition of the legal capacity of persons with disabilities and on supported decision-making.

Montenegro (2017)

24. The Committee is concerned about the current substituted decision-making and guardianship regime, which restricts the exercise of various rights. It notes with concern that the number of persons with disabilities who are deprived of their full legal capacity continues to be high.

25. Recalling its general comment No. 1 (2014) on equal recognition before the law, the Committee urges the State party to fully harmonize its legislation with the Convention, to replace the current guardianship and substituted decision-making regime with a system of supported decision-making that fully respects the autonomy, integrity, dignity, will and preferences of the person, and to establish transparent and effective remedies for persons with disabilities whose legal capacity has been removed.

Morocco (2017)

26. The Committee is concerned about:

(a) The denial, on the basis of impairment, of legal capacity of persons with disabilities, in particular of persons with sensory, psychosocial and/or intellectual disabilities, and the de facto guardianship exercised in families of persons with disabilities;

(b) The absence of understanding and development of supported decision-making alternatives for persons with disabilities that respect their will and preferences.

27. The Committee recommends that the State party, in line with general comment No. 1 (2014) on equal recognition before the law:

(a) Repeal the provisions of the Family Code and other laws that restrict the legal capacity of persons with disabilities, in particular persons with psychosocial and/or intellectual disabilities;

(b) Introduce and develop supported decision-making mechanisms for persons with disabilities that respect the autonomy, rights, will and preferences of persons with disabilities in all areas of life;

(c) Design capacity-building programmes for public officials on, and raise awareness among persons with disabilities, their families and society of, the right to equal recognition before the law of persons with disabilities and the supported decision-making system.

Panama (2017)

30. The Committee is concerned that, even though Act No. 15 of 2016 provides for equal recognition before the law and the legal capacity of persons with disabilities, restrictions on their legal capacity contained in articles 404 to 407 of the Family Code, in the Commercial Code and in article 45 of the Civil Code remain in force.

31. In keeping with article 12 of the Convention and its general comment No. 1 (2014) on equal recognition before the law, the Committee recommends that the State party:

(a) Repeal all legal provisions and end all practices that partially or completely limit the legal capacity of persons with disabilities;

(b) Take tangible steps to establish a supported decision-making system that respects the autonomy, wishes and preferences of persons with disabilities;

(c) Ensure that there are no barriers and that persons with disabilities are able to exercise their right to legal capacity on an equal basis with others.

United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland (2017)

30. The Committee is concerned about:

(a) The legislation in the State party that restricts the legal capacity of persons with disabilities on the basis of actual or perceived impairment;

(b) The prevalence of substituted decision-making in legislation and in practice, and the lack of full recognition of the right to individualized supported decision-making that fully respects the autonomy, will and preferences of persons with disabilities;

(c) The insufficient support to all asylum seekers and refugees with psychosocial and/or intellectual disabilities in exercising their legal capacity;

(d) The high number of black people with disabilities who are compulsorily detained and treated against their will.

31. The Committee recommends that the State party, in close consultation with organizations of persons with disabilities, including those representing persons from black and minority ethnic groups and in line with the Committee's general comment No. 1 (2014) on equal recognition before the law, abolish all forms of substituted decision-making concerning all spheres and areas of life by reviewing and adopting new legislation in accordance with the Convention to initiate new policies in both mental capacity and mental health laws. It urges the State party to step up efforts to foster research, data and good practices in the area of, and speed up the development of, supported decision-making regimes. It recommends that the State party ensure that asylum seekers and refugees with disabilities can exercise all rights enshrined in the Convention.

Armenia (2017)

19. The Committee notes with concern the discriminatory legal provisions in the Constitution and the Civil Procedure Code that allow for the deprivation of legal capacity and the appointment of a guardian on the basis of psychosocial or intellectual disability. It is also concerned by the lack of mechanisms to replace the system of substituted decision-making with a supported decision-making regime.

22. The Committee is concerned about the current guardianship regime, which contradicts the Convention and the Committee's general comment No. 1 (2014) on equal recognition before the law. It is concerned about the lack of transparent and effective remedies, particularly regarding the current practice of depriving persons with disabilities of their full legal capacity. The Committee is gravely concerned about the denial of the rights to marry and vote.

27. The Committee is concerned that since 2010, the number of cases of guardianship of persons with disabilities has increased in all provinces but one. In many provinces and territories a substitute decision maker is permitted to make health-care decisions for a person who is found to be "incapable" of making his or her own decision. The Committee is also concerned that a number of federal statutes reinforce exclusionary tests of legal capacity and do not provide recognition of supported decision-making.

28. The Committee recommends that the State party, in consultation with organizations of persons with disabilities and other service providers, take leadership in collaborating with provinces and territories to create a consistent framework for recognizing legal capacity and to enable access to the support needed to exercise legal capacity. It also recommends that the State party take steps to remove exclusionary provisions from federal statutes and to introduce provisions for supported decision-making in the Bank Act, the Income Tax Act and other statutes as appropriate.

33. The Committee notes with concern that the State party maintains the concept of substituted decision-making and guardianship across all legislation, such as regarding the administration of property and accessing judicial procedures.

34. The Committee recommends that the State party, as a matter of urgency and in close collaboration with representative organizations of persons with disabilities, in line with article 4 (3) of the Convention:

(a) Bring the draft law on self-advocacy and supported decision-making fully into line with the Convention, accelerate its adoption and take all other legislative amendments necessary to abolish substituted decision-making and guardianship and ensure that the right to supported decision-making is established across all legislation in accordance with general comment No. 1 (2014) on equal recognition before the law;

(b) Allocate adequate human, technical and financial resources to support the transformation from the present paradigm to a new paradigm that is in line with the Convention, and being guided by, inter alia, general comment No. 1 (2014).

Honduras (2017)

27. Al Comité le preocupa que distintas leyes del Estado parte, al igual que el Código de Familia, que en el artículo 277 mantiene la figura de tutor y protutor, no armonizan con la Convención y discriminan y restringen la capacidad jurídica de las personas con discapacidad.

28. En consonancia con el artículo 12 de la Convención y su observación general núm. 1 (2014) sobre igual reconocimiento como persona ante la ley, el Comité recomienda al Estado parte que derogue toda disposición legal que limite parcial o totalmente la capacidad jurídica de las personas con discapacidad y adopte medidas concretas para establecer un modelo de sistema de apoyo al proceso de toma de decisiones que respete la autonomía, voluntad y preferencias de las personas con discapacidad, que reemplace las formas de sustitución en la toma de decisiones.

29. Le preocupan al Comité las restricciones que se imponen a ciertas personas con discapacidad respecto al derecho a ser propietarias y heredar bienes, controlar sus propios asuntos económicos o a recibir préstamos bancarios, hipotecas y otros, en igualdad de condiciones con las demás personas.

26. The Committee is concerned about the guardianship regime in relation to persons with psychosocial and/or intellectual disabilities set up in the civil law and the law of non-litigious matters. It is also concerned about the absence of supported decision-making for persons with disabilities.

27. The Committee recommends that the State party:

(a) Review its civil and criminal legislation with the aim of withdrawing the guardianship regime, affecting persons with psychosocial and/or intellectual disabilities, and recognise full legal capacity of persons with disabilities on equal basis with others, in all areas of life;

(b) Develop a system of supported decision-making for all persons with disabilities, in line with the Committee's general comment No. 1 (2014) on equal recognition before the law; and

(c) Raise awareness among society, including families, about the contents and scope of the right to equal recognition before the law, and on how to respect the legal capacity of persons with disabilities.

Jordan (2017)

25. The Committee notes with concern that articles 44 and 128 of the Civil Code (Law No. 43 of 1976) and articles 204 and 212 of the Personal Status Law (No. 36 of 2010) deprive persons with disabilities, in particular persons with intellectual and/or psychosocial disabilities, of their legal capacity, contrary to article 12 of the Convention.

26. The Committee recommends that the State party amend its legislation, in particular the Civil Code and the Personal Status Law, so as to recognize the full legal capacity of persons with disabilities, notwithstanding their impairment, on an equal basis with others, and introduce supported decision-making mechanisms, in line with the Committee's general comment No. 1 (2014) on equal recognition before the law.

24. The Committee notes with concern the discriminatory legal provisions in the Civil Code, particularly article 24, which allow for the deprivation of a person's legal capacity and the appointment of a guardian, on the grounds of psychosocial and/or intellectual disabilities. The Committee is concerned that current efforts to amend legislation in this regard may still not be in line with the Convention and that there are no mechanisms in place to replace the system of substituted decision-making with a supported decision-making regime.

25. Recalling its general comment No. 1 (2014) on equal recognition before the law, the Committee recommends that the State party:

(a) Repeal the discriminatory legal provisions in the Civil Code, including article 24;

(b) Restore the full legal capacity of all persons with disabilities and review its guardianship system with the aim of introducing supported decision-making mechanisms;

(c) Provide training, in consultation with organizations of persons with disabilities and the Ombudsman, at the national, regional and local levels for all stakeholders, including civil servants, judges and social workers, on the recognition of the legal capacity of persons with disabilities and on existing good practices in supported decision-making.

Bolivia (2016)

27. The Committee is concerned at the continued existence in the State party of regimes that limit partly or completely the legal capacity of persons with disabilities, and at the lack of any measures to repeal such regimes.

28. In keeping with its general comment No. 1 (2014) on equal recognition before the law, the Committee recommends that the State party repeal legal regimes that partly or completely limit legal capacity, and that it implement systems to support persons with disabilities in the exercise for their legal capacity, having proper regard for their will and preferences.

30. The Committee is concerned that the State party's Civil Code and case law still provides for restrictions on the exercise of legal capacity for persons with disabilities and that, as a result, they are denied access to justice and free and informed consent.

31. The Committee recommends that the State party repeal any provisions of the Civil Code and other legislation that partially or fully restrict the legal capacity of persons with disabilities, and take legal and administrative measures to provide the necessary support to persons with disabilities to fully exercise this right and to take decisions in such areas as health, sexuality and education, while fully respecting their will and preferences, as established in the Committee's general comment No. 1 (2014), on equal recognition before the law.

32. The Committee is concerned about the provision made, in Decree No. 1500 of 2014 of the Medellín Mayoral Office, for judicial interdiction in programmes for persons with disabilities living in the streets.

33. The Committee recommends that the State party repeal Decree No. 1500 of 2014 of the Medellín Mayoral Office, review programmes to provide persons with disabilities with access to the support they may require in the exercise of their legal capacity, and adopt a plan for housing and support services for persons with disabilities to enable them to live independently and be included in the community.

25. The Committee is concerned that the legislative provisions of the Civil Code contradict article 12 of the Convention, in particular articles 339-388 and 1728 in chapter 3 ("Insane persons and infirm persons") and chapter 4 (Judicial interdiction), and article 740 of the Commercial Code. Those provisions restrict the right of persons with psychosocial disabilities and intellectual disabilities to the full enjoyment and exercise of their rights, including the right to marry, to act as witness and to vote, and parental rights and, for blind, deaf and deaf-blind persons, the right to carry out banking transactions.

26. The Committee recommends that the State party repeal the legislative provisions that are non-compliant with article 12 of the Convention, in particular those provisions of the Civil Code (chaps. 3 and 4, arts. 339-388 and 1728) and Commercial Code (art. 740) and all forms of substituted decision-making. It also recommends that the State party explicitly recognize in law the full legal capacity of persons with disabilities with respect to all rights, including the right to marry, to enter into a contract, to vote, to own property, to a family, to carry out banking transactions and to have access to justice, in line with the Committee's general comment No. 1 (2014) on equal recognition before the law.

27. The Committee is concerned that the provision of support is not effectively available in order to ensure the exercise of legal capacity of persons with disabilities on an equal basis with others.

28. The Committee recommends that the State party ensure the provision of support in order for persons with disabilities to be able to exercise their legal capacity on an equal basis. It also recommends that the State party develop and implement supported decision-making models that respect the autonomy, will and preferences of the person and that it adopt safeguards against undue influence and conflict of interest, in line with the Committee's general comment No. 1.

31. The Committee notes with concern that a large number of persons with disabilities are subject to total or partial guardianship and therefore deprived of certain rights such as the right to vote, marry, found a family or manage assets and property. It is also concerned by the fact that the Civil Code provides for the restriction of the legal capacity of persons with disabilities and that, to date, no commitment has been made to bring it into line with the Convention.

32. The Committee recommends that the State party take all appropriate measures to ensure that all persons with disabilities who have been deprived of their legal capacity can exercise all the rights enshrined in the Convention, as indicated in its general comment No. 1 (2014) on equal recognition before the law. The Committee also recommends that the State party repeal the existing systems of total and partial guardianship, under which a person has no or limited legal capacity, and develop systems of supported decision-making to enable and promote the realization of the rights of persons with disabilities.

33. The Committee is concerned that persons with disabilities who are institutionalized are automatically deprived of their legal capacity, with the director of the institution assuming the role of their guardian from then on.

34. The Committee recommends that the State party ensure that all persons with disabilities who continue to be placed in institutions of any kind are not deprived of their legal capacity and are given access to systems of supported decision-making.

27. The Committee is concerned that substituted decision-making continues to be practised through the mechanism of administrative support "Amministrazione di Sostegno".

28. The Committee recommends that the State party repeal all laws that permit substituted decision-making by legal guardians, including the mechanism of administrative support and the enactment and implementation of supported decision-making provisions, including the training of professionals in the justice, health and social sectors.

United Arab Emirates (2016)

23. The Committee is deeply concerned about legislative provisions that make it possible to restrict and even deny the legal capacity of persons with disabilities, for example the provisions in, among others, Federal Act No. 5 of 1985 (Civil Code), Federal Act No. 28 of 2005 and Federal Act No. 29 of 2006 as amended by Federal Act No. 14 of 2009 and the Criminal Code, including in relation to the right to marry. The Committee is also concerned that women in the State party, including women with disabilities, continue to be subjected to male guardianship.

24. Recalling its general comment No. 1 (2014) on equal recognition before the law, the Committee recommends that the State party repeal regimes of substituted decision-making (among others, provisions of Federal Act No. 5 of 1985 (Civil Code), Federal Act No. 28 of 2005 and Federal Act No. 29 of 2006 as amended by Federal Act No. 14 of 2009 and the Criminal Code) and replace them by supported decision-making regimes that uphold the autonomy, will and preferences of persons with disabilities. The Committee also recommends that the State party abolish altogether the system of male guardianship of women, including women with disabilities.

25. Al Comité le preocupa que distintas leyes del Estado parte, en particular los artículos 37 y 80 de la Constitución de la República del Uruguay al igual que el Código Civil, Ley 17535 sobre personas sujetas a curaduría general, están en contradicción con la Convención y discriminan y restringen la capacidad jurídica de las personas con discapacidad.

26. En consonancia con el artículo 12 de la Convención y su observación general No 1 (2014), el Comité recomienda al Estado parte que derogue toda disposición legal que limite parcial o totalmente la capacidad jurídica de las personas con discapacidad y adopte medidas concretas para establecer un modelo de sistema de apoyo al proceso de toma de decisiones que respete la autonomía, voluntad y preferencias de las personas con discapacidad que reemplace las formas de sustitución en la toma de decisiones.

27. Le preocupan al Comité las restricciones que se imponen a personas con discapacidad respecto al derecho a ser propietarias y heredar bienes, controlar sus propios asuntos económicos o a recibir préstamos bancarios, hipotecas y otros, en igualdad de condiciones con las demás personas.

23. Al Comité le preocupa la vigencia del Código Civil de 1857 que establece la incapacidad legal de personas con discapacidad, así como de la Ley núm. 18600 que regula el proceso de declaratoria de interdicción con base en la certificación de un psiquiatra.

24. El Comité solicita al Estado parte que derogue toda disposición legal que limite parcial o totalmente la capacidad jurídica de las personas con discapacidad adultas, y adopte medidas concretas para establecer un modelo de toma de decisiones con apoyo que respete la autonomía, voluntad y preferencias de las personas con discapacidad, en armonía con el artículo 12 de la Convención y la observación general núm. 1 (2014) del Comité.

25. Al Comité le preocupa que las personas con discapacidad no tengan derecho al consentimiento informado, particularmente aquellas declaradas interdictas o institucionalizadas por razón de discapacidad mental, en el caso de tratamientos médicos o intervenciones quirúrgicas cuyos efectos son irreversibles, tal como se dispone en el artículo 15 de la Ley núm. 20584.

26. El Comité recomienda al Estado parte que revise y derogue las disposiciones que restringen el consentimiento libre e informado de todas las personas con discapacidad, incluyendo las que se encuentran declaradas interdictas y están bajo tutela, o quienes se encuentren institucionalizadas, y se adopten las regulaciones necesarias para el pleno ejercicio del consentimiento libre e informado, para actuar en todo tipo de intervenciones médicas o científicas.

25. The Committee is deeply concerned at the legal provisions permitting the denial or restriction of the legal capacity of persons with disabilities contrary to article 12 of the Convention, which thereby limit rights of persons with disabilities to give their free and informed consent for treatment, to marry, to found a family and to adopt and raise children.

26. With reference to its general comment No. 1 (2014) on equal recognition before the law, the Committee recommends that the State party repeal laws, policies and practices permitting guardianship and trusteeship for adults with disabilities and replace regimes of substituted decision-making with regimes of supported decision-making.

28. The Committee is deeply concerned that in the State party there is a large number of persons with disabilities subjected to total or partial guardianship and, as such, deprived of certain rights, for instance the rights to vote, to marry, to found a family, and to manage assets and properties. It is also concerned that the current review of the Civil Code continues to include restrictions in legal capacity.

29. The Committee recommends that the State party adopt appropriate measures to ensure that all persons with disabilities who have been deprived of their legal capacity may exercise all the rights set out in the Convention, including the right to vote, to marry, to found a family or to manage assets and property, as stated in its General Comment No 1 (2014) on equal recognition before the law. The Committee also recommends that the State party repeal the existing total and partial guardianship systems, which remove or limit the legal capacity of the individual, and develop supported decision-making systems which enable and promote the effective exercise of the rights of persons with disabilities, in accordance with article 12 of the Convention.

21. The Committee is concerned about the incapacity and guardianship regime, which contravenes the Convention and the Committee's general comment No. 1. (2014) on equal recognition before the law. It is concerned by the lack of transparent and effective safeguards and remedies. The Committee is especially concerned by the denial of the right to marry and to vote.

22. The Committee recommends that the State party harmonize its legislation with the Convention with a view to replacing substituted decision-making with supported decision-making regimes which respect the person's autonomy, will and preferences, and establish transparent safeguards. The Committee further recommends that the State party provide training, in consultation with and the involvement of persons with disabilities, their representative organizations, and the Ombudsman, at the national, regional and local levels for all actors, including civil servants, judges, and social workers, on the recognition of the legal capacity of persons with disabilities and on good practices in supported decision-making.

38. The Committee is concerned that, despite recent legal and procedural reforms, all persons with disabilities are not given equal recognition before the law and are denied the right to vote, the right to marry and found a family, enjoy property and to retain fertility.

39. The Committee recommends that the State party repeal section 10 (1) of the Civil Code, which provides for deprivation of legal capacity, and section 10 (2) of the Civil Code, which provides for restriction of legal capacity, and to introduce supported decision-making which respects the autonomy, will and preferences of the individual.

25. The Committee is deeply concerned about substituted decision-making and guardianship regimes for persons with disabilities.

26. In the light of its general comment No. 1 (2014) on equal recognition before the law, the Committee urges the State party to repeal the regimes of substituted decision-making enshrined in, among others, sections 28 and 1670 of the Civil Code, and replace them with supported decision-making regimes that uphold the autonomy, will and preferences of persons with disabilities.

22. The Committee is concerned about legislation in the State party, including the Succession Act (2011), the Divorce Act (1904) and the Hindu Marriage and Divorce Act 1961, which restrict legal capacity of persons with disabilities on the basis of impairment, in particular persons with intellectual and/or psychosocial disabilities. It is also concerned about the de facto guardianship in families of persons with disabilities that deprive persons with disabilities of their ability to make choices in aspects such as marriage and inheritance.

23. The Committee recommends that the State party:

(a) Eliminate formal and/or informal substituted decision-making regimes and replace them with a system of supported decision-making, in line with article 12 of the Convention and the Committee's general comment No. 1 (2014) on equal recognition before the law;

(b) Repeal legislation and eliminate practices that allow for deprivation of legal capacity on the basis of disability and adopt measures to prohibit deprivation of legal capacity on a customary basis;

(c) Raise awareness among persons with disabilities, their families and community members, the judiciary and legislature on supported decision-making and legal capacity of persons with disabilities, in consultation with organizations of persons with disabilities.

24. The Committee is concerned that some of the State party's legislation still provides for substituted decision-making in some circumstances. This is contrary to article 12 of the Convention as elaborated in the Committee's general comment No. 1 (2014) on equal recognition before the law. The Committee is also concerned that supported decision-making procedures require judicial approval and do not give primacy to the autonomy, will and preferences of persons with disabilities.

25. The Committee urges the State party to withdraw all legal provisions that perpetuate the system of substituted decision-making. It also recommends that, in consultation with organizations of persons with disabilities and other service providers, the State party take tangible steps to replace the system of substitute decision-making with a supported decision-making model that upholds the autonomy, will and preferences of persons with disabilities in full conformity with article 12 of the Convention. It further recommends that all persons with disabilities currently under guardianship be kept duly informed about the new legal scheme and the exercise of the right to supported decision-making should be guaranteed in all cases.

36. The Committee notes with deep concern that across the European Union a large number of persons with disabilities have their full legal capacity restricted.

37. The Committee recommends that the European Union take appropriate measures to ensure that all persons with disabilities deprived of their legal capacity can exercise all the rights enshrined in European Union treaties and in European Union legislation such as on access to justice, to goods and services, including banking and employment, and to healthcare, as well as voting and consumer rights, in line with the Convention, as elaborated in the Committee's general comment No. 1 (2014) on equal recognition before the law. It further recommends that the European Union step up efforts to foster research, data collection and exchange of good practices on supported decision-making in consultation with representative organisations of persons with disabilities.

28. The Committee is deeply concerned about substituted decision-making and guardianship regimes for persons with disabilities.

29. The Committee strongly recommends that the State party repeal regimes of substituted decision-making enshrined in articles 618 and 640 of the Civil Code, among others, and replace them by supported decision-making regimes which uphold the autonomy, will and preferences of persons with disabilities.

23. The Committee is concerned that different laws of the State party such as the Children's Act 2001, the Mental Health Act of 1991 and the Marriage Law (2014) deprive persons with disabilities of their legal capacity, in particular persons with intellectual and/or psychosocial disabilities. It is also concerned about the de facto guardianship in families of persons with disabilities that deprive persons with disabilities of their ability to make choices in aspects such as buying food, renting a house or inheritance.

24. The Committee recommends that the State party:

(a) Eliminate all forms of formal and informal substituted decision-making regimes and replace them with a system of supported decision-making, in line with the Committee's general comment No. 1 (2014) on equal recognition before the law;

(b) Repeal legislation and practices that allow for deprivation of legal capacity on the basis of impairment and adopt measures to prohibit deprivation of legal capacity on customary basis;

(c) Support and facilitate on going initiatives to implement article 12, including research by the Kenya National Commission on Human Rights and the models of supported decision making spearheaded by representative organizations of persons with disabilities; and

(d) Develop training and information campaigns to the public about the contents and scope of the right to legal capacity in all areas of life, considering the involvement of all stakeholders, including organizations of persons with disabilities and decision makers.

21. The Committee is concerned that the institution of substituted decision making and guardianship for persons with disabilities meeting the derogatory criteria listed in the Mauritius Civil Code as well as the deprivation of the rights of institutionalized persons with disabilities to entering into contracts, vote, marry, take decisions about health and access courts of law violate article 12 of the Convention.

22. The Committee recommends that the State party abolish guardianship measures in law and practice and to ensure recognition of the legal capacity of persons with disabilities on an equal basis with others, and introduce supported decision-making mechanisms, in line with the Committee's general comment No. 1 (2014) on equal recognition before the law.

23. The Committee is deeply concerned about substituted decision-making and guardianship regimes for persons with disabilities enshrined in, among others, Article 305 of the Criminal Code, article 34 of the Guardianship (Assets of Minors) Act No. 40 of 2004, and article 127 of the Civil Code (Act No. 22 of 2004) which restrict the exercise of rights including the right to vote, marry, family, give and/or withdraw free and informed consent, access to justice and choice of where and with whom to live.

24. Recalling its general comment No. 1, the Committee recommends that the State party carry out a review of its legislation with a view to repeal regimes of substituted decision-making and replace them by supported decision-making regimes which uphold the autonomy, will and preferences of persons with disabilities.

26. The Committee is concerned that persons who were deprived of their legal capacity by a court decision lose all their rights, including the right to challenge their status before a court and that the State party's legislation does not provide for supported decision making mechanisms for such persons.

27. The Committee calls upon the State party to replace its guardianship and mental health law with supported decision making mechanisms and abolish all deprivation of legal capacity both fully and partially in relation to all persons with disabilities. The Committee further recommends that the State party fully harmonize its provisions with article 12 of the Convention, as elaborated in the Committee's General Comment No. 1 and recognize the full legal capacity of all persons with all types of disability.

23. The Committee is concerned that current legislation enables the appointment of a Trustee to make legal decisions on behalf of a person with intellectual and/or psychosocial disabilities.

24. The Committee recommends that the State party:

(a) Repeal legislation in order to abolish guardianship measures in law and practice and ensure the recognition of the legal capacity of persons with disabilities on an equal basis with others, and introduce supported decision-making mechanisms, in line with the Committee's General Recommendation 1;

(b) Develop support mechanisms at community level to promote choice, autonomy and inclusion of children and adults with disabilities.

17. The Committee is concerned that substituted decision making has not been replaced by supported decision making in law and in social practice, and that legislative amendments that are envisaged still consider the “best interest” of the person as opposed to his/her will and preferences and would maintain a modified regime of substitute decision-making. It is concerned that the Constitutional Court has suspended the new Family Act which abolished plenary guardianship.

18. The Committee recommends that legislative measures are taken to abolish substitute decision making regimes in accordance with the Committee’s general comment No.1 (2014), and that it provide a wide range of measures which respect a person’s autonomy, will and preferences, including with respect to a person’s right, to give and withdraw their own individual informed consent for medical treatment, to access justice, to vote, to marry, to full parental rights, and to work. It further recommends taking tangible steps to introduce systems of supported decision making and to this end train social workers, legal professionals and public authorities on the rights enshrined in the Convention. Organizations of persons with disabilities as well as other relevant stakeholders should be involved in these legislative and policy processes.

22. The Committee notes with concern that the new Civil Code still prescribes for the possibility of limiting one’s legal capacity and putting a person with disability under partial guardianship.

23. The Committee calls upon the State party to amend its Civil Code and fully harmonize its provisions with article 12 of the Convention, as elaborated in the Committee’s General Comment No. 1 and recognize the full legal capacity of all persons with all types of disability, and to improve access to supported decision-making and implement the provision of the Civil Code.

20. The Committee notes with concern that the Civil Code establishes regimes on legal incapacity that are based on substitute decision-making and override the wishes of a person classified under the heading of “imbecility, mental derangement or insanity”, in violation of article 12 of the Convention.

21. The Committee recommends that the State party do away with any regime that partially or totally deprives persons with disabilities of their legal capacity, that it amend the Civil Code to recognize the full legal capacity of all persons with disabilities, and that it put in place measures of supported decision-making in line with the Committee’s general comment No. 1 (2014) on article 12: Equal recognition before the law.

22. The Committee is concerned at the fact that discriminatory practices towards people with disabilities are still to be found in some domestic banks and financial institutions, whereby persons with disabilities, notably visual disabilities, are denied independent management of their financial affairs.

23. The Committee asks the State party to repeal any restriction on, or impediment to, access by persons with disabilities, on an equal basis with others, to banking services or the independent management of their financial affairs.

Germany (2015)

25. The Committee is concerned that the legal instrument of guardianship (“rechtliche Betreuung”), as outlined in and governed by the German Civil Code (BGB) is incompatible with the Convention.

26. The Committee recommends that the State party:

(a) Eliminate all forms of substituted decision-making and replace them with a system of supported decision-making, in view of the Committee’s General Comment No. 1 (2014);

- (b) Develop professional quality standards for supported decision-making mechanisms;
- (c) In close cooperation with persons with disabilities, provide training on article 12 of the Convention in line with Committee's General Comment No. 1 at the federal, regional and local levels for all actors, including civil servants, judges, social workers, health and social services professionals, and the wider community.

Mongolia (2015)

21. The Committee is concerned about the inadequacy of the State party's legal measures for ensuring the rights of persons with disabilities, in particular, persons with intellectual and/or psychosocial disabilities, to make choices about their lives and enjoy legal capacity on an equal basis with others. The Committee is furthermore concerned that the State party permits guardians of persons with disabilities to make decisions regarding the property and personal issues of persons deemed persistently incapable of legal capacity due to psychological restrictions caused by disability. The Committee notes that such a system continues to promote substituted decision-making instead of supported decision-making, contrary to the provisions of article 12 of the Convention, as elaborated in the Committee's general comment No. 1 (2014) on equal recognition before the law.

22. The Committee urges the State party to ensure legal capacity for persons with disabilities, including: to choose where and with whom they want to live, to vote for the political party they prefer, to have their health care decisions respected, to control their own financial affairs and to have access to cinemas and other leisure and cultural activities. The Committee recommends that the State party repeal provisions of the Civil Code to move from substitute decision-making to supported decision-making, which respects the person's autonomy, will and preferences and is in full conformity with article 12 of the Convention and general comment No. 1, including with respect to the individual's right to give and withdraw informed consent for medical treatment, among others: to have access to justice, to vote, to marry, to exercise parental rights, to work and to choose his or her place of residence. The Committee further recommends that the State party provide training, in consultation and cooperation with persons with disabilities and their representative organizations, at the national, regional and local levels for all actors, including civil servants, judges and social workers, on the recognition of the legal capacity of persons with disabilities and on the mechanisms of supported decision-making.

25. The Committee is concerned that the Family Code, which governs matters of guardianship, tutorship and wardship, continues to advance substituted decision-making instead of making further steps towards supported decision-making, contrary to the provisions of article 12 of the Convention and the adopted General Comment on this article. It is also concerned at the lack of transparent and clear distinctions among the legal institutions relevant to legal capacity as well as information on the existing safeguards and remedies in case of violation of the right to legal capacity of persons with disabilities.

26. The Committee recommends that the State party harmonize its legislation with the Convention with a view to replacing substituted decision-making with supported decision-making regimes which respects the person's autonomy, will and preferences, including transparent safeguards.

21. The Committee notes the recent work on examining supported decision-making regimes in New Zealand.

22. The Committee recommends that the State party take immediate steps to revise the relevant laws and replace substituted decision-making with supported decision-making. This should provide a wide range of measures that respect the person's autonomy, will and preferences, and is in full conformity with article 12 of the Convention, including with respect to the individual's right, in his or her own capacity, to give and withdraw informed consent, in particular for medical treatment, to access justice, to marry, and to work, among other things, consistent with the Committee's general comment No. 1 (2014) on equal recognition before the law.

32. The Committee notes that the Legal Incapacity and Guardianship Act continues to allow for substituted decision-making, thereby restricting the individual's exercise of rights such as the right to vote, access to justice, and consent to medical treatment.

33. The Committee recommends that the State party review the Legal Incapacity and Guardianship Act and incorporate into legislation supported decision-making, which respects the person's rights, will and preferences, in full conformity with article 12 of the Convention, which includes the individual's right to give and withdraw informed consent for medical treatment, to have access to justice, to vote, to marry and to work.

21. The Committee is concerned that the new adult guardianship system, which was introduced in July 2013, permits guardians to make decisions regarding the property and personal issues of persons deemed persistently incapable of managing tasks due to psychological restrictions caused by disease, disability or old age. The Committee notes that such a system continues to promote substituted decision-making instead of supported decision-making, contrary to the provisions of article 12 of the Convention, as elaborated in the Committee's general comment No. 1 (2014) on equal recognition before the law.

22. The Committee recommends that the State party move from substitute decision-making to supported decision-making, which respects the person's autonomy, will and preferences and is in full conformity with article 12 of the Convention and general comment No. 1, including with respect to the individual's right to give and withdraw informed consent for medical treatment, to have access to justice, to vote, to marry, to work and to choose his or her place of residence. The Committee further recommends that the State party provide training, in consultation and cooperation with persons with disabilities and their representative organizations, at the national, regional and local levels for all actors, including civil servants, judges and social workers, on the recognition of the legal capacity of persons with disabilities and on the mechanisms of supported decision-making.

23. The Committee commends the State party's efforts to reform legislation on legal capacity. It notes the adoption of the new Act reforming legal incapacity regimes, but is concerned that the new law continues to adhere to a substitute decision-making model and does not provide for the right to supported decision-making.

24. The Committee recommends that the State party take immediate steps to revise the Act of 17 March 2013 in view of the Committee's general comment No. 1 (2014), and allocate sufficient financial and human resources to provide for supported decision-making and enable justices of the peace to take decisions on a case-by-case basis, as required by the law.

24. The Committee is concerned that the State party's civil legislation provides for a substitute decision-making model through the use of roles such as guardians and wards, and that there is no immediate plan to reform the Civil Code and the Code of Civil Procedure to include a supported decision-making model, as recommended in general comment No. 1 (2014) on equal recognition before the law.

25. The Committee recommends that the State party establish a working group with representatives of independent organizations of persons with disabilities in order to carry out a timely review of civil legislation and introduce supported decision-making mechanisms. It also recommends that the State party draw up an agenda, with a timetable, for the implementation of the new plan.

23. The Committee is concerned at the lack of measures to repeal the declaration of legal incompetence and the limitations on the legal capacity of a person on the grounds of disability. It is also concerned at the lack of social awareness in this respect and the reluctance of some justice officials to put into effect the recommendations made by the Committee in its general comment No. 1 on equal recognition before the law (2014).

24. The Committee urges the State party to suspend any legislative reform that would perpetuate a system of substitute decision-making and to take steps to adopt laws and policies that replace the substitute decision-making system with a supported decision-making model that upholds the autonomy and wishes of the persons concerned, regardless of the degree of disability. At the same time, it urges the State party to review all federal and state legislation in order to eliminate any restriction of rights stemming from a declaration of legal incompetence or on the grounds of a person's disability. It recommends that the State party take steps to train the authorities and society regarding the right to legal capacity of persons with disabilities, on the basis of the recommendations made by the Committee in its general comment No. 1 (2014).

33. Even though declarations of incapacity have been completely abolished, the Committee is concerned that the appointment of an administrator is a form of substituted decision-making.

34. The Committee recommends that the State party take immediate steps to replace substituted decision-making with supported decision-making and provide a wide range of measures which respect the person's autonomy, will and preferences and are in full conformity with article 12 of the Convention, including with respect to the individual's right, in his or her own capacity, to give and withdraw informed consent for medical treatment, to have access to justice, to vote, to marry and to work.

26. The Committee is concerned that the Civil Code, which governs matters of guardianship and trusteeship, continues to advance substituted decision making instead of supported decision-making contrary to the provisions of article 12 of the Convention restricting the exercise of rights such as the right to vote and access to justice.

27. The Committee recommends that the State party amend the Civil Code with a view to replacing substituted decision-making with supported decision-making for persons with disabilities, and ensure that persons with disabilities exercise all rights including the right to vote and adopt among others. The Committee recommends that supported decision-making structures be introduced which fully respect the person's autonomy, will and preferences, and be in full conformity with article 12 of the Convention in the exercise of his or her rights under the Convention.

21. The Committee expresses its concern about the continuing existence of such procedures as interdiction and the declaration of mental insanity in respect of persons with disabilities, and the resulting restrictions on the exercise of other rights, including the right to vote and the right to have a home and found a family.

22. The Committee urges the State party to approve the bill on the personal autonomy of persons with disabilities (No. 17507), to revise and repeal article 91 of the Constitution and to repeal the provisions of the Civil Code and the Code of Civil Procedure governing incapacity and insanity proceedings on the basis of disability. It recommends that the State party establish safeguards for persons with disabilities and develop a model for support in the decision-making process that takes due account of the individual's autonomy, free will and preferences, and of their rights, including the right to free and informed consent to receive medical treatment, the right of access to justice, and the rights to vote, to marry and to choose their place of residence.

23. The Committee notes with concern that it is banking practice not to consider persons with disabilities creditworthy.

24. The Committee urges the State party to ensure that persons with disabilities have access to loans, mortgages and a full range of financial services on an equal basis with others.

24. The Committee notes that the Australian Law Reform Commission has been recently commissioned to inquire into barriers to equal recognition before the law and legal capacity for persons with disabilities. The Committee is however concerned about the possibility of maintaining the regime of substitute decision-making, and that there is still no detailed and viable framework for supported decision-making in the exercise of legal capacity.

25. The Committee recommends that the State party uses effectively the current inquiry process to take immediate steps to replace substitute decision-making with supported decision-making and provides a wide range of measures which respect the person's autonomy, will and preferences and is in full conformity with article 12 of the Convention, including with respect to the individual's right, in his/her own capacity, to give and withdraw informed consent for medical treatment, to access justice, to vote, to marry, and to work.

26. The Committee further recommends that the State party provides training, in consultation and cooperation with persons with disabilities and their representative organizations, at the national, regional and local levels for all actors, including civil servants, judges, and social workers, on the recognition of the legal capacity of persons with disabilities and on the primacy of supported decision-making mechanisms in the exercise of legal capacity.

27. In 2012, approximately fifty-five thousand Austrians were under guardianship, with half with respect to all aspects of life. This is concerning, particularly because the Austrian guardianship laws do appear to be old fashioned and out of step with article 12 of the Convention. The Committee commends the State party for introducing a pilot program under the national action plan on supported decision-making.

28. The Committee recommends that substituted decision making be replaced with supported decision making. The Committee recommends that Austria do more to ensure that persons with disabilities have access to supported decision-making and are not placed under guardianship. The Committee recommends that supported decision making structures should respect the person's autonomy, will and preferences, and be in full conformity with article 12 of the Convention, including with respect to the individual's right, in his/her own capacity, to give and withdraw informed consent for medical treatment, to access justice, to vote, to marry, to work, and to choose a place of residence. The Committee also recommends that disabled persons organizations be involved in all aspects of the pilot program on supported decision-making. The Committee further recommends that the State party provide training, in consultation and cooperation with persons with disabilities and their representative organizations of persons with disabilities, at the national, regional and local levels for all actors, including civil servants, judges, and social workers, on the recognition of the legal capacity of persons with disabilities and on mechanisms of supported decision-making.

27. The Committee is concerned at the legal disqualification arising in civil and family law when persons with intellectual, psychosocial, hearing or visual impairments are interdicted or declared legally incapable, limiting some of their rights. The Committee regrets the lack of information provided on persons with disabilities placed in the system of guardianship or protection, and on the propriety of the processes for lifting interdictions. The Committee notes with concern that the Public Notaries Act limits possibilities for "blind", "mute" and "deaf" persons and those who "are not in full command of their mental faculties" to work as notaries.

28. The Committee recommends that the State party replace the rules on interdiction based on disability by a decision-making support mechanism that respects the autonomy, will and preferences of the individual, and that it adopt immediate measures, in cooperation with organizations of persons with disabilities, to set up adequate decision-making support services, in keeping with the provisions of the Convention. The Committee requests that the State party abolish the restriction on persons with disabilities working as notaries and provide the necessary reasonable accommodation for them to exercise this profession.

29. The Committee is concerned at the State party's mechanism for declaring persons with disabilities legally incapable and regrets the lack of understanding in the State party concerning the scope of article 12 of the Convention. The Committee is also concerned at the lack of data and information on persons with disabilities who have been declared legally incapable since the declaration of incapacity is an impediment to respect for the legal capacity of persons with disabilities, and the full exercise of that capacity, in all areas of life, including, but not limited to, matters of property.

30. The Committee urges the State party to repeal the legal provisions of the Civil Code governing the procedure for declaring legal incapacity on grounds of disability and to set up an independent review mechanism with the aim of fully restoring the rights of those who have been declared legally incapable. It also recommends that the State party set up safeguards for persons with disabilities and develop a model for support in the decision-making process that takes due account of the individual's autonomy, free will and preferences, and of their rights, including the right to free and informed consent to medical treatment, the right of access to justice, and the rights to vote, to marry and to choose their place of residence.

19. The Committee is deeply concerned about the inconsistencies observed in both the laws already in force and bills that are now being considered in the State party which are based, or continue to be based, on a substitute decision-making model that overrides the wishes of the persons concerned, which clearly runs counter to article 12 of the Convention. The Committee is also concerned at the reluctance of some justice officials to apply the rules that set limits on a court's discretion in restricting the legal capacity of persons with disabilities.

20. The Committee urges the State party to launch an immediate review of all current legislation that is based on a substitute decision-making model that deprives persons with disabilities of their legal capacity. At the same time, the Committee urges the State party to take steps to adopt laws and policies that replace the substitute decision-making system with a supported decision-making model that upholds the autonomy, wishes and preferences of the persons concerned. In addition, the Committee recommends that training workshops on the human rights model of disability be organized for judges to encourage them to adopt the supported decision-making system instead of granting guardianships or trusteeships.

21. The Committee expresses concern at the inconsistencies existing between the proposal for the amendment and standardization of the Civil and Commercial Code and the Convention, as the concept of judicial prohibition would be retained and judges would have complete discretion to appoint a trustee or decide on what decision-making support tools are needed by persons with disabilities.

22. The Committee urges the State party to ensure that the concept of judicial prohibition does not figure in the proposal for the amendment and standardization of the Civil and Commercial Code and to guarantee the effective participation in the review process of organizations representing persons with disabilities.

21. The Committee is concerned about the system for establishing legal guardianship, which is not in compliance with art. 12 CRPD. It takes note of the complete absence of a system of supported decision-making measures which recognize the rights of persons with disabilities to make their own decisions and to have their autonomy, will and preferences respected.

22. The Committee urges the state party to adopt measures to repeal the laws, policies and practices which permit guardianship and trusteeship for adults and take legislative action to replace regimes of substituted decision-making by supported decision making, which respects the person's autonomy, will and preferences, in the exercise of one's legal capacity in accordance with Article 12 of the CRPD. In addition, the Committee recommends the state party in consultation with DPOs to, prepare a blueprint for a system of supported decision-making, and legislate and implement it which includes:

- a. Recognition of all persons' legal capacity and right to exercise it;
- b. Accommodations and access to support where necessary to exercise legal capacity;
- c. Regulations to ensure that support respects the person's autonomy, will and preferences and establishment of feedback mechanisms to ensure that support is meeting the person's needs;
- d. Arrangements for the promotion and establishment of supported decision-making;

Hungary (2012)

25. The Committee takes note of the fact that the State party is undertaking efforts to harmonize its national legislation with the provisions of article 12 of the Convention. It welcomes the plans to provide for supported decision-making in the drafting of the new Civil Code. The Committee however remains concerned about the possibility of maintaining a modified regime of substitute decision-making in the drafting of the new Civil Code. The Committee is also concerned that the process of drafting of the new Civil Code has not been used to provide for a detailed and viable framework for supported decision-making in the exercise of legal capacity in accordance with the provisions of article 12 of the Convention.

26. The Committee recommends that the State party use effectively the current review process of its Civil Code and related laws to take immediate steps to derogate guardianship in order to move from substitute decision-making to supported decision-making, which respects the person's autonomy, will and preferences and is in full conformity with article 12 of the Convention, including with respect to the individual's right, on their own, to give and withdraw informed consent for medical treatment, to access justice, to vote, to marry, to work, and to choose their place of residence. The Committee further recommends the State party to provide training, in consultation and cooperation with persons with disabilities and their representative organizations, at the national, regional and local levels for all actors, including civil servants, judges, and social workers on the recognition of the legal capacity of persons with disabilities and on mechanisms of supported decision-making.

22. The Committee is concerned at reports that a number of persons with disabilities, especially those living in rural areas and in long-term institutional settings, do not have identity cards and, sometimes, have no name.

23. The Committee urges the State party to promptly initiate programmes in order to provide identity documents to persons with disabilities, including in rural areas and in long-term institutional settings, and to collect complete and accurate data on people with disabilities in institutions who are currently undocumented and/or do not enjoy their right to a name.

24. The Committee notes with concern that legislation of the State party (article 7 of the Constitution and articles 564 and 565 the Civil Code) is not in conformity with article 12 of the Convention, as it establishes substitute decision-making instead of supported decision-making and permits the suspension of civil rights of persons with disabilities in cases of judicial interdiction. The Committee is also concerned at the lack of information concerning the number of persons who have been subjected to guardianship and trusteeship and the lack of legal remedies and safeguards, such as independent review and right to appeal, that are in place in order to revoke those decisions.

25. The Committee recommends that the State party abolish the practice of judicial interdiction and review the laws allowing for guardianship and trusteeship to ensure their full conformity with article 12 of the Convention and take action to replace regimes of substitute decision-making by supported decision-making, which respects the person's autonomy, will, and preferences.

26. The Committee is concerned that the State party's Civil Code denies the ability to exercise the right to marry to the "deaf-mute, blind-deaf and blind-mute persons, as well as to mentally handicapped persons and those suffering from mental deterioration".

27. The Committee urges the State party to amend the Civil Code in order to adequately guarantee the exercise of civil rights, in particular the right to marry, to all persons with disabilities.

33. The Committee notes that Act 26/2011 allows a period of one year following its entry into force for the presentation of a bill to govern the scope and interpretation of article 12 of the Convention. The Committee is further concerned that no measures have been taken to replace substitute decision-making by supported decision-making in the exercise of legal capacity.

34. The Committee recommends that the State party review the laws allowing for guardianship and trusteeship and take action to develop laws and policies to replace regimes of substitute decision-making by supported decision-making, which respects the person's autonomy, will and preferences. It further recommends that training be provided on this issue for all relevant public officials and other stakeholders.

22. The Committee is concerned that no measures have been undertaken to replace substitute decision-making by supported decision-making in the exercise of legal capacity.

23. The Committee recommends that the State party review the laws allowing for guardianship and trusteeship and take action to develop laws and policies to replace regimes of substitute decision-making by supported decision-making. It further recommends that training be provided on this issue to all relevant public officials and other stakeholders.

*Article 13 CRPD
(Access to Justice)*

September 2025

Article 13 - Access to justice

1. States Parties shall ensure effective access to justice for persons with disabilities on an equal basis with others, including through the provision of procedural and age-appropriate accommodations, in order to facilitate their effective role as direct and indirect participants, including as witnesses, in all legal proceedings, including at investigative and other preliminary stages.

2. In order to help to ensure effective access to justice for persons with disabilities, States Parties shall promote appropriate training for those working in the field of administration of justice, including police and prison staff.

23. The Committee is concerned about:

(a) The absence of accessible legal services, support mechanisms, and procedures to ensure access to justice for persons with disabilities in the State Party including procedural accommodation, accessible formats, and physical accessibility of court and administrative facilities;

(b) The lack of roles within the justice system filled by persons with disabilities and the lack of information provided on measures taken to promote the recruitment, training and retention of persons with disabilities in the legal profession.

24. The Committee recalls the International Principles and Guidelines on Access to Justice for Persons with Disabilities prepared in 2020 by the Special Rapporteur on the rights of persons with disabilities and the Special Envoy of the Secretary-General on Disability and Accessibility, and endorsed by the Committee, and target 16.3 of the Sustainable Development Goals and recommends that the State Party:

(a) Adopt and implement comprehensive measures to ensure access to the justice system for persons with disabilities on an equal basis with others, including by the provision of free legal aid, information in accessible formats, and procedural and gender-sensitive and age-appropriate accommodations.

(b) Develop specific measures and inclusive policies to ensure the participation of persons with disabilities in the justice sector, including as lawyers, judges, court staff, and advisors, and provide ongoing capacity-building for all justice actors on the rights enshrined in the Convention.

Finland (2025)

24. The Committee notes with concern:

(a) The insufficient provision of procedural and age-appropriate accommodations in all judicial and administrative proceedings and the lack of adequate training for judicial and administrative personnel on procedural accommodation and access to justice for persons with disabilities;

(b) The delays in administrative court processes that prevent provision of essential support to children and adults with disabilities for lengthy periods of time and administrative court decisions that return matters to the county that effectively requires repetition of the same process, without reasonable prospect of success;

(c) The insufficient measures to respond to the needs of victims and suspected offenders with disabilities;

(d) The lack of resources, including funding for organisations of persons with disabilities to provide legal advice and advocacy and to participate in the design and delivery of training to judicial personnel.

25. Recalling the International Principles and Guidelines on Access to Justice for Persons with Disabilities, the Committee recommends that the State party, in close consultation and active involvement of persons with disabilities through their representative organizations:

(a) Implement a comprehensive, mandatory strategy to ensure the provision of procedural and age-appropriate accommodation for persons with disabilities free of charge in all adjudicative civil, criminal and administrative proceedings, including access to certified sign language interpreters, so that persons with disabilities can participate effectively;

(b) Ensure appropriate and mandatory training for all judicial and administrative personnel, including members of the judiciary, administrators, prosecutors, law enforcement, public defenders and prison personnel on the provision of procedural accommodation and access to justice for persons with disabilities, without reasonable prospect of success;

(c) Amend administrative court processes to eliminate delays in the provision of essential support to persons with disabilities, and to ensure that court decisions provide an effective remedy and do not result in repetition of the administrative process;

(d) Take measures to fulfil the rights of victims with disabilities and persons with disabilities suspected or accused of an offence in line with the Convention and obligations under EU law, including the Anti-Trafficking Directive 2024/1712 and Directive 2024/1385 on combating violence against women and domestic violence, and the EU Victims' Rights Strategy 2020-2025;

(e) Adequately resource and fund organisations of persons with disabilities to provide legal advice and advocacy to persons with disabilities and to participate in the design and delivery of training to judicial and administrative personnel.

Kiribati (2025)

23. The Committee is concerned about:

(a) Barriers faced by persons with disabilities in accessing justice on equal basis with others, including the physical inaccessibility of courtrooms and other public facilities, the absence of qualified sign language interpreters in administrative and judicial proceedings and the limited availability of documents and information in accessible formats for persons with disabilities;

(b) The lack of reasonable and procedural accommodations, in particular for persons with intellectual and/or psychosocial disabilities;

(c) Insufficient knowledge, training and awareness among legal aid lawyers, police officers and members of the judiciary on working with and representing persons with disabilities.

24. The Committee recalls the International Principles and Guidelines on Access to Justice for Persons with Disabilities and target 16.3 of the Sustainable Development Goals, and recommends that the State party:

(a) Accelerate action to comply with the findings of the national accessibility audit by renovating existing public buildings, including courthouses, police stations and all judicial and administrative facilities and guarantee the provision of qualified sign language interpreters as well as documents and information in accessible formats, including Braille, Easy Read, and audio, in all judicial and administrative proceedings;

(b) Guarantee reasonable and procedural accommodations for persons with disabilities, particularly for persons with intellectual and/or psychosocial disabilities, to enable their effective participation in all stages of judicial proceedings;

(c) Strengthen capacity-building programmes for the judiciary and justice-sector professionals, such as prosecutors and law enforcement officials including police and prison officers, on the provisions of the Convention and on access to justice for persons with disabilities, including on procedural accommodations for persons with disabilities.

Maldives (2025)

25. The Committee is concerned about barriers faced by persons with disabilities in accessing justice on equal basis with others, including legislation denying legal capacity of persons with intellectual and/or psychosocial disabilities, physical inaccessibility of police stations and court houses, the lack of free legal aid and age- and gender-appropriate procedural accommodations, the lack of accessible information and communication in court proceedings, the insufficient knowledge, training and awareness among legal aid lawyers, police officers and judiciary on working with and representing persons with disabilities, as well as the lack of knowledge among persons with disabilities about their rights and about formal procedures on how to enforce their entitlements and processes to obtain remedies. It is also concerned at the lack of access of persons with disabilities to legal professions.

26. The Committee recalls the International Principles and Guidelines on Access to Justice for Persons with Disabilities prepared in 2020 by the Special Rapporteur on the rights of persons with disabilities, and target 16.3 of the Sustainable Development Goals, and recommends that the State party:

(a) Expedite the ongoing review of the Penal Code, in particular its Section 62, in order to bring it in line with the Convention;

(b) Adopt and implement effective mechanisms to ensure procedural, age-appropriate and gender-sensitive accommodations in judicial and administrative proceedings for persons with disabilities, including women with disabilities, persons with intellectual and/or psychosocial disabilities and persons with physical and sensory impairments, and measures to provide information in accessible formats, sign language interpretation, and ensure the physical accessibility of police stations, court buildings and all judicial and administrative facilities;

(c) Strengthen capacity-building programmes for the judiciary and justice-sector professionals, such as prosecutors and law enforcement officials including police and prison officers, on the provisions of the Convention and on access to justice for persons with disabilities, including on procedural accommodations for persons with disabilities;

(d) Take measures to ensure that persons with disabilities may enter the legal professions on an equal basis with others, and ensure individualized support for that purpose.

25. The Committee is concerned about:

(a) Jurisdictional differences in eligibility and the issues covered by legal aid;

(b) Regional inconsistencies in protocols and processes for accessing procedural and age-appropriate accommodation in the justice system, the over-reliance on medical documentation to request procedural accommodations and disclosure of private medical records in decisions and, insufficient sign language interpretation in courts, tribunals, and police interactions;

(c) Significant delays and backlogs in resolving disability discrimination complaints in many human rights tribunals.

26. Recalling the International Principles and Guidelines on Access to Justice for Persons with Disabilities 2020, the Committee recommends that the State Party, in close consultation and active involvement of persons with disabilities through their representative organisations:

(a) Establish principles and guidelines in funding agreements with provincial and territorial governments to ensure broad legal aid eligibility criteria, expand the issues covered, and that legal aid services are nationally consistent;

(b) Develop nationally consistent protocols and guidelines for the request and provision of procedural and age-appropriate accommodation for persons with disabilities in all legal proceedings, including to prevent over-reliance on medical documentation, to ensure respect for privacy and in relation to the provision of sign language interpretation in courts, tribunals, and police interactions;

(c) Increase resourcing to human rights tribunals in order to expedite disability discrimination complaints and eliminate backlogs.

23. The Committee is concerned about the barriers to access to justice for persons with disabilities, in particular:

(a) The ineffectiveness of implementation of the provisions in section VII of Law 5-13 on the equal rights of persons with disabilities related to legal aid provision and sign language interpretation in the legal proceedings;

(b) The limited accessibility of many courthouses and the limited procedural and administrative accommodation in all legal proceedings, in particular the age- or gender-sensitive procedural accommodation;

(c) The limited participation of persons with disabilities as judges, legal advisers or witnesses and the scarcity of measures at the provincial and municipal levels to ensure said participation;

(d) The insufficient training for judges on access to justice for persons with disabilities.

24. The Committee recalls the International Principles and Guidelines on Access to Justice for Persons with Disabilities, prepared in 2020 by the Special Rapporteur on the rights of persons with disabilities and the Special Envoy of the Secretary-General on Disability and Accessibility and endorsed by the Committee, and target 16.3 of the Sustainable Development Goals and recommends that the State party in close consultation with and with active involvement of persons with disabilities and their representative organizations:

- (a) Take measures to implement section VII of Law 5-13 on equal rights for persons with disabilities to ensure effective legal assistance provision for persons with disabilities;
- (b) Remove all barriers to access to justice for persons with disabilities in general and for women, children and older persons with disabilities in particular, and to inform these groups of the remedies available to them to file complaints and obtain redress;
- (c) Ensure access to judicial and administrative facilities for all persons with disabilities, by providing accessibility and the provision of alternative and augmentative means of information and communication, such as Braille, sign language, accessible digital formats, Easy Read, audio description and video transcription, throughout legal proceedings;
- (d) Provide age- and gender-appropriate procedural accommodations in all administrative and judicial proceedings to ensure, through the delivery of support services and free legal representation, that persons with disabilities can participate in the justice system as judges, legal advisers or witnesses and undertake the necessary procedural reforms to ensure that these accommodations are provided;
- (e) Extend the scope of training on the rights of persons with disabilities to include all justice personnel, including those in rural and remote areas.

34. The Committee observes with concern that:

- (a) Deprivation of legal capacity infringes on persons with disabilities' right to effective access to justice on an equal basis with others, affecting particularly persons with intellectual and/or psychosocial disabilities;
- (b) Online platforms and digital tools in the justice sector of the European Union are largely inaccessible for persons with disabilities.

35. The Committee recalls the International Principles and Guidelines on Access to Justice for Persons with Disabilities, of 2020, its previous Concluding Observations and Recommendations (para. 39) and recommends that the European Union, within its competences:

- (a) Review its legislation on access to justice and guarantee the right to legal capacity of persons with disabilities in all legal proceedings, by, inter alia, ensuring that persons with disabilities can directly participate in all stages of the administrative and justice processes, according to their will and preference, and by establishing remedies for violations of their right to access to justice;
- (b) Adopt additional criteria and procedures for the provision of support measures and procedural accommodation for persons with disabilities, in all legal proceedings, that include a dialogue with the persons with disabilities concerned to identify their requirements and positive measures to remove physical, communication and attitudinal barriers, a non-exhaustive list of procedural accommodations available, including the provision of legal documents and information on procedures in Easy Read, Braille, augmentative and alternative means and modes of communication;
- (c) Strengthen capacity building in the justice sector and in public administration about the Convention and its right of access to justice, and consider good practices in Member States, such as the use of intermediaries and/or facilitators;
- (e) Amend the laws on judicial proceedings to guarantee all fair trial rights of persons with disabilities, including the presumption of innocence, the right to be present in criminal proceedings, to access to interpretation, a lawyer and legal aid, regardless of their legal capacity status;

(f) Ensure that persons with disabilities are included in the digitalization of justice.

23. The Committee notes with concern:

(a) Barriers that persons with disabilities continue to face in accessing justice, including the lack of qualified sign language interpreters in administrative and judicial proceedings for persons who are deaf, and the lack of documents and information in accessible formats for persons with disabilities;

(b) Lack of provision of reasonable and procedural accommodations to persons with disabilities, particularly persons with psychosocial disabilities, including some legal provisions, such as Section 901, Chapter 9 of the Palau's Code which is inconsistent with the Convention;

(c) Low level of awareness among the judiciary and the police about the rights of persons with disabilities.

24. The Committee recalls the International Principles and Guidelines on Access to Justice for Persons with Disabilities prepared in 2020 by the Special Rapporteur on the rights of persons with disabilities, and target 16.3 of the Sustainable Development Goals, and recommends that the State party:

(a) Adopt and implement effective mechanisms to ensure procedural, age-appropriate and gender-sensitive accommodations in judicial and administrative proceedings for persons with disabilities, including women with disabilities, persons with intellectual and/or psychosocial disabilities and persons with physical and sensory impairments, including those who are deaf, hard of hearing, deafblind and persons with visual impairments, and measures to provide information in accessible formats, and ensure the physical accessibility of court buildings and all judicial and administrative facilities;

(b) Bring all legislation, including criminal laws and policies, in compliance with the Convention to ensure due process guarantees for all persons with disabilities and ensure a review of Section 901, Chapter 9 of the Palau's Code on the legal situation of persons with psychosocial disabilities;

(c) Strengthen training for the judiciary and law enforcement personnel, including judges, prosecutors, lawyers, police officers and prison staff, on the rights of persons with disabilities;

(d) Raise awareness among persons with disabilities about their right to access to justice, including legal aid, the remedies and redress available to them through the judicial system.

Tuvalu (2025)

23. The Committee is concerned about barriers faced by persons with disabilities in accessing justice on equal basis with others, including legislation denying legal capacity of persons with intellectual and/or psychosocial disabilities, physical inaccessibility of police stations and court houses, the lack of free legal aid and age- and gender-appropriate procedural accommodations, the lack of accessible information and communication in court proceedings, the lack of knowledge, training and awareness among legal aid lawyers, police officers and judiciary on working with and representing persons with disabilities, as well as the lack of knowledge among persons with disabilities about their rights and about formal procedures on how to enforce their entitlements and processes to obtain remedies.

24. The Committee recalls the International Principles and Guidelines on Access to Justice for Persons with Disabilities prepared in 2020 by the Special Rapporteur on the rights of persons with disabilities, and target 16.3 of the Sustainable Development Goals, and recommends that the State party:

(a) Adopt and implement effective mechanisms to ensure procedural, age-appropriate and gender-sensitive accommodations in judicial and administrative proceedings for persons with disabilities, including women with disabilities, persons with intellectual and/or psychosocial disabilities and persons with physical and sensory impairments, and measures to provide information in accessible formats, and ensure the physical accessibility of police stations, court buildings and all judicial and administrative facilities;

(b) Strengthen capacity-building programmes for the judiciary and justice-sector professionals, such as prosecutors and law enforcement officials including police and prison officers, on the provisions of the Convention and on access to justice for persons with disabilities, including on procedural accommodations for persons with disabilities.

Viet Nam (2025)

25. The Committee is concerned about:

(a) The lack of disaggregated data on the number of persons with disabilities who have received legal advice, the physical accessibility of public prosecutor offices, the availability of information and communication, and whether justice providers have been trained in disability rights;

(b) The absence of information on whether persons with disabilities are employed in the area of access to justice, and if they do, whether the courts are physically accessible, have access to information and communication, and whether current workers have been trained in disability issues;

(c) The failure to apply procedural adjustments with a gender and age approach when persons with disabilities face trial;

(d) The lack of consideration for providing support and procedural accommodations to persons with disabilities in their roles as witnesses, plaintiffs, and defendants, as well as the lack of accessibility in law school entrance exams and of the provision of reasonable accommodations to enable persons with disabilities to pursue legal careers;

(e) The barriers faced by persons with disabilities in accessing legal and administrative representation, legal aid, and disability-inclusive legal services, which limit their ability to seek redress for discrimination.

26. The Committee recalls the International Principles and Guidelines on Access to Justice for Persons with Disabilities prepared in 2020 by the Special Rapporteur on the rights of persons with disabilities and the Special Envoy of the Secretary-General on Disability and Accessibility, and endorsed by the Committee, and target 16.3 of the Sustainable Development Goals and recommends that the State party:

(a) Establish a mechanism for collecting data disaggregated by sex, age, and type of disability for persons with disabilities who have required support during judicial processes, detailing the types of support provided and their follow-up;

(b) Identify and provide data on the number of persons with disabilities employed in the area of access to justice, ensure that courts are physically accessible, provide access to information and communication, and train justice providers in disability rights;

(c) Analyze and document cases involving persons with disabilities where gender, indigenous, and age approaches, as well as procedural adjustments, have been applied;

(d) Ensure adequate measures to provide support and procedural accommodations for persons with disabilities in their roles as witnesses, plaintiffs, and defendants, and introduce accessibility in pre-career law examinations and provide reasonable accommodations, enabling persons with disabilities to pursue legal careers;

(e) Guarantee access to adequate legal and administrative representation for persons with disabilities, taking into account gender and age considerations, to enable them access to justice when facing discrimination.

Belarus (2024)

25. The Committee is concerned that:

(a) The Law on Judicial Enforcement Proceedings, and the Instruction on Notarial Procedure lack guarantees in the recruitment of qualified interpreters for deaf persons;

(b) Persons with intellectual and/or psychosocial disabilities are excluded from participating in court hearings when deciding on the need and possibility of compulsory treatment in a medical institution, and lack of awareness persists among lawyers on the individual requirements of persons with psychosocial disabilities and/or intellectual disabilities;

(c) Persons with psychosocial disabilities and/or intellectual disabilities, are sometimes also included in the State party's list of people involved in extremist or terrorist activities;

(d) Law enforcement, judicial staff and judges lack trainings on a regular basis in relation to the knowledge and awareness to undertake effective communication with persons with disabilities;

(e) Court case statistics are not disaggregated by disability, causing difficulties to assess the number of persons with disabilities accessing the justice system;

(f) Persons with disabilities, particularly persons with vision impairments, persons with psychosocial disabilities and/or intellectual disabilities, lack access to judicial materials in accessible formats.

26. Recalling the International Principles and Guidelines on Access to Justice for Persons with Disabilities (OHCHR, 2020), the Committee recommends that the State party:

(a) Harmonize the Law of the Republic of Belarus on Judicial Enforcement Proceedings and any other guideline or policy, in providing deaf people with qualified interpreters in Belarusian sign language;

(b) Provide persons with psychosocial disabilities and/or intellectual disabilities the possibility of due process with the established safeguards and aids when facing a trial and that lawyers defending persons with psychosocial disabilities and/or with intellectual disabilities are properly trained;

(c) Refrain from including persons with psychosocial disabilities and/or intellectual disabilities, in the State party's list of people involved in extremist or terrorist activities;

(d) Undertake measures to provide regular and standardized trainings for all law enforcement, judicial staff and judges, in developing their knowledge and understanding of communication in relation to all persons with disabilities;

(e) Establish a system of collection and analysis of statistical data on the number of complaints submitted by persons with disabilities, the rates of dismissal or withdrawal of complaints, procedural accommodations provided during proceedings. All data should be disaggregated, including in relation to intersecting forms of discrimination and other relevant sociodemographic characteristics, including the age, sex, gender, geographic location, migrant, asylum seeking and refugee situation.

(f) Ensure the dissemination of all documents during the judicial procedures in all accessible formats.

Belgium (2024)

26. The Committee is concerned that:

(a) Age-appropriate and disability and gender responsive procedural accommodations to ensure effective participation in all legal processes are not sufficiently provided;

(b) Deaf and Hard of Hearing Persons have no guaranteed legal right to a sign language interpreter at no cost in all processes applying law;

(c) Persons with disabilities no longer automatically benefit from free legal aid;

(d) Judicial personnel, such as judges, clerks, magistrates, and others, are often inadequately trained about the individualized requirements of persons with disabilities.

27. The Committee recalls the International Principles and Guidelines on Access to Justice for Persons with Disabilities, and recommends that the State party, in close consultation with and the active involvement of persons with disabilities, through their representative organisations:

(a) Put in place age- and gender-responsive procedural accommodations in all judicial and administrative proceedings for persons with disabilities, be they of civil, criminal or administrative nature, on a no-cost basis, including access to certified sign language interpreters, so that persons with disabilities can participate effectively, including as judges, clerks, lawyers or witnesses, in such proceedings, and make the necessary procedural changes to provide such accommodation;

(b) Ensure appropriate and mandatory training for all of the State party's judicial and administrative personnel, including members of the judiciary, administrative entities, police officers, prosecutors and prison personnel, on the application of the standards and principles under the Convention to ensure access to justice.

(c) Ensure persons with disabilities have access to affordable legal aid.

25. The Committee notes with concern:

(a) The lack of information on how persons with disabilities have access in practice to the legal guarantees of the Code of Criminal Procedure;

(b) The barriers that persons with disabilities continue to face in accessing justice, including high costs, the lack of qualified sign language interpreters in administrative and judicial proceedings for persons with hearing impairments, and the lack of documents and information in accessible formats for persons with disabilities;

(c) The lack of knowledge, training and awareness among police officers and the judiciary about working with persons with disabilities, and the lack of knowledge and capacity among legal aid lawyers in representing persons with disabilities in particular women and children with disabilities as well as persons with intellectual disability and persons with psychosocial disability.

26. The Committee recalls the International Principles and Guidelines on Access to Justice for Persons with Disabilities, developed in 2020 under the leadership of the Special Rapporteur on the rights of persons with disabilities, and target 16.3 of the Sustainable Development Goals, and recommends that the State party:

(a) Ensure that the provisions of the Code of Criminal Procedure (art. 59, 346 and 425) concerning obligations placed on law enforcement, the judiciary and other justice sector institutions on providing information, procedural accommodation and reasonable accommodation to persons with disabilities are fully implemented;

(b) Adopt and implement effective mechanisms to ensure procedural, age-appropriate and gender-responsive accommodations in judicial and administrative proceedings for persons with disabilities, including women with disabilities, persons with intellectual and/or psychosocial disabilities, persons with hearing impairments. The State party should take measures to provide information in accessible formats and ensure the physical accessibility of court buildings and all judicial and administrative facilities, including in rural and remote areas;

(c) Strengthen capacity-building programmes for the judiciary and justice-sector professionals, such as prosecutors and law enforcement officials, including police and prison officers, on the provisions of the Convention and on access to justice for persons with disabilities.

26. The Committee is concerned about the existence of a number of barriers to access to justice for persons with disabilities, including:

(a) The high costs to obtain legal aid and to pay for courts fees, the lack of qualified sign language interpreters in administrative and judicial proceedings for persons with an hearing impairment, and the lack of documents and information in accessible formats for persons with disabilities;

(b) Insufficient training of personnel to guide persons with disabilities through complex administrative and judicial proceedings, including criminal proceedings, and a lack of information in such training about the requirements of persons with disabilities;

(c) That the judicial remedies provided for in certain cases of discrimination based on disability, in particular by Act No. 012-2010/AN of 1 April 2010 on the protection and promotion of the rights of persons with disabilities in Burkina Faso and the Labour Code, remain inaccessible to most persons with disabilities, owing to the lack of procedural facilities and the physical inaccessibility of the courts, including the lack of sign-language interpretation;

(d) Barriers in access to justice for persons with disabilities under guardianship and other substitute decision-making.

(a) Adopt, in accordance with the Convention, an action plan on access to justice for persons with disabilities, as well as the necessary legal, administrative and judicial measures to eliminate all restrictions on the effective participation of persons with disabilities in all stages of the judicial process, including making procedural adjustments and providing individualized assistance to ensure that persons with disabilities can participate effectively in the various aspects of legal proceedings, and develop alternative and augmentative means of information and communication, such as with Braille, sign language, Easy Read and audio and video transcription, for use throughout legal proceedings;

(b) Intensify efforts to provide training on the Convention to judicial and law enforcement officials;

(c) Take appropriate measures to ensure that persons with disabilities who are subjected to discrimination obtain redress and compensation, and to ensure that perpetrators of discrimination are punished;

(d) Guarantee access to justice for persons under substituted decision-making, those still in institutions or in any form of psychiatric treatment, by repealing legislation that restricts the legal capacity of persons with disabilities, recognizing their full capacity to participate in judicial proceedings in different roles, including as witnesses or defendants, and taking measures to eliminate cultural constructs and discriminatory attitudes among the judiciary.

41. The Committee is concerned about barriers to access to justice for persons with disabilities across Denmark, the Faroe Islands and Greenland, including:

(a) Insufficient provision of procedural and age-appropriate accommodations in judicial and administrative proceedings for the application of law, to facilitate effective participation in all aspects of the judicial system and in all legal proceedings;

(b) Limited knowledge and training within the administrative and judicial system about the rights of persons with disabilities, including the provision of individualised support, to ensure effective participation and disability and gender responsive interviewing techniques for children and adults with disabilities.

42. Recalling the International Principles and Guidelines on Access to Justice for Persons with Disabilities prepared in 2020 by the Special Rapporteur on the rights of persons with disabilities and the Special Envoy of the Secretary-General on Disability and Accessibility, and endorsed by the Committee, the Committee recommends that Denmark, the Faroe Islands and Greenland, in close consultation with and with the active involvement of organizations of persons with disabilities, develop a strategy to ensure effective access to justice for persons with disabilities, in administrative and judicial proceedings for the application of law, covering all functions in such proceedings, including the following:

(a) Measures to amend procedural rules in criminal, civil, labour and administrative law that ensure procedural and age-appropriate accommodation for persons with disabilities, covering all functions, such as parties to a case, judges, magistrates, administrators, clerks and other court personnel, on a no-cost basis;

(b) Appropriate training for persons in the administrative and judicial system, including members of the judiciary, administrators, police officers, prosecutors and prison personnel, on the application of the rights under the Convention, to ensure the effective guarantee of access to justice.

26. The Committee notes with concern that:

(a) There is a lack of a comprehensive policy framework addressing access to justice for persons with disabilities, resulting in significant barriers to navigating the justice system, and the under-resourced Legal Aid Scheme is unable to provide adequate legal services to persons with disabilities who come into conflict with the law.

(b) Women and children with disabilities face barriers in reporting and accessing justice in cases of violence, abuse, and exploitation mainly due to lack of awareness, communication barriers, and high costs;

(c) Police stations, courts, and prisons often lack necessary accommodations and accessible communication formats, such as Easy Read, Braille, large print, tactile communications, and sign language interpreters for persons with disabilities. Additionally, prison and probation officers, as well as other justice system personnel, lack adequate training on disability rights, hindering their capability to effectively support persons with disabilities.

(d) The justice system poses significant barriers, such as requiring persons with disabilities to pay for medical forms confirming abuse and facing mistrust from justice system actors. This mistrust, stemming from prejudices, often leads to doubts about the credibility of testimonies made by persons with disabilities, including allegations of sexual violence.

27. The Committee recommends that the State Party:

(a) Develop and adopt a comprehensive policy framework addressing access to justice for persons with disabilities, as provided in Article 29(5) of the Constitution and Section 5 of Act 715, and allocate more resources to the Legal Aid Scheme to ensure it can provide adequate legal services to persons with disabilities who come into conflict with the law.

(b) Implement targeted measures to support women and children with disabilities in reporting and accessing justice in cases of violence, abuse, and exploitation, including increasing awareness, reducing communication barriers, and lowering costs.

(c) Ensure police stations, courts, and prisons are equipped with necessary procedural accommodations and accessible communication methods, such as Braille, large print, tactile communications, and sign language interpreters, and provide comprehensive training on disability rights for all justice system personnel to enhance their ability to effectively support persons with disabilities.

(d) Implement mandatory training for justice system actors to address prejudices and improve the credibility assessment of abuse claims made by persons with disabilities.

23. The Committee is concerned that:

(a) There are delays in replicating the Supreme Court building's physical accessibility features to all courts across the State party, and there are gaps in the availability, provision and awareness of procedural and age-appropriate accommodations for all persons with disabilities throughout the legal process;

(b) There is a lack of widespread and comprehensive knowledge on the Convention among legal professionals, police officers, judges, magistrates, prison officers and other stakeholders, despite its partial incorporation into their training syllabus and the availability of relevant training opportunities by entities such as the Institute for Judicial and Legal Studies;

(c) There is an absence of data available on the number of formal cases and complaints involving persons with disabilities, including information on accountability and remedies provided to persons whose rights have been violated.

- (a) Expand the scope and awareness of measures to ensure procedural, age-appropriate and gender-responsive accommodations within the justice system, including individualized support, and improve the physical accessibility of court buildings and judicial and administrative facilities, to ensure that persons with disabilities are able to participate effectively in judicial, administrative and other proceedings at all stages and in all areas of the law;
- (b) Strengthen training programmes for members of the legal profession, law enforcement, judiciary, prison officers and other justice system personnel on the provisions of the Convention and on access to justice for persons with disabilities;
- (c) Collect, analyse and disseminate disaggregated data on the number of cases involving persons with disabilities at each stage of the legal process in criminal, civil, administrative and other systems as well as mechanisms for alternative dispute resolution, grievances and complaints, including information on accountability and remedies.

Netherlands (2024)

31. The Committee is concerned about the barriers to access to justice for persons with disabilities, namely:

- (a) Restrictions on the legal capacity of persons with disabilities, particularly persons with disabilities under guardianship or other forms of substituted decision-making regimes;
- (b) Limited accessibility of many courthouses, and limited accessibility of legal proceedings in judicial and administrative bodies, especially for persons with disabilities with hearing impairments;
- (c) The high costs for legal aid and court fees, impeding access to justice for persons with low income, such as persons with disabilities who rely on benefits;
- (d) Complex appeals procedures and a lack of accessible information.

32. The Committee recalls the International Principles and Guidelines on Access to Justice for Persons with Disabilities prepared in 2020 by the Special Rapporteur on the rights of persons with disabilities and the Special Envoy of the Secretary-General on Disability and Accessibility, endorsed by the Committee, as well as target 16.3 of the Sustainable Development Goals and recommends that the State party:

- (a) Repeal legislation that restricts the legal capacity of persons with disabilities in judicial and administrative proceedings, and guarantee their access to justice on an equal basis with others, including throughout judicial and administrative proceedings;
- (b) Ensure access to judicial and administrative facilities for all persons with disabilities, including through universal design, and the provision of alternative and augmentative means of information and communication for use throughout legal proceedings, such as Braille, sign language, accessible digital formats, Easy Read, audio description and video transcription;
- (c) Take necessary measures to ensure that economic barriers do not impede access to justice, particularly for individuals reliant on disability benefits.
- (d) Render legal procedures disability- and gender-responsive and ensure that persons with disabilities have access to clear, accessible information and adequate legal assistance and establish a central point for tailored advice and support, that can help persons with disabilities to navigate the complexities of the legal system and exercise their rights effectively.

26. The Committee notes with concern that obstacles remain for persons with disabilities to access courts, in particular:

- (a) That judges lack knowledge of international human rights standards on the legal capacity of persons with disabilities;
- (b) Insufficient awareness amongst persons with disabilities about their right to free legal aid;
- (c) The lack of procedural accommodation, including measures to ensure access to courts for persons with intellectual and/or psychosocial disabilities, and insufficient sign language interpreters accredited in courts;
- (d) The lack of measures so that persons with disabilities can participate fully as complainants, witnesses, expert witnesses, judges, or clerks.

27. The Committee recalls the International Principles and Guidelines on Access to Justice for Persons with Disabilities prepared in 2020 by the Special Rapporteur on the rights of persons with disabilities and the Special Envoy of the Secretary-General on Disability and Accessibility, and endorsed by the Committee, as well as target 16.3 of the Sustainable Development Goals, and recommends that the State party:

- (a) Repeal legislation that creates barriers for persons with disabilities to access justice and ensure the involvement of persons with disabilities in all legal proceedings, on an equal basis with others;
- (b) Provide individualized accommodations including age and gender-appropriate, and accessible modes and formats of communication in all judicial procedures, including for persons with intellectual and/or psychosocial disabilities;
- (c) Provide mandatory and ongoing capacity-building programmes, including training on the provisions of the Convention for members of the judiciary and the legal profession;
- (d) Increase its efforts to empower persons with disabilities as direct or indirect participants in the justice system, including to ensure that persons with disabilities who are qualified can practice the legal profession, as lawyers and court officers, without discrimination.

Azerbaijan (2024)

29. The Committee notes with concern:

- (a) The use of the medical model in determining beneficiaries of an advocate at the expense of the state in civil, administrative and criminal court proceedings;
- (b) The provisions in the Code of Criminal Procedure (articles 95.2.1 and 264.2) denying persons with intellectual and/or psychosocial disabilities participation in criminal proceedings as witnesses;
- (c) The low number of prosecuted cases of gender-based violence, including sexual violence due to lack of measures to protect the security of women survivors of violence, gender stereotypes and accessibility barriers;
- (d) That financial support is not available to specific organizations representing women and girls in divorce cases regarding issues of property division and child custody.

30. Recalling the International Principles and Guidelines on Access to Justice for Persons with Disabilities, target 16.3 of the Sustainable Development Goals, and the Concluding Observations issued by the Committee on the Elimination of Discrimination against Women (CEDAW/C/AZE/CO/6, paras. 12 and 24), in 2022, the Committee recommends that the State party:

- (a) Ensure that the human rights model as opposed to the medical model is used in determining the eligibility of persons with disabilities to receive a state paid advocate in civil, administrative and criminal proceedings;
- (b) Repeal provisions in the Code of Criminal Procedure that deprive persons with intellectual and/or psychosocial disabilities from testifying as witnesses in criminal proceedings;
- (c) Develop gender-responsive, procedural and age-appropriate accommodations for women and children with disabilities in cases related to gender-based violence, including sexual violence, and address stereotypes and physical barriers preventing access to justice by women and girls and boys with disabilities;

(d) Ensure financial grants for organizations providing legal services for women and girls with disabilities in all spheres of law, including civil, administrative, family, labour and criminal spheres of law.

26. The Committee is concerned about the obstacles to access to justice for persons with disabilities, in particular:

- (a) The absence of procedural and administrative accommodations in the justice sector, the judiciary and the relevant administrative system at all stages of litigation.
- (b) Lack of specialised training for staff working in the justice sector on the requirements for enabling persons with disabilities to exercise their right of access to justice.
- (c) Lack of accessibility in security centres and courts and lack of information and means of communication in accessible formats in investigation records and court sessions.

27. The Committee recommends that the State party should:

- (a) Provide procedural and accessibility accommodations for all persons with disabilities in the justice and administrative sectors.
- (b) Develop, in close consultation and with the active participation of persons with disabilities and their organisations, specialised training for personnel working in the justice and related administrative sectors, including judges, on the right of access to justice for persons with disabilities and the provision of procedural accommodations
- (c) Develop an implementation plan with a specific time frame to provide accessibility in security centres, courts, places of detention and reform centres, as well as providing information at various stages of litigation in accessible formats for persons with disabilities.

23. El Comité observa con preocupación:

- a) Que el acceso a la justicia de las personas con discapacidad, en particular las mujeres, los niños, las personas indígenas y afrodescendientes, y las personas de edad con discapacidad es limitado;
- b) La insuficiente disponibilidad de intérpretes cualificados de lengua de señas para los procedimientos administrativos y judiciales, y la inaccesibilidad de los edificios administrativos y judiciales;
- c) La falta de ajustes de procedimiento acordes con la edad y el género en los procedimientos civiles, penales y administrativos, y los escasos servicios de asistencia, ajustes razonables y patrocinio jurídico gratuito a las personas con discapacidad durante todo el proceso, así como la poca participación de las personas con discapacidad como juzgadores, asistentes jurídicos o testigos y las escasas reformas a nivel provincial y municipal que garanticen lo anterior;
- d) La escasa capacitación de todos los juzgadores del país en materia de acceso a la justicia para personas con discapacidad.

24. Recordando los Principios y Directrices Internacionales sobre el Acceso a la Justicia para las Personas con Discapacidad, de 2020, y la meta 16.3 de los Objetivos de Desarrollo Sostenible, el Comité recomienda al Estado parte:

- a) Adoptar medidas para eliminar todas las barreras al acceso a la justicia para las personas con discapacidad en general, en particular las mujeres, los niños, las personas indígenas y afrodescendientes, y las personas de edad con discapacidad, y adoptar medidas para informar a esos grupos de los recursos de que disponen para interponer denuncias y obtener reparación;
- b) Garantizar la disponibilidad de intérpretes calificados de lengua de señas en los procedimientos administrativos y judiciales, acelerar la evaluación y el desarrollo de normas sobre la accesibilidad de los edificios administrativos y judiciales, en estrecha consulta y con la participación activa de las organizaciones de personas con discapacidad y aplicarlas rápidamente, y proporcionar decisiones administrativas y judiciales en formatos accesibles;

c) Establecer ajustes de procedimiento, adecuados a la edad y el género, en todas las diligencias judiciales para asegurar la participación efectiva de las personas con discapacidad, también como juzgadores, asesores judiciales o testigos, por medio de servicios de asistencia y patrocinio jurídico gratuito, y realice las reformas procesales necesarias que garanticen estos ajustes;

d) Ampliar el alcance de la capacitación sobre los derechos de las personas con discapacidad, para que llegue a la totalidad del personal de justicia del Estado parte, incluidas las áreas rurales y remotas.

29. The Committee notes with concern:

- (a) Legislation, including articles 323-328 of the Code of Civil Procedure, and practice restricting access to justice for persons with disabilities under substitute decision-making regimes, in centres for the provision of special social services, for persons with intellectual and/or psychosocial disabilities, and for children with disabilities due to age limit requirements;
- (b) The limited provision of procedural, gender and age-appropriate accommodation in civil, criminal and administrative proceedings due to a lack of awareness about available procedural accommodation among members of the judiciary, the bar, and persons with disabilities and their representative organizations;
- (c) The physical inaccessibility of a part of the courts and of other judicial and administrative facilities, and the lack of information about court proceedings in accessible formats;
- (d) The exclusion of children with disabilities, notably children with psycho-neurological conditions, from free legal aid services.

30. Recalling the International Principles and Guidelines on Access to Justice for Persons with Disabilities and target 16.3 of the Sustainable Development Goals, the Committee recommends that the State party:

- (a) Repeal legislation that restricts the right of persons with disabilities to participate in judicial and administrative proceedings, and recognize their capacity to participate in judicial and administrative proceedings in all roles, on an equal basis with others, and ensure availability of legal aid in all areas of the State party;
- (b) Guarantee procedural, gender and age-appropriate accommodation in all judicial and administrative proceedings for persons with disabilities, for all types of impairment and based on individual requirements, and ensure access to official information and communication about such proceedings in accessible formats including Braille, Easy Read and sign language;
- (c) Render all court buildings and judicial and administrative facilities accessible, particularly by means of universal design, to guarantee access to judicial proceedings for persons with disabilities on an equal basis with others;
- (d) Ensure access to affordable legal aid for children with disabilities of any type of impairment, and establish procedures for them to express their views in the determination of the best interests of the child, by providing procedural accommodation appropriate to their age, maturity and specific disability-related requirements.

Nicaragua (2024)

24. El Comité observa con preocupación:

- a) Los escasos avances en el establecimiento de accesibilidad física, a la información y comunicación en todos los sitios de impartición de justicia del país, incluyendo en las áreas rurales, que no se cuente con suficientes intérpretes de lengua de señas nicaragüense para los procesos judiciales de las personas sordas, y la limitada capacitación a juzgadores sobre acceso a la justicia de las personas con discapacidad en todo el país;

b) Que la Ley Integral contra la Violencia hacia las Mujeres (Ley 779), no sea interseccional, al no especificar sobre mujeres y niñas con discapacidad, personas LGBT, mujeres indígenas con discapacidad, que no contemple el delito de tráfico de personas y que priorice la mediación en casos de violencia contra las mujeres;

c) La falta de información sobre implementación de ajustes de procedimiento acordes con la edad y el género en los procedimientos civiles, penales y administrativos, si existen servicios de asistencia, ajustes razonables y patrocinio jurídico gratuito a las personas con discapacidad durante todo el proceso, así como si ha habido reformas a nivel provincial que garanticen lo anterior;

d) La falta de independencia del poder judicial y de la fiscalía general y el sesgo judicial de género y que más del 50 por ciento de los procedimientos en casos de violencia de género, incluida la violencia sexual, se sobreesen o acaban en sentencias absolutorias y que las Oficinas de Familia suelen disuadir a las mujeres de presentar denuncias en casos de violencia de género;

a) Tomar medidas urgentes para garantizar la accesibilidad física, a la información y a la comunicación en todos los sitios de acceso a la justicia, incluidos los suficientes intérpretes de LSN, documentos en braille y en lectura fácil, así como la capacitación al total de los juzgadores en todo el país, incluidas las áreas rurales;

b) Establecer un protocolo de acceso a la justicia para personas con discapacidad con ajustes de procedimiento acordes con la edad y el género en los procedimientos civiles, en todos los juzgados del país, incluidas las áreas rurales, estableciendo el debido proceso, ajustes razonables y patrocinio jurídico gratuito a las personas con discapacidad durante todo el proceso para todas, incluyendo a personas con discapacidad detenidas por motivos políticos a quienes se les debe respetar sus garantías procesales como prioridad;

c) Garantizar la capacitación continua, así como la independencia de los jueces y la rendición de cuentas de fiscales y policías en casos de violencia de género.

29. The Committee is concerned about barriers to access to justice for persons with disabilities, including:

(a) Limited procedural and age-appropriate accommodations, in particular for neurodivergent persons;

(b) Limited knowledge, training and competence within the justice system regarding the rights of persons with disabilities, including disability-specific interviewing techniques for children and adults with disabilities;

(c) Limited access to the legal aid system and financial barriers to obtaining legal representation.

30. Recalling the International Principles and Guidelines on Access to Justice for Persons with Disabilities, the Committee recommends that the State party, in close consultation and active involvement of organizations of persons with disabilities develop a national disability justice strategy that includes:

(a) Measures to amend procedural rules in criminal, civil, labour and administrative law that ensure procedural and age-appropriate accommodations for persons with disabilities on a no-cost basis;

(b) Appropriate training for those in the justice system, including members of the judiciary, police officers, prosecutors and prison personnel, on the application of Convention standards and principles to ensure access to justice;

(c) Review the Legal Aid Act to remove financial barriers to legal representation, in particular for administrative and discrimination law cases.

25. The Committee notes with concern:

- (a) The barriers that persons with disabilities continue to face in accessing justice, including high costs, the lack of qualified sign language interpreters in administrative and judicial proceedings for persons who are deaf, and the lack of documents and information in accessible formats for persons with disabilities;
- (b) The lack of knowledge among persons with disabilities about their rights and about formal procedures on how to enforce their entitlements and process to obtain remedies;
- (c) The lack of knowledge, training and awareness among legal aid lawyers, police officers and judiciary on working with and representing persons with disabilities, in particular women with disabilities;
- (d) The State party's reliance on civil society to conduct disability rights capacity building for justice officials.

26. The Committee recalls the International Principles and Guidelines on Access to Justice for Persons with Disabilities prepared in 2020 by the Special Rapporteur on the rights of persons with disabilities, and target 16.3 of the Sustainable Development Goals, and recommends that the State party:

- (a) Strengthen the implementation of the National Legal Aid Policy (2018), and take legal, administrative and judicial measures to eliminate all restrictions on the effective participation of persons with disabilities at all stages of administrative and judicial procedures;
- (b) Ensure that provisions in the Persons with Disabilities Act with regard to obligations placed on law enforcement and the judiciary and other justice sector institutions on providing information, procedural accommodation, as well as reasonable accommodation to persons with disabilities are fully implemented;
- (c) Adopt and implement effective mechanisms to ensure procedural, age-appropriate and gender-sensitive accommodations in judicial and administrative proceedings for persons with disabilities, including women with disabilities, persons with intellectual and/or psychosocial disabilities and persons who are deaf, hard of hearing or deafblind, and measures to provide information in accessible formats, and ensure the physical accessibility of court buildings and all judicial and administrative facilities, including in rural and remote areas;
- (d) Strengthen capacity-building programmes for the judiciary and justice-sector professionals, such as prosecutors and law enforcement officials including police and prison officers, on the provisions of the Convention and on access to justice for persons with disabilities.

Andorra (2023)

27. The Committee notes the following with concern:

- (a) Article 27 of the Criminal Code excludes from liability certain individuals "who are unable to understand the wrongfulness of the act owing to a mental disorder or impairment";
- (b) The limited information on the accessibility of judicial premises and proceedings, and about the availability of procedural accommodation and legal aid for persons with disabilities;
- (c) The insufficient training of court and other officials in the justice system on the rights of persons with disabilities.

28. The Committee recalls the International Principles and Guidelines on Access to Justice for Persons with Disabilities, of 2020, and target 16.3 of the Sustainable Development Goals, and recommends that the State party:

- (a) Amend article 27 of the Criminal Code, and guarantee the participation of persons with disabilities in administrative and judicial proceedings in all roles, on an equal basis with others;

(b) Provide gender-sensitive and age-appropriate procedural accommodation for persons with disabilities in all legal proceedings, ensuring the accessibility of the physical, information and communication aspects, including the provision of professional sign language interpreters, the use of Braille, Easy Read and audio and video transcription, and the access to legal aid services;

(c) Strengthen mandatory and ongoing capacity-building programmes on the Convention for the judiciary and justice-sector professionals, prosecutors, notaries, and law enforcement officials, including police and prison officers.

Austria (2023)

31. The Committee is concerned about:

(a) The insufficient availability of qualified sign language interpreters for administrative and court proceedings, inaccessibility of some administrative and court buildings, a wide-spread lack of administrative and court decisions in accessible formats, and insufficient accessibility of administrative and court hearings online;

(b) The denial of legal standing to any person with disabilities subject to substitute decision-making within the ambit of the substitution.

32. The Committee recommends that the State party:

(a) Ensure the availability of qualified sign language interpreters in administrative and court proceedings, expedite the evaluation and development of standards on the accessibility of administrative and court buildings, in close consultation with and the active participation of organizations of persons with disabilities, and implement them expeditiously, provide administrative and court decisions in accessible formats, and render administrative and court hearings online accessible;

(b) Amend the laws to remove the exclusion of persons with disabilities subject to substitute decision-making from legal standing.

27. The Committee is concerned about access to justice barriers for persons with disabilities, including:

(a) The lack of procedural and age-appropriate accommodations within the justice sector and the costs incurred by persons with disabilities in providing their own accommodations and support to facilitate effective participation in the legal proceedings;

(b) The lack of understanding by legal professionals about access to justice for persons with disabilities;

(c) The lack of accessible judicial facilities, information and communications.

28. The Committee recommends that the State Party, in close consultation with and active involvement of organisations of persons with disabilities, develop a national disability justice strategy to:

(a) Amend the procedural rules in criminal, civil, labour and administrative law to ensure procedural and age-appropriate accommodations are provided to persons with disabilities in all proceedings on a no cost basis;

(b) Ensure appropriate training of those working in the field of administration of justice, including the judiciary, police and prison personnel on Convention standards and principles to ensure access to justice;

(c) Ensure that judicial facilities, information and communications are accessible.

29. The Committee notes with concern:

(a) Gaps in the provision of procedural and age-appropriate accommodations for all persons with disabilities in all proceedings that fall outside the application of the Investigation and testimony Procedures (Adjustments for persons with mental and intellectual disabilities) Law 5766/2005, such as the provision of justice intermediaries;

(b) Attitudinal barriers among the Police, and the judiciary that limit participation of women with disabilities in judicial proceedings and the exercise of their rights as victims or witnesses, particularly in cases of gender-based violence.

30. The Committee recalls the International Principles and Guidelines on Access to Justice for Persons with Disabilities, of 2020, and target 16.3 of the Sustainable Development Goals, and recommends that the State party:

(a) Expand the scope of measures to ensure procedural, age-appropriate and gender-sensitive accommodations within the justice system, including by establishing a cost-free system for the provision of justice intermediaries, video testimony, alternative and augmentative modes of communication, communication support people, sign language interpreters and captioning in judicial and administrative proceedings for persons with disabilities in all areas of law;

(b) Strengthen training programmes among judges, the legal profession, the Police and justice system personnel on access to justice for persons with disabilities.

27. The Committee is concerned about:

(a) That persons with intellectual disabilities and persons with psychosocial disabilities are not recognized as witnesses in criminal proceedings and the lack of measures across the legal system to recognize defendants who are persons with disabilities, including women with disabilities, persons with intellectual disabilities and persons with psychosocial disabilities, and to provide them with procedural accommodation required;

(b) Physical and attitudinal barriers in rural areas that lead to underreporting and lack of remedies for women and girls with disabilities survivors of gender-based violence. Particularly, it is concerned that women and girls with disabilities can not reach out police stations and file complaints and that cases of violence against women and girls with disabilities are often disregarded by the village head;

(c) The lack of information about legal proceedings in accessible formats, including through sign language interpretation, which limits access to justice by women with intellectual disabilities and women with psychosocial disabilities, women with hearing impairments and women who are deaf-blind;

(d) That legal aid lawyers, the Police, the judiciary lack information and training to work and represent persons with disabilities, in particular women with disabilities.

28. Recalling the International Principles and Guidelines on Access to Justice for Persons with Disabilities, of 2020, and target 16.3 of the Sustainable Development Goals, the Committee recommends that the State party:

(a) Ensure that legislation recognizes the right of persons with disabilities, in particular persons with intellectual disabilities and persons with psychosocial disabilities, to participate in judicial proceedings, including as defendants and witnesses, and introduce the legal duty to provide persons with disabilities with procedural, age-appropriate and gender-sensitive accommodations;

(b) Conduct research and establish mechanisms at the community level to ensure that community justice systems recognise and adjudicate cases, including gender-based violence against women and girls with disabilities, and redress survivors. The State party should develop programmes to raise awareness about the rights of persons with disabilities among community heads with roles in managing community-based programmes;

(c) Ensure the provision of interpretation services throughout judicial proceedings, and prepare information in accessible formats, including in Braille, Easy Read, augmentative and alternative communication;

(d) Set up systematic training, in cooperation with organizations of persons with disabilities, academia and the Malawi Law Society for the legal profession, in particular legal aid lawyers, the police, the judiciary on the Convention and the application of the human rights model of disability in their functions and work.

Mauritania (2023)

25. The Committee is concerned that persons with disabilities face barriers in their access to justice, including attitudinal barriers and prejudice among administrative and court personnel, insufficient training of personnel to guide persons with disabilities through complex administrative and judicial proceedings, including criminal proceedings, and a lack of information in such training about the requirements of persons with disabilities.

26. The Committee recalls the International Principles and Guidelines on Access to Justice for Persons with Disabilities (2020), endorsed by the Committee, and target 16.3 of the Sustainable Development Goals, and recommends that the State party:

(a) Adopt, in accordance with the Convention, an action plan on access to justice for persons with disabilities, and take the legal, administrative and judicial measures necessary to eliminate all restrictions on the effective participation of persons with disabilities in all stages of administrative and judicial procedures;

(b) Provide age- and gender-appropriate procedural accommodation, including individualized assistance, to ensure that persons with disabilities are able to participate effectively in administrative and judicial proceedings at all stages and in all areas of the law;

(c) Make use of alternative means of information and communication for use throughout administrative and judicial proceedings, such as Braille, sign language, Easy Read and audio and video transcription, apply the principle of universal design and adopt an action plan to ensure physical access to all facilities in which administrative and judicial procedures take place;

(d) Intensify the provision of training on the Convention to administrative, judicial and law enforcement officials, including to judges.

27. The Committee is concerned:

(a) At the persistence of barriers that persons with disabilities face with regard to access to justice, particularly persons with intellectual disabilities, persons with psychosocial disabilities and persons with hearing disability due to lack of procedural accommodation, the lack of accessible information and communication in the context of legal procedures, and the inaccessibility of buildings and toilets;

(b) The lack of capacity building program on human rights of persons with disabilities to judiciary and justice sector professionals, policymakers and lawmakers, medical, health and social workers, and all other professionals in the justice system.

28. The Committee refers to its previous recommendation (CRPD/C/MNG/CO/1, para. 23), recalls the International Principles and Guidelines on Access to Justice for Persons with Disabilities prepared in 2020 by the Special Rapporteur on the rights of persons with disabilities and endorsed by the Committee, and target 16.3 of the Sustainable Development Goals, and recommends that the State party:

(a) Adopt, in accordance with the Convention, an action plan on access to justice for persons with disabilities, as well as the necessary legislative, administrative and judicial measures to eliminate all barriers to the effective participation of persons with disabilities in all stages of the judicial process;

(b) Develop alternative and augmentative means of information and communication for use throughout legal proceedings, such as Braille, sign language, Easy Read and audio and video transcription, apply the principle of universal design and adopt an action plan to ensure physical access to all justice facilities, including buildings and toilets, and accessible transportation;

(c) Strengthen professional development programmes for judges, other judicial officials, administrative professionals and other relevant government officials on the provisions of the Convention and the human rights model of disability and their implementation in domestic law.

25. El Comité observa con preocupación:

a) Que no se reporten avances en la aprobación y aplicación del Protocolo de Acceso a la Justicia para Personas con Discapacidad;

b) La Resolución N.º 886/14 sólo “insta” y no obliga a los defensores públicos a la aplicación de los derechos de las personas con discapacidad;

- c)La falta de implementación de los criterios de accesibilidad física universal en todos los sitios de impartición de justicia del país, y la necesidad de incorporar intérpretes de Lengua de Señas Paraguaya al plantel permanente del Poder Judicial;
- d)La escasa capacitación de todos los juzgadores del país en materia de acceso a la justicia para personas con discapacidad;
- e)La falta de información sobre los avances de las acciones del Consejo Nacional de Acceso a la Justicia y si contempla horizontalmente a las personas con discapacidad;
- f)La falta de ajustes de procedimiento acordes con la edad y el género en los procedimientos civiles, penales y administrativos, y los escasos servicios de asistencia, ajustes razonables y patrocinio jurídico gratuito a las personas con discapacidad durante todo el proceso, así como la poca participación de las personas con discapacidad como juzgadores, asistentes jurídicos o testigos y las escasas reformas a nivel provincial y municipal que garanticen lo anterior;
- g)La carencia de reformas a la legislación penal para que las sanciones aplicables a personas con discapacidad psicosocial o intelectual estén sujetas a las mismas garantías y tengan las mismas condiciones que cualquier otra persona sometida a un proceso, previendo en su caso, aplicación de ajustes razonables y de procedimiento;
- h)La falta de información del proceso aplicado a las personas con discapacidad intelectual y/o psicosocial que se encuentran actualmente dentro del sistema penitenciario esperando juicio.

- a)Aprobar el Protocolo de Acceso a la Justicia para Personas con Discapacidad a la brevedad posible y garantizar su estricta aplicación;
- b)Reformar la Resolución No. 886/14 para que exista la obligatoriedad por parte de los defensores de justicia a ejercer su oficio sobre las bases de los derechos de las personas con discapacidad;
- c)Asegurar la accesibilidad física de los edificios de los tribunales y de las instancias judiciales y administrativas acelerando la implementación de los criterios de accesibilidad física universal y la comunicación sobre los procedimientos en formatos accesibles, a través de la incorporación de intérpretes en lengua de señas y facilitadores de la comunicación al plantel permanente del Poder Judicial, y el uso de un lenguaje sencillo, entre otras cosas;
- d)Ampliar el alcance de la capacitación sobre los derechos de las personas con discapacidad, para que llegue al total de personal de justicia del Estado parte incluidas las áreas rurales y remotas;
- e)Asegurar que las acciones del Consejo Nacional de Acceso a la Justicia se extiendan a las personas con discapacidad;
- f)Establecer ajustes de procedimiento, adecuados a la edad y al género, en todas las diligencias judiciales para asegurar la participación efectiva de las personas con discapacidad, incluso como juzgadores, asesores judiciales o testigos, por medio de servicios de asistencia y patrocinio jurídico gratuito y realizar las reformas procesales necesarias a nivel provincial que garanticen estos ajustes;
- g)Revisar la legislación actual para que las sanciones aplicables a personas con discapacidad psicosocial y/o intelectual estén sujetas a las mismas garantías y tengan las mismas condiciones que cualquier otra persona sometida a un proceso, previendo en su caso aplicación de ajustes razonables y de procedimiento;
- h)Revisar la situación procesal de las personas con discapacidad intelectual y/o psicosocial que se encuentran actualmente en el sistema penitenciario esperando juicio, para garantizar sus derechos.

21.The Committee is concerned that persons with disabilities still face barriers to access justice, including in the form of attitudinal barriers and prejudices amongst court officials, the lack of reasonable accommodation for them, the insufficient training of court and other officials to guide them through complex judicial processes and proceedings, and the lack of information as to whether persons with disabilities participated in the development, delivery or evaluation of such training. The Committee is also concerned that no procedural accommodations have yet been made to guarantee effective access to justice for all persons with disabilities. It further notes the lack of measures adopted to ensure that they have access to the legal profession.

22. The Committee recalls the International Principles and Guidelines on Access to Justice for Persons with Disabilities prepared in 2020 by the Special Rapporteur on the rights of persons with disabilities and target 16.3 of the Sustainable Development Goals and recommends that the State party:

(a) Adopt an action plan on access to justice for persons with disabilities in accordance with the Convention and the International Principles and Guidelines on Access to Justice for Persons with Disabilities;

(b) Take all the necessary legal, administrative and other measures to eliminate all restrictions on the effective participation of persons with disabilities at all stages of the judicial process, and adopt measures to ensure their effective participation in judicial proceedings such as through procedural accommodation and individualized assistance, and through the use of alternative and augmentative means of information and communication in accordance with the needs of persons with different disabilities, such as Braille, sign language, Easy Read and audio and video transcription;

(c) Adopt an action plan to ensure physical access to all justice facilities, including through accessible transportation, incorporating the principle of universal design;

(d) Intensify efforts to provide training on the rights and obligations established by the Convention to justice and law enforcement officials, especially in rural areas;

(e) Take measures to ensure that persons with disabilities can enter the legal professions on an equal basis with others, and take steps to ensure individualized support for that purpose.

Argentina (2023)

27. El Comité observa con preocupación:

a) La limitada implementación de ajustes de procedimiento acordes con la edad y el género en los procedimientos civiles, penales y administrativos, así como la falta de reformas a nivel provincial que garanticen ajustes de procedimiento;

b) El limitado avance en materia de accesibilidad física de los tribunales y de las instancias judiciales y administrativas, de la información y comunicación, en particular para las personas sordas y las personas con discapacidad intelectual y/o psicosocial;

c) El limitado alcance de servicios de asistencia, ajustes razonables y patrocinio jurídico gratuito a las personas con discapacidad durante todo el proceso y la asignación insuficiente de recursos para el Programa para la Asistencia a Personas con Discapacidad en sus Relaciones con la Administración de Justicia;

d) El limitado alcance de la capacitación de los operadores de justicia, reflejada en sentencias en las que se valora especialmente el diagnóstico médico como base para la restricción de la capacidad jurídica de personas con discapacidad.

a) Garantizar los ajustes de procedimiento adecuados a la edad y al género en todas las diligencias judiciales para asegurar la participación efectiva de las personas con discapacidad, y realizar las reformas procesales a nivel provincial que garanticen estos ajustes;

b) Asegurar la accesibilidad física de los edificios de los tribunales y de las instancias judiciales y administrativas, en particular por medio del diseño universal, y el acceso a los medios oficiales de información y comunicación sobre los procedimientos en formatos accesibles, entre otras cosas a través de intérpretes en lengua de señas, facilitadores de la comunicación y el uso de un lenguaje sencillo;

c) Ampliar el alcance del Programa para la Asistencia a Personas con Discapacidad en sus Relaciones con la Administración de Justicia, dotándolo de mayores recursos humanos y presupuesto, a fin de garantizar servicios de asistencia y patrocinio jurídico gratuito o asequible a las personas con discapacidad durante todo el juicio;

d) Intensificar las capacitaciones sistemáticas a los operadores de justicia sobre la Convención, incluyendo el derecho a la capacidad jurídica de todas las personas con discapacidad, la accesibilidad, los ajustes razonables y los ajustes de procedimiento.

Georgia (2023)

27. The Committee notes with concern:

(a) The "Law of Georgia Criminal Procedure Code Georgia", excluding persons with disabilities "not able to adequately comprehend, memorize and recollect the circumstances that are essential to the case, and to give information or testimony" from being interrogated as a witnesses, including in cases of alleged abuse, and denying persons with disabilities undergoing compulsory psychiatric treatment the right to request a review of the treatment by a judicial authority;

(b) The lack of accessibility and effective procedural accommodation in judicial and administrative procedures;

(c) The lack of information about legal aid and remedies, including access to a lawyer, for persons with disabilities;

d) Reports of impunity for abuses by law enforcement officials;

(e) Reports of online harassment towards persons with disabilities not prosecuted despite the existence of criminal provisions against online harassment.

28. The Committee recalls the International Principles and Guidelines on Access to Justice for Persons with Disabilities, of 2020, and target 16.3 of the Sustainable Development Goals, and recommends that the State party:

(a) Repeal all legal provisions that restrict the right of persons with disabilities to participate in administrative and judicial proceedings and recognize their right to participate in administrative and judicial proceedings in all roles, on an equal basis with others;

(b) Provide gender- and age-appropriate procedural accommodation for persons with disabilities ensuring physical, information and communication accessibility of administrative and judicial procedures, including the provision of professional sign language interpreters and the use of Braille;

(c) Guarantee persons with disabilities access to legal aid services, particularly to competent lawyers and actively inform persons with disabilities about their rights;

(d) Expand independent monitoring mechanisms for law enforcement to issues of access to justice, and ensure that reports of abuse of persons with disabilities are investigated effectively;

(e) Strengthen training for law enforcement officials and the legal profession about the equal rights of persons with disabilities to access to justice and to ensure provisions in the Convention are invoked in conducting judicial proceedings and in judicial decisions;

(f) Establish effective mechanisms to enforce existing laws against hate-crimes, in particular online harassment, against persons with disabilities and introduce accessible tools and information, including in Easy Read, to provide persons with disabilities with information about the status of their complaints.

26. Al Comité le preocupa que:

a) El acceso a la justicia de las personas con discapacidad es limitado, en particular para las personas con discapacidad de comunidades indígenas, las mujeres y las niñas víctimas de violencia o abusos;

b) Los ajustes procesales para personas con discapacidad no están previstos en el Código Procesal Penal y los jueces necesitan información adicional y capacitación sobre cómo implementarlos;

c) El artículo 162 del Código Procesal Penal restringe la posibilidad de prestar testimonio en función de la "idoneidad física o psíquica", lo que equivale a una discriminación basada en la discapacidad real o percibida;

d) Personas con discapacidad intelectual o psicosocial han sido declaradas "inimputables", bajo el concepto regulado por el artículo 20 del Código Penal, en ausencia de garantías procesales en el proceso penal, y privadas de su libertad como consecuencia de ello;

e) La inaccesibilidad física de la mayoría de los tribunales y de las instancias judiciales y administrativas en el Estado parte.

27. Recordando los Principios y Directrices Internacionales sobre el Acceso a la Justicia para las Personas con Discapacidad, de 2020, y la meta 16.3 de los Objetivos de Desarrollo Sostenible, el Comité recomienda al Estado parte que:

a) Garantice la participación de personas con discapacidad en distintas calidades en todas las etapas del proceso judicial y administrativo y establezca un programa de formación permanente para todo el sector de la justicia con el fin de que se conozcan y garanticen los derechos de las personas con discapacidad;

b) Garantice ajustes procesales adecuados a la edad en todas las diligencias judiciales para las personas con discapacidad, independientemente de su discapacidad, y sufrague los costos de los ajustes procesales, y el acceso a los medios oficiales de información y comunicación sobre los procedimientos en formatos accesibles, entre otras cosas, a través del subtítulo para personas sordas, servicios de intermediarios el braille, los formatos de lectura fácil y la lengua de señas;

c) Modifique el Código Penal y el Código Procesal Penal, con la participación y en estrecha consulta con las organizaciones de personas con discapacidad, para garantizar el derecho de acceso a la justicia de las personas con discapacidad en igualdad de condiciones con las demás, incluso mediante la provisión de ajustes procesales.

d) Revise y rectifique los casos de personas con discapacidad que actualmente se encuentran privadas de libertad por haber sido declaradas inimputables y les proporcione recursos efectivos para presentar quejas sobre violaciones a sus derechos;

e) Garantice la accesibilidad física de los tribunales y de las instancias judiciales y administrativas, en particular por medio del diseño universal, para garantizar el acceso de las personas con discapacidad a las diligencias judiciales en igualdad de condiciones con los demás.

voluntad y preferencias, con un enfoque que tenga en cuenta el género, la edad y la cultura.

27. The Committee notes with concern:

(a) The lack of measures taken to implement Act No. 2013-010 on legal aid;

(b) The barriers that persons with disabilities continue to face in accessing justice, including the lack of qualified sign language interpreters in administrative and judicial proceedings for persons who are deaf, and the lack of documents and information in accessible formats for persons with other disabilities.

28. The Committee recalls the International Principles and Guidelines on Access to Justice for Persons with Disabilities prepared in 2020 by the Special Rapporteur on the rights of persons with disabilities, and target 16.3 of the Sustainable Development Goals, and recommends that the State party:

(a) Adopt measures to ensure effective implementation of Act No. 2013-010 of 27 May 2013 on legal aid and article 41 of Act No. 2004-005 regarding the provision of legal assistance for women with disabilities in relation to marriage disputes in order to ensure provision of support to persons with disabilities, including in rural areas;

(b) Adopt and implement effective mechanisms to ensure procedural, age-appropriate and gender-sensitive accommodations in judicial and administrative proceedings for persons with disabilities, including women with disabilities, persons with intellectual and/or psychosocial disabilities and persons who are deaf, hard of hearing or deafblind, and measures to provide information in accessible formats, and ensure the physical accessibility of court buildings and all judicial and administrative facilities, including in rural and remote areas;

(c) Strengthen capacity-building programmes for the judiciary and justice-sector professionals, such as prosecutors and law enforcement officials including police and prison officers, on the provisions of the Convention and on access to justice for persons with disabilities.

21. The Committee is concerned by the lack of knowledge about the rights of persons with disabilities among law enforcement and judicial officers as well as the insufficient number of interpreters to support the cases of persons with disabilities, in particular persons who are deaf or hard of hearing or deafblind, which leads the courts to ask professional interpreters or family members to interpret and therefore, be involved in the cases, or postpone the hearings. It is also concerned that the legal support to persons with disabilities is only provided for those who have the Disability card, which is conditional on not exceeding a certain financial level.

22. The Committee recommends that the State party:

- (a) Set up trainings for the police, prison personnel, and court officials on a human rightsbased approach to persons with disabilities, taking into account gender and age;
- (b) Provide procedural accommodation for persons with disabilities, such as free or affordable legal assistance, sign language interpretation for persons who are deaf, hard of hearing or deafblind, or the provision of documents in accessible format, including in Easy Read, in civil, administrative and penal cases, regardless of the requirement of the disability card.

Bangladesh (2022)

27. The Committee is concerned about:

- (a) The lack of procedural and gender and age-appropriate accommodations in judicial and administrative proceedings for persons with disabilities, including women with disabilities, persons with intellectual and/or psychosocial disabilities and persons who are deaf, hard-of-hearing or deafblind, particularly measures to provide information in accessible formats, such as Braille, Easy Read and sign language, and to ensure the physical accessibility of court buildings and all judicial and administrative facilities, including in rural and remote areas;
- (b) Prejudices, stereotypes and intimidation against women with disabilities by judicial authorities when trying to access justice;
- (c) Insufficient awareness and training for all interlocutors in the justice system, concerning the rights of persons with disabilities, and the absence of reasonable accommodation to enable persons with disabilities to act as lawyers, judges, jurors and other professions in the judiciary.

28. The Committee recalls the International Principles and Guidelines on Access to Justice for Persons with Disabilities prepared in 2020 by the Special Rapporteur on the rights of persons with disabilities, and target 16.3 of the Sustainable Development Goals, and recommends that the State party:

- (a) Adopt and implement effective mechanisms to ensure procedural, age-appropriate and gender-sensitive accommodations in judicial and administrative proceedings for persons with disabilities, including women with disabilities, persons with intellectual and/or psychosocial disabilities and persons who are deaf, hard of hearing or deafblind, and measures to provide information in accessible formats, and ensure the physical accessibility of court buildings and all judicial and administrative facilities, including in rural and remote areas;

(b) Combat all prejudices, disability stereotypes and stigma, and eliminate all barriers, including intimidation against women with disabilities, so that the judicial process is disability and gender-sensitive;

(c) Ensure effective training for judicial personnel, including the police and prison staff, to comprehend the rights of persons with disabilities and provide individualized support and reasonable accommodation for persons with disabilities who wish to act as lawyers, judges, jurors and other professions in the judiciary.

30. The Committee notes with concern barriers that persons with disabilities, particularly persons with intellectual and/or psychosocial disabilities and persons with hearing impairments, face in the justice system due to the lack of procedural accommodation, lack of accessible information and communication on legal procedures and inaccessible buildings.

31. The Committee recalls the International Principles and Guidelines on Access to Justice for Persons with Disabilities (2020) prepared by the Special Rapporteur on the Rights of Persons with Disabilities, and Sustainable Development Goal 16, target 3, and recommends that the State party:

(a) Implement The Guiding Opinions of the Supreme People's Court on Comprehensively Promoting the Construction of Litigation Service Centres in the People's Courts (2014) to ensure access to justice for persons with disabilities, including by providing reasonable accommodation for illiterate persons with hearing impairments and negotiating accommodations with applicants, such as providing Braille, Easy Read, audio and video transcription and interpreters of "natural sign language" in courts;

(b) Strengthen professional development programmes for the judiciary, judicial and administrative professionals and other relevant government officials on the provisions of the Convention and the human rights model of disability and their implementation in domestic law.

32. The Committee is concerned about the limited access to justice for persons with disabilities, including lack of physical access to courts and other justice facilities, attitudinal barriers and prejudice among court personnel, as well the lack of procedural and age and gender appropriate accommodations, such as trained personnel to guide persons with disabilities through judicial processes and the provision of sign language interpreters.

33. The Committee recalls the International Principles and Guidelines on Access to Justice for Persons with Disabilities, and target 16.3 of the Sustainable Development Goals, and recommends that the State party:

(a) Adopt an action plan on access to justice for persons with disabilities, including measures to eliminate physical and attitudinal barriers to all justice facilities and to implement the necessary legal, administrative and judicial measures for the effective participation of persons with disabilities in all stages of the judicial process;

(b) Make procedural and age-appropriate adjustments, including the provision of individualized assistance, to ensure that persons with disabilities can participate effectively in the various aspects of legal proceedings;

(c) Ensure access to alternative and augmentative means of information and communication for use throughout legal proceedings, such as Braille, sign language, Easy Read and audio and video transcription;

(d) Strengthen training on the Convention to justice and law enforcement officials, including in rural areas and remote islands.

29. The Committee notes with concern the:

(a) Provisions of the Code of Civil Procedure and the Code of Criminal Procedure, restricting access to justice for persons with disabilities under substituted decision-making regimes, those in residential institutions, as well as persons with intellectual and psychosocial disabilities by reason of the perceived lack of their litigation capacity;

(b) Lack of procedural and age-appropriate accommodations in civil, criminal and administrative proceedings to ensure effective participation of persons with disabilities, and the lack of accessible information and communication for them;

(c) Physical inaccessibility of courts, judicial and administrative facilities.

30. The Committee recalls the International Principles and Guidelines on Access to Justice for Persons with Disabilities (2020) prepared by the Special Rapporteur on the Rights of Persons with Disabilities, and Sustainable Development Goal 16, target 3, and recommends that the State party:

(a) Repeal legal provisions that restrict the right of persons with disabilities to participate in judicial proceedings, and recognise their full capacity to participate in judicial proceedings in all roles on equal basis with others;

(b) Guarantee procedural and age-appropriate accommodations in all judicial proceedings for persons with disabilities, regardless the impairment of the concerned person, including coverage of the litigation charges for accommodations, and access to official information and communication about proceedings in accessible formats, including information and communication technologies, captioning, autism referent persons, Braille, Easy Read and Sign language;

(c) Ensure physical accessibility of court buildings, judicial and administrative facilities, particularly, by means of universal design, to guarantee equal access to judicial proceedings for persons with disabilities on equal basis with others.

22. The Committee is concerned about:

(a) The lack of access to justice by persons with disabilities, in particular, persons with psychosocial or intellectual disabilities and persons who are deaf, deafblind or hard of hearing, as a result of the absence of procedural and age-appropriate accommodations, and the lack of access to physical facilities, information and communication procedures used in the administration of justice;

(b) Inaccessible legal clinics, dissemination platforms, such as the "LaoLaw" mobile phone application, as well as lack of mainstreaming disability within the Village Mediation Unit services and lack of free legal aid in accessible formats, in particular, for persons who are blind and deaf;

(c) The insufficient understanding of persons with disabilities about legal proceedings, and limited awareness among the judiciary and law enforcement officials about the rights of persons with disabilities.

(a) Adopt measures to provide legal assistance and gender- and age-appropriate procedural accommodation for persons with disabilities to enable their participation in all legal procedures on an equal basis with others, including by facilitating the use of the communication method of their choice in judicial interactions, such as sign language, Braille, Easy Read, captioning, augmentative and alternative communication devices, and all other accessible means, modes and formats of communication;

(b) Ensure disability inclusion in justice services, particularly Village Mediation Units, Legal Aid Offices, and Courts, and guarantee the accessibility of dissemination platforms such as the "LaoLaw" mobile applications;

(c) Ensure regular training programmes for lawyers, court staff, judges, prosecutors and law enforcement officers, including police and prison officers, on the rights of persons with disabilities, and awareness-raising efforts for all persons with disabilities.

23. The Committee is concerned about:

- (a) The over-representation of persons with disabilities in the care and protection, youth justice and prison populations and
- (b) The lack of free independent advocacy and legal representation.

24. The Committee recommends that the State Party:

- (a) Develop a disability justice strategy to address the over-representation of persons with disabilities in the care and protection, youth justice and prison populations, including by strengthening age-appropriate procedural accommodations, measures to prevent persons with disabilities coming into contact with the justice system, and training on disability rights in the justice and care and protection systems;
- (b) Establish and adequately resource free independent advocacy and increase resources for community legal advice services.

29. The Committee is concerned at the continued existence of restrictions that interfere with the full access to justice of persons with disabilities on an equal footing with others.

30. The Committee refers to its previous recommendation (CRPD/C/KOR/CO/1, para. 24), recalls the International Principles and Guidelines on Access to Justice for Persons with Disabilities prepared in 2020 by the Special Rapporteur on the rights of persons with disabilities, and target 16.3 of the Sustainable Development Goals, and recommends that the State party:

- (a) Adopt, in accordance with the Convention, an action plan on access to justice for persons with disabilities, as well as the necessary legal, administrative and judicial measures to eliminate all restrictions on the effective participation of persons with disabilities in all stages of the judicial process;
- (b) Make procedural adjustments, including the provision of individualized assistance, to ensure that persons with disabilities can participate effectively in the various aspects of legal proceedings;
- (c) Develop alternative and augmentative means of information and communication for use throughout legal proceedings, such as Braille, sign language, Easy Read and audio and video transcription, apply the principle of universal design and adopt an action plan to ensure physical access to all justice facilities, including through accessible transportation;
- (d) Intensify efforts to provide training on the Convention to justice and law enforcement officials;
- (e) Take measures to ensure that persons with disabilities may enter the legal professions on an equal basis with others, and ensure individualized support for that purpose.

Singapore (2022)

27. The Committee is concerned that persons with disabilities face barriers in their access to justice, including attitudinal barriers and prejudice among administrative and court personnel, insufficient training of personnel to guide persons with disabilities through complex administrative and judicial proceedings, including criminal proceedings, and a lack of information about the requirements of persons with disabilities in such training. The Committee is also concerned about the practice of the courts to base their assessment of the requirements for individualized procedural accommodations solely on medical evaluations.

28. The Committee recalls the International Principles and Guidelines on Access to Justice for Persons with Disabilities of 2020, endorsed by the Committee, and target 16.3 of the Sustainable Development Goals, and recommends that the State party:

- (a) Adopt, in accordance with the Convention, an action plan on access to justice for persons with disabilities, as well as the necessary legal, administrative and judicial measures to eliminate all restrictions on the effective participation of persons with disabilities in all stages of administrative and judicial procedures;

- (b) Provide age- and gender-appropriate procedural accommodation, including individualized assistance, to ensure that persons with disabilities can participate effectively in administrative and judicial proceedings at all stages and in all areas of the law;
- (c) Develop alternative means of information and communication for use throughout administrative and judicial proceedings, such as Braille, sign language, Easy Read and audio and video transcription, apply the principle of universal design and adopt an action plan to ensure physical access to all facilities in which administrative and judicial procedures take place;
- (d) Intensify the provision of training on the Convention to administrative, judicial and law enforcement officials, including to judges.

26. The Committee notes with concern the barriers that persons with disabilities, particularly persons with intellectual disabilities, persons with psychosocial disabilities, those placed under the substitute decision-making regime, those in residential and psychiatric institutions and persons with physical disabilities, face in the justice system owing to the lack of procedural and age-appropriate accommodation, the lack of accessible information and communication on legal procedures and inaccessible buildings.

27. The Committee recalls the International Principles and Guidelines on Access to Justice for Persons with Disabilities prepared by the Special Rapporteur on the rights of persons with disabilities and target 16.3 of the Sustainable Development Goals and recommends that the State party:

- (a) Ensure that all necessary and effective procedural safeguards and accommodations are in place so that all persons who have restricted legal capacity and those placed in residential and psychiatric facilities can have access to an effective judicial review of decisions affecting them and to free and effective legal representation in all proceedings;
- (b) Revise the Code on Civil Procedure and the Criminal Proceedings Act to guarantee procedural and age-appropriate accommodation for all persons with disabilities in any legal circumstances by developing alternative and augmentative means of information and communication, such as Braille, sign language, Easy Read, symbol systems and audio and video transcription.

26. While noting the provisions of section 17A of the Legal Act, which guarantees legal aid for persons with disabilities, the Committee is concerned that persons with disabilities face barriers in terms of access to justice, including attitudinal barriers and prejudices among court personnel, insufficient training of personnel to guide persons with disabilities through complex judicial processes and proceedings, and a lack of information about the participation of persons with disabilities in such training. The Committee is also concerned that no procedural accommodations have yet been made to guarantee effective access to justice for all persons with disabilities and to ensure that persons with disabilities may enter the legal professions.

27. The Committee recalls the International Principles and Guidelines on Access to Justice for Persons with Disabilities prepared in 2020 by the Special Rapporteur on the rights of persons with disabilities, and target 16.3 of the Sustainable Development Goals, and recommends that the State party:

- (a) Adopt, in accordance with the Convention, an action plan on access to justice for persons with disabilities, as well as the necessary legal, administrative and judicial measures to eliminate all restrictions on the effective participation of persons with disabilities in all stages of the judicial process;
- (b) Make procedural adjustments, including the provision of individualized assistance, to ensure that persons with disabilities can participate effectively in the various aspects of legal proceedings;
- (c) Develop alternative and augmentative means of information and communication for use throughout legal proceedings, such as Braille, sign language, Easy Read and audio and video transcription, apply the principle of universal design and adopt an action plan to ensure physical access to all justice facilities, including through accessible transportation;

(d) Intensify efforts to provide training on the Convention to justice and law enforcement officials, especially in rural areas;

(e) Take measures to ensure that persons with disabilities may enter the legal professions on an equal basis with others, and ensure individualized support for that purpose.

Mexico (2022)

37. With reference to paragraph 25 of its previous concluding observations, the Committee is concerned about limited access to justice of persons with disabilities, particularly those from indigenous communities, women and girls with disabilities who are victims of violence and abuse, persons with disabilities living in institutions and children with disabilities, resulting in seemingly wide-spread impunity of perpetrators of crimes committed against persons with disabilities in institutions or under guardianship, particularly women and children with intellectual and psychosocial disabilities. The Committee notes with concern that, in particular, women with disabilities face financial, linguistic and geographic restrictions of their right to access to justice, as well as a lack of reasonable and procedural accommodation. It is further concerned about restrictions of the right of women with disabilities, in particular women with disabilities in indigenous communities, to access to justice in cases of gender-based violence and in cases of women who are under guardianship or are institutionalized, including disregard for the testimony of women and girls with intellectual or psychosocial disabilities.

38. The Committee recommends that the State party:

(a) Adopt and implement age-appropriate and gender-sensitive legal measures guaranteeing access to justice for persons with disabilities, including women with disabilities in indigenous communities, such as procedural accommodations, accessible and affordable legal aid, counselling and personal assistance; remove barriers to the physical environment, to information and to prosecution services in criminal cases; and ensure that federal and state prosecutors adapt their directives and their practice accordingly;

(b) Provide effective remedies to persons with disabilities living in institutions, allowing them to effectively lodge their complaints about violations of the Convention, and provide them with legal aid;

(c) Establish specific standards to provide effective redress in situations of gender-based violence, and ensure that children with disabilities are in fact heard in any proceedings affecting them;

(d) Eradicate gender- and disability-based stereotypes in the justice system, and ensure that all procedures, including prosecutions and trials, are conducted in a gender- and disability-sensitive manner.

Switzerland (2022)

27. The Committee notes with concern:

(a) Barriers to access to justice for persons with disabilities, including the accessibility of administrative tribunals and courts, the financial risks of taking action, the lack of availability of accessible information and communications and the lack of procedural accommodation to facilitate effective participation in legal proceedings;

(b) The lack of understanding and application of the standards and principles of the Convention in judicial and administrative procedures;

(c) That persons with disabilities deemed “incapable of discernment” are not provided with procedural and reasonable accommodation in order to facilitate their effective role as participants in legal proceedings on an equal basis with others.

28. The Committee recommends that the State party:

(a) Ensure access to judicial and administrative facilities, including through universal design, and the provision of alternative and augmentative means of information and communication for use throughout legal proceedings, such as Braille, sign language, accessible digital formats, Easy Read, audio description and video transcription;

- (b) Strengthen federal and cantonal procedural regulations to ensure the provision of procedural and age-appropriate accommodation at all levels of the justice system;
- (c) Develop professional development programmes for the judiciary, judicial and administrative professionals and other relevant government officials on the provisions of the Convention and the human rights model of disability and their implementation in domestic law;
- (d) Repeal legislation that restricts the legal capacity of persons with disabilities, and guarantee their access to justice on an equal basis with others, including throughout judicial proceedings.

Venezuela (2022)

24. The Committee is concerned that:

- (a) Restrictions still exist that prevent persons with disabilities from enjoying full access to justice on an equal footing with others, since they are limited to judicial buildings where the physical environment, information and communications are accessible, and that staff training remains incomplete;
- (b) The Public Interpreters Act does not consider Venezuelan sign language interpreters to be assistant justice officials.

25. Bearing in mind article 13 of the Convention, the International Principles and Guidelines on Access to Justice for Persons with Disabilities and target 16.3 of the Sustainable Development Goals, the Committee recommends that the State party:

- (a) Amend the Civil Code to remove the restrictions preventing deaf or blind persons from giving testimony during legal proceedings;
- (b) Ensure that persons with disabilities who are subject to or participate in court proceedings have a person of their choosing to help them make decisions and to communicate with them, in line with the safeguards set out in general comment No. 1 (2014);
- (c) Compile a list of judicial establishments that are physically accessible, provide information in accessible formats and use accessible modes of communication, and ensure that all establishments where justice is administered, without exception, meet those accessibility standards;
- (d) Continue the training of judicial officials and make age- and gender-appropriate procedural adjustments, setting deadlines and goals and allocating resources to this end;
- (e) Amend the Public Interpreters Act to include Venezuelan sign language interpreters so that they have legal standing to participate in judicial processes.

Djibouti (2021)

21. The Committee notes with concern:

- (a) The absence of concrete measures to implement Article 32 Act No. 207/AN/17/7ème L (2018) on the provision of procedural and age-appropriate accommodations for persons with disabilities throughout legal processes, including judicial and administrative processes;
- (b) The barriers faced by persons with disabilities in accessing justice and the unavailability of accessible free legal support for persons with disabilities under the legal aid programme;
- (c) The lack of trained professionals and qualified sign language interpreters in administrative and judicial proceedings for persons who are deaf, and the lack of documents and information in accessible formats for persons with disabilities.

22. The Committee recalls the International Principles and Guidelines on Access to Justice for Persons with Disabilities prepared in 2020 by the Special Rapporteur on the rights of persons with disabilities and target 16.3 of the Sustainable Development Goals and recommends that the State party:

- (a) Adopt measures to ensure the provision of persons with disabilities with procedural age-appropriate accommodations through legal processes, including judicial and administrative processes, in line with article 32 of the Act No. 207/AN/17/7ème L (2018);
- (b) Ensure that the legal aid programme provides support to persons with disabilities, including in rural areas and in refugee camps;

(c) Ensure that sufficient professional and qualified sign language interpreters and other communication support means are available within the judicial system, including documents in accessible formats such as Braille, tactile and Easy Read, in order to ensure the effective participation of persons with disabilities, including for those in rural areas and in refugee camps, in the all judicial and administrative proceedings;

(d) Strengthen capacity-building programmes for the judiciary and justice-sector professionals, such as prosecutors and law enforcement officials including police and prison officers, on the provisions of the Convention and on access to justice for persons with disabilities.

27. The Committee notes with concern:

(a) Barriers in access to justice for persons with disabilities under substituted decision-making, those still in institutions, and under psychiatric treatment, including in psychiatric settings, and stigmatization and discriminatory rulings based on disability;

(b) Barriers for persons with disabilities to appeal decisions concerning psychiatric treatment;

(c) The lack of accessibility to justice facilities, affecting litigants and court officials with disabilities, including at police stations, and the lack of information about procedural and age-appropriate accommodations, and on measures to provide accessible information for all persons with disabilities throughout court proceedings;

(d) Limited access to legal aid due to the financial barriers, and the limited coverage of independent legal counselling.

(a) Guarantee access to justice for persons under substituted decision-making, those still in institutions or in any form of psychiatric treatment, by repealing legislation that restrict legal capacity of persons with disabilities and recognise their full capacity to participate in judicial proceedings in different roles, including as witnesses or defendants, and take measures to eliminate cultural constructs and discriminatory attitudes among the judiciary;

(b) Ensure the right to appeal any restriction of freedom, including treatment without consent, establish an independent monitoring and reporting mechanism on the access to justice in the mental health system;

(c) Ensure physical access to justice facilities including through universal design; ensure access to information throughout judicial procedures, including access to judicial decisions. Likewise, strengthen measures to provide persons with disabilities with procedural and age-appropriate accommodations, especially for persons with vision impairments and deaf persons, those with intellectual or psychosocial disabilities, and autistic persons. Appropriate accommodations include alternative and augmentative modes of communication such as sign language, Braille, accessible digital formats, Easy Read, and the establishment of independent intermediaries and facilitators, including autism reference persons;

(d) Adopt a mechanism to review decisions concerning access to full or partial legal aid and in all areas of law and strengthen the capacity of independent legal advice services in the departmental centres for persons with disabilities, and ensure the right to appeal any restriction of freedom, including treatment without consent.

25. The Committee notes with concern:

(a) That persons with disabilities under guardianship face de facto denial of access to justice, and the prevailing paternalistic attitudes concerning persons with disabilities participating at legal proceedings;

(b) The limited scope of procedural accommodations that are age-and-gender- responsive to persons with disabilities, and the absence of programmes to ensure legal assistance to all persons with disabilities;

(c) The reported lack of information in accessible formats for persons with disabilities throughout legal proceedings, barriers in physical access to justice facilities, including courts and police stations, and the lack of accessible transportation to arrive to these facilities.

26. The Committee recalls the International Principles and Guidelines on Access to Justice for Persons with Disabilities (2020) prepared by the Special Rapporteur on the Rights of Persons with Disabilities, and target 16.3 of the Sustainable Development Goals, and recommends that the State party:

(a) Ensure the recognition of full legal capacity of all persons with disabilities, and their equal right to access to justice including throughout proceedings before courts, tribunals and administrative authorities, and recognize their right to seek restoration of their legal capacity, and legal assistance to pursue their claims;

(b) Strengthen capacity-building programmes to the judiciary, and the justice sector professionals on the provisions of the Convention and the human rights model of disability;

(c) Adopt mechanisms to provide persons with disabilities with appropriate provision of age-appropriate accommodations, including support, and access to legal aid throughout legal proceedings, in all areas of law, and at all levels of the judiciary;

(d) Develop alternative and augmentative means of information and communication throughout legal proceedings, such as Braille, Sign language, Easy Read, audio and video transcription, means of universal design, and adopt an action plan to ensure physical access to all justice facilities, including through accessible transportation.

25. The Committee is concerned about the lack of specific and available measures taken to ensure comprehensive access to the justice system for persons with disabilities, such as free legal aid, accessible legal services and sign language interpreters in court rooms, police stations, procedural accommodations and prosecutorial authorities. It is also concerned about the lack of information on specific measures and protocols to remove barriers to access to justice and to provide procedural and gender- and age-appropriate accommodation in judicial proceedings for persons with disabilities, including written information and communications for notary-related services.

26. The Committee recommends that the State party:

(a) Ensure transparent and barrier-free access to the justice system for persons with disabilities without discrimination;

(b) Ensure that persons with disabilities have access to free legal aid, particularly those still living in institutions;

(c) Ensure, without discrimination, the availability of access to assistive technologies and registered and qualified sign language interpreters, and the provision of Braille, Easy Read, sign language and other alternative formats, in judicial proceedings and notary-related services;

(d) Strengthen efforts to provide training and capacity-building programmes on the Convention for judicial, law enforcement and notary personnel in the application of a human rights approach to disability;

(e) Provide training and capacity-building programmes on the Convention for persons with disabilities to increase their legal awareness.

Australia (2019)

25. The Committee is concerned about:

(a) The fact that only some states and territories have passed legislation to support the equal participation of persons with disabilities in the jury system while the rest and the federal Government have not done so;

(b) The lack of nationally consistent disability justice plans across governments to ensure that persons with disabilities are supported in accessing the same legal protections and redress as the rest of the community, particularly persons with intellectual or psychosocial disabilities whose reasonable and procedural accommodations are not adequately met;

- (c) The fact that legislation still views persons with disabilities as being unfit to plead;
- (d) The overrepresentation of convicted young persons with disabilities in the youth justice system, especially male youth from Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander communities;
- (e) Ongoing use of substituted decision-making to assist persons with disabilities “unable to navigate the legal system by themselves”;
- (f) Absence of national data disaggregated by disability at all the stages of the criminal justice system, including data on the number of persons unfit to plead who are committed to custody in prison and other facilities.

26. The Committee recommends that the State party, in close consultation with persons with disabilities, through their representative organizations, ensure effective access to justice for persons with disabilities, without any discrimination. It also recommends that the State party:

- (a) Develop legislation in all states on the equal participation of persons with disabilities in the jury system;
- (b) Develop nationally consistent disability justice plans across governments to ensure that persons with disabilities, particularly those whose reasonable and procedural accommodations are not adequately met, are supported in accessing the same legal protections and redress as the rest of the community;
- (c) Bring all state, territory and federal legislation, including criminal laws and policies, in compliance with the Convention to ensure due process guarantees for all persons with disabilities and ensure a review of the legal situation of persons whose equal recognition before the law is restricted and who have been declared unfit to stand trial;
- (d) Address the overrepresentation of young Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander persons in the juvenile justice system and implement the recommendations contained in Pathways to Justice – An Inquiry into the Incarceration Rate of Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander Peoples;
- (e) Eliminate substitute decision-making, provide gender and culture-specific individualized support, including psychosocial support, for persons with disabilities in the justice system, make information accessible and provide community-based sentencing options;
- (f) Ensure that training modules on working with persons with disabilities and the Convention are incorporated into mandated training programmes for police officers, prison officers, lawyers, judicial officers, judges and court staff;
- (g) Collect data disaggregated by disability, age, gender, location and ethnicity at all stages of the criminal justice system, including on the number of persons unfit to plead who are committed to custody in prison and other facilities.

27. The Committee is concerned at the continued existence of restrictions that interfere with the full access to justice of persons with disabilities on an equal footing with others.

28. Taking into account the recommendation made in paragraph 27 of its concluding observations on the State party’s initial report (CRPD/C/ECU/CO/1), the Committee recommends that, in accordance with the Convention and bearing in mind target 16.3 of the Sustainable Development Goals, the State party revise its laws so as to guarantee full access to justice for persons with disabilities, especially persons with psychosocial or intellectual disabilities, without discrimination. It also recommends that the State party continue to provide training to justice officials; that it take due account of accessibility considerations with respect to the physical environment, information and communications in all facilities having to do with the administration of justice; that it make age-appropriate procedural adjustments; and that it establish timelines, goals and funding arrangements to this end.

26. The Committee remains concerned about the lack of measures taken to establish procedural adjustments, including gender and age accommodations, to ensure access to justice for persons with disabilities, in rural and urban areas.

27. Taking into account target 16.3 of the Sustainable Development Goals, the Committee recommends that the State party repeal any legislation that creates barriers for persons with disabilities to access justice and establish the necessary safeguards to guarantee the participation of persons with disabilities in all legal proceedings, on an equal basis with others, including a gender and age focus, and individualized accommodations, such as accessible modes and formats of communication – Braille, Easy Read, captioning, alternative communication devices and professional sign language interpreters, among others.

19. The Committee is concerned that:

(a) Court buildings are not fully accessible to persons with disabilities, and that there are insufficient accessible legal services and legal information, including in Braille, Easy Read formats and sign language;

(b) Procedural accommodations are not fully ensured at all stages of civil, criminal and administrative proceedings, particularly the provision of translation and interpretation for persons with hearing and speech disabilities.

20. The Committee recommends that the State party ensure effective access to justice without any discrimination, with an effective monitoring mechanism. It also recommends that the State party ensure effective access to legal services and legal aid, cost-free assistive technologies and quality translation and interpretation in sign language, Braille and other alternative formats, provided free of charge at all stages of civil, criminal and administrative proceedings. It further recommends that the State party continue to provide adequate training on the rights of persons with disabilities to judges, lawyers and law enforcement officials, progressively strengthening its efforts in this area, and to take into account article 13 of the Convention while implementing target 16.3 of the Sustainable Development Goals.

28. The Committee is concerned about:

(a) The limited provision of procedural and age-appropriate accommodations and the barriers affecting equal access to justice by persons with disabilities, including the lack of access to court buildings, the lack of accessible information and sign language interpretation and the insufficient legal aid;

(b) The fear of retribution faced by victims in cases of violence and gender-based violence against women with disabilities;

(c) Gender stereotypes and prejudices in the justice system that curtail the right of women with disabilities to access to justice in cases of gender-based violence against them and in cases affecting women who are under guardianship or institutionalized, including disregard for the testimony of women and girls with intellectual or psychosocial disabilities;

(d) The lack of awareness and capacity-building among all actors in the justice system concerning the rights of persons with disabilities, and the absence of measures such as those for the provision of reasonable accommodation that would enable persons with disabilities in assuming positions as judges, members of the jury or other functions in the judiciary.

29. The Committee recommends that the State party:

(a) Ensure effective access to justice for persons with disabilities without discrimination, and procedural, age-appropriate and gender-sensitive accommodations in complaint mechanisms and the justice system, in all areas of law. The State party should strengthen its efforts to provide persons with disabilities with accessible and free legal aid, remove barriers to the physical environment and information, and develop accessible reporting procedures, particularly in cases of gender-based violence against women and in cases affecting women who are under guardianship or institutionalized;

(b) Ensure that the justice system adjudicates cases in a gender-sensitive manner and that procedures for lodging complaints are responsive to women with disabilities and guarantee their privacy and safety;

(c) Combat stigmas and gender and disability stereotypes, ensuring that prosecutions and trials are managed in a disability- and gender-sensitive manner;

(d) Ensure that the different actors in the criminal justice system, including the police are trained to facilitate the participation of persons with disabilities, and promote and support persons with disabilities' participation as professionals in the judicial system, including as judges.

25. The Committee is concerned about:

(a) Persons with intellectual or psychosocial disabilities being denied the right to take part in court proceedings, apart from standing witness, according to article 86 of Law No. 107 (1979);

(b) The inaccessibility of the judicial system because of a limited knowledge about disability issues within the judicial sector and because of existing barriers to the courts and tribunals, including physical barriers and barriers to obtaining information in accessible formats such as Braille, Easy Read and sign language, and also about the limited information available on the measures taken by the State party to implement article 15 (6) (b) of Law No. 38 (2013);

(c) The limited information available on the number of persons with disabilities benefiting from legal aid, particularly in regions not covered by legal clinics (A/HRC/WG.6/20/IRQ/1, para. 25).

26. The Committee, recalling its general comment No. 2 (2014) on accessibility, recommends that the State party:

(a) Guarantee to all persons with disabilities, particularly persons with intellectual or psychosocial disabilities, equal and supported access to all judicial processes, including through the provision of gender- and age-appropriate procedural accommodations;

(b) Take measures to ensure that all persons with disabilities, in particular persons with psychosocial or intellectual disabilities and persons with visual or hearing impairments, have access to justice by eliminating all barriers, by guaranteeing them the right to actively participate in all judicial proceedings, by providing information and enabling communication in accessible formats such as Braille, Easy Read and tactile and sign language, by increasing the number of qualified sign language interpreters and by continuing to conduct training for law enforcement personnel on the human rights model of disability;

(c) Provide free or affordable legal aid for persons with disabilities in all areas of the State party and ensure the necessary budgetary allocations.

26. The Committee is concerned about:

(a) The absence of legal stipulations on the provision of procedural and age-appropriate accommodations to persons with disabilities in all legal proceedings;

(b) The lack of information regarding the accessibility of the justice system, including police premises, and the shortage of sign language interpreters;

(c) The absence of accessible information about the rights of persons with disabilities.

27. The Committee recommends that the State party:

(a) Ensure the provision of procedural and age-appropriate accommodations to persons with disabilities;

(b) Ensure the accessibility of police and judicial premises, legal aid and an adequate number of sign language interpreters, including in Kuwaiti sign language;

(c) Ensure the availability of information about the rights of persons with disabilities in accessible formats, such as Braille and Easy Read, to guarantee that all persons with disabilities have full, unrestricted and effective access to justice at all stages of the proceedings.

25. The Committee is concerned about:

- (a) The lack of access to justice by persons with disabilities, in particular persons with psychosocial or intellectual disabilities, as a result of barriers, including the lack of free legal aid or gender- and age-appropriate procedural accommodations;
- (b) Reported cases of women and girls with disabilities who are survivors of gender-based violence not being able to access to justice owing to multiple barriers, such as stigmatization of victims, fear of reprisals and difficulties in producing evidence;
- (c) The insufficient understanding and awareness among the judiciary and law enforcement officials about the rights of persons with disabilities, the diversity among persons with disabilities and individual accommodations.

26. The Committee recommends that the State party:

- (a) Adopt measures to provide legal assistance and gender- and age-appropriate procedural accommodation for persons with disabilities to enable their participation in all legal procedures on an equal basis with others, including by facilitating the use of the communication method of their choice in judicial interactions, such as sign language, Braille, Easy Read, captioning, augmentative and alternative communication devices, and all other accessible means, modes and formats of communications;
- (b) Remove barriers that women and girls with disabilities who are survivors of gender-based violence face in gaining access to justice, including stigmatization of victims, fear of reprisals and difficulties in producing evidence;
- (c) Ensure regular training programmes and awareness-raising campaigns for lawyers, court staff, judges, prosecutors and law enforcement officers, including police and prison officers, on the rights of persons with disabilities, the diversity among persons with disabilities and individual accommodation.

27. The Committee is concerned about the barriers facing persons with disabilities in access to justice, including attitudinal barriers and prejudices of court personnel, as well as insufficient training of personnel to assist persons with disabilities through the complex judicial processes and proceedings, and the lack of information in the participation of persons with disabilities in such training. The Committee is concerned that no procedural accommodations have yet been made to ensure effective access to justice for all persons with disabilities and for access to legal professions for persons with disabilities.

28. The Committee recommends that the State party:

- (a) Adopt, in line with the Convention, an action plan on access to justice for persons with disabilities, as well as the necessary legal, administrative and judicial measures to eliminate all restrictions on the effective participation of persons with disabilities in all stages of the judicial process;
- (b) Make procedural adjustments, including the provision of individualised assistance, to ensure that persons with disabilities can effectively participate in the various aspects of legal proceedings;
- (c) Step up efforts to ensure that qualified sign language interpreters are present during all court processes and judicial proceedings and ensure that other formats of communication, such as Braille and Easy Read, are available;
- (d) Intensify efforts to provide training on the Convention for justice and law enforcement officials, especially in rural areas;
- (e) Take measures to ensure that persons with disabilities can access legal professions on an equal basis with others, and ensure individualised support for that purpose;
- (f) Adhere to article 13 of the Convention in its implementation of target 16.3 of the Sustainable Development Goals.

Niger (2019)

21. The Committee is concerned about the barriers faced by persons with disabilities in accessing justice, including inaccessibility to judicial premises, lack of procedural accommodations, especially the absence of professional sign language interpreters, Braille and Easy Read materials.

22. The Committee recommends that the State party adhere to article 13 of the Convention in the implementation of Sustainable Development Goal 16, particularly target 16.3, and:

(a) Provide procedural accommodations for persons with disabilities through the support of the National Agency for Legal and Judicial Assistance, and provide necessary budgetary allocation to this agency;

(b) Ensure that sufficient professional and certified sign language interpreters are available within the judicial system and that documents are provided in accessible formats for the participation of persons with disabilities in all judicial and administrative proceedings;

(c) Conduct trainings and awareness-raising programmes for the judiciary, and law enforcement officials, including police and prison officials on access to justice for persons with disabilities;

(d) Support and empower persons with disabilities to work in the justice system with the provision of reasonable accommodation.

21. The Committee is concerned about:

(a) The lack of procedural and age-appropriate accommodation in the justice and law enforcement sector, especially for deaf or hard of hearing persons, persons with psychosocial or intellectual disabilities;

(b) The current legal aid system which does not provide access to free legal aid for persons with disabilities, particularly for those still living in institutions and the fact that education, health-care services and discrimination are not prioritized in the Legal Aid Act.

22. The Committee recommends that the State party:

(a) Ensure procedural and age-appropriate accommodation in the justice and law enforcement sector;

(b) Revise its current legal aid scheme, ensuring the provision of free legal aid for persons with disabilities, including for those still living in institutions and ensure that education, health-care services and discrimination are prioritized in the Legal Aid Act;

(c) Adhere to article 13 of the Convention in the implementation of target 16.3 of the Sustainable Development Goals.

25. The Committee is concerned that persons with disabilities cannot effectively participate in the judicial system, especially persons who are deaf and persons with intellectual or psychosocial disabilities. The Committee is especially concerned about:

(a) The lack of knowledge about disability rights within the judicial sector, including court staff, judges, prosecutors, magistrates, lawyers, law enforcement officials and staff of corrective facilities;

(b) The lack of accessibility to judicial premises and proceedings, especially by women and girls with disabilities, and the absence of procedural accommodation.

26. The Committee recommends that the State party adopt measures to ensure that all persons with disabilities, especially persons who are deaf and persons with intellectual or psychosocial disabilities can exercise their right to access to justice. In particular, the Committee recommends that the State party:

(a) Provide continuous training for those working in the justice, law and order sector, on the rights of persons with disabilities, taking into account the diversity of persons with disabilities in judicial proceedings as witnesses, victims, or perpetrators;

(b) Ensure the accessibility of the judicial premises and proceedings to all persons with disabilities, especially women and girls with disabilities, by inter alia, providing accessible and free legal services to persons with disabilities, sign language interpretation services, and comprehensive age- and gender- appropriate procedural accommodation.

23. The Committee is concerned that:

- (a) Current legislation, including Articles 148 and 149 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, deny access to justice to persons deprived of legal capacity and restricts persons with intellectual or psychosocial disabilities from filing a complaint directly before the judiciary;
- (b) Availability of information in accessible formats is insufficient to enable persons with disabilities, particularly those who are blind, deaf and persons with intellectual or psychosocial disabilities, to participate in judicial proceedings;
- (c) Persons with disabilities, and especially those living in rural areas, face additional obstacles in the access to justice, due to insufficient accessibility of infrastructure and a lack of procedural accommodation;
- (d) No specific measures to guarantee non-discriminatory access to justice to persons with disabilities, including by respecting their right to freely chose judicial and law enforcement personnel involved, have been taken.

24. The Committee recommends that the State Party, taking into account article 13 of the Convention and target 16.3 of the Sustainable Development Goals:

- (a) Remove any provisions, including in the Code of Criminal Procedure, restricting access to courts by persons with disabilities;
- (b) Ensure (i) the availability of professional and certified sign language interpreters and documents in accessible formats such as Braille, tactile and Easy Read, as well as (ii) non-discriminatory access to assistive technologies to all persons with disabilities to guarantee their full participation in all judicial and administrative proceedings;
- (c) Take all necessary measures to combat discrimination faced by persons with disabilities in the access to justice, ensure that the legal system is fully accessible, especially in rural areas, and provide comprehensive procedural accommodation;
- (d) Step up efforts to raise the awareness of court staff, judges, prosecutors and law enforcement officials, including police and prison officials, especially in rural areas and remote communities, on the provisions of the Convention.

Senegal (2019)

23. The Committee is concerned about:

- (a) The lack of access to justice by persons with disabilities, as a result of barriers, including insufficient knowledge about disability issues within the judicial and law enforcement sectors, lack of free legal assistance and procedural and age-appropriate accommodations, and inaccessible physical environment within the justice system;
- (b) The lack of trained professionals and certified sign language interpreters in administrative and judicial proceedings for persons who are deaf and the absence of documents in accessible formats to enable persons who are blind and persons with intellectual or psychosocial disabilities to participate in judicial proceedings;

24. The Committee recommends that the State party, in line with article 13 of the Convention and target 16.3 of the Sustainable Development Goals:

- (a) Adopt measures towards providing legal assistance, procedural and age-appropriate accommodations for persons with disabilities and accessibility in all court buildings, tribunals, police stations, prisons and all places of detention;
- (b) Ensure that professional, qualified sign language interpreters and other communication supports are available within the judicial system, including the availability of documents and other communication supports in accessible formats for all persons with disabilities, such as Braille, tactile, and Easy Read, in order to ensure their effective participation in all judicial and administrative proceedings;
- (c) Conduct regular training programmes and awareness-raising campaigns and information for judicial staff, judges, prosecutors and law enforcement officials, including police and prison officials to understand the need to ensure access to justice for persons with disabilities;
- (d) Adopt concrete measures to support and empower persons with disabilities to work in the justice system as judges, prosecutors and lawyers, with provision of necessary support and budgetary allocations to enhance greater access to justice by persons with disabilities.

24. The Committee is concerned about the:

- (a) Widespread lack of accessibility to buildings in which law-enforcement agencies and the judiciary are located, and the lack of overall procedural gender and age-appropriate accommodation in judicial proceedings that takes into consideration the different types of disabilities, including sensory, intellectual or psychosocial;
- (b) Barriers, that prevent persons under substitute decision-making regimes from participating in legal proceedings on an equal basis with others, including through the undermining of the testimonial credibility of persons with psychosocial or intellectual disabilities;
- (c) Overall lack of awareness about the provisions of the Convention by lawyers, court staff, judges, prosecutors and law enforcement officials.

25. The Committee recommends that the State party:

- (a) Enact legislation to remove barriers for persons with disabilities and access to justice and to guarantee the provision of procedural and gender and age-appropriate accommodations and establish related safeguards to enable the participation of persons with disabilities in all legal proceedings on an equal basis with others through facilitating the use of sign language, Braille, Easy Read, captioning, augmentative and alternative communication, and all other accessible means, modes and formats of communication of their choice in judicial interactions;
- (b) While implementing recommendation 23 above, ensure that the status of guardianship and type of disability does not prevent the full access to justice by persons with disabilities and that specific support is provided for persons with psychosocial or intellectual disabilities and victims of gender-based violence;
- (c) Ensure regular training programmes and awareness-raising campaigns for lawyers, court staff, judges, prosecutors and law enforcement officials, including police and prison officials, on the need to provide persons with disabilities with access to justice;
- (d) Adhere to article 13 of the Convention in its implementation of target 16.3 of the Sustainable Development Goals.

Türkiye (2019)

27. The Committee is concerned about:

- (a) The lack of specific measures and transparent protocols with remedies to provide procedural and age appropriate accommodation in judicial proceedings for persons with disabilities, including official provision of quality sign-language interpretation for persons who are deaf, accessible formats of communication for deaf-blind, hard of hearing persons, and persons with intellectual or psychosocial disabilities, particularly in civil cases;
- (b) The limited provision of legal aid for persons with disabilities in all areas of law and the lack of access to information about legal services;
- (c) The barriers for physical accessibility to court buildings and prosecution offices;
- (d) The Law on the Judges and Prosecutors (No. 2802), which prevent the employment of persons with disabilities as judges and prosecutors.

28. The Committee recommends that the State party:

- (a) Take steps to facilitate accessible and non-discriminatory access to the justice system for persons with disabilities by ensuring procedural and age-appropriate accommodation and clear administrative procedures based on legislation;
- (b) Ensure human and financial resources to provide persons with disabilities with legal aid, which is accessible and affordable, including through accessible information and communication means with lawyers;
- (c) Allocate resources and develop a plan within the judiciary with a timeframe and benchmarks to ensure accessibility of police stations, courts, prosecution units, including the provision of accessible transportation;

(d) Amend the Law on the Judges and Prosecutors (No. 2802) and adopt legal measures to allow and facilitate the effective participation of all persons with disabilities in the justice system, including as judges, witnesses, complainants, and respondents.

24. The Committee is concerned about the limited access to justice by persons with disabilities due to the various barriers, including the lack of physical accessibility to police stations and courts, and the lack of procedural accommodation and legal aid. Furthermore, it is concerned at the low level of awareness among the judiciary and the police on the rights of persons with disabilities.

25. The Committee recommends that the State party pay attention to the link between article 13 of the Convention and target 16.3 of the Sustainable Development Goals, and that it:

- (a) Ensure persons with disabilities have access to procedural and age-appropriate accommodation, free legal aid and accessibility provisions, such as by the use of sign language, captioning, Braille and Easy Read and ensure that persons with disabilities are not denied reasonable accommodation in access to justice;
- (b) Strengthen training of the judiciary and law enforcement personnel, including judges, prosecutors, lawyers, police officers and prison staff, on the rights of persons with disabilities in all provinces of the State party;
- (c) Raise awareness among persons with disabilities on their rights to access to justice, including legal aid, remedy, and redress in the judicial system available to them.

26. The Committee is concerned by article 26 of Executive Decree No. 16-159 of 30 May 2016 and article 34 of Act No. 13-17 which establishes certain standards of physical and psychological fitness as conditions to access the professions of judge and lawyer. It is also concerned about existing barriers to access courts and tribunals, including physical barriers and barriers to obtain information in accessible formats such as Braille, Easy Read and sign language. The Committee is also concerned by the absence of systematic training for members of the judiciary, law practitioners and law enforcement officials on the concept of procedural accommodation and/or age-appropriate accommodation for persons with disabilities.

27. The Committee recommends that the State party, taking into account article 13 of the Convention and target 16.3 of the Sustainable Development Goals:

- (a) Repeal any laws and policies which discriminate against persons with disabilities in the legal profession;
- (b) Eliminate all physical barriers which prevent persons with disabilities from accessing the entire justice system on an equal basis with others;
- (c) Facilitate access to information in all formats to persons with disabilities, including Easy-Read, Braille, accessible digital formats, and sign language;
- (d) Provide systematic and on-going training to members of the judiciary, law practitioners and law enforcement officials on the Convention and the obligation to ensure physical access and accessible legal services.

31. The Committee notes with concern the shortage of trained sign language interpreters for deaf persons who are parties in different proceedings, and the lack of documents in accessible formats for blind persons, persons with intellectual and persons with psychosocial disabilities in different proceedings.

32. The Committee recommends that the State party ensure availability of sign language interpreters and documents in accessible formats such as Braille, electronic format, and Easy Read, to all persons with disabilities in all judicial and administrative proceedings.

21. The Committee is concerned about the lack of information on specific measures and protocols to implement 3A(4) of the Equal Opportunities (Persons with Disability) Act (Cap.

413) and to provide procedural and gender- and age-appropriate accommodation in judicial proceedings for persons with disabilities, in addition to selected measures aimed at facilitating communication (article 593 of the Code of Organization and Civil Procedure (Cap. 12), articles 451 and 640 of the Criminal Code (Cap. 9)). The Committee is also concerned by the lack of documents in accessible formats for blind and deaf-blind persons and persons with intellectual and psychosocial disabilities in various proceedings, the absence of policies to empower persons with disabilities to participate in the justice system as direct or indirect participants, such as lawyers, court officers or law enforcement officials. It is further concerned about the lack of systematic and continuous training to members of the judiciary, members of the legal profession, prosecutors and prison officers with regard to the equal rights of persons with disabilities and human rights in general.

22. The Committee recommends that the State party:

- (a) Ensure the implementation of its legislation to guarantee the provision of procedural and gender- and age-appropriate accommodations based on the free choice and preference of persons with disabilities, and establish related safeguards to enable the participation of persons with disabilities in all legal proceedings on an equal basis with others, including through the provision of documents in accessible formats;
- (b) Provide free or affordable legal aid for persons with disabilities in all areas of law and ensure the necessary budgetary allocation to the institution or institutions mandated with this task;
- (c) Increase its efforts in order to empower persons with disabilities to participate in the justice system as direct or indirect participants, such as lawyers, court officers or law enforcement officials;
- (d) Provide mandatory and ongoing capacity-building programmes, including training on the provisions of the Convention for members of the judiciary and members of the legal profession; for example, by broadening the audience of the Disability Equality Training that is currently being provided to the recruits of the Police Academy;
- (e) Be guided by article 13 of the Convention in its implementation of target 16.3 of the Sustainable Development Goals.

26. The Committee is concerned about the barriers facing persons with disabilities in access to justice, including attitudinal barriers and prejudices of court personnel as well as well-trained sign language interpreters to assist the persons with disabilities through the proceedings. It is also concerned about the lack of implementation of Executive Order 709 establishing the Sub-Committee on Access to Justice and Anti-Discrimination Executive Order 709.

27. The Committee recommends that the State party adopt measures to provide age-appropriate or procedural accommodations, including physical access to court rooms, accessible legal services, qualified sign language and tactile sign interpreters in courtrooms and police stations, legal and procedural information in Easy Read. It also recommends that the State party conduct capacity building programmes of the legal profession, police and prison officers concerning the rights enshrined in the Convention.

1. The Committee is concerned that persons with psychosocial and/or intellectual disability deprived of their legal capacity are denied the right to take part in a litigation and to stand as witnesses in procedures before civil courts. Furthermore, it is also concerned about the barriers which persons with disabilities in general face in accessing justice due to lack of:

- (a) Procedural accommodation, as well as the use of sign language, Braille, accessible digital formats, Easy Read and all other accessible means, modes and formats of communication in all legal proceedings;
- (b) Accessibility to justice buildings, courts and tribunals and police stations, for persons with physical disabilities;

- (c) Human rights based knowledge on disability of the justice system and law enforcement personnel on the rights of persons with disabilities;
- (d) Mechanisms for persons with disabilities to report violence, including the lack of access to justice for children with intellectual disabilities, women with disabilities or those living in institutions;
- (e) Legal assistance for persons with disabilities, including legal assistance and procedural accommodation for persons with psychosocial disabilities;
- (f) Access to legal professions for persons with disabilities based on presumptions that they are “unfit” for the profession.

2. The Committee recommends that the State party guarantee equal and supported access to all judicial processes for persons with intellectual and/or psychosocial disabilities deprived of their legal capacity. It further recommends to ensure that persons with disabilities have access to justice in practice, and in particular to:

- (a) Ensure procedural accommodation, as well as the use of sign language, Braille, augmentative and alternative communication, and all other accessible means, modes and formats of communication in all legal proceedings;
- (b) Ensure that justice buildings, courts and tribunals, and police stations, are accessible for persons with physical disabilities;
- (c) Provide regular training to law enforcement and judicial officers about the rights of all persons with disabilities and obligations of the State Party under the Convention;
- (d) Ensure effective mechanisms for persons with disabilities to report violence, including crimes on the grounds of hatred, as well as access to justice for children with intellectual disabilities, women with disabilities or those living in institutions;
- (e) Ensure universal and free legal assistance for persons with disabilities, having low income particularly, and legal assistance and procedural accommodation for persons with psychosocial disabilities;
- (f) Support persons with disabilities to practice legal professions and ensure reasonable accommodation for this purpose;
- (g) Be guided by article 13 of the Convention in the implementation of target 16.3 of the Sustainable Development Goals.

South Africa (2018)

24. The Committee is concerned about:

- (a) The barriers, including physical and legislative, that prevent the effective participation of all persons with disabilities, especially women and children, persons with psychosocial and/or intellectual disabilities, blind and deaf persons, in accessing the justice system, due to lack of procedural accommodations, including accessibility, in the judicial system;
- (b) The absence of information about the justice system and its proceedings in accessible formats provided to blind and visually impaired persons (Braille and audio), deaf persons (sign language interpretation) and persons with psychosocial and/or intellectual disabilities (Easy-Read);
- (c) The limited knowledge about the human rights of persons with disabilities within the judicial system and inadequate number of trained professional and certified sign language interpreters, Braille users or Easy-Read users to convey judicial information to persons with disabilities that require them.

25. The Committee recommends that the State party, taking into account article 13 of the Convention and target 16.3 of the Sustainable Development Goals:

- (a) Establish legal safeguards to ensure the participation of persons with disabilities in all legal proceedings on an equal basis with others and ensure that procedural, gender and age-appropriate accommodations based on free choice are provided for persons with disabilities in all judicial premises, police stations, and all places of detention, including prisons;
- (b) Adopt measures to ensure that all persons with disabilities have access to justice and information and communication in accessible formats, such as Braille, tactile, Easy-Read and sign language;

(c) Ensure a systematic training programme for judicial officials, law enforcement officials, including police and prison officials, on the right of all persons with disabilities to justice, including involving persons with disabilities as judicial officials.

26. The Committee is concerned at:

- (a) The lack of consistency in laws with regard to access to justice for persons with disabilities and the lack of legislation on hate crimes relating to disability;
- (b) The lack of accessibility to the judicial system, due to the lack of knowledge of disability issues within the judicial sector, lack of adequate procedural accommodations, information in accessible formats and accessibility to judicial premises;
- (c) The bureaucratic restrictions to free legal aid under the current Law on Free Legal Aid.

27. The Committee recommends that the State party:

- (a) Take measures to align the laws requiring courts to facilitate trial procedures and procedural accommodation for persons with disabilities and to extend such measures to the police and prosecution services; effectively implement the principle of procedural accommodation under article 27 on the Law on the Rights of Persons with Disabilities (2016);
- (b) Take measures to amend the criminal law in order for crimes against persons with disabilities to be recognised as hate crimes;
- (c) Adopt measures to ensure that all persons with disabilities, especially persons with psychosocial disabilities and persons with intellectual disabilities and the deaf and hard of hearing persons, blind persons, deaf-blind persons, have access to justice, and that information and communication is in accessible formats such as Braille, accessible electronic formats, tactile, Easy Read and sign language;
- (d) Conduct training to law enforcement personnel on the human rights-based approach to disability;
- (e) Ensure that access to free legal aid for persons with disabilities is not restricted in the new draft Law on Free Legal Aid.

Haiti (2018)

24. The Committee is concerned about:

- (a) Obstacles to the effective participation of persons with disabilities in the justice system, including the lack of procedural accommodation and legal aid;
- (b) The serious problems in the judicial system which are exacerbated for persons with disabilities, inter alia, discrimination, barriers to accessibility of the premises of police, courts and places of detention and inaccessibility of information;
- (c) Lack of qualified personnel on the rights of persons with disabilities and the low level of awareness among the judiciary and law enforcement officials about the human rights of persons with disabilities.

25. The Committee recommends that the State party:

- (a) Enact appropriate legislation to ensure the removal of obstacles to have access to justice and to guarantee the provision of procedural, gender- and age-appropriate accommodations based on the free choice and preference of persons with disabilities, and establish related safeguards to enable their participation in all legal proceedings on an equal basis with others;
- (b) Ensure that all persons with disabilities, especially those with intellectual or psychosocial disabilities, and persons who are deaf or hard of hearing, can have access to justice and information and communications in accessible formats, including Braille, tactile media, plain language, Easy Read, and sign language;
- (c) Fully implements articles 51 and 54 of the Act on the Inclusion of Persons with Disabilities (2012) to develop and implement mandatory and ongoing capacity-building programmes, including training, on the provisions of the Convention among the judiciary and law enforcement personnel, including judges, prosecutors, police officers and prison staff, about the rights of persons with disabilities, especially persons with intellectual or psychosocial disabilities;

- (d) Adopt measures to increase the legal awareness of persons with disabilities and take the measures to address the underrepresentation of persons with disabilities and to empower them to work in the justice system, such as judges or prosecutors;
- (e) Pay attention to the links with article 13 of the Convention for the realization of target 16.3 of the Sustainable Development Goals.

23. While noting the efforts being made by the State party to ensure access to justice by persons with disabilities, the Committee remains concerned about the lack of explicit provisions for ensuring disability type and age appropriate accommodation in situations necessary for guaranteeing access to justice for persons with disabilities. It is also concerned at reports of the insufficient use of sign language, Braille as well as Easy Read, and the lack of appropriate awareness training for judicial, legal and law enforcement professionals.

24. The Committee recommends that the State party take appropriate measures to ensure physical access, accessible legal services and qualified sign language and tactile sign interpreters in courtrooms and police stations, including measures to ensure that persons with disabilities are not discriminated against on account of their disability (when sign language or Braille is required), or due to the lack of appropriate training of legal professionals, police and prison officers.

27. The Committee is concerned about:

- (a) The impediments that hinder the attainment of access to justice by persons with disabilities, as a result of insufficient knowledge about disability issues within the judicial and law enforcement sectors, lack of substantive procedural accommodations, including lack of accessibility within the justice system;
- (b) The inadequate number of trained professional and certified sign language interpreters to translate administrative and judicial proceedings for deaf persons and the unavailability of documents in accessible formats to enable blind persons and persons with intellectual and/or psychosocial disabilities to participate in proceedings.

28. The Committee recommends that the State party, taking into account article 13 of the Convention and target 16.3 of the Sustainable Development Goals:

- (a) Ensure that procedural accommodations are provided for persons with disabilities in all court buildings, tribunals, police stations, prisons and all places of detention;
- (b) Ensure the availability of professional and certified sign language interpreters and documents in accessible formats for all persons with disabilities, such as Braille, tactile, and Easy Read, in order to ensure their full participation in all judicial and administrative proceedings;
- (c) Ensure training programmes and awareness-raising campaigns and information for court staff, judges, prosecutors and law enforcement officials, including police and prison officials on the need to provide access to justice for persons with disabilities;
- (d) Adopt measures to support and empower persons with disabilities to work in the justice system as judges, prosecutors, lawyers, etc. with provision of all necessary support so as to enhance greater access to justice by persons with disabilities.

28. The Committee notes with concern the shortage of trained sign language interpreters for deaf persons in judicial and administrative proceedings and the lack of documents in accessible formats for blind persons, persons with intellectual and/or psycho-social disabilities in different proceedings.

29. The Committee recommends that the State Party ensure availability of sufficient number of sign language interpreters and documents in accessible formats, including Easy-Read and Brail and other accessible formats, modes and means, to all persons with disabilities in all judicial and administrative proceedings.

30. The Committee is concerned about the fact that the State party has not formulated policies to empower persons with disabilities to be part of the justice system as direct or indirect participants, such as lawyers, court officers and law enforcement officials..

31. The Committee recommends that the State party step up its efforts in order to empower persons with disabilities to be part of the justice system as direct and indirect participants such as lawyers, court officials and law enforcement agencies.

20. The Committee is concerned about:

(a) The lack of information on specific procedural, gender- and age-appropriate accommodation for persons with disabilities in judicial proceedings, in particular for deaf-blind persons;

(b) The lack of accessibility of buildings of law enforcement agencies and the judiciary;

(c) Barriers to access to justice for persons with psychosocial and/or intellectual disabilities, in particular persons in institutions and/or deprived of their legal capacity;

(d) The fact that the State party has not formulated policies to empower persons with disabilities to be part of the justice system as direct or indirect participants, such as lawyers, court officers and law enforcement officials.

21. The Committee recommends that the State party ensure full access to the judicial system for persons with disabilities, including by:

(a) Enacting appropriate legislation and a strategy to ensure the removal of all barriers to access to justice by persons with disabilities, develop guidelines and protocols to provide procedural, gender- and age-appropriate accommodations based on the free choice and preference of persons with disabilities, including providing persons with disabilities with information and communications in accessible formats;

(b) Strengthen its efforts to ensure the accessibility of buildings of law enforcement agencies and the judiciary for all persons with disabilities;

(c) Implement procedural accommodations and alternative formats of communication, paying attention to the situation of deaf-blind persons and persons with psychosocial and/or intellectual disabilities, including those living in institutions, and increase their legal awareness;

(d) Step up its efforts in order to empower persons with disabilities to be part of the justice system as direct and indirect participants such as lawyers, court officials and law enforcement agencies;

Slovenia (2018)

20. The Committee is concerned about:

(a) The lack of information on specific procedural, gender- and age-appropriate accommodation for persons with disabilities in judicial proceedings, in particular for deaf-blind persons;

(b) The lack of accessibility of buildings of law enforcement agencies and the judiciary;

(c) Barriers to access to justice for persons with psychosocial and/or intellectual disabilities, in particular persons in institutions and/or deprived of their legal capacity;

(d) The fact that the State party has not formulated policies to empower persons with disabilities to be part of the justice system as direct or indirect participants, such as lawyers, court officers and law enforcement officials.

21. The Committee recommends that the State party ensure full access to the judicial system for persons with disabilities, including by:

- (b) Strengthen its efforts to ensure the accessibility of buildings of law enforcement agencies and the judiciary for all persons with disabilities;
- (c) Implement procedural accommodations and alternative formats of communication, paying attention to the situation of deaf-blind persons and persons with psychosocial and/or intellectual disabilities, including those living in institutions, and increase their legal awareness;
- (d) Step up its efforts in order to empower persons with disabilities to be part of the justice system as direct and indirect participants such as lawyers, court officials and law enforcement agencies;
- (e) Being guided by article 13 of the Convention in the implementation of target 16.3 of the Sustainable Development Goals.

25. The Committee regrets the lack of information regarding access to justice for persons with disabilities and is concerned about the lack of accessibility of the judicial system, due to lack of knowledge about disability issues within the judicial and law enforcement sector; lack of adequate procedural accommodations; lack of judicial information in accessible formats and lack of accessibility to police and judicial premises;

26. The Committee recommends that the State party:

- (a) Take measures to implement in practice the Ministry of Justice's circular of 2016 requiring courts to facilitate trial procedures and procedural accommodation for persons with disabilities and to extend such measures to the police and prosecution services;
- (b) Adopt measures to ensure that all persons with disabilities, in particular persons with psychosocial and/or intellectual disabilities and deaf and hard of hearing persons, have access to justice, and information and communication in accessible formats such as Braille, tactile, Easy Read and sign language;
- (c) Conduct training to law enforcement personnel on the human rights-based approach to disability.

22. The Committee is concerned about the:

- (a) Non-systematic provision of accommodation in judicial proceedings for persons with intellectual and/or psychosocial disabilities, including the absence of guaranteed legal assistance in all judicial proceedings;
- (b) Reported prejudices within the judiciary, including advocates, against persons with intellectual and/or psychosocial disabilities;
- (c) Lack of legal protection for persons with disabilities in residential institutions.

23. The Committee recommends that the State party:

- (a) Ensure the provision of judicial procedural accommodation, including by means of the Easy Read format, professional sign language interpretation and the use of Braille easy-read format, for all persons with disabilities and establish related safeguards to enable the participation of persons with disabilities in all legal proceedings on an equal basis with others;
- (b) Strengthen training on the Convention for the judiciary, lawyers and law enforcement officers;
- (c) Ensure access to free legal aid for persons with disabilities living in residential institutions;
- (d) Be guided by article 13 of the Convention in the implementation of target 16.3 of the Sustainable Development Goals.

Luxembourg (2017)

26. The Committee is concerned about the lack of information on specific measures and protocols to remove barriers to access to justice and to provide procedural and gender- and age-appropriate accommodation in judicial proceedings for persons with disabilities, including written information and communications that consider the multilingual reality of the State party. It is also concerned about the lack of sufficient systematic and continuous training to members of the judiciary, members of the legal profession, prosecutors and prison officers with regard to the equal rights of persons with disabilities and human rights in general.

27. The Committee recommends that the State party take into account the multilingual reality of the State party and:

(a) Enact appropriate legislation to ensure the removal of barriers to access to justice and to guarantee the provision of procedural and gender- and age-appropriate accommodations based on the free choice and preference of persons with disabilities, and establish related safeguards to enable the participation of persons with disabilities in all legal proceedings on an equal basis with others;

(b) Provide mandatory and ongoing capacity-building programmes, including training, on the provisions of the Convention for law enforcement personnel, members of the judiciary and members of the legal profession;

(c) Take measures to address the underrepresentation of persons with disabilities in the legal profession;

(d) Adopt measures to increase the legal awareness of persons with disabilities;

26. The Committee is concerned that most court buildings in the country remain inaccessible for persons with physical impairments, and that:

(a) Persons working in the administration of justice are not sufficiently trained in the rights of persons with disabilities, including on procedural accessibility, particularly with regard to access to assistive technologies;

(b) Legal aid, registered and qualified sign-language interpretation and Braille service, as well as alternative modes of communication and other measures to provide persons with intellectual and psychosocial disabilities with access to judicial and administrative proceedings are insufficiently available.

27. The Committee recommends that the State party provide for barrier-free and non-discriminatory access to justice based on the free choice and preference of persons with disabilities, and for disability-related and age-appropriate accommodations in all legal proceedings. It recommends that the State party strengthen its efforts to ensure that:

(a) Accessibility measures, such as Braille, the provision of sign language interpretation, alternative modes of communication and Easy Read formats are available in a non-discriminatory manner at all stages of judicial and administrative proceedings;

(b) Judicial, law enforcement and notary personnel are properly trained in the application of a human rights approach to disability.

Morocco (2017)

28. The Committee is concerned about:

(a) The barriers militating against the effective participation of persons with disabilities in the judicial system, owing to a lack of knowledge about disability issues within the judicial sector, the absence of substantive procedural accommodations, the lack of legal aid for persons with disabilities and the lack of accessibility to all judicial premises, including court buildings and places of detention;

(b) The non-availability of judicial information in accessible formats for persons with disabilities, such as Braille, Easy Read and sign language.

29. The Committee recommends that the State party:

(a) Adopt measures to ensure that all persons with disabilities, in particular persons with psychosocial and/or intellectual disabilities and deaf and hard-of-hearing persons, have access to justice and information and communication in accessible formats, such as Braille, tactile formats, Easy Read and sign language;

(b) Provide, within the judicial sector, effective procedural accommodations for persons with disabilities, according to gender and age;

(c) Ensure continuous training programmes and awareness-raising campaigns and information for court staff, judges, prosecutors and law enforcement officials, including police and prison officials, on the need to provide persons with disabilities with access to justice;

(d) Take the measures necessary to support and empower persons with disabilities to work in the justice system as, for example, judges and prosecutors, with the provision of all necessary support, so as to enhance greater access to justice by persons with disabilities.

32. The Committee is concerned that no procedural accommodations have yet been made to ensure effective access to justice for all persons with disabilities. It is also concerned about the barriers, especially of a legal nature, that prevent persons whose legal capacity has been revoked or who live in institutions from effectively participating in legal proceedings.

33. The Committee recommends that the State party:

(a) Adopt, in line with the Convention, the action plan on access to justice for persons with disabilities, as well as the necessary legal, administrative and judicial measures to eliminate all restrictions on the effective participation of persons with disabilities in all stages of the judicial process;

(b) Ensure that women with disabilities have access to justice in practice;

(c) Make procedural adjustments, including the provision of personal or intermediary assistance, to ensure that persons with disabilities can effectively participate in the various aspects of legal proceedings;

(d) Step up efforts to ensure that sign language interpreters are present during judicial proceedings;

(e) Take steps to empower persons with disabilities with a view to their participating as professionals in the justice system;

(f) Intensify efforts to provide training on the Convention and the Optional Protocol thereto for justice officials, especially in rural areas and indigenous regions;

(g) Take into account article 13 of the Convention in its implementation of target 16.3 of the Sustainable Development Goals.

32. The Committee is concerned about:

(a) The low level of awareness among the judiciary and law enforcement officials about the human rights of persons with disabilities;

(b) Reports of persons with psychosocial and/or intellectual disabilities who do not receive appropriate support in exercising their legal capacity and access to justice;

(c) The barriers faced by persons with disabilities in accessing civil legal aid as a consequence of the Legal Aid, Sentencing and Punishment of Offenders Act 2012 in England and Wales and the introduction of fees for employment tribunals in the State party;

(d) The fact that the regulations exclude persons with hearing impairments from participation in jury proceedings, and that personal assistants/interpreters are not deemed to constitute procedural accommodation.

33. The Committee recommends that the State party, in close collaboration with organizations of persons with disabilities:

(a) Develop and implement capacity-building programmes among the judiciary and law enforcement personnel, including judges, prosecutors, police officers and prison staff, about the rights of persons with disabilities;

(b) Design and implement a decision-making regime with guidelines and appropriate resources, focusing on respecting the will and preferences of persons with disabilities, particularly persons with intellectual and/or psychosocial disabilities, in court proceedings;

(c) Provide free or affordable legal aid for persons with disabilities in all areas of law and remove fees to access courts and employment tribunals, bearing in mind the Supreme Court ruling of 26 July 2017 regarding the Employment Tribunal's fees (R (on the application of UNISON) (Appellant) v. Lord Chancellor (Respondent));

(d) Ensure that all persons with disabilities enjoy the right and are provided with adequate procedural accommodation within the justice system, and enable in particular deaf persons through the use of sign language interpreters, to fully and equally participate as jurors in court proceedings;

(e) Take measures to empower persons with disabilities to work in the justice system as judges, prosecutors or in other positions, with the provision of all necessary support.

21. The Committee is concerned about the very limited accessibility of most of the State party's courts, and administrative and notary buildings. It is also concerned about the lack of legal safeguards to ensure the right to a fair trial, due process and the safe and full participation of persons with disabilities, especially persons with psychosocial and/or intellectual disabilities, in all judicial proceedings, including through the provision of procedural and gender- and age-appropriate accommodation, in particular sign language interpretation for persons with hearing impairment and accessible formats of legal and judicial information and communication for persons with visual impairment. It is further concerned about the insufficient availability of accessible and affordable legal services for persons with disabilities.

22. The Committee recommends that the State party ensure the provision of procedural and gender- and age-appropriate accommodation on the basis of the free choice and preference of persons with disabilities, and establish related safeguards to enable the participation of persons with disabilities in all legal proceedings on an equal basis with others. It also recommends that the State party take measures to increase training and capacity-building programmes on the Convention for law enforcement personnel, and for persons with disabilities to increase their legal awareness, and that it ensure that persons with disabilities have access to free legal aid. The Committee recommends that the State party be guided by article 13 of the Convention in its implementation of target 16.3 of the Sustainable Development Goals.

24. The Committee is concerned that there is a lack of information on specific and available measures, as well as transparent protocols to provide procedural and age- appropriate accommodation in judicial proceedings, including the notary-related services.

25. The Committee recommends that the State party ensure transparent, barrier- free and non-discriminatory access to justice based on the free choice and preference of persons with disabilities. It also recommends that the State party strengthen efforts to provide adequate training on the rights of persons with disabilities to judicial and law enforcement personnel. The Committee further recommends that the State party ensure availability of non-discriminatory access to assistive technologies and ensure registered and qualified sign language interpreters, and the provision of Braille and other alternative formats, in judicial proceedings.

29. The Committee observes that administration of justice and the establishment and maintenance of penitentiaries fall under the competency of federal, provincial and territorial levels of administration. It takes note of the legal obligation to provide sign language interpretation throughout judicial and/or administrative proceedings. However, the Committee is concerned about:

(a) The lack of accommodation procedures that persons with psychosocial and/or intellectual disabilities who face difficulties in understanding and filling out forms contend with when attempting to bring claims for the protection of their rights;

(b) The absence of information about procedural and age-appropriate accommodation available for women and children with disabilities, including indigenous women, at all levels of the justice system;

(c) The absence of funding at the federal, provincial and territorial levels to support persons with disabilities in filing cases of human rights violations.

30. The Committee recommends that the State party:

- (a) Provide guidance and training to the judiciary at all levels in order to implement the Canadian Victims Bill of Rights Act, in particular its provisions for measures to facilitate the testimony of persons with psychosocial and/or intellectual disabilities during judicial proceedings, paying particular attention to persons with disabilities who seek redress;
- (b) Introduce additional criteria to the provision of accessibility in the justice sector, ensuring that the options available comprise Braille, sign language interpretation, alternative modes of communication and easy-read versions of documents, free of charge for all persons with disabilities, in particular persons with psychosocial and/or intellectual disabilities;
- (c) Set up progress indicators for and periodic assessments of the measures to provide age-appropriate and gender-sensitive accommodation for persons with disabilities at the federal, provincial and territorial levels, and ensure that lawyer associations, civil society organizations working on human rights and representative organizations of persons with disabilities are entitled to provide input on such accommodation;
- (d) Introduce effective training of personnel in the justice, police and prison systems on the rights enshrined in the Convention.

35. The Committee notes with concern that the justice system is largely inaccessible and that personnel in the judicial and law enforcement sectors are not adequately trained on the Convention.

36. The Committee recommends that the State party take immediate steps to ensure accessibility and procedural accommodation, including high quality sign language interpretation and information in easy-to-read and Braille formats in line with the Sustainable Development Goals, especially target 16.3. The Committee also recommends that the State party provide personnel in the judicial and law enforcement sectors, with mandatory periodic education and training on the universality of human rights for all persons with disabilities, with a particular focus on marriage, family, parenthood and relationship issues, including the right to retain fertility and found and foster a family as outlined in article 23 of the Convention.

31. Al Comité le preocupa que no se hayan implementado aún ajustes de procedimiento que hagan efectivo el acceso a la justicia para todas las personas con discapacidad. Igualmente le preocupa la existencia de barreras, particularmente normativas, así como la falta de interpretación en lengua de señas, para que las personas que han sido declaradas interdictas o que se encuentren institucionalizadas puedan desempeñarse efectivamente durante los procesos judiciales.

32. El Comité urge al Estado parte a que asigne suficientes recursos humanos y económicos para la implementación del Plan de Acción de Acceso a la Justicia de las Personas con Discapacidad desde la perspectiva de la Convención. Le recomienda también que adopte las medidas legislativas, administrativas y judiciales necesarias para eliminar toda restricción a las personas con discapacidad para actuar efectivamente en cualquier proceso. También le recomienda realizar ajustes de procedimiento, incluyendo la asistencia personal o intermediaria, para garantizar el efectivo desempeño de las personas con discapacidad en las distintas funciones dentro de los procesos judiciales. Asimismo, el Comité recomienda que el Estado parte asigne recursos humanos y financieros suficientes y específicos para que la Fiscalía Especial de los Derechos Humanos y la Fiscalía Especial de la Protección a la Mujer lleven a cabo su mandato y acudan a las mujeres con discapacidad si son abusadas sexualmente.

33. Preocupa al Comité el escaso acceso a la justicia de las personas con discapacidad, especialmente de aquellas que viven en zonas rurales y comunidades indígenas y afrohondureñas, las barreras de accesibilidad de todo tipo y la falta de ajustes procesales para ellas. Además le preocupa que los operadores de justicia no conozcan suficientemente la Convención y que, por tanto, no actúen conforme a la misma.

28. The Committee observes that the State party provides legal representation for persons with disabilities in civil and criminal proceedings. However, the Committee is concerned about:

- (a) The denial of access to justice to persons deprived of their legal capacity;
- (b) The absence of procedural and age-appropriate accommodations that allow persons with disabilities themselves to exercise an active role as direct and indirect participants in all legal procedures, including through accessible information; and
- (c) The absence of information about training for judges and other personnel including the police and prison staff, concerning the rights of persons with disabilities.

29. The Committee recommends that the State party:

- (a) Review its legislation with the aim to enable persons with disabilities to participate effectively in any type of legal proceedings, including exercising their roles as victims, defendants, and witnesses;
- (b) Develop protocols at the judiciary aimed at identifying procedural, gender-sensitive, and age-appropriate accommodations for persons with disabilities including provision of documents on legislation and court proceedings through sign language interpretation, braille, easy-read and other accessible formats, modes and means of communication; and
- (c) Develop a capacity-building strategy within the judicial branch on the rights of persons with disabilities, targeting lawyers, magistrates, judges, prison staff and the Police.

27. The Committee notes with concern that article 3 of the Code of Criminal Procedure (Law No. 9 of 1961) restricts persons with intellectual and/or psychosocial disabilities from filing a complaint directly before the judiciary. The Committee is concerned about the shortage of trained professional and certified sign language interpreters to translate administrative and judicial proceedings for deaf persons and the unavailability of documents in accessible formats to enable blind persons and persons with intellectual and/or psychosocial disabilities to participate in proceedings.

28. The Committee recommends that the State party, taking into account article 13 of the Convention and target 16.3 of the Sustainable Development Goals:

- (a) Amend, in a timely manner, the Code of Criminal Procedure to remove all provisions that restrict access to courts by persons with disabilities;
- (b) Ensure the availability of professional and certified sign language interpreters and documents in accessible formats for all persons with disabilities in order to ensure their full participation in all judicial and administrative proceedings.

26. The Committee is concerned about the lack of information on specific measures and protocols to provide procedural, gender and age-appropriate accommodation in judicial proceedings for persons with disabilities, including the provision of sign-language interpretation for deaf persons and accessible formats for communication for deaf-blind persons and persons with psychosocial and/or intellectual disabilities. It notes with concern:

- (a) The prejudices against persons with disabilities, particularly those with psychosocial and/or intellectual disabilities;
- (b) The lack of access to free legal aid for persons with disabilities, particularly for those still living in institutions;
- (c) The lack of access to justice of women with disabilities in criminal proceedings related to gender-based violence.

27. The Committee recommends that the State party:

- (a) Ensure the provision of procedural, gender and age-appropriate accommodations based on the free choice and preference of persons with disabilities and establish related safeguards to enable the participation of persons with disabilities in all legal proceedings on an equal basis with others;
- (b) Provide training and capacity-building programmes on the Convention for law enforcement personnel and for persons with disabilities, to increase their legal awareness;
- (c) Ensure access to free legal aid, including for persons with disabilities still living in institutions;
- (d) Be guided by article 13 of the Convention in the implementation of target 16.3 of the Sustainable Development Goals.

Bolivia (2016)

29. The Committee is concerned that there are restrictions on persons with disabilities – no right to represent themselves, for example – that prevent them from enjoying full access to justice; it is particularly concerned that these restrictions are imposed on those who need the most support.

30. The Committee urges the State party to repeal any legal provision that limits access to justice for persons with disabilities, and recommends that it implement support systems for persons with disabilities who need them.

31. The Committee is concerned that judicial bodies do not make procedural adjustments when persons with disabilities are involved in proceedings. It is also concerned that they do not have sign language interpreters or use Braille transcription or other accessible formats and modes of information and communication.

32. The Committee recommends that the State party take steps to put in place the support necessary to ensure access to justice for persons with disabilities, notably by implementing procedural adjustments and measures to ensure the accessibility of facilities, information and communication.

33. The Committee is concerned that no in-service training on the rights of persons with disabilities is provided for judicial personnel, leading to insufficient awareness of the rights of persons with disabilities and violation of their procedural guarantees and other fundamental rights.

34. The Committee urges the State party to set up in-service training programmes on the rights of persons with disabilities for judicial personnel, the police, prison personnel and other justice officials. It also recommends that the State party be guided by article 13 of the Convention in its efforts to achieve target 16.3 of the Sustainable Development Goals.

34. The Committee is concerned that the State party's General Code of Procedure bars persons with disabilities from appearing as witnesses, that procedural accommodations for persons with disabilities involved in judicial proceedings are not provided, and that accessibility aids, such as the use of Braille, sign language, or easy-to-read materials, are not available.

35. The Committee recommends that the State party:

- (a) Repeal article 210 of the General Code of Procedure;
- (b) Adopt procedural accommodations to facilitate the participation of persons with disabilities in any role and stage in judicial proceedings;
- (c) Ensure the accessibility of physical facilities, materials, information and communications throughout the justice system, including the availability of guide-interpreters, sign-language interpreters, and materials in easy-to-read and electronic format;
- (d) Strengthen training programmes on the rights of persons with disabilities for magistrates, judges, court, police, security and prison personnel and public defenders;
- (e) Be guided by article 13 of the Convention in pursuing target 16.3 of the Sustainable Development Goals.

29. The Committee is concerned that the training of justice staff, lawyers, court staff and the police on the rights of persons with disabilities is neither compulsory nor carried out regularly. It is also concerned that procedural accommodation is not effectively available, in law and in practice.

30. The Committee recommends that the State party ensure compulsory and regular training of justice and police staff on the rights of persons with disabilities. It also recommends that procedural accommodation be effectively available at all stages of investigations and court proceedings. It further recommends that the State party take into account article 13 of the Convention, while implementing target 16.3 of the Sustainable Development Goals.

35. The Committee is concerned about the limited access to justice enjoyed by persons with disabilities, particularly those living in rural areas and indigenous communities, the various barriers to accessibility and the lack of procedural accommodations provided for them. It is also concerned that justice officials are not sufficiently familiar with the Convention and therefore do not act in accordance with it.

36. The Committee recommends that the State party adopt all necessary measures to combat the discrimination faced by persons with disabilities with respect to access to justice, ensure that the legal system is fully accessible and provide comprehensive reasonable and procedural accommodations. The Committee also recommends that the State party step up its efforts to provide training on the Convention for justice officials, especially in rural areas and remote communities. The Committee recommends that the State party be guided by article 13 of the Convention in its implementation of target 16.3 of the Sustainable Development Goals.

37. The Committee notes with concern that, within the legal system of the State party, the credibility of the accounts of victims with disabilities, especially women and girls, tends to be called into question, which leads to cases not being properly investigated or recorded.

38. The Committee recommends that the State party, through the judiciary, provide adequate training and appropriate human resources to the special courts set up to combat femicide and other forms of violence against women and to the free legal aid offices for women who are victims of violence, in order to ensure that women and girls with disabilities who suffer violence or abuse receive proper attention.

29. The Committee is concerned with the lack of anti-discrimination training given to personnel in the judicial and law enforcement sectors with regard to equal rights in all aspects of marriage and family life for persons with disabilities and on combating negative stereotyping.

30. The Committee recommends that the State party provide training to personnel in the judicial and law enforcement sectors on the right of all persons with disabilities to marriage, family, parenthood and relationships, on an equal basis with others, including their right to retain fertility and found a family, as outlined in article 23 of the Convention.

31. The Committee is concerned at the inaccessibility of the justice system with regard to information and communications.

32. The Committee recommends that the State party ensure the provision of full procedural accommodations, including professional sign language interpretation, and information in easy-to-read and Braille formats. It also recommends that the State party take into account article 13 of the Convention while implementing target 16.3 of the Sustainable Development Goals.

25. The Committee is concerned:

(a) That judicial officials are unaware of the rights of persons with disabilities and that the justice sector has no programmes specifically designed to provide assistance to persons with disabilities;

(b) At the lack of accessibility within the justice system, including in respect of legal aid and assistance, sign language interpreters in court rooms and procedural accommodations, despite the issuance of Ministerial Decree No. 619 of 2015;

(c) At the lack of information about court cases initiated by persons with disabilities;

(d) That no measures have been taken to address the challenges faced by women, especially women who are not citizens of the State party, in accessing justice when they report having experienced violence.

26. The Committee recommends that the State party:

(a) Train court staff, judges, police officers and prison staff to uphold the rights of persons with disabilities, including the right to a fair trial, and the obligation to provide procedural accommodation;

(b) Take measures to ensure in practice the physical and information- and communication-related accessibility to all judicial facilities, for example through the provision of professional sign language interpreters and the use of Braille, among other procedural accommodations;

(c) Take measures to collect quantitative and qualitative data about court cases initiated by persons with disabilities;

(d) Take measures to address the challenges faced by women, especially women who are not citizens of the State party, in accessing justice when they report having experienced violence;

(e) Be guided by article 13 of the Convention in the implementation of target 16.3 of the Sustainable Development Goals.

29. Al Comité le preocupa que no se hayan implementado aún ajustes de procedimiento que hagan efectivo el acceso a la justicia para todas las personas con discapacidad. Igualmente le preocupa la existencia de barreras, particularmente normativas, para que las personas que han sido declaradas interdictas o que se encuentren institucionalizadas puedan desempeñarse efectivamente durante los procesos judiciales.

30. El Comité insta al Estado parte a que asigne suficientes recursos humanos y económicos para la implementación del Plan de Acción de Acceso a la Justicia de las Personas con Discapacidad desde la perspectiva de la Convención. Le recomienda también que adopte las medidas legislativas, administrativas y judiciales necesarias para eliminar toda restricción a las personas con discapacidad para actuar efectivamente en cualquier proceso. También le recomienda realizar los ajustes de procedimiento incluyendo la asistencia humana o intermediaria, particularmente intérpretes de lenguas de señas, para garantizar el efectivo desempeño de las personas con discapacidad en las distintas funciones dentro de los procesos judiciales. El Comité recomienda al Estado parte que preste atención a los vínculos entre el artículo 13 de la Convención y la meta 16.3 de los Objetivos de Desarrollo Sostenible, en cuanto a garantizar el acceso a la justicia para todos.

31. El Comité expresa su preocupación por los escasos avances para implementar las Observaciones realizadas por el Comité de los Derechos del Niño en relación con la administración de la justicia juvenil, lo que tiene una especial incidencia en jóvenes con discapacidad psicosocial e intelectual. Le preocupa especialmente que el Código de la Niñez y la Adolescencia no esté en consonancia con el respeto a los derechos humanos establecidos en la Convención sobre los Derechos de las Personas con Discapacidad y que, por ese motivo, los jóvenes con discapacidad no reciban la adecuada consideración.

27. Al Comité le preocupa que no se hayan implementado aún ajustes de procedimiento que hagan efectivo el acceso a la justicia a todas las personas con discapacidad. Igualmente le preocupa la existencia de barreras, particularmente normativas, para que las personas que han sido declaradas interdictas o se encuentren institucionalizadas puedan desempeñarse efectivamente durante los procesos judiciales.

28. El Comité recomienda al Estado parte que adopte las medidas legislativas, administrativas y judiciales necesarias para eliminar toda restricción a la capacidad de las personas con discapacidad para actuar efectivamente en cualquier proceso. También le recomienda que proporcione los ajustes de procedimiento y razonables, incluyendo la asistencia personal o intermediaria, para garantizar el efectivo desempeño de las personas con discapacidad en las distintas funciones dentro de los procesos judiciales.

27. The Committee is concerned that the training courses available to judicial and law enforcement personnel do not cover all barriers faced by persons with disabilities who wish to gain access to the justice system and are insufficient in scope and number.

28. The Committee recommends that the State party, in close collaboration with organizations of persons with disabilities, develop and implement a national plan of action to build the capacity of judicial and law enforcement personnel, including judges, prosecutors, police officers and prison staff, to enhance their knowledge of the rights of persons with disabilities and to ensure the provision of procedural and age- appropriate accommodation in all legal procedures and of reasonable accommodation in prisons.

30. The Committee is concerned about the limited access to justice for persons with disabilities and the lack of procedural accommodations made for them in the State party.

31. The Committee recommends that the State party adopt all necessary measures to combat the discrimination that persons with disabilities face in accessing justice, making sure that full procedural accommodations are made and funds are allocated to train legal system personnel on the Convention.

23. The Committee is concerned about the lack of information on specific measures and protocols to provide procedural, gender and age appropriate accommodation in judicial proceedings, including the provision of sign-language interpretation for deaf persons, and of accessible formats of communication for deaf-blind persons, persons with intellectual disabilities and persons with psychosocial disabilities, particularly in civil cases. The Committee is also concerned that women with disabilities are not protected against sexual violence on equal basis with others according to the Criminal Code articles 178 and 179.

24. The Committee recommends that the State party take further steps to ensure barrier-free and non-discriminatory access to justice through the provision of procedural and age appropriate accommodation based on persons with disabilities' free choice and preference, and establish related safeguards. The Committee recommends the State party to adopt measures to provide deaf persons access to civil proceedings on an equal basis with others. The Committee recommends that the State party review its Criminal Code to ensure that procedures, sanctions and reparations for victims with disabilities are harmonized with the Convention.

40. The Committee is concerned about the lack of procedural accommodation and reasonable accommodation in the justice and law enforcement sector, especially with regard to persons with intellectual disabilities.

41. The Committee recommends that the State party amend procedural rules to ensure that persons with intellectual disabilities are provided with procedural accommodation from the outset. It also recommends that the State party make legal aid available to persons with disabilities so that they have access to justice on an equal basis with others.

42. The Committee further recommends that the State party provide mandatory training to all personnel in the justice, administration and law enforcement sectors on:

- (a) The rights enshrined in the Convention, including participation on an equal basis with others regardless of legal capacity status;
- (b) Procedural accommodation in the legal process;
- (c) Reasonable accommodation;
- (d) The combating of harmful gender and disability stereotypes.

Thailand (2016)

27. The Committee is concerned at the lack of accessibility to the justice system, including physical access, legal aid, sign language interpreters in the courtroom, and procedural accommodation, particularly in rural areas. The Committee is also concerned that section 95 of the Civil Procedure Code can limit persons with disabilities from having their testimony accepted on an equal basis with others.

28. The Committee recommends that the State party implement physical, informational and communicational accessibility, including through the provision of professional sign language interpreters, the use of Braille and other procedural accommodation; ensure the training of court personnel, judges, police officers and prison staff so as to uphold the rights of persons with disabilities, including the right to a fair trial, and amend the Civil Procedure Code to ensure the right to testify on an equal basis with others.

24. The Committee is concerned about barriers faced by persons with disabilities in the judicial system as a result of lack of reasonable accommodation and accessibility to court buildings, and prejudices, poverty and lack of general knowledge about disability in the justice sector.

25. The Committee recommends that the State party:

- (a) Adopt measures to ensure that all persons with disabilities have access to justice, including by establishing free legal aid for persons with disabilities who claim their rights, and information and communication in accessible formats, including in Braille, tactile, augmentative and alternative formats, and Ugandan Sign Language;
- (b) Ensure that the judiciary provides procedural accommodation according to gender and age for persons with disabilities;
- (c) Conduct regular training programmes and awareness-raising campaigns and information for court staff, judges, prosecutors and law enforcement agents including police and prison officials, on the duty to provide access to justice for persons with disabilities on an equal basis with others, in consultation with organizations of persons with disabilities.

26. The Committee is concerned at the inaccessibility of judicial facilities. It is also concerned about the lack of measures to ensure procedural gender-sensitive and age-appropriate accommodations related to persons with disabilities.

27. The Committee recommends the State party to introduce a national plan to ensure accessibility of judicial facilities. It also recommends to take measures to ensure that legal proceedings include gender-sensitive and age-appropriate accommodations for persons with disabilities. Furthermore, the Committee recommends the introduction of effective training of personnel in the justice, police and prison systems on the rights enshrined in the Convention.

38. The Committee is concerned about the discrimination persons with disabilities face in accessing justice due to lack of procedural accommodation in European Union Member States.

39. The Committee recommends that the European Union take appropriate action to combat discrimination persons with disabilities face in accessing justice by providing full procedural accommodation within its Member States, and the provision of funding for training of justice personnel on the Convention.

EU Institutions compliance with the Convention (as public administrations)

80. The Committee is concerned about the lack of access to justice for persons with disabilities in European courts.

81. The Committee recommends that the European Union guarantee full access to justice and eliminate all barriers, physical, procedural, including those relating to legal capacity, at European courts.

30. The Committee is concerned at the lack of accessibility to the justice system, including physical access, legal aid and sign language interpreters in court rooms as well as procedural accommodations.

31. The Committee recommends that the State party implement physical, informational and communicational accessibility, such as the provision of professional sign language interpreters, Braille and other procedural accommodations, and the training of court staff, judges, police and prison staff to uphold the rights of persons with disabilities including the right to a fair trial.

25. The Committee is concerned about the barriers that hinder persons with disabilities access to justice in particular due to the absence of reasonable accommodation measures throughout the court proceedings that affect in particular women with disabilities, the lack of information available in accessible formats, additional costs to access services of sign language interpretation, and lack of free legal aid. It is also concerned about the actual obstacles in the prosecution of cases where persons with disabilities have been witnesses or victims. It is further concerned about the legal provisions that restrain the validity of corroborated evidence of persons with intellectual and/or psychosocial disabilities.

26. The Committee recommends that the State party:

(a) Adopt measures to ensure that all persons with disabilities have access to justice, including by establishing free legal aid for persons with disabilities who claim their rights, and information and communication in accessible formats, including the Kenyan sign language;

(b) Define explicitly in legal instruments the duty of the judiciary to provide procedural accommodations for persons with disabilities in accordance with article 13 of the Convention; and

23. The Committee regrets the lack of clear information on the results of conciliation measures and the redress provided to the victims. The Committee is also concerned that no information was provided on actions taken to ensure accountability for violations of the rights of persons with disabilities.

24. The Committee recommends that the State party provide for disability-related and age-appropriate accommodations in all legal proceedings. The State party should ensure that accessibility measures such as braille, provision of sign language interpretation, alternative modes of communication, easy to read format, and enforcement measures are available and free of charge in all courts and that personnel in the justice and prison system are properly trained on the application of human rights standards specifically for persons with disabilities.

25. The Committee is concerned that judicial officials are unaware of the rights of persons with disabilities and that the justice sector has no programmes specifically designed to provide assistance to persons with disabilities. The Committee is also concerned at the lack of accessibility to the justice system, including legal aid and assistance, sign language interpreters in court rooms, as well as procedural accommodations.

26. The Committee recommends that the State party implement the training of court staff, judges, police and prison staff to uphold the rights of persons with disabilities including the right to a fair trial and the obligation to provide reasonable accommodation. It also recommends that the State party implement measures to ensure physical, informational and communicational accessibility of all judicial facilities, such as the provision of professional sign language interpreters, Braille and other procedural accommodations.

28. The Committee notes with concern that most court buildings in the country remain inaccessible for persons with physical impairments. It is also concerned that persons working in administration of justice are not trained on the rights of persons with disabilities, including on reasonable accommodation and procedural accessibility. The Committee regrets the lack of information on availability of legal aid, sign language interpretation and other measures to provide persons with intellectual and psycho-social disabilities to judicial and administrative proceedings.

29. The Committee urges the State party to ensure equal access to judicial and administrative proceedings to all persons with disabilities, including access to court buildings to persons with physical impairments and to documents in accessible formats. . It further recommends training of judges, police, penitentiary system officials and other personnel in the justice system on the rights enshrined in the Convention on the Rights of Persons with Disabilities.

25. The Committee is concerned that current legislation denies access to justice to persons deprived of legal capacity, and that the justice system is not sufficiently accessible.

26. The Committee recommends the State party to:

- (a) Take immediate measures to repeal laws permitting substituted decision making which restrict access to courts and ensure all persons with disabilities can access justice by amending legislation to enable supported decision making,
- (b) Provide accessible information and communication, including sign language interpreters, legal aid, physical access to the courts, and other procedural accommodations;
- (c) Ensure effective training of personnel in the justice and prison system on the application of human rights standards specifically for persons with disabilities, including accessibility, procedural accommodations and reasonable accommodation.

Czech Republic (2015)

24. The Committee notes with concern the lack of access for blind persons, persons with intellectual and psycho-social disabilities to judicial and administrative proceedings.

25. The Committee urges the State party to ensure availability of documents in accessible formats to all persons with disabilities who need them. It further recommends training of judges and other personnel in the justice system on the rights enshrined in the Convention on the Rights of Persons with Disabilities.

24. The Committee is concerned that there is no requirement under the State party's administrative procedures for judicial authorities to make procedural accommodations, such as providing sign language interpretation, when persons with disabilities take part in proceedings. It also notes with concern the shortage of training courses for judicial personnel on the content and approach of the Convention.

25. The Committee recommends that the State party review its administrative and judicial rules and procedures with a view to adapting them and ensuring access to justice for persons with disabilities, including the guarantee of interpretation in Dominican Sign Language, the use of augmentative and alternative modes of communication and full accessibility to the physical environment, information and communication. It also recommends the introduction of ongoing programmes to train judges, prosecutors and other judicial personnel in the rights of persons with disabilities.

27. The Committee is concerned about: a) the lack of structures and procedural accommodation within the justice sector specifically designed to provide assistance to persons with disabilities, particularly girls who are victims of violence and abuse; b) the inaccessibility of judicial facilities and lack of understanding of legal professionals with regard to access to justice; c) the lack of implementation and enforcement by the judiciary of the standards of the Convention in the national legal system and within court rulings.

28. The Committee recommends that the State party:

- (a) Introduce targeted measures to improve the physical and communicative accessibility of courts, judicial authorities and other bodies involved in administering the law;
- (b) Introduce legislative reforms so that the national criminal, civil, labour and administrative procedures include the requirement to ensure procedural accommodations for persons with disabilities, taking into particular account persons with intellectual disabilities, or psychosocial disabilities, deafblind persons, and children with disabilities;
- (c) Ensure effective training of personnel in the justice, police and prison system on the application of human rights standards to promote and protect the rights of persons with disabilities.

23. The Committee is concerned about the lack of explicit provisions ensuring procedural accommodation in situations necessary for guaranteeing access to justice for persons with disabilities. This includes the insufficiency of sign language, Braille and appropriate training for the judicial, legal and law enforcement professionals.

24. The Committee recommends that the State party adopt legal measures to implement the principle of procedural accommodation, including measures to ensure that persons with disabilities would not be discriminated on account of physical, or language (when sign language or Braille is required), or due to the lack of appropriate training of legal profession, police and prison officers, with special attention to women with disabilities.

27. The Committee expresses its concern about the lack of information on specific measures and protocols, other than those included in the Code of Criminal Procedures, to provide reasonable accommodation in judicial proceedings, including the provision of sign language interpretation for deaf or “mute” persons, and accessible formats of communication for deafblind persons, persons with intellectual disabilities, and persons with psychosocial disabilities, among others, particularly in civil cases.

28. The Committee recommends that the State party facilitate full barrier-free and non-discriminatory access to the justice system for persons with disabilities by providing reasonable accommodation with safeguards. The State party should also review accordingly the value of the testimony of persons with disabilities, including deaf persons, deafblind persons, persons with intellectual disabilities and persons with psychosocial disabilities.

23. The Committee notes that, in New Zealand, persons who acquire a disability through injury only have recourse to compensation via the Accident Compensation Corporation. The Committee notes that persons who have suffered injuries are concerned over the lack of access to justice to pursue their claims. There is concern about the limited amount of legal aid funding that is available and about the discretionary basis upon which legal costs are awarded. There is also concern that the Accident Compensation Corporation machinery lacks a human rights focus.

24. The Committee recommends that the State party examine the processes for the assessing of compensation by the Accident Compensation Corporation to ensure that adequate legal aid is available and that its processes are fully accessible to all claimants, and finally to ensure that this mechanism has a human rights focus.

25. The Committee notes that the Government is considering the establishment of an accident compensation tribunal to replace appeals to the District Court. The Committee is concerned that there has been insufficient consultation with persons who have acquired disabilities through injury, and with their representative organizations, about the establishment and operation of this tribunal.

26. The Committee recommends that organizations representing persons with disabilities be consulted about the proposal to establish an accident compensation tribunal. The Committee also recommends that the tribunal adopt a flexible approach to the admission of evidence, and that those who lack the means should be given adequate legal aid to ensure full access to the tribunal.

27. The Committee is concerned that no specific training of judges by the Institute of Judicial Studies has been given either on the Convention or on the requirement that justice be accessible to all persons with disabilities, including those with intellectual and those with psychosocial disabilities.

28. The Committee recommends that the Institute of Judicial Studies, in conjunction with disabled persons' organizations, run training programmes on the Convention and on the rights of persons with disabilities who come before New Zealand courts and tribunals.

23. The Committee is concerned about the lack of effective implementation of article 26 of the Anti-Discrimination against and Remedies for Persons with Disabilities Act, which requires that the Government ensure reasonable accommodation during judicial procedures for persons with disabilities. It is also concerned that judicial personnel lack sufficient awareness of the rights of persons with disabilities. The Committee notes the existence of the Guidelines for Judicial Assistance for Persons with Disabilities published by the Korean Supreme Court in 2013.

24. The Committee recommends that the State party increase its efforts to ensure the effective implementation of article 26 of the Anti-Discrimination against and Remedies for Persons with Disabilities Act. It further recommends that standard modules on working with persons with disabilities, on the provision of reasonable accommodation, in particular procedural and age-appropriate, as well as gender-sensitive, accommodations, and on the guarantee of access to justice be incorporated into training programmes for police officers, prison staff, lawyers, the judiciary and court personnel. It is recommended that the Guidelines for Judicial Assistance for Persons with Disabilities, published by the Korean Supreme Court, be legally binding and implemented effectively.

26. The Committee is concerned that judicial officials are unaware of the rights of persons with disabilities provided for in national and international instruments, that the justice sector has no programmes specifically designed to provide assistance to persons with disabilities and at the inaccessibility of judicial facilities. The Committee is concerned that there is no requirement under the criminal, civil, labour and administrative procedures in Ecuador for judicial authorities to make procedural accommodations when persons with disabilities take part in proceedings.

27. The Committee recommends that the State party: (a) Adapt training programmes for judicial personnel to ensure that they cover the rights of persons with disabilities included in national and international human rights instruments; (b) Ensure that the Council of the Judiciary implement a national adaptation plan so that there is adequate accessibility to judicial facilities both in terms of both their architecture and communications and that the plan includes the requirement to provide Ecuadorian sign-language interpreters and easy-read facilities for the participation of deaf persons and persons with intellectual disabilities, respectively; (c) Ensure that the legislature introduce legislative reforms so that the national criminal, civil, labour and administrative procedures include the requirement to make procedural accommodations for persons with disabilities, thereby enabling their access to justice on an equal basis with others.

25. The Committee is concerned at the limited access to justice of persons with disabilities from indigenous communities, of women and girls with disabilities who are the victims of violence and abuse, of persons with disabilities living in institutions and of children with disabilities.

26. The Committee recommends that the State party:

- (a) Adopt priority corrective measures to ensure that the groups of persons with disabilities who are particularly discriminated against also have access to justice;
- (b) Provide legal aid to persons with disabilities who live in poverty or in institutions;
- (c) Ensure that all children with disabilities have access to justice and may express their opinion in the course of the determination of the best interests of the child, through procedural accommodations appropriate to their age and specific disability-related needs.

25. The Committee is concerned that measures on access to justice have been confined to physical accessibility, that care manuals and protocols have not been produced and that training for persons involved in the administration of justice has been inadequate and does not include all aspects of the rights of persons with disabilities.

26. The Committee recommends that the State party review its administrative and judicial rules and procedures with a view to adapting them and ensuring access to justice for persons with disabilities, including the guarantee of interpretation in Costa Rican sign language, the use of augmentative and alternative modes of communication and full accessibility to the physical environment, transport and communication.

27. The Committee is concerned that persons with disabilities undergoing criminal proceedings have no guarantees of due process adapted to their disability.

28. The Committee urges the State party to review judicial proceedings in criminal cases to ensure that all proceedings involving persons with disabilities are subject to due process safeguards. The Committee recommends that the State party amend its criminal legislation in order to make penalties applicable to persons with disabilities subject to the same guarantees and conditions as those applicable to any other person who is the subject of criminal proceedings, making provision as necessary for reasonable accommodation and procedural adjustments.

27. The Committee is concerned at the lack of training for judicial officers, legal practitioners and court staff on ensuring access to justice for persons with disabilities, as well as lack of guidance on how to access justice for persons with disabilities. It is further concerned that access to sign language interpreters or use of Augmentative and Alternative Modes of Communication (AAC) is not supported in all of the States and Territories.

28. The Committee recommends that standard and compulsory modules on working with persons with disabilities be incorporated into training programs for police, prison officers, lawyers, judicial officers and court staff. It further recommends that legislation and policy across States and Territories be amended to ensure access to justice for persons with disabilities in line with article 13.

29. The Committee further urges the State party to ensure that persons with psychosocial disabilities are ensured equal substantive and procedural guarantees as others in the context of criminal proceedings and in particular to ensure that no diversion programs are implemented that transfer individuals to mental health commitment regimes or that require the individual to participate in mental health services rather than providing such services on the basis of the individual's free and informed consent.

30. The Committee further recommends the State party to ensure that all persons with disabilities who are accused of crimes and are currently detained in jails and institutions without a trial are promptly allowed to defend themselves against criminal charges and are provided with required support and accommodation to facilitate their effective participation.

El Salvador (2013)

29. The Committee is concerned about the barriers to access to justice encountered by persons with disabilities and the lack of reasonable accommodation. The Committee is also concerned at the limited access to justice for women and girls with disabilities who are victims of abuse or neglect owing to the low credibility ascribed to their witness statements.

30. The Committee calls on the State party to:

(a) Put in place reasonable procedural accommodation with a gender and age focus to ensure access to justice for persons with disabilities and to provide free legal assistance, information on each case – as early as the police investigation – in accessible formats, access to judicial buildings and the services of trained Salvadoran sign-language interpreters;

(b) Strengthen the mandate of the Office of the Human Rights Advocate regarding legal remedies for the defence of the rights of persons with disabilities;

(c) Design training programmes for all those involved in the legal system, including the police, judges, legal professionals, social workers and health-care workers, in both urban and rural areas;

(d) Adopt measures to secure access to justice for women and girls with disabilities, with due consideration paid to their role as witnesses and victims during the trial phase.

31. The Committee is concerned that the State party's criminal legislation provides for penalties termed "care measures", that may be applied to persons with disabilities without due process.

32. The Committee recommends that the State party amend its criminal legislation in order to make penalties applicable to persons with psychosocial or intellectual disabilities subject to the same guarantees and conditions as those applicable to any other person who is the subject of criminal proceedings, making provision as necessary for reasonable accommodation and procedural adjustments.

23. While appreciating the establishment of legal aid service centres for persons with disabilities, the Committee notes that these service centres often lack the necessary resources and do not operate on an independent basis. The committee is concerned that neither the criminal nor the civil procedure laws in China are accessible for the use of persons with disabilities on an equal basis with others and instead patronizing measures are put into place such as the designation of public defenders that treat the person concerned as if they lacked legal capacity.

24. The Committee suggests that the state party allocate the necessary human and financial resources to the legal aid service centres. It asks the state party to ensure that these centres safeguard the access to justice of persons with disabilities independently and in practice, also below the county level. The Committee suggests that the state party reviews its procedural civil and criminal laws in order to make mandatory the necessity to establish procedural accommodation for those persons with disabilities who intervene in the judicial system can do it as subject of rights and not as objects of protection.

(Liberty and security of person)*

September 2025

Article 14 - Liberty and security of person

1. States Parties shall ensure that persons with disabilities, on an equal basis with others:
 - a) Enjoy the right to liberty and security of person;
 - b) Are not deprived of their liberty unlawfully or arbitrarily, and that any deprivation of liberty is in conformity with the law, and that the existence of a disability shall in no case justify a deprivation of liberty.
2. States Parties shall ensure that if persons with disabilities are deprived of their liberty through any process, they are, on an equal basis with others, entitled to guarantees in accordance with international human rights law and shall be treated in compliance with the objectives and principles of the present Convention, including by provision of reasonable accommodation.

Please note there are no recommendations in the Concluding Observations on art. 14 on Mauritania

25. The Committee is concerned that:

(a) Persons with disabilities, in particular those with psychosocial and/or intellectual disabilities and persons of short stature, are subjected to arbitrary arrest and detention, including in psychiatric recovery centres, including in segregated communities, often without warrant, charges, legal representation or judicial oversight;

(b) The State Party has not provided disaggregated data on the number of persons with disabilities in prisons or other places of deprivation of liberty, their conditions of detention, or cases where they have challenged the lawfulness of their detention.

26. The Committee recalls its guidelines on the right to liberty and security of persons with disabilities, and recommends that the State party:

(a) Take measures to prevent and punish the arbitrary arrest of persons with disabilities in law and practice, including in psychiatric recovery centres, requiring that arrests of persons with disabilities be based on judicially issued warrants; ensure access to legal counsel in all proceedings; and establish independent judicial oversight and monitoring mechanisms with full, unrestricted access to all facilities;

(b) Collect and publish disaggregated data on persons with disabilities in all places of deprivation of liberty, including sex, age, type of impairment, location, and detention conditions.

26. The Committee notes with concern:

(a) The lack of measures to repeal laws and legal provisions that involuntarily detain persons with disabilities on the basis of impairment;

(b) The lack of clarity on the position of the State Party in relation to its future participation in any process towards the adoption of an additional protocol to or recommendation concerning the Convention for the Protection of Human Rights and Dignity of the Human Being with regard to the Application of Biology and Medicine.

27. Recalling its general comment No. 1(2014), its guidelines on the right to liberty and security of persons with disabilities, and its guidelines on deinstitutionalization, including in emergencies, the Committee recommends that the State party, in close consultation and active involvement of persons with disabilities through their representative organisations:

(a) Ensure that disability is not a reason to deprive a person's liberty under any law, including the Mental Health Act (116/1990) and the Act on Special Care for People with Intellectual Disabilities, and end all practices that allow for deprivation of liberty on the basis of impairment;

(b) In recognition of the Committee's joint open letter with the Special Rapporteur on the rights of persons with disabilities to the Council of Europe, dated June 2021, as well as the January 2025 open letter to the Secretary-General of the Council of Europe, the Committee of Ministers of the Council of Europe, the Committee on Bioethics of the Council of Europe, the Steering Committee for Human Rights, the Commissioner of Human Rights, the Parliamentary Assembly of the Council of Europe and other organizations and entities of the Council of Europe, promote the move away from coercive measures and the development of a non-coercive framework on mental health, as required under the Convention in future participation in any process towards the adoption of an additional protocol to or recommendation concerning the Convention for the Protection of Human Rights and Dignity of the Human Being with regard to the Application of Biology and Medicine;

25. The Committee is concerned about the existence of legislation in the State party, including Section 5 of the Constitution and Section 144 of the Criminal Procedural Code, and in the draft Mental Health Bill that allows for the deprivation of liberty of persons with disabilities based on their impairment.

26. Recalling its guidelines on the right to liberty and security of persons with disabilities, and its Guidelines on Deinstitutionalization, including in emergencies, the Committee recommends that the State party repeal all provisions in legislation and amend draft legislation that allows for the deprivation of liberty of persons with disabilities on the basis of impairment;

27. The Committee is concerned:

(a) That there is a delay in the adoption of a mental health law in line with the Convention, as well as the persistence of forced institutionalization and substitute decision-making systems, particularly in criminal justice.

(b) There is a lack of specific measures, in line with the Convention, to guarantee the rights of persons with disabilities in the criminal justice system.

28. Recalling its guidelines on the right to liberty and security of persons with disabilities, and its Guidelines on Deinstitutionalization, including in emergencies, the Committee recommends that the State party:

(a) Expedite the adoption of the Mental Health Law, ensuring that it is in line with the Convention, to guarantee the right to liberty for all persons with disabilities including persons with intellectual and/or psychosocial disabilities;

(b) Ensure that persons with disabilities, including those who acquired a disability while in prison, benefit from due process of law guarantees on an equal basis with others.

27. The Committee is concerned about:

(a) Mental health and substance use treatment legislative and policy frameworks that allow for involuntary detention and treatment, increased support for Drug Treatment Courts, the increase in involuntary hospitalisation, and release and access to housing and services conditional on community treatment orders;

(b) Over-policing and complex court practices that adversely impact and effectively criminalise Indigenous, Black and racialised groups, homeless persons with disabilities and persons with psychosocial disabilities leading to frequent contact with the criminal justice system and incarceration;

(c) Over representation of persons with disabilities in the criminal justice system and prisons, in particular Indigenous women with disabilities, Black and other marginalised persons with disabilities, persons with intellectual and/or psychosocial disabilities and persons with FASD;

(d) The lack of culturally appropriate, gender and age specific individualised supports, accessible infrastructure and disability-related supports, and health services, including mental health and drug treatment support options within prisons;

(e) The indefinite detention in outpatient community treatment or mental health facilities, and the lack of access to procedural guarantees for persons with disabilities who are declared 'unfit to stand trial' or not criminally responsible.

28. Recalling its Guidelines on the right to liberty and security of persons with disabilities (A/72/55, annex), the Committee recommends that the State Party, in close consultation and active involvement of persons with disabilities through their representative organisations:

(a) Repeal federal, provincial, and territorial mental health and substance use treatment laws and policies allowing for involuntary detention and treatment, including under the auspices of Drug Treatment Courts and through community treatment orders;

(b) Invest in rights-based, culturally appropriate voluntary, community-based mental health and substance use supports and treatment options, including peer-led options; ensure regulatory oversight and human rights monitoring, and ensure harm reduction and safe supply programs that respond to the intersecting identities of people who use drugs;

(c) Take all legislative, policy, judicial and administrative measures to address the over-representation of persons with disabilities in the criminal justice system and prisons, including by addressing the social determinants of incarceration, such as poverty, ableism, racial injustice, and gender inequality, and by reforming policing practices and complex court processes;

(d) Implement laws and policies to ensure that prisoners with disabilities receive culturally appropriate, gender and age specific individualised supports, accessible infrastructure and disability-related supports, and health services, including mental health and drug treatment support options;

(e) Amend and/or repeal legislation that restricts the legal capacity of persons with disabilities, allowing for harsher measures against persons with disabilities than against defendants convicted of the same crimes, such as indefinite detention, and guarantee their access to justice on an equal basis with others throughout judicial proceedings.

25. The Committee is concerned about:

(a) The provisions in the general law No. 42-01 which gives the authorities the power to intern persons with psychosocial and/or intellectual disabilities in institutions and psychiatric hospitals based on the concept of “dangerousness”;

(b) The lack of updated official data on persons with disabilities deprived of their liberty, disaggregated by place of detention and occupancy rate thereof.

26. Recalling its guidelines on the right to liberty and security of persons with disabilities, its guidelines on deinstitutionalization, including in emergencies, and its general comment No. 1 (2014), the Committee recommends that the State party take all legislative, administrative, policy and judicial measures necessary to:

(a) Remove from its legal framework the concept of dangerousness as a criteria for the deprivation of liberty for persons with psychosocial disabilities;

(b) Provide, in its next periodic report, updated official data on persons with disabilities deprived of their liberty, disaggregated by place of detention and occupancy rate thereof.

36. The Committee is concerned about:

(a) The lack of action by the European Union under its competences to abolish involuntary detention, of persons with disabilities in Member States, including in closed psychiatric facilities, and about the heightened risk of persons with intellectual and/or psychosocial disabilities, autistic persons, children, older persons, and migrants with disabilities of being detained;

(b) The lack of effective monitoring of detention of persons with disabilities, including in closed psychiatric facilities, and of the provision of the requisite support measures.

37. Recalling the Guidelines on the right to liberty and security of persons with disabilities and its Guidelines on deinstitutionalization, including in emergencies , the Committee recommends that the European Union take all measures within its competences necessary to:

(a) Abolish involuntary detention of persons with disabilities, including persons with intellectual and/or psychosocial disabilities, autistic persons, children, older persons, and migrants with disabilities, on the basis of their disability, and provide incentives for Member States to end all detention on the basis of disability, whether de jure or de facto, and fund research on the development of community-based services;

(b) Effectively monitor the situation of persons with disabilities deprived of their liberty in all places of detention.

25. The Committee is concerned that persons with disabilities, especially those with intellectual and/or psychosocial disabilities, are still subjected to laws that deprive them of their liberty based on impairment, and that there is a lack of information on the measures taken to ensure that those persons are not subjected to arbitrary treatment, including confinement.

26. Recalling its guidelines on the right to liberty and security of persons with disabilities, and its Guidelines on Deinstitutionalization, including in emergencies, the Committee recommends that the State party:

(a) Repeal all relevant provisions in legislation that allow for the deprivation of liberty of persons with disabilities, particularly persons with intellectual and/or psychosocial disabilities, on the basis of impairment;

(b) Establish a monitoring mechanism to ensure that persons with psychosocial and/or intellectual disabilities are not subjected to arbitrary and forced treatment, particularly treatment that results in confinement, including at home, and ensure that reasonable accommodation and safety is provided to persons with disabilities who come in conflict with the law.

25. The Committee is concerned about the existence of legislation in the State party, including art.111 of the Mental Treatment Act, that allows for the deprivation of liberty of persons with disabilities based on their disability, in particular their “mental capacity”, and the lack of guarantee of their security in those circumstances.

26. Recalling its guidelines on the right to liberty and security of persons with disabilities, and its Guidelines on Deinstitutionalization, including in emergencies, the Committee recommends that the State party:

(a) Review its national legislation to guarantee the constitutional right to liberty for all persons with disabilities including those with intellectual and/or psychosocial disabilities;

(b) Implement the Tuvalu National Disability Policy, Gender Policy and Children policy, and establish a monitoring mechanism to ensure that persons with intellectual and/or psychosocial disabilities are not subjected to arbitrary detention, and ensure that reasonable accommodation and safety is provided to persons with disabilities who come in conflict with the law.

27. The Committee is concerned about:

(a) The enactment of the Mental Health Plan 2016-2025 and its alignment with the Principles of the Convention;

(b) Whether the conditions for persons with disabilities, especially those with intellectual and/or psychosocial disabilities, as well as persons with autism, in their homes ensure they are not forcibly confined and promote family coexistence;

(c) Whether persons with disabilities in prisons or detention centres receive all guarantees of due process and the reasonable accommodations they require, particularly women and indigenous persons with disabilities.

28. Recalling the Guidelines on the right to liberty and security of persons with disabilities and its Guidelines on deinstitutionalization, including in emergencies, the Committee recommends that the State party take all legislative, administrative, policy and judicial measures necessary to:

(a) Ensure that the Mental Health Plan 2016-2025 aligns with Article 14 of the Convention and its respective guidelines;

(b) Review national standards policies and practices to guarantee that persons with disabilities, especially those with intellectual and/or psychosocial disabilities, as well as persons with autism, are not forcibly confined to their homes or prisons without due process;

(c) Adopt regulations to provide reasonable accommodations for all persons with disabilities held in prisons or detention centres, and ensure that women and indigenous persons with disabilities in such facilities receive appropriate support .

Belarus (2024)

27. The Committee is concerned that:

- (a) Article 36 of the Mental Health Care Act allows for compulsory hospitalization and treatment based on a court decision in relation to persons with disabilities depriving their legal capacity;
- (b) Risks of infringement of liberty and security persist along with violence, abuse and ill-treatment in settings of detention, for persons with an officially recognised disability status, those with unregistered disabilities and those having obtained a disability in the course of their detention.

28. Recalling the Committee's Guidelines on the right to liberty and security of persons with disabilities, and the Guidelines on Deinstitutionalization, including in Emergency Situations, the Committee recommends that in close consultation with and with active involvement of persons with disabilities, in particular psychosocial and/or intellectual disabilities, and their representative organizations, the State party:

- (a) Undertake reforms in the Mental Care Act, including Article 36, to eliminate the possibility of non-consensual institutionalization of persons with psychosocial disabilities and/or intellectual disabilities, and children with such disabilities;
- (b) While deinstitutionalization is in process, ensure a mechanism that comprises representation of persons with disabilities through their representative organizations to prevent, detect, and address violations of the human rights of persons with disabilities, functioning as an independent system of monitoring and evaluation for the institutions where persons with disabilities are segregated;
- (c) Undertake measures to effectively handle the complaints of the cases of deprivation of liberty and security of persons with disabilities.

Belgium (2024)

28. The Committee is concerned that:

- (a) Persons with disabilities can be lawfully deprived of their liberty because of their disability, and that, despite legal reforms that attempt to limit such deprivation of liberty to the most serious cases, the number of interned persons has risen to over 4,000 in the State party;
- (b) Persons with disabilities, in particular persons with intellectual and/or psychosocial disabilities and persons with disabilities without residence permits, are often interned indefinitely in placement facilities, psychiatric annexes and prisons without appropriate support.

29. Recalling the Guidelines on the right to liberty and security of persons with disabilities and its Guidelines on deinstitutionalization, including in emergencies (2022), as well as its general comment No. 1 (2014), the Committee recommends that the State party, in close consultation with and the active involvement of persons with disabilities through their representative organisations:

- (a) Amend and/or repeal all laws and abolish practices that allow for deprivation of liberty on the basis of impairment, allow for harsher measures against persons with disabilities than other defendants convicted of the same crimes, and allow for indefinite detention, and guarantee access to justice for persons with disabilities on an equal basis with others throughout judicial proceedings;
- (b) Ensure that interned persons without residence permits, including persons with disabilities, have access to external care and support to enable them to leave prison, psychiatric annexes and other security placement facilities to live in the community when eligible to do so;
- (c) Urgently address the lack of accessibility and disability and mental health support measures, including the provision of reasonable accommodation, and overcrowding in prison and detention facilities, and ensure adequate support measures to facilitate reintegration into the community;

(d) Recognize the Committee's joint open letter with the Special Rapporteur on the rights of persons with disabilities, of June 2021 and in its future participation in any process for an additional protocol or recommendation to the Oviedo Convention, aim to move away from coercive measures and build up a non-coercive framework on mental health, as required under the Convention on the Rights of Persons with Disabilities.

27. The Committee is concerned by the information received:

- (a) On the involuntary confinement reserved for persons with psychosocial disabilities living in the streets, as they can be apprehended by the police and placed in psychiatric centres;
- (b) At the lack of monitoring mechanisms to ensure the right to reasonable accommodation for persons with disabilities in correctional and detention facilities.

28. The Committee recalls its guidelines on the right to liberty and security of persons with disabilities and its guidelines on deinstitutionalization, including in emergencies, and recommends that the State party:

(a) Review and amend all discriminatory provisions in its laws, including the Law No. 202-07 of 7 June 2002 (Persons and Family Code), the Law No. 2020-37 of 3 February 2021 on the protection of Personal Health and any other legislation providing for the detention, forced institutionalization and compulsory health treatment of persons with intellectual and/or psychosocial disabilities placed under tutorship and/or curatorship regimes on the basis of impairment to bring them into conformity with the Convention and international human rights norms and standards, including by addressing detention of persons with psychosocial disabilities living in the streets during major events.

(b) Establish a monitoring mechanism to ensure that persons with psychosocial and/or intellectual disabilities are not subjected to arbitrary and forced internment and treatment, particularly treatment that results in confinement, and ensure that reasonable accommodation and safety are provided to persons with disabilities who come into conflict with the law.

28. The Committee is concerned about Article 109 of Act No. 23-94/ADP of 19 May 1994 on the Public Health Code, in particular the conditions of forced hospitalization of persons with intellectual and/or psychosocial disabilities in psychiatric establishments, on the basis of administrative decisions or doctors' decisions.

29. Recalling the Guidelines on the right to liberty and security of persons with disabilities and its Guidelines on deinstitutionalization, including in emergencies, the Committee recommends that the State party reviews the legal provisions, in particular article 109 of the Public Health Code, to withdraw provisions authorizing institutionalization on the basis of impairment, and develop a system of mental health support in the community for children and adults, including children and adults with persons with intellectual and/or psychosocial disabilities and neurodivergent persons.

43. The Committee is concerned that :

- (a) Legislation in the Kingdom of Denmark, including the Danish Act No. 655 of 2017 on the Use of Coercion in Somatic Treatment of Permanently Incapacitated Persons, allows, under certain preconditions, for the detention and compulsory treatment of persons with intellectual and psychosocial disabilities who resist treatment and are deemed incapable of giving informed consent;
- (b) Children and adolescents with disabilities can, on welfare grounds, be placed in secure residential institutions under prison-like conditions that also house youth detained for crime-related reasons;

(c) Denmark distinguishes between punishment and treatment, and Greenland between criminal sanctions and treatment, depending on whether or not the accused persons are considered “unfit to stand trial” on account of their impairment, and that a conviction to treatment is often longer than a sentence to ordinary punishment for the same crime would be, or even of indefinite duration.

44. Recalling the Guidelines on the right to liberty and security of persons with disabilities and its Guidelines on deinstitutionalization, including in emergencies, the Committee recommends that the Kingdom of Denmark, in close consultation with and with the active involvement of persons with disabilities through their representative organizations:

(a) Repeal all laws and abolish all practices that allow for the deprivation of liberty on the basis of impairment and forced treatment, including mental health laws and institutionalization policies;

(b) Amend relevant legislation to ensure that children and adolescents with disabilities cannot be placed in secure residential institutions on welfare grounds;

(c) Initiate a structural review of the procedures used to sanction persons with disabilities deemed unfit to stand trial, and ensure that they do not get convicted to longer sentences than other persons, and that all guarantees of fair trial, such as the presumption of innocence, the right to a fair trial, and others, are fully guaranteed;

(d) Review all cases of deprivation of liberty of persons with disabilities currently in hospitals, institutions and other places of deprivation of liberty, due to a non-criminal court or administrative order, and transfer them to a community-based places of residence, freely chosen and with access to a range of community-based support services;

(e) Recognizing the Committee’s joint open letter with the Special Rapporteur on the rights of persons with disabilities of June 2021 and in its future participation in any process for an additional protocol or recommendation to the Oviedo Convention, do not support coercive measures and promote to establish a non-coercive framework on mental health.

28. The Committee is concerned that:

(a) The 2012 Mental Health Act No. 846 contains provisions that are contrary to the Convention;

(b) Persons with Disabilities Act (Act 715) lacks provisions to protect the liberty and security of persons with disabilities and prevent arbitrary deprivation of liberty, and the slow progress in enacting the Legislative Instrument required by the Mental Health Act (Act 846) to protect the rights of persons with disabilities;

(c) Socio-cultural practices continue to deprive persons with disabilities, particularly those with albinism and psychosocial disabilities, of their liberty and human rights, exacerbated by insufficient public awareness;

(d) The absence of a comprehensive system for collecting and maintaining disaggregated data on the deprivation of liberty of persons with disabilities.

29. The Committee recommends that the State Party:

(a) Revise the Mental Health Act 846: Section 58, which permits seclusion and restraint; Sections 68-71, which allow for guardianship and substitute decision-making; and Sections 42-53, which authorize involuntary admission and treatment, all of which contradict the CRPD and provide training for mental health professionals on CRPD principles and rights-based approaches to mental health care;

(b) Amend Act 715 to include provisions that protect the liberty and security of persons with disabilities, prevent arbitrary deprivation of liberty for persons with intellectual and or psychosocial disabilities and expedite the progress towards enacting the Legislative Instrument required by the Mental Health Act (Act 846) to enhance the protection of their rights;

(c) Implement public awareness, educational and legal measures to address socio-cultural practices that deprive persons with disabilities of their liberty and human rights;

(d) Establish a system for collecting and maintaining disaggregated data on the deprivation of liberty of persons with disabilities to effectively address and prevent these issues, ensuring informed policy-making and targeted interventions.

Mauritius (2024)

25. The Committee is concerned that:

(a) The Mental Health Care Act 1998, despite several amendments to limit indefinite and prolonged hospitalization, still allows for the involuntary hospitalization and institutionalization of persons with disabilities, including children, based on their perceived or actual impairment or dangerousness;

(b) The Mental Health Commission and the Managerial Committee tasked with overseeing the involuntary deprivation of liberty lack sufficient operational independence and an understanding of the Convention to effectively perform their designated functions.

26. Recalling its Guidelines on the right to liberty and security of persons with disabilities and its Guidelines on deinstitutionalization, including in emergencies, the Committee recommends that the State party take all legislative, administrative, policy and judicial measures necessary to:

(a) Amend the law and eradicate policies and practices that allow for the involuntary hospitalization and institutionalization of persons with disabilities, including children, on the basis of actual or perceived impairments, or their presumed dangerousness to themselves or to third parties;

(b) Review the current legal framework and practices to ensure that the Mental Health Commission and the Managerial Committee possess sufficient independence in practice from the mental healthcare centres and receive training on the obligations of the State party under the Convention.

Netherlands (2024)

33. The Committee is concerned about:

(a) Provisions in the Act on Compulsory Mental Healthcare (WVGZ) and the Act on Care and Involuntary Treatment of Psychogeriatric and Mentally Disabled Clients (WGZ) that allow for the involuntary detention of persons with intellectual and/or psychosocial disabilities;

(b) The complex and difficult to understand complaint mechanism against compulsory institutionalization and the lack of accessible information about the right to support by a client confidential counsellor;

(c) Information on a lack of training of law enforcement officers on the requirements of persons with disabilities.

34. Recalling the Guidelines on the right to liberty and security of persons with disabilities and its Guidelines on deinstitutionalization, including in emergencies, as well as its general comment No. 1 (2014), the Committee recommends that the State party take all legislative, administrative, policy and judicial measures necessary to:

(a) Review and repeal all legal provisions, policies and practices that allow for the involuntary deprivation of liberty on the basis of disability and withdraw the interpretative declaration to article 14 of the Convention;

(b) Establish a robust monitoring and evaluation framework on involuntary treatment, including involuntary measures at home, and take measures to ensure compliance with reporting obligations and provide persons with disabilities with information in accessible formats and access to legal representation in filing complaints against forced institutionalization;

(c) Provide training to all law enforcement officers on the requirements of persons with disabilities;

(d) Recognize the Committee's joint open letter with the Special Rapporteur on the rights of persons with disabilities of June 2021 and in its future participation in any process for an additional protocol or recommendation to the Oviedo Convention, do not support coercive measures and promote to establish a non-coercive framework on mental health.

Ukraine (2024)

28. The Committee is concerned that:

- (a) Despite the amendment to the Law of Ukraine on Psychiatric Care (No. 1489-III) to involve some degree of judicial control on the matter, the State party still allows the hospitalization of persons with intellectual and/or psychosocial disabilities without their consent;
- (b) The lack of information on the content and status of the draft Law prepared by the Ministry of Health "On Ratification of the Convention for the protection of Human Rights and Dignity of the Human Being with regard to the Application of Biology and Medicine: Convention on Human Rights and Biomedicine of 1997".

29. Recalling the Committee's Guidelines on deinstitutionalization, including in emergencies (2022), as well as the Guidelines on the right to liberty and security of persons with disabilities (2015), the Committee recommends that the State party:

- (a) Repeal all laws and regulations allowing the forced hospitalization of persons with disabilities and recognize the full legal capacity and procedural standing of persons with disabilities to provide their consent for all issues related to their health, including procedures to ensure informed decisions;
- (b) Undertake a comprehensive review of cases where there is no consent of persons with disabilities for hospitalization to ensure that they are discharged;
- (c) Recognize the Committee's joint open letter with the Special Rapporteur on the rights of persons with disabilities, of June 2021 and in its future participation in any process for an additional protocol or recommendation to the Oviedo Convention, it aims to move away from coercive measures and build up a non-coercive framework on mental health, as required under the Convention on the Rights of Persons with Disabilities.

31. The Committee remains concerned about:

- (a) Provisions in the Law on Protection of Health of the Population allowing hospitalization or institutionalization, control, and isolation of "persons suffering from mental disorder or illness" and "individuals who have committed socially dangerous acts";
- (b) Involuntary hospitalization of persons with disabilities resulting from the deviation of defendants with disabilities from criminal proceedings;
- (c) The lack of measures to provide mental health services in the community.

32. Recalling its guidelines on the right to liberty and security of persons with disabilities, the Committee reiterates its previous recommendations (CRPD/C/AZE/CO/1, para. 29) and recommends that the State party:

- (a) Explicitly prohibit forced institutionalization and involuntary hospitalization on the basis of impairment, recognize them as prohibited forms of discrimination and release persons with disabilities who are deprived of their liberty on the basis of their impairment;
- (b) Amend and/or repeal legislation that denies persons with disabilities the full protection guaranteed to anyone who is deprived of her or his liberty by arrest or detention, including by involuntary hospitalization, to take proceedings before a court and to be afforded the specific procedural guarantees required in such proceedings;
- (c) Reform its mental health services and develop voluntary community-based support for persons with disabilities, in particular mental health support, outside of psychiatric settings, in line with the human rights model of disability.

33. The Committee notes with concern that the process to draft an additional protocol to the Council of Europe Convention for the Protection of Human Rights and Dignity of the Human Being with regard to the Application of Biology and Medicine may include repressive measures against persons with disabilities on the basis of their perceived dangerousness and not in accordance with their will and preference.

34. The Committee recommends that the State party recognize the Committee's joint open letter with the Special Rapporteur on the rights of persons with disabilities, of June 2021, and in its future participation in any process for an additional protocol or recommendations to the Oviedo Convention, aim to move away from coercive measures and build up a non-coercive framework on mental health, as required under the Convention on the Rights of Persons with Disabilities.

28. The Committee is seriously concerned about:

- (a) The practice of forced placement on the basis of disability of children and adults in residential care institutions within and outside the State party.
- (b) The absence of a specific law governing the mental health sector that guarantees respect for the individual autonomy, freedom of choice and free and informed consent of persons with psychosocial disabilities
- (c) The forced placement of persons with psychosocial disabilities in psychiatric hospitals without controls and for specific periods of time.

29. Recalling its guidelines on the right to liberty and security of persons with disabilities (2016) and its guidelines on deinstitutionalisation of persons with disabilities (2022), the Committee recommends that the State party

- (a) Prohibit the placement of persons with disabilities in residential care institutions inside and outside Bahrain and launch a comprehensive national plan to replace the residential system with family-based alternatives and inclusive community-based services.
- (b) In close consultation with persons with disabilities, in particular persons with psychosocial disabilities and their organisations, review the draft mental health law before the House of Representatives in order to include measures and provisions that guarantee the individual autonomy of persons with disabilities and prohibit placement and forced treatment.

25. Al Comité le preocupa:

- a) Que en el Reglamento sobre el consentimiento informado en la prestación de servicios de salud del Sistema Costarricense de Seguridad Social permite la institucionalización forzosa sin el consentimiento libre e informado de las personas con discapacidad;
- b) La falta de información sobre personas con discapacidad que han sido detenidas en hospitales psiquiátricos como medida de seguridad, ya sea administrativa o penal.

26. Recordando sus directrices sobre el derecho a la libertad y la seguridad de las personas con discapacidad (2017) y sus directrices sobre la desinstitucionalización, incluso en situaciones de emergencia, el Comité exhorta al Estado parte a:

- a) Modificar el Reglamento sobre el consentimiento informado en la prestación de servicios de salud del Sistema Costarricense de Seguridad Social de modo a prohibir la institucionalización sin el consentimiento libre e informado de las personas con discapacidad;
- b) Recopilar y publicar datos desagregados y actualizados sobre la cantidad de personas con discapacidad en situación de encierro en todas las jurisdicciones, incluyendo la cantidad de niños y adultos con discapacidad segregados en instituciones.

Kazakhstan (2024)

31. The Committee is concerned about:

- (a) Legislation, including articles 169, 170 of the Code on the Health of the People and the Healthcare System, allowing for involuntary committal and psychiatric treatment of persons with intellectual and/or psychosocial disabilities to psychiatric facilities, including psychiatric hospitals, based on their perceived or actual impairment or dangerousness (CRPD/C/KAZ/RQ/1, para. 109);

(b) The prohibition for persons with disabilities to leave special social service centres;

(c) The lack of reasonable accommodation for persons with disabilities in detention.

32. Recalling its guidelines on the right to liberty and security of persons with disabilities, the Committee recommends that the State party:

(a) Recognize involuntary hospitalization of persons with disabilities as a prohibited form of discrimination on the grounds of impairment, amounting to arbitrary deprivation of liberty, and review and repeal legislation, including provisions of the Code on the Health of the People and the Healthcare System, that permits institutionalization on the basis of impairment;

(b) Review cases of deprivation of liberty of persons with disabilities currently in hospitals and special social service centres with a view to releasing them from the institution and transfer them to a community-based place of residence with access to a range of community-based support services;

(c) Amend and/or repeal legislation that denies to persons with disabilities the full protection guaranteed to anyone who is deprived of her or his liberty by arrest or detention, including by involuntary hospitalization, to take proceedings before a court and to be afforded the specific procedural guarantees required in such proceedings;

(d) Ensure the provision of reasonable accommodation to all persons with disabilities in detention, including in pre-trial detention, in all types of detention facilities, of any type of impairment.

26. Al Comité le preocupa:

a) Que el Código de Familia contemple, en su artículo 464, el internamiento no voluntario por razones de trastorno psíquico, lo que es contrario al artículo 14 de la Convención y sus directrices;

b) Que no se les permita a las personas con discapacidad en instituciones penitenciarias contar con sus medios auxiliares argumentando que se transforman en “armas blancas”;

c) La falta de información sobre cuantas personas con discapacidad han sido detenidas y se encuentran en el régimen penitenciario.

27. Recordando sus directrices sobre el derecho a la libertad y la seguridad de las personas con discapacidad y sus directrices sobre la desinstitutionalización, incluso en situaciones de emergencia, el Comité exhorta al Estado parte a:

a) Reformar el Código de Familia (Ley 870) para eliminar por completo la institucionalización forzada de las personas con discapacidad;

b) Tomar acciones inmediatas para que las personas con discapacidad que se encuentren en instituciones penitenciarias puedan utilizar sus medios auxiliares;

c) Investigar y documentar con datos desagregados, cuantas personas con discapacidad se encuentran dentro del régimen penitenciario.

Sweden (2024)

31. The Committee is concerned that:

(a) Persons with disabilities can be deprived of their liberty on the basis of impairment, and that the barriers to discharge from psychiatric institutions is prolonged due to limited community housing options;

(b) The indeterminate detention of persons with disabilities who are deemed ‘unfit’ to stand trial.

32. Recalling its guidelines on the right to liberty and security of persons with disabilities and its guidelines on deinstitutionalization, including in emergencies, the Committee recommends that the State party take all necessary legislative, administrative, policy and judicial measures to:

- (a) Repeal all laws and abolish practices that allow for the deprivation of liberty on the basis of impairment, including mental health laws, and ensure access to appropriate, accessible community housing and supports;
- (b) Amend and/or repeal legislation that restricts the legal capacity of persons with disabilities, allowing for harsher measures against persons with disabilities than defendants convicted of the same crimes, such as indeterminate detention, and guarantee their access to justice on an equal basis with others throughout judicial proceedings.

27. The Committee notes with concern that section 167 of the Criminal Procedure Code allows the deprivation of liberty and indefinite detention of persons with psychosocial disabilities considered unfit for trial. It is also concerned at lack of monitoring mechanisms to ensure the right to reasonable accommodation for persons with disabilities in correctional and detention facilities.

28. The Committee recalls its guidelines on the right to liberty and security of persons with disabilities, and its Guidelines on Deinstitutionalization, including in emergencies, and recommends that the State party:

- (a) Review and amend all discriminatory provisions in the laws, including section 167 of the Criminal Procedure Code to bring them in conformity with the Convention and human rights norms and standards including addressing prolonged detention of persons found unfit for trial under the President's Pleasure without regular case reviews;
- (b) Establish a monitoring mechanism to ensure that persons with psychosocial and/or intellectual disabilities are not subjected to arbitrary and forced treatment, particularly treatment that results in confinement, and ensure that reasonable accommodation and safety is provided to persons with disabilities who come in conflict with the law.

Andorra (2023)

29. The Committee is concerned about:

- (a) Discriminatory provisions, including article 315 of the Code of Civil Procedure, that allow for the involuntary hospitalization of persons with disabilities, particularly persons with intellectual and/or psychosocial disabilities, for "therapeutic purposes", as well as article 73 (1) of the Criminal Code that establishes the hospitalization in psychiatric facilities as a measure of deprivation of liberty;
- (b) The limited information related to community-based mental health services and the number of persons with disabilities deprived of liberty on the basis of impairment.

30. The Committee recalling its Guidelines on the right to liberty and security of persons with disabilities (2015), recommends that the State party:

- (a) Repeal legislative provisions, including article 315 of the Code of Civil Procedure and article 73(1) of the Criminal Code, allowing for the deprivation of liberty of persons with disabilities on the grounds of impairment and/or perceived danger to themselves or others;
- (b) Ensure the availability of community-based mental health services and support, respecting the right to liberty of persons with disabilities and guaranteeing their right to decide on their health care, including in situations of individual crisis;
- (c) Provide disaggregated data on the number of persons with disabilities deprived of liberty on the basis of impairment, including in psychiatric facilities, addiction treatment centres, or special educational or rehabilitation establishments.

33. The Committee is concerned that the State party's mental health legislation is largely based on a medical model of disability, allows for involuntary detention and compulsory treatment.

34. The Committee recalls its Guidelines on the Right to Liberty and Security of Persons with Disabilities and recommends that the State party abolish all provisions that allow for the deprivation of liberty on the basis of impairment or for compulsory treatment, that measures for supported decision-making in places of detention are provided, and that organizations of persons with disabilities, particularly of persons with psychosocial and/or intellectual disabilities, are closely consulted with and actively involved in the development of these measures.

29. The Committee is deeply concerned:

(a) About the forced institutionalisation and forced treatment of persons with disabilities on the basis of impairment in care and integration assistance facilities and other institutions, psychiatric institutions and forensic psychiatric care;

(b) That children and young people with disabilities can be deprived of their liberty on the basis of therapeutic necessity.

30. Recalling its Guidelines on the right to liberty and security of persons with disabilities (2016) and its Guidelines on deinstitutionalization, including in emergencies (2022), the Committee recommends that the State party take all necessary legislative, administrative and judicial measures to:

(a) Prohibit involuntary detention, forced institutionalisation and forced treatment of persons with disabilities on the basis of impairment;

(b) Strengthen all judicial and administrative protections to prevent the deprivation of liberty of children and young persons with disabilities on an equal basis with others.

31. The Committee is concerned about 'unfit' to stand trial provisions that allow for the indefinite detention of persons with disabilities in forensic psychiatric care.

32. The Committee recommends that the State party amend and/or repeal legislation that restricts the legal capacity of persons with disabilities, allowing for harsher measures against persons with disabilities than against defendants convicted of the same crimes, such as indefinite detention, and guarantee their access to justice on an equal basis with others throughout judicial proceedings

31. The Committee is concerned about:

(a) The involuntary hospitalization and mental health treatment in psychiatric settings affecting children and adults with intellectual disabilities and persons with psychosocial disabilities on the presumption of dangerousness and as a result of decisions made by the district psychiatric committees and the district courts;

(b) Psychiatric treatment orders or involuntary hospitalization orders concerning persons with intellectual disabilities and persons with psychosocial disabilities following declarations of persons being unfit to stand trial by a court (CRPD/C/ISR/1, see para. 154);

(c) The limited scope and substandard quality of health care provided to prisoners with disabilities, in particular Palestinians with disabilities, and the lack of oversight of the healthcare system run by the Israeli prison system.

32. Recalling its Guidelines on the right to liberty and security of persons with disabilities (A/72/55, see Annex), the Committee recommends that the State party:

(a) Withdraw provisions in the Criminal Procedure Law 5742-1982, the Treatment of Persons with Mental Disabilities Law and the Youth Care and Supervision Law (5720-1969) that provide for institutionalization on the basis of impairment, and develop a system of support in the community for children and adults, including children and adults with intellectual disabilities and persons with psychosocial disabilities;

(b) Amend and/or repeal legislation that denies to persons with disabilities the full protection in criminal proceedings afforded to all defendants, including the presumption of innocence, and that results in sanctions or a referral to diversion mechanisms such as the deprivation of liberty through involuntary hospitalisation orders and involuntary treatment through psychiatric treatment orders;

(c) Transfer health care services from the Israeli prison system to the national health care system and implement specific strategies to meet the healthcare needs of prisoners with disabilities, in particular Palestinians with disabilities.

33. The Committee is concerned about reports of excessive and disproportional use of force, including arbitrary arrests, harassment and violence against persons with disabilities by Israeli Defense Forces, the Israeli Police, and private guards in the context of public demonstrations, during law enforcement operations and in connection with night raids or searches in households that affect Palestinian persons with disabilities, and disproportionately Palestinian women with disabilities and the lack of investigation of complaints.

34. The Committee recommends that the State party:

(a) End arbitrary arrests and detentions, including administrative detentions of persons with disabilities, and ensure that persons with disabilities in detention have access to all guarantees provided for international human rights law, as recommended to the State party by the Human Rights Committee (CCPR/C/ISR/CO/5, para. 35);

(b) Prevent the excessive and disproportional use of force by the Israeli Defense Forces, the Israeli Police and private guards, adopt gender specific protection and safeguards during law enforcement operations and ensure gender appropriate complaint and redress mechanisms for Palestinian persons with disabilities.

Malawi (2023)

29. The Committee is concerned about:

(a) The deprivation of liberty on the basis of disability provided in the Mental Treatment Act of 1948 and affecting persons with psychosocial disabilities and persons with intellectual disabilities;

(b) Provisions in the Criminal Code and the Criminal Procedure and Evidence Code (art. 135) that exempt persons with intellectual disabilities and persons with psychosocial disabilities from criminal responsibility and provide for their deprivation of liberty in psychiatric hospitals, "with or without limitation" of time;

(c) Information indicating that women in prison, including women with disabilities were transferred to other prisons away from families during the COVID 19 pandemic and hence, have been deprived of material and social support;

(d) Information about lack of accessibility measures and reasonable accommodation in relation to persons with disabilities held in custody and in prisons.

30. In accordance with the Committee's Guidelines on the right to liberty and security of persons with disabilities (A/72/55, see Annex), the Committee recommends that the State party, in close consultation and active involvement of persons with disabilities, particularly organizations of persons with psychosocial disabilities and persons with intellectual disabilities:

(a) Complete the review process of the Mental Health legislation and abolish involuntary mental health treatment in psychiatric hospitals and other settings on the basis of disability. The State party should incorporate person-centered, community based and participatory support in the scope of mental health;

(b) Repeal all legal provisions that deny to persons with disabilities the full protection criminal proceedings afford to all defendants, including the presumption of innocence and that result in sanctions or a referral to diversion mechanisms that are more severe than regular criminal sentences, such as the deprivation of liberty of undefined or indefinite duration and involuntary or forced medication or treatment;

(c) Ensure that women with disabilities in prisons are able to be located close to their families and receive the essential supports they require;

(d) Take measures to ensure that all places of detention, including prisons, police cells and reformatory centers are accessible for persons with disabilities and that reasonable accommodation is provided. The State party should also introduce provisions to address disability requirements in the Prisons Act and Regulations and prison staff about the rights of persons with disabilities.

Mongolia (2023)

29. The Committee remains concerned that persons with disabilities, especially those with psychosocial and/or intellectual disabilities, are still subjected to deprivation of liberty on the basis of disability and perceived dangerousness to themselves or others.

(a) Recognize the involuntary hospitalization of persons with disabilities as discrimination on the grounds of impairment, amounting to deprivation of liberty, and repeal all relevant legislative provisions, including the provisions of the Law on Health and the Law on Mental Health allowing for the involuntary deprivation of liberty on the grounds of impairment and perceived dangerousness to themselves or others;

(b) Introduce legislation that ensures procedural accommodations for persons with disabilities in all procedures in connection with deprivation of liberty;

(c) Establish a monitoring mechanism to ensure that persons with psychosocial and/or intellectual disabilities are not subjected to

Paraguay (2023)

27. Al Comité le preocupa que:

a) Se sigan efectuando internamientos de personas con discapacidad psicosocial y/o intelectual sin su consentimiento y las estancias prolongadas en el hospital psiquiátrico;

b) Existe poca información sobre muchas personas con discapacidad que han sido detenidas en el hospital psiquiátrico como una medida de seguridad ya sea administrativa o penal;

c) El Plan Nacional de Derechos Humanos y el Plan de Acción Nacional para los Derechos de las Personas con Discapacidad no contemplan procesos de desinstitucionalización;

d) El 65% del presupuesto asignado a salud mental sea dirigido al Hospital Psiquiátrico, en donde aún hay personas con discapacidad psicosocial internadas y donde actualmente se están realizando ampliaciones.

28. Recordando sus Directrices sobre el derecho a la libertad y a la seguridad de las personas con discapacidad (2015) y sus Directrices sobre Desinstitucionalización incluidas las situaciones de emergencia (2022), el Comité exhorta al Estado parte a:

a) Reformar las leyes y prácticas sobre salud mental para eliminar por completo la institucionalización forzada de las personas con discapacidad y las hospitalizaciones indefinidas;

b) Recopilar y publicar datos desagregados y actualizados sobre la cantidad de personas con discapacidad en situación de encierro en todas las jurisdicciones, incluyendo sobre la cantidad de niños y adultos con discapacidad segregados en instituciones;

c) Agregar al Plan Nacional de Derechos Humanos y al Plan Nacional para los Derechos de las Personas con Discapacidad la obligatoriedad de establecer un proceso de desinstitucionalización con plazos, presupuestos, metas y seguimiento, incluso durante las situaciones de emergencia;

d) Considerar que el presupuesto que actualmente se asigna al hospital psiquiátrico y a la construcción de nuevas instalaciones en el mismo, sea re-direccionado a programas de apoyo comunitario dentro del proceso de desinstitucionalización.

23. The Committee is concerned that persons with disabilities, especially those with psychosocial and/or intellectual disabilities, are still subjected to laws that deprive them of their liberty based on impairment, and that there is a lack of information on the measures taken to ensure that those persons are not subjected to arbitrary treatment, including confinement. It is also concerned at the lack of monitoring mechanisms to ensure the rights and reasonable accommodation issues of persons with disabilities in correctional facilities.

24. The Committee recalls its guidelines on the right to liberty and security of persons with disabilities (A/72/55, annex) and recommends that the State party:

- (a) Repeal all relevant legislative provisions allowing for the involuntary deprivation of liberty on the grounds of impairment and perceived dangerousness and introduce legislation that ensures non-discrimination through, for example, procedural accommodation for persons with disabilities, including during interrogation and detention, and explicitly prohibit forced institutionalization of those persons, particularly persons with psychosocial and/or intellectual disabilities and older persons with disabilities;
- (b) Ensure the rights of persons with psychosocial and/or intellectual disabilities to liberty and security of person on an equal basis with others;
- (c) Establish an independent mechanism to monitor and prevent persons with psychosocial and/or intellectual disabilities being subjected to arbitrary and forced treatment;
- (d) Provide training to health professionals, law enforcement and prison officials on the rights and dignity of persons with disabilities and monitoring mechanisms to ensure their rights in correctional and detention facilities.

Argentina (2023)

29. Al Comité le preocupa lo siguiente:

- a) Las disposiciones del Código Penal Argentino (artículo 34 inc. 1) y del Código Procesal Penal de la Provincia de Buenos Aires (artículos 62 y 63) que permiten la privación de la libertad de las personas con discapacidad sobre la base del criterio de peligrosidad;
- b) Las barreras que enfrentan las personas con discapacidad en el sistema penal y penitenciario;
- c) Los internamientos involuntarios prolongados, la ausencia de consentimiento informado en hospitalizaciones calificadas como voluntarias, y la posibilidad de internamientos involuntarios bajo la Ley 26.657, Ley Nacional de Salud Mental de 2010 (artículo 43);
- d) Que los proyectos para la reforma de la Ley Nacional de Salud Mental sean regresivos;
- e) La falta de datos actualizados sobre las personas con discapacidad en situación de encierro.

30. El Comité recuerda sus Directrices relativas al artículo 14 de la Convención, de 2015, y exhorta al Estado parte a:

- a) Reformar el Código Penal Argentino y los Códigos Procesales penales pertinentes, entre ellos el de la Provincia de Buenos Aires, a fin de evitar la privación de libertad de las personas con discapacidad sobre la base de su peligrosidad, revisar los casos de las personas internadas en cárceles por medidas de seguridad y garantizar el debido proceso;
- b) Reforzar las medidas adoptadas para eliminar las barreras que enfrentan las personas con discapacidad en el sistema penal y penitenciario, incluyendo el cumplimiento del Acuerdo de Solución Amistosa firmado en el 2022 entre el Estado parte y el Comité por el caso de Raúl Cardozo;
- c) Reformar la Ley Nacional de Salud Mental y otras normativas para prohibir los internamientos involuntarios e implementar planes de salud mental basados en el modelo de derechos humanos de la discapacidad;
- d) Vigilar que los proyectos para la nueva Ley de Salud Mental se ajusten a la Convención;
- e) Contar con datos desagregados y actualizados sobre la cantidad de personas con discapacidad en situación de encierro en todas las jurisdicciones, incluyendo hospitales monovalentes privados y las granjas de rehabilitación para consumo problemático de sustancias.

Georgia (2023)

29. The Committee observes with concern:

- (a) Involuntary psychiatric inpatient and specialist care in designated facilities on the basis of disability, as envisaged by the Oviedo Convention, affecting particularly adults and children with intellectual disabilities and persons with psychosocial disabilities;
- (b) The lack of accessibility of the physical environment of penitentiary institutions, including the absence of accessible meeting rooms for persons with disabilities and their lawyers and for hosting meetings with visitors, including family members;
- (c) That the process to draft an Additional Protocol to the Oviedo Convention may include repressive measures against persons with disabilities due to their perceived dangerousness and not in accordance with their will and preferences.

30. The Committee recommends that the State party;

- (a) Withdraw provisions that allow for involuntary deprivation of liberty and treatment on the basis of disability and adopt measures to ensure the availability of community and human rights-based mental health services and support across the country, respecting the right to liberty of persons with disabilities, and guaranteeing their right to decide on their health care, including in situations of individual crisis;
- (b) Ensure that facilities of deprivation of liberty are accessible and that reasonable accommodation is provided, and allocate the respective human, technical and financial resources.
- (c) The Committee recommends the State party, in the fulfilment of its obligations under the Convention for the Protection of Human Rights and Dignity of the Human Being with regard to the Application of Biology and Medicine (Oviedo Convention), follow the human rights model of disability and the Committee's guidelines on the right to liberty and security of persons with disabilities³, and reform its mental health services accordingly, including by providing voluntary support measures. Recognising the Committee's Joint Open letter with the Special Rapporteur on the Rights of Persons with Disabilities of June 2021⁴, the Committee also recommends that the State party's future participation in any process for an Additional Protocol or recommendations to the Oviedo Convention aim at moving away from coercive measures and build up a non-coercive framework on mental health, as required by the CRPD.

28. Al Comité le preocupa que:

- a) Personas con discapacidad intelectual y psicosocial continúen privadas de su libertad en instituciones psiquiátricas públicas y privadas, y que dichas instituciones no sean sujetas a suficiente supervisión y seguimiento;
- b) Existe poca información sobre la situación de las personas con discapacidad privadas de libertad y un importante hacinamiento en las prisiones, lo que, unido a infraestructuras inadecuadas, repercute negativamente en la accesibilidad y apoyos a los privados de libertad con discapacidad.

29. Recordando sus directrices sobre el derecho a la libertad y a la seguridad de las personas con discapacidad, el Comité exhorta al Estado parte a que:

- a) Garantice que toda la legislación pertinente, incluidos el Código Penal, el Código Procesal Penal y la Ley de Salud Mental, prohíba la privación de libertad por motivos de discapacidad real o percibida. Adicionalmente, asegure que los procedimientos salvaguarden el derecho al consentimiento informado y el derecho a la libertad y la seguridad de las personas con discapacidad en los servicios de salud, y que garanticen recursos efectivos y la aplicación de medidas de supervisión, incluida la supervisión independiente, en los servicios de salud mental públicos y privados, a fin de evitar la privación arbitraria de libertad e imponer sanciones por incumplimiento y violación de los derechos de los usuarios;

b)Desarrolle una estrategia para abordar el hacinamiento y las infraestructuras inadecuadas en las prisiones, que responda a las solicitudes de ajustes razonables y proporcione medidas de accesibilidad. Además, que recopile sistemáticamente datos desglosados sobre privados de libertad con discapacidad.

Togo (2023)

29.The Committee notes with concern about the discriminatory provisions under articles 130 and 131 of Act No. 2009-007 that allow for the involuntary detention and hospitalization of persons with disabilities, particularly persons with intellectual and/or psychosocial disabilities, deemed “dangerous” to themselves or others which is incompatible with the Convention.

30.The Committee recalls its guidelines on the right to liberty and security of persons with disabilities, and its Guidelines on Deinstitutionalization, including in emergencies, and recommends that the State party:

(a)Repeal all relevant legislative provisions, allowing for the involuntary deprivation of liberty on the grounds of impairment and perceived dangerousness to themselves or others, introduce legislation that ensures non-discrimination through, for example, procedural accommodation for persons with disabilities, including during interrogation and detention, and restore the rights of persons with psychosocial disabilities to liberty and security of person, on an equal basis with others;

(b)Establish a monitoring mechanism to ensure that persons with psychosocial and/or intellectual disabilities are not subjected to arbitrary and forced treatment, particularly treatment that results in confinement.

23.The Committee is concerned that persons with psychosocial disabilities are involuntarily admitted to psychiatric hospitals under judicial order or at the request of a third party, often the guardian, where they are at times subjected to violent treatment. It is also concerned that the law n° 2004-40 of May 3rd, 2004 which authorizes the psychiatrist to commit his patient to a psychiatric facility without the consent, will or preference of the person concerned is still in place.

24.The Committee, recalling the Guidelines on deinstitutionalization, including in emergencies (2022) recommends that the State party:

(a)Repeal any legislation, including the Order No. 83 of 1992 dated on 3 August 1992 on the mental health and the conditions of hospitalization in the hospital due to mental disorders, and its amending law n° 2004-40 of May 3rd, 2004 and other mental health laws, and to eradicate policies and practices that allow for the deprivation of liberty of persons with disabilities on the basis of actual or perceived impairments, or presumed dangerousness to oneself or to third parties, particularly persons with psychosocial impairments;

(b)Ensure reasonable accommodation facilities within prisons and detention centres, considering the requirements of different disability in a manner consistent with the Convention.

29. The Committee is concerned that persons with disabilities, especially those with intellectual and/or psychosocial disabilities, are still subjected to frequent harassment, arrest and detention through the misapplication of existing laws. It is also concerned about cases of confinement and shackling of persons with intellectual disabilities by family members at home and about detention and treatment of persons with intellectual and/or psychosocial disabilities, without their free and informed consent.

30. The Committee recalls its guidelines on the right to liberty and security of persons with disabilities and recommends that the State party:

(a) Revise section 54 of the Code of Criminal Procedure 1898, the Metropolitan Police Ordinances, and the Vagabond and Homeless Persons Rehabilitation Act 2011, to prevent unwarranted harassment, arrest, detention, unlawful restraint and confinement of persons with disabilities, particularly women with disabilities and persons with intellectual and/or psychosocial disabilities, including also revising the Penal Code 1860 and the Domestic Violence (Prevention and Protection) Act of 2010;

(b) Take concrete measures to prevent the confinement of persons with intellectual disabilities within the home and take measures to collect statistical data, disaggregated by age, gender and disability, on the number of persons with disabilities who are detained without their consent;

China (2022)

32. The Committee notes with concern the discriminatory provisions of Art. 9 of the Law on the Protection of Persons with Disabilities, which allows for the arbitrary deprivation of liberty of persons with psychosocial disabilities, forced institutionalisation and non-consensual psychiatric treatment, on the grounds of family responsibility and on the grounds of medical assessments and diagnoses such as “severe mental disorder”. The Committee is further concerned about reports of Uyghur and other Muslim minority persons with disabilities who are detained in vocational education and training centres without support to ensure their safety and to meet all their disability-related needs.

33. The Committee recommends that the State party:

(a) Take note of the Committee’s guidelines on article 14 of the Convention (2015) (see report of the Committee on the Rights of Persons with Disabilities Supplement No. 55 (A/72/55), annex I), and repeal provisions and practices that allow for the deprivation of liberty of adults and children with disabilities on the basis of actual or perceived impairment;

(b) Revise and repeal all discriminatory legal provisions legitimizing the involuntary treatment and deprivation of liberty of persons on the grounds of their psychosocial disability and perceived dangerousness, and ensure that any treatment is always based on the free and informed consent of the person concerned;

(c) Take prompt action to release Uyghur and other Muslim minority persons with disabilities deprived of their liberty in vocational education and training centres, and immediately ensure that all disability-related needs of persons with disabilities still in detention are met.

34. The Committee is concerned about deprivation of liberty on the basis of impairment, in particular for persons with psychosocial disabilities or intellectual disabilities.

31. The Committee is concerned about:

(a) Legislation that allows the involuntary commitment in psychiatric hospitals and involuntary treatment of persons with disabilities, based on their perceived or actual impairments or dangerousness, as legitimated by the Act on Mental Health and Welfare for the Mentally Disabled;

(b) Lack of safeguards to protect the right to informed consent of persons with disabilities, including vagueness of the definition of informed consent, as regards the hospitalization.

32. The Committee recalls its Guidelines on article 14 of the Convention (2015) and the recommendations issued by the Special Rapporteur on the Rights of Persons with Disabilities (A/HRC/40/54/Add.1) and calls upon the State party to:

(a) Recognise the involuntary hospitalisation of persons with disabilities as discrimination on the grounds of impairment, amounting to the deprivation of liberty, and repeal all legal provisions allowing for the deprivation of liberty through involuntary hospitalisation of persons with disabilities on the basis of actual or perceived impairments or dangerousness;

(b) Repeal all legal provisions that legitimize non-consensual psychiatric treatment on the grounds of perceived or actual impairments, and establish a monitoring mechanism to ensure that persons with disabilities are not subjected to forced treatment and have access to the same range, quality and standard of health care on equal basis with others;

(c) Ensure safeguards, including advocacy, legal and all other necessary assistance, to protect the right to free and informed consent of all persons with disabilities, regardless their impairment.

Lao People's Democratic Republic (2022)

24. The Committee is concerned about:

- (a) The absence of statistical data on the number of persons with disabilities deprived of their liberty and placed in institutional settings;
- (b) The information provided by the State Party for the Global Study on Children Deprived of Liberty, indicating that in 2018, there were 1,010 children with disabilities living in specialized institutions across the country;
- (c) Reports of confinement of persons with disabilities, in particular persons with intensive support requirements, at home.

25. The Committee recommends that the State party take note of the Committee's guidelines on article 14 of the Convention (2015) (see report of the Committee on the Rights of Persons with Disabilities Supplement No. 55 (A/72/55), annex I), and:

- (a) Collect data of persons with disabilities deprived of liberty and placed in institutional settings, disaggregated by age, gender, and type of disability, on an annual basis;
- (b) Repeal all legislation and practices that allow for the deprivation of liberty of adults and children with disabilities on the basis of actual or perceived impairment or that authorizes institutionalization or involuntary hospitalization of persons with disabilities;
- (c) Prevent the confinement of persons with disabilities within their homes and provide for human rights-based support and community services for all persons with disabilities on an equal basis with others.

25. The Committee welcomes the commitment to repeal and replace the Mental Health (Compulsory Assessment and Treatment) Act of 1992, but is concerned that new mental health legislation may still allow for involuntary detention and compulsory treatment and may not actively involve the participation of persons with disabilities, particularly persons with psychosocial disabilities through their representative organisations in the development process;

26. The Committee recalls its guidelines on the right to liberty and security of persons with disabilities^[1] and recommends that the State party ensure that new mental health legislation embeds the Convention principles and standards to ensure that there are no provisions that allow for the deprivation of liberty on the basis of impairment or that allow for compulsory treatment, and that the development process actively involves persons with disabilities, particularly persons with psychosocial disabilities.

Legislation that allows for involuntary detention and compulsory treatment on the basis of impairment, including the Substance Addiction (Assessment and Treatment) Act 2017; That The Intellectual Disability (Compulsory Care and Rehabilitation) Act 2003, which includes extensions to compulsory care orders which allows persons with intellectual disabilities to be detained for periods of time exceeding the maximum length of the sentence they would be liable to in the criminal justice system.

28. The Committee recalls its guidelines on the right to liberty and security of persons with disabilities and recommends that the State party:

Repeal all provisions that allow for the deprivation of liberty on the basis of impairment, including the Substance Addiction (Assessment and Treatment) Act 2017;

Repeal provisions within the Intellectual Disability (Compulsory Care and Rehabilitation) Act 2003 which allow for persons with disabilities to be detained for periods of time exceeding the maximum length of the sentence they would be liable to in the criminal justice system.

31. The Committee remains concerned that persons with disabilities, especially those with psychosocial and/or intellectual disabilities, are still subjected to laws that deprive them of their liberty on the basis of impairment, and that there is a lack of information on the measures taken to ensure that those persons are not subjected to arbitrary treatment, including confinement.

32. The Committee recalls its guidelines on the right to liberty and security of persons with disabilities and recommends that the State party:

(a) Repeal all relevant legislative provisions, including the provisions of Korean Civil Act on Adult Guardianship and the Act on Mental Health Promotion and Welfare Services for People with Mental Disorder allowing for the involuntary deprivation of liberty on the grounds of impairment and perceived dangerousness to themselves or others, introduce legislation that ensures non-discrimination through, for example, procedural accommodation for persons with disabilities, including during interrogation and detention, explicitly prohibit the forced institutionalization of persons with disabilities on the ground of impairment, and restore the rights of persons with psychosocial disabilities to liberty and security of person, on an equal basis with others;

(b) Establish a monitoring mechanism to ensure that persons with psychosocial and/or intellectual disabilities are not subjected to arbitrary and forced treatment, particularly treatment that results in confinement.

29. The Committee is concerned that persons with disabilities, especially persons with psychosocial disabilities and persons with intellectual disabilities, may be deprived of their liberty on the basis of their impairment.

30. The Committee recalls its Guidelines on the right to liberty and security of persons with disabilities and recommends that the State party:

(a) Repeal all legislative provisions allowing for the involuntary deprivation of liberty of persons with psychosocial disabilities and persons with intellectual disabilities on the grounds of their impairment or their perceived dangerousness to themselves or others;

(b) Introduce legislation ensuring non-discrimination in all procedures in connection with the deprivation of liberty, guaranteeing, for example, procedural accommodation for persons with disabilities, including for the preparation of proceedings, during interrogation and for detention-related complaints;

(c) Explicitly prohibit institutionalization of persons with disabilities, particularly persons with psychosocial disabilities and persons with intellectual disabilities, and effectively protect their rights to liberty and security of person, on an equal basis with others;

(d) Provide training to health professionals, administrative and judicial officers, law enforcement staff and prison officials on the rights of persons with disabilities and on monitoring mechanisms to ensure the rights of persons with disabilities in all facilities depriving persons with disabilities of their liberty.

Hungary (2022)

28. The Committee notes with concern:

(a) The discriminatory provisions of Act CLIV of 1997 on health care, which allows for the arbitrary deprivation of liberty of persons with psychosocial disabilities and placement in mental health facilities on the basis of impairment and perceived dangerousness;

(b) The lack of legal safeguards for ensuring the rights to liberty and security of persons in psychiatric institutions, including in forensic psychiatric institutions, in which the detention and medical treatment of persons with disabilities can endure indefinitely, even when the periodic judicial review deems treatment and detention no longer necessary;

(c) The lack of availability and accessibility of human rights-based mental health services across the State party;

(d) The absence of accessibility and reasonable accommodation for persons with disabilities in penitentiary institutions, particularly for deaf persons and women and children with disabilities.

29. The Committee recommends that the State party:

(a) Review and repeal all discriminatory legal provisions legitimizing the involuntary treatment and deprivation of liberty of persons on the grounds of their psychosocial disability and perceived dangerousness, and ensure that any treatment is always based on the free and informed consent of the person concerned;

(b) Ensure legal safeguards for the rights to liberty and security of persons in psychiatric institutions, including in forensic psychiatric institutions;

(c) Develop community and human rights-based mental health services and support across the State party;

(d) Guarantee full accessibility and procedural accommodation, including augmentative and alternative modes of communication, Braille and sign language, for all persons with disabilities at penitentiary institutions.

30. The Committee further calls upon the State party to be guided by its obligations under article 14 of the Convention, and the Committee's guidelines on the right to liberty and security of persons with disabilities⁵ in relation to the draft additional protocol to the Convention for the Protection of Human Rights and Dignity of the Human Being with regard to the Application of Biology and Medicine (Oviedo Convention), and that it oppose its adoption. The State party should implement its obligations under the Oviedo Convention in a manner compatible with the human rights model of disability.

28. The Committee is concerned that persons with disabilities, especially those with psychosocial or intellectual disabilities, are still subjected to laws that deprive them of their liberty on the basis of impairment, and that there is a lack of information on the measures taken to ensure that those persons are not subjected to arbitrary treatment, including confinement. It is also concerned at the lack of monitoring mechanisms to ensure the rights and reasonable accommodation of persons with disabilities in correctional facilities.

29. The Committee recalls its guidelines on the right to liberty and security of persons with disabilities⁶ and recommends that the State party:

(a) Repeal all relevant legislative provisions allowing for the involuntary deprivation of liberty on the grounds of impairment and perceived dangerousness to themselves or others, introduce legislation that ensures non-discrimination through, for example, procedural accommodation for persons with disabilities, including during interrogation and detention, explicitly prohibit the forced institutionalization of persons with disabilities, particularly persons with psychosocial or intellectual disabilities and older persons with disabilities, and restore the rights of persons with psychosocial disabilities to liberty and security of person, on an equal basis with others;

(b) Establish a monitoring mechanism to ensure that persons with psychosocial or intellectual disabilities are not subjected to arbitrary and forced treatment, particularly treatment that results in confinement;

(c) Provide in its next periodic report statistical data on the number of persons with psychosocial or intellectual disabilities and older persons with disabilities who are still hospitalized or institutionalized without their consent;

(d) Provide training to health professionals, law enforcement staff and prison officials on the rights and dignity of persons with disabilities and on monitoring mechanisms to ensure the rights of persons with disabilities in correctional and detention facilities.

39. The Committee notes with concern that:

(a) Persons with intellectual or psychosocial disabilities have frequently been the subject of declarations of non-liability in the context of criminal proceedings, in the absence of procedural safeguards;

(b) The Code of Criminal Procedure maintains non-liability by reason of disability as a concept, and that detention measures for persons with disabilities may exceed those of regular criminal procedures.

40. With reference to its previous concluding observations, the Committee recommends that the State party:

(a) Guarantee all due process rights for persons with disabilities in processes leading to deprivation of liberty, in particular in the context of criminal proceedings, whether as indicted persons, victims or witnesses, and provide procedural accommodation, adjustments, counselling and personal assistance in such proceedings;⁷

(b) Provide training for officials in the justice and prison systems on the requirements of the Convention in processes leading to the deprivation of liberty of persons with disabilities.

Switzerland (2022)

29. The Committee notes with concern:

(a) The legal provisions that allow for the involuntary detention and treatment of persons with intellectual or psychosocial disabilities, and the increase in the number of persons under care-related hospitalization;

(b) The placement of children in institutions by child protection authorities and their placement in psychiatric facilities through adult protection provisions;

(c) The lack of a clear position opposing the draft additional protocol to the Convention for the Protection of Human Rights and Dignity of the Human Being with regard to the Application of Biology and Medicine.

30. The Committee recommends that the State party:

(a) Review and repeal all legal provisions, policies and practices that allow for the involuntary deprivation of liberty on the basis of disability;

(b) Prevent the placement of children with disabilities in institutions, psychiatric facilities or care-related hospitalization, and cease the application of adult protection provisions for children;

(c) Be guided by its obligations under article 14 of the Convention and the Committee's guidelines on the right to liberty and security of persons with disabilities,⁸ and oppose the adoption of the draft additional protocol to the Convention for the Protection of Human Rights and Dignity of the Human Being with regard to the Application of Biology and Medicine. The State party should implement its obligations under the Convention on Human Rights and Biomedicine in a manner compatible with the human rights model of disability.

Venezuela (2022)

26. The Committee is concerned that:

(a) The amendment of the Criminal Code and the updates in relation to mental health and family issues are still being debated;

(b) Following the closure of psychiatric hospitals and other institutions, the fate of the persons with psychosocial or intellectual disabilities who left them is unknown;

(c) There is no information available on persons deprived of their liberty on the basis of disability and that there are still reports of police crackdowns and deprivation of liberty of persons with disabilities.

⁸ A/72/55, annex.

- (a) Take, as a matter of urgency, the appropriate measures to amend the Criminal Code and mental health legislation to align them with the provisions of the Convention, in close consultation with organizations of persons with psychosocial or intellectual disabilities;
- (b) Collect information on persons with disabilities and their situation – whether they live alone, in a family setting or on the streets – following their departure from the institutions that were closed down;
- (c) Develop, in close consultation with organizations of persons with psychosocial or intellectual disabilities, protection programmes for persons who have left institutions, and provide for a strict oversight mechanism that enables the filing of complaints of ill-treatment or violence and includes monitoring, sanctions and measures to afford full redress;
- (d) Take, in close consultation with organizations of persons with disabilities, steps to train police officers with the aim of preventing and punishing involuntary detention, and provide for measures of redress.

23. The Committee notes with concern about the discriminatory provisions under the Criminal Code in which persons with disabilities, particularly persons with intellectual or psychosocial disabilities are declared “unfit to stand trial”, “unfit to plea”, incapable from criminal prosecution, leading to involuntary detention. The Committee is also concerned about the involuntary detention and forced hospitalization, of persons with disabilities on grounds of their actual or perceived impairment, deemed “dangerous” to themselves or others, alleged need of protection, or consent by a third party.

24. The Committee recalls its guidelines on article 14 (2015) and recommends that the State party:

- (a) Repeal provisions of the Criminal Code, specifically part II of chapter II, that allow for the involuntary deprivation of liberty and forced hospitalization of persons with disabilities, on the grounds of perceived or actual impairment, particularly for persons with intellectual or psychosocial disabilities;
- (b) Adopt measures to revise and repeal all laws, policies and practices that allow for the involuntary detention and hospitalisation of persons with disabilities, on the basis of perceived or actual impairment, alleged need of protection, care or treatment, or consent by a third party.
- (c) Ensure that persons with disabilities benefit from due process of law guarantees on an equal basis with others.

France (2021)

29. The Committee notes with concern:

- (a) Provisions in the Public Health Code and its amendments allowing forced psychiatric treatment of persons with psychosocial disabilities, the deprivation of liberty on grounds of disability and perceived dangerousness, and practices of physical restraints and solitary confinement;
- (b) Placement in close units without consent, on the grounds of psychosocial disability, including hospitalisations and other inpatient treatment not subject to judicial review, and the 12-day-period between the date of hospitalization and effective control by the liberties and detention judges, resulting into violations of the liberty of a person, and risks of exposures to chemical restraints and overmedication;
- (c) Overrepresentation of persons with psychosocial disabilities in penitentiary institutions, due to the lack of human rights-based mental-health support in communities, and lack of accessibility and reasonable accommodations for persons with disabilities in penitentiary institutions;
- (d) Mandatory outpatient treatment within the community treatment orders through the “programme des soins/care program” exempted from judicial review and the risks of involuntary re-hospitalization or losing support in cases of refusal.

30. The Committee recalls the recommendations issued by the Special Rapporteur on the Rights of Persons with Disabilities (A/HRC/40/54/Add.1, see para. 86) and calls upon the State party to:

- (a) Repeal all legal provisions allowing for involuntary treatment and restrictions of liberty on the grounds of psychosocial impairment or perceived dangerousness in institutions or community-based settings;
- (b) Prevent placement in close institutions, including prolonged or undetermined hospitalisations, ensure the exercise of the free and informed consent of persons with disabilities, and develop human rights-based support methods that respect dignity, equality, freedom and autonomy, including peer support;
- (c) Ensure expeditious review by the liberty and detention judges concerning decisions of involuntary treatment into psychiatric facilities, reducing the 12-day-period-of delay to the shortest period of time;
- (d) Ensure that persons with disabilities, deprived of their liberty are entitled to accessibility and reasonable accommodation;
- (e) Eliminate mandatory outpatient treatments and apply the World Health Organization Guidance on community mental health services: Promoting person-centred and rights-based approaches, as recommended by the WHO Comprehensive Mental Health Action Plan 2020-2030, endorsed by the World Health Assembly in 2021.

31. The Committee further calls upon the State party to be guided by its obligations under article 14 of the Convention, and the Committee's guidelines on article 14 of the Convention (2015) (see A/72/55, annex), in relation to the draft additional protocol to the Convention for the Protection of Human Rights and Dignity of the Human Being with regard to the Application of Biology and Medicine (Oviedo Convention), and that it oppose its adoption. The State party should implement its obligations under the Oviedo Convention in a manner compatible with the human rights model of disability.

27. The Committee notes with concern:

- (a) That provisions of the Mental Health Act allow for involuntary treatment of persons with psychosocial disabilities and the deprivation of liberty on the grounds of disability and perceived dangerousness, and that provisions of the Social Welfare Act allow restriction of freedom of movement of persons placed in care facilities;
- (b) Information about facilities for deprivation of liberty of children with "behavioural problems", and the placement of children with intellectual disabilities, and children with psychosocial disabilities in these detention settings;
- (c) The lack of accessibility and reasonable accommodations for persons with disabilities in penitentiary institutions.

28. The Committee recommends that the State party:

- (a) Review and repeal legal provisions allowing for involuntary deprivation of liberty on the grounds of impairment and perceived dangerousness, and restore the right of persons with psychosocial disabilities to liberty and security of person, on an equal basis with others. The State party should also develop human rights-based mental health provisions, and encourage the self-managed support groups in municipalities;
- (b) Adopt a plan of action to identify children with disabilities who are currently in institutions for children with "behavioural problems", and deinstitutionalize them on emergency basis. The State party should review the cases of children committed to detention facilities and apply non-custodial measures;
- (c) Ensure full accessibility and procedural accommodations at all stages of criminal proceedings for all persons with disabilities investigated or prosecuted, including the augmentative and alternative modes of communication and support in decision-making.

29. The Committee further calls upon the State party to be guided by its obligations under article 14 of the Convention, and the Committee's guidelines on article 14 of the Convention (2015) (see A/72/55, annex), in relation to the draft additional protocol to the Convention for the Protection of Human Rights and Dignity of the Human Being with regard to the Application of Biology and Medicine (Oviedo Convention), and that it oppose its adoption. The State party should implement its obligations under the Oviedo Convention in a manner compatible with the human rights model of disability.

27. The Committee is concerned that the current legislation permits the deprivation of liberty, forced hospitalization and forced treatment of persons with intellectual or psychosocial disabilities. It is also concerned about the use of physical restraints, particularly on persons with intellectual or psychosocial disabilities, including at home, and that police authorities have not consulted the respective organizations of persons with disabilities in adopting protocols to ensure the elimination of the use of restraints.

28. The Committee recommends that the State party repeal laws permitting the deprivation of liberty on the basis of impairment, forced treatment, the use of restraints and coercive measures based on a medicalized model of disability. It also recommends that the State party provide effective remedies to persons with disabilities deprived of their liberty on the basis of impairment and that, in close consultation with representative organisations of persons with disabilities, it adopt relevant protocols. The Committee further calls upon the State party to be guided by its obligations under article 14 of the Convention, and the Committee's guidelines on Article 14 of the Convention (2015) (see report of the Committee on the Rights of Persons with Disabilities Supplement No. 55 (A/72/55), annex I), throughout the regional discussions concerning an Additional Protocol to the Council of Europe Convention for the Protection of Human Rights and Dignity of the Human Being with regard to the Application of Biology and Medicine: Convention on Human Rights and Biomedicine (ETS No 164) (Oviedo Convention).

27. The Committee is seriously concerned about:

- (a) Legislative frameworks, policies and practices that result in the arbitrary and indefinite detention and forced treatment of persons with disabilities, and that such frameworks, policies and practices disproportionately affect Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander persons with disabilities and persons with intellectual or psychosocial disabilities;
- (b) The ongoing practice of obliging persons with "cognitive and mental impairment" to undergo treatment, including through indefinite detention in psychiatric centres, despite the recommendations contained in the Senate Community Affairs References Committee 2016 report Indefinite Detention of Persons with Cognitive and Psychiatric Impairment in Australia;
- (c) The commitment of persons with intellectual or psychosocial disabilities to custody, often indefinitely or for terms longer than those imposed in criminal convictions;
- (d) The absence of data on the number of persons found not guilty due to "cognitive or mental health impairment" indefinitely detained and the number of such persons detained on an annual basis;
- (e) The practice of retaining and restraining children with disabilities in adult settings.

28. The Committee, recalling its guidelines on the right to liberty and security of persons with disabilities (A/72/55, annex), urges the State party to:

- (a) Repeal any law or policy and cease any practice or custom that enables the deprivation of liberty on the basis of impairment and that enables forced medical interventions on persons with disabilities, particularly Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander persons with disabilities;
- (b) Implement the recommendations contained in the Senate Community Affairs References Committee 2016 report Indefinite Detention of People with Cognitive and Psychiatric Impairment in Australia;
- (c) Stop committing persons with disabilities to custody and for indefinite terms or for terms longer than those imposed in criminal convictions;
- (d) Collect data on the number of persons indefinitely detained and on the number of such persons detained on an annual basis, disaggregated by the nature of the offence, the length of the detention, disability, Aboriginal and other origin, sex, age and jurisdiction, with the aim of reviewing their detention;

(e) End the practice of detaining and restraining children with disabilities in any setting.

29. The Committee is concerned at the continued institutionalization of children and adults with psychosocial and intellectual disabilities. It is also concerned at the fact that persons with psychosocial or intellectual disabilities continue to be subjected to involuntary medication practices, restraints and treatments.

30. The Committee recommends that the State party repeal all legal provisions that permit involuntary committal and treatment and that it prohibit committal, forced treatment and the involuntary application of restraints on persons with disabilities. The Committee also recommends that the State party establish a rigorous oversight mechanism for the prevention of such practices and for the submission of complaints, monitoring, the application of penalties, measures that will afford full redress and measures to ensure that persons with disabilities can exercise their legal capacity on an equal footing with others.

28. The Committee is concerned at:

(a) Legislation such as the Mental Health Act, 2017, and articles 436 and 437 of the Criminal Procedure Code, which allow for the forced medication of, use of physical restraints on and involuntary institutionalization of persons with psychosocial or intellectual disabilities;

(b) The Family Code, which allows relatives or guardians of persons with psychosocial or intellectual disabilities to hospitalize them, without the consent of the person concerned, under the presumption of being “mentally ill”;

(c) Lack of sufficient accessibility and individualized accommodations for persons with disabilities in detention centres and police stations.

29. The Committee recommends that the State party:

(a) Immediately adopt measures to repeal or revise all legal provisions in order to prohibit medical treatment and forced institutionalization based on “unfitness to stand trial”;

(b) Ensure the dignity, autonomy and independence of persons with disabilities on matters affecting them and establish a mechanism for monitoring detention centres and for the lodging of complaints;

(c) Remove barriers preventing physical accessibility and communication accessibility in police stations and detention centres.

Greece (2019)

21. The Committee is concerned about discriminatory legal provisions, including in Law No. 2071/1992, and the corresponding practice of involuntary hospitalization and deprivation of liberty of persons with psychosocial or intellectual disabilities, as highlighted in the Greek Ombudsman’s report of July 2019, and about the use of coercive methods, such as mechanical restraints on persons with psychosocial or intellectual disabilities.

22. In line with its guidelines on the right to liberty and security of persons with disabilities (A/72/55, annex I), the Committee urges the State party to repeal all laws allowing for the involuntary deprivation of liberty on the basis of impairment, end the use of forced treatment, restraints and coercive methods, and provide effective remedies for persons with disabilities deprived of their liberty on the basis of impairment.

23. Furthermore, the Committee recommends that the State party be guided by its obligations under article 14 of the Convention, and consequently oppose the adoption of the draft additional protocol to the Convention for the Protection of Human Rights and Dignity of the Human Being with regard to the Application of Biology and Medicine, entitled “The protection of human rights and dignity of persons with mental disorder with regard to involuntary placement and involuntary treatment” in its current form.

30. The Committee is concerned about:

- (a) The institutionalization of persons with disabilities on the basis of impairment, including in “mental health care homes”, “custodial care institutions” and psychiatric hospitals, particularly affecting persons with intellectual or psychosocial disabilities, homeless persons with disabilities and persons requiring high levels of support, in the absence of measures to end all forms of institutionalization on the basis of impairment;
- (b) The confinement of persons with intellectual disabilities at home;
- (c) The incarceration of persons reported as “mentally ill” on the basis of impairment and the assumption of being unfit to stand trial.

31. The Committee recommends that the State party, taking account of the guidelines on the right to liberty and security of persons with disabilities (A/72/55, annex), take measures to:

- (a) Repeal provisions of the Mental Health Care Act and the Bombay Prevention of Begging Act that allow for institutionalization on the basis of impairment, and adopt strategies to end all forms of institutionalization, involuntary commitment and segregation on the basis of impairment, and the seclusion of persons with intellectual or psychosocial disabilities in all types of institutions;
- (b) Prevent the confinement of persons with intellectual disabilities within their homes and provide for human rights-based support and community services for all persons with disabilities on an equal basis with others;
- (c) Ensure the right of persons with psychosocial disabilities to due process and a fair trial in criminal proceedings and end the use of “criminal wards for the insane”.

27. The Committee is concerned that:

- (a) Paragraph 105 of the Criminal Code and articles 7 and 8 of Law No. 1 (2005) on mental health provide a legal basis for confining persons with intellectual or psychosocial disabilities in hospitals without their consent, and about the absence of statistical data on the number of persons with disabilities deprived of their liberty, on the reasons and legal bases for such deprivation of liberty and on the number of persons with disabilities deprived of their liberty in family settings;
- (b) There is limited information on the measures taken by the State party to ensure that the rights of persons with disabilities who are deprived of their liberty in detention centres are guaranteed, including the right to reasonable accommodation enshrined in article 15 (6) (a) of Law No. 38 (2013), and whether complaints mechanisms are accessible to them.

28. The Committee recommends that, in line with its guidelines on the right to liberty and security of persons with disabilities (A/72/55, annex), the State party:

- (a) Repeal all legislation that allows for the deprivation of liberty on the basis of actual or perceived impairment, further develop recovery-oriented and community-based rehabilitation services for persons with psychosocial or intellectual disabilities and establish complaints mechanisms that are accessible to persons with disabilities in cases of violations of their right to liberty and security;
- (b) Take all steps necessary to ensure that the denial of reasonable accommodation is recognized as discrimination on the basis of disability and ensure the provision of individualized supports and procedural accommodations to persons with disabilities suspected of having committed a crime, including during detention.

28. The Committee is concerned about:

- (a) Legislation that allows for the deprivation of liberty, as well as the forced hospitalization, institutionalization and non-consensual treatment, of adults and children with disabilities on grounds of their actual or perceived impairment, including because they are deemed dangerous to themselves or others;
- (b) Persons with disabilities, in particular persons with psychosocial or intellectual disabilities, being deprived of their liberty in residential and mental health facilities;
- (c) The lack of measures taken to ensure individualized accommodation for persons with disabilities deprived of their liberty.

29. The Committee recommends that the State party:

- (a) Repeal all laws authorizing the deprivation of liberty, as well as the forced hospitalization, institutionalization and non-consensual treatment, of adults and children with disabilities on grounds of their actual or perceived impairment;
- (b) Take immediate measures to end the forced deprivation of liberty based on impairment, including in residential and mental health facilities;
- (c) Take measures to ensure the provision of individualized accommodation to persons with disabilities deprived of their liberty.

Myanmar (2019)

27. The Committee is concerned about:

- (a) The legislative provisions allowing for deprivation of liberty of persons with disabilities and their involuntary placement in residential care institutions on the grounds of their actual and perceived impairment;
- (b) The lack of procedural and gender- and age-appropriate accommodation for persons with disabilities suspected of having committed a crime at all stages of the judicial process;
- (c) The lack of statistical data to assess the enjoyment of the right to liberty and security of persons with disabilities in the State party, disaggregated by age, gender and disability, on persons with disabilities who are currently hospitalized or institutionalized without their consent.

28. The Committee recommends that the State party, guided by the Committee's guidelines on the right to liberty and security of persons with disabilities (A/72/55, annex I):

- (a) Repeal all legislation that allows for the deprivation of liberty on the grounds of actual or perceived impairment or that authorizes institutionalization or involuntary hospitalization of persons with disabilities;
- (b) Provide for procedural and gender- and age-appropriate accommodation for persons with disabilities suspected of having committed a crime, at all stages of the judicial process, including interrogation, prosecution, trial and detention;
- (c) Put in place mandatory guidelines for admission in order to respect the dignity, integrity, will and preferences of persons with disabilities, and to ensure that they are not deprived of their liberty and provide in its next periodic report statistical data, disaggregated by age, gender and disability, on progress over time of the number of persons with disabilities who are still hospitalized or institutionalized without their consent.

29. The Committee is concerned that:

- (a) Persons with disabilities, particularly persons with psychosocial or intellectual disabilities and older persons with disabilities, may be deprived of their liberty based on the concept of "dangerousness" under the Criminal Code (1987) and under Article 36 of the Public Health Act (1983) respectively, without their free and informed consent;
- (b) No statistical data on the number of persons with psychosocial or intellectual disabilities and of older persons with disabilities, who are currently hospitalized or institutionalized without their consent, is available.

30. The Committee recommends that the State party:

- (a) Adhere to by the Committee's guidelines on the right to liberty and security of persons with disabilities (see A/72/55, annex I), repeal all legislation that allows for the deprivation of liberty based on actual or perceived impairment, introduce legislation, which ensures non-discrimination, such as through procedural accommodation to persons with disabilities, including during interrogation and detention, and explicitly prohibit forced institutionalization of persons with disabilities, particularly persons with psychosocial or intellectual disabilities and older persons with disabilities;
- (b) Provide statistical data on the number of persons with psychosocial and intellectual disabilities and of older persons with disabilities, who are hospitalized or institutionalized without their consent, in its next periodic report.

23. The Committee is concerned about:

- (a) The deprivation of liberty of persons with disabilities without their free and informed consent, including in hospitals, institutions, family settings, and psychiatric institutions, often in inhuman and degrading conditions; and the involuntary and non-consensual commitment of persons with psychosocial or intellectual disabilities;
- (b) The absence of monitoring of the conditions of persons with disabilities in institutions and other places of detention

24. The Committee recommends that the State party, guided by the Committee's guidelines on article 14 (2015):

- (a) Bring its laws and policies into line with article 14 of the Convention by ensuring that persons with disabilities, particularly persons with psychosocial or intellectual disabilities are not deprived of their liberty on the ground of disability; and guarantee access to justice and remedies for persons with disabilities who have been deprived of their liberty;
- (b) Protect the rights of persons with disabilities deprived of their liberty, particularly persons with psychosocial or intellectual disabilities, in all mental health facilities, and take measures to improve the quality of care in such facilities;
- (c) Involve persons with disabilities, through their representative organisations, in monitoring of all places where persons with disabilities may be detained and provide training to mental health professionals and law enforcement and prison officials on the rights of persons with disabilities in mental health facilities, prisons and detention centres.

23. The Committee is concerned about:

- (a) Legal provisions, including in the Mental Health Act, Patients' and the Users' Rights Act and the Health and Care Services Act, allowing for deprivation of liberty and non-consensual treatment and restraint of persons with psychosocial or intellectual disabilities;
- (b) The use of coercion such as restraints, isolation, segregation, involuntary treatment, and other intrusive methods, for persons with psychosocial or intellectual disabilities.

24. The Committee recommends that the State party:

- (a) In line with Guidelines on article 14, repeal all legal provisions allowing for involuntary deprivation of liberty on the basis of perceived or actual impairment, and forced treatment of persons with psychosocial or intellectual disability, and provide effective remedies to persons with disabilities deprived of their liberty on the basis of actual or perceived impairment;
- (b) End the use of coercion, such as restraints, isolation, segregation, involuntary treatment, and other intrusive methods, for persons with psychosocial or intellectual disabilities, including through training of staff, human rights-based and peer-led support initiatives, as well as strengthening procedural guarantees and control;
- (c) The Committee further calls upon the State party to be guided by its obligations under article 14 of the Convention, and the Committee's guidelines on Article 14 of the Convention (see A/72/55, annex I), throughout the regional discussions concerning an Additional Protocol to the Council of Europe Convention for the Protection of Human Rights and Dignity of the Human Being with regard to the Application of Biology and Medicine: Convention on Human Rights and Biomedicine (ETS No 164).

27. The Committee is concerned about the deprivation of liberty of persons with disabilities on the basis of perceived or actual impairment, and the involuntary hospitalization and institutionalization of children and adults with intellectual or psychosocial disabilities, as is the case in 59 centres listed by the National Council of Persons with Disabilities.

28. In line with its guidelines on the right to liberty and security of persons with disabilities, the Committee recommends that the State party adopt and implement legislation that prohibits, under all circumstances, any involuntary confinement of persons with disabilities in the justice system or in mental health facilities on the basis of perceived or actual impairment. It also recommends that the State party put in place mandatory guidelines of admission to respect the dignity, integrity, will and preference of persons with intellectual or psychosocial disabilities, and to ensure that they are not deprived of their liberty.

25. The Committee is concerned that the State party's Mental Health Care Act and the Code of Practice for Health-Care Professions allow for the placement of persons with disabilities, especially those with psychosocial or intellectual disabilities and children with disabilities, in habilitation- and residential centers, as well as in institutions. It moreover expresses concern that this legislation allows for their hospitalization, as well as medical treatment without their prior free and informed consent.

26. The Committee recommends that the State party, guided by the Committee's guidelines on article 14 (see A/72/55, annex):

(a) Repeal all legislative provisions, including in the Mental Health Care Act and the Code of Practice for Health-Care Professions, that authorize the institutionalization, hospitalization and involuntary medical treatment of persons with disabilities without their prior free and informed consent;

(b) Adopt measures to ensure the rights of persons with disabilities, particularly of children and persons with psychosocial or intellectual disabilities, are respected in all settings, with a special attention to their right to education;

(c) Involve persons with disabilities, through their representative organizations, in the monitoring of all places where persons with disabilities may reside and be detained, including habilitation and residential centers, prisons and detention centres, and provide training to health professionals, law enforcement and prison officials on the respect of the rights of persons with disabilities.

25. The committee is concerned about the deprivation of liberty, on the basis of impairment and alleged "mental illness" of persons with disabilities, including children, and particularly persons with psychosocial or intellectual disabilities.

26. The Committee recommends that the State party take note of Guidelines on article 14 (2015), repeal provisions and practices that allow for the deprivation of liberty of adults and children with disabilities on the basis of impairment, and introduce legal recourse for persons with disabilities at risk of being deprived of their liberty, including through institutionalization.

26. The Committee notes with concern:

(a) That Article 763 of the Civil Procedure and Organic Law still allows persons with psychosocial or intellectual disabilities to be subjected to involuntary commitment in institutions where they can be denied of their liberty and subjected to forced medical treatment and mechanical restraint;

(b) That the use of medication is imposed on persons with psychosocial disabilities as criteria to access services of psychosocial support and housing;

(c) The lack of awareness by health-care professionals about the obligations under the Convention, which leads to prejudicially justifying forced institutionalization and mechanical restraint as "therapeutic measures";

(d) The lack of sufficient provisions within the Criminal Procedure Act currently ensuring accessibility, individualised reasonable accommodations and supports for detained persons with disabilities.

27. The Committee recommends that the State party:

(a) Revise or repeal all legal provisions, including Article 763 of the Civil Procedure, to prohibit forced institutionalization and treatment on the grounds of disability and to ensure human rights-based mental health provisions;

(b) Repeal the requirement for the use of the psychiatric medication to access psychosocial support and housing;

(c) Provide awareness raising and capacity building training developed in consultation with organizations of persons with disabilities for mental health professionals on the rights of persons with disabilities and obligations enshrined under the Convention;

(d) Ensure accessibility and procedural accommodations at all stages of criminal proceedings for persons with disabilities investigated or prosecuted, including provisions for their support in decision-making and guarantee their right to defence.

28. The Committee further calls upon the State party to adhere to its obligations under article 14 of the Convention, and be guided to the Committee's guidelines on Article 14 of the Convention (see A/72/55, annex I), throughout the regional discussions concerning an Additional Protocol to the Council of Europe Convention for the Protection of Human Rights and Dignity of the Human Being with regard to the Application of Biology and Medicine (Oviedo Convention).

29. The Committee is concerned about:

(a) Legislation including the Civil Code and the Law on the Execution of Penalties and Security Measures allowing for the deprivation of liberty of persons with disabilities on the basis of presumed dangerousness for treatment, rehabilitation or education purposes and their diversion from the justice system;

(b) The lack of information on legal and administrative review mechanisms for persons with intellectual or psychosocial disabilities in relation to institutionalization processes;

(c) Reports of detentions of persons with disabilities without accessible conditions at the police and law-enforcement institutions.

30. The Committee recommends that the State party:

(a) Repeal from its legislation the concept of dangerousness and abolish institutionalization based on the same criterion, taking into account the Committee's guidelines on the right to liberty and security of persons with disabilities (see A/72/55, annex) and repeal exceptions to criminal prosecution and criminal responsibility that result in deprivation of liberty;

(b) Ensure that persons with disabilities have access, on an equal basis with others, including through the provision of procedural and age-appropriate accommodations, to legal proceedings to appeal their deprivation of liberty;

(c) Ensure that detention facilities, and police and law enforcement institutions are accessible for persons with disabilities.

31. The Committee further calls upon the State party to be guided by its obligations under article 14 of the Convention, and the Committee's guidelines on Article 14 of the Convention (2015) (see report of the Committee on the Rights of Persons with Disabilities Supplement No. 55 (A/72/55), annex I), throughout the regional discussions concerning an Additional Protocol to the Council of Europe Convention for the Protection of Human Rights and Dignity of the Human Being with regard to the Application of Biology and Medicine: Convention on Human Rights and Biomedicine (ETS No 164) (Oviedo Convention).

26. The Committee is concerned that persons with disabilities, especially those with psychosocial or intellectual disabilities, are still subjected to laws that deprive them of their liberty and that there is a lack of information on the measures taken to ensure that they are not subject to arbitrary treatment, including confinement.

27. The Committee recalls its guidelines on the right to liberty and security of persons with disabilities (see A/72/55, annex I) and recommends that the State party:

(a) Repeal all relevant provisions in legislations, including mental health laws, that allow for the deprivation of liberty of persons with disabilities on the basis of impairments, particularly persons with psychosocial or intellectual impairments;

(b) Establish a monitoring mechanism to ensure that persons with psychosocial or intellectual disabilities are not subjected to arbitrary and forced treatment, which results in confinement.

28. The Committee is concerned about the deprivation of liberty of persons with disabilities and the involuntary placement of persons with disabilities in residential care institutions based on their actual or perceived impairment. It is also concerned about the lack of reasonable accommodation or age-appropriate accommodation for persons with disabilities suspected of having committed a crime at all stages of the judicial process, particularly during their interrogation and detention.

29. The Committee recommends that the State party, guided by the Committee's guidelines on the right to liberty and security of persons with disabilities (see A/72/55, annex I), repeal all legislation that allows for the deprivation of liberty on the basis of actual or perceived impairment or that authorize institutionalization without the free and informed consent of the person, including cases where consent is substituted by a third party. It also recommends that the State party introduce legislation, which provides for reasonable accommodation and/or procedural accommodation to persons with disabilities suspected of having committed a crime, including during interrogation, prosecution, trial and detention.

33. The Committee notes with concern that persons with disabilities with restricted legal capacity may still be placed by a court in a specialized institution or under residential care under provisions of Social Assistance Act articles 166, 16 (c) and 16 (d).

34. The Committee urges that the State party amend its Social Assistance Act and withdraw provisions allowing for forced institutionalization, taking into account the Committee's guidelines on the right to liberty and security of persons with disabilities (see Report of the Committee on the Rights of Persons with Disabilities Supplement No. 55 (A/72/55), annex I).

23. The Committee is concerned that some legislation in place is not in line with the Convention, particularly the Mental Health Act (Cap. 525), which allows the involuntary detainment and non-consensual psychiatric treatment of persons with disabilities, on the grounds of psychosocial and intellectual disabilities. It also notes with concern the continued hospitalisation of persons with psychosocial and intellectual disabilities without their consent.

24. The Committee recommends that the State party revise and repeal the legal provisions that legitimise forced internment and non-consensual psychiatric treatment on the grounds of psychosocial and intellectual disability and fully harmonize their provisions with article 14 of the Convention and the Committee's guidelines on article 14 of the Convention (see A/72/55, annex).

28. The Committee is concerned that Rule 101 of the Philippine Rules of Court on Proceedings for the Hospitalization of 'Insane' Persons and the provisions of the Mental Health Act maintaining procedures for involuntary detention on the basis of impairment.

29. The Committee recommends that the State party, in line with the Committee's Guidelines on article 14 of the Convention on the Rights of Persons with Disabilities (see report of the Committee on the Rights of Persons with Disabilities Supplement No. 55 (A/72/55), annex I):

(a) Repeal Rule 101 of the Philippine Rules of Court on Proceedings for the Hospitalization of 'Insane' Persons, conduct review of its Mental Health Act and withdraw provisions that allow for detention in psychiatric hospitals and other types of institutions;

(b) Stop processes aimed at institutionalization of persons with disabilities in psychiatric hospitals on the basis of actual or perceived impairment.

23. The Committee is concerned about the:

- (a) Mental Health Protection Act allowing for involuntary treatment of persons with disabilities and involuntary deprivation of liberty on the grounds of their psychosocial disability, including placement in institutions by their guardians as being considered voluntary;
- (b) Limitations of personal liberty of persons with disabilities living in social care institutions;
- (c) Lack of independent monitoring of public and private care and mental health facilities;
- (d) Lack of reasonable accommodation and access to health care for persons with disabilities in penitentiary.

24. The Committee recommends that the State party:

- (a) Repeal all legal provisions allowing for involuntary treatment of persons with disabilities and their placement in institutions on the grounds of psychosocial disability;
- (b) Abolish limitation of personal liberty of persons living in social care institutions;
- (c) Develop recovery-oriented and community-based rehabilitation services for persons with psychosocial disabilities;
- (d) Develop monitoring mechanisms for public and private care and mental health facilities;
- (e) Ensure reasonable accommodation and access to quality health care for all persons with disabilities in penitentiary.

25. The Committee commends the State party for opposing the ratification of the Council of Europe Convention for the Protection of Human Rights and Dignity of the Human Being with regard to the Application of Biology and Medicine: Convention on Human Rights and Biomedicine (ETS No 164) (Oviedo Convention), and encourages it to raise concerns and disapproval throughout the regional discussions concerning an Additional Protocol.

South Africa (2018)

26. The Committee notes with concern:

- (a) The intention of the Government to revise the Older Persons Act (2006) following the amendment of the Mental Health Care Act (2002) with no indication regarding timeframes for these amendments.
- (b) The alarming increase in the number of admissions of persons with disabilities in mental health care institutions, which almost doubled between 2015 and 2017;
- (c) The absence of adequate measures to monitor the situation of persons with disabilities in institutions and other places of detention and the lack of training of staff regarding the rights of persons with disabilities to reasonable accommodation.

27. The Committee recommends that the State party:

- (a) Guided by the Committee's guidelines on article 14 of the Convention, repeal all legislation that authorizes forced institutionalization and repeal all laws that allow for deprivation of liberty on the basis of impairment;
- (b) Take effective measures for the de-institutionalisation of persons with disabilities and adopt adequate measures to ensure the rights of persons with disabilities, particularly persons with psychosocial and/or intellectual disabilities, deprived of their liberty in all mental health facilities;
- (c) Adopt measures to revise the Older Persons Act (2006) and the Mental Health Care Act (2002), to strengthen their alignment with the Convention, including providing clear timeframes for these amendments.
- (d) Meaningfully involve persons with disabilities, through their representative organisations, in monitoring of all places where persons with disabilities are deprived of their liberty and provide training to mental health professionals and law enforcement and prison officials to respect the rights of persons with disabilities in mental health facilities, prisons and detention centres.

North Macedonia (2018)

28. The Committee is concerned about the legal provisions allowing for deprivation of liberty and non-consensual treatment and restraint of persons with psychosocial disabilities in mental health facilities.

29. The Committee recommends that the State party, in line with Guidelines on article 14, repeal all legal provisions allowing for involuntary deprivation of liberty on the basis of impairment, and involuntary treatment of persons with psychosocial disability, further, develop recovery-oriented and community-based rehabilitation services for persons with psychosocial disabilities.

1. The Committee is concerned that persons with psychosocial and/or intellectual disability deprived of their legal capacity are denied the right to take part in a litigation and to stand as witnesses in procedures before civil courts. Furthermore, it is also concerned about the barriers which persons with disabilities in general face in accessing justice due to lack of:

(a) Procedural accommodation, as well as the use of sign language, Braille, accessible digital formats, Easy Read and all other accessible means, modes and formats of communication in all legal proceedings;

(b) Accessibility to justice buildings, courts and tribunals and police stations, for persons with physical disabilities;

(c) Human rights based knowledge on disability of the justice system and law enforcement personnel on the rights of persons with disabilities;

(d) Mechanisms for persons with disabilities to report violence, including the lack of access to justice for children with intellectual disabilities, women with disabilities or those living in institutions;

(e) Legal assistance for persons with disabilities, including legal assistance and procedural accommodation for persons with psychosocial disabilities;

(f) Access to legal professions for persons with disabilities based on presumptions that they are “unfit” for the profession.

2. The Committee recommends that the State party guarantee equal and supported access to all judicial processes for persons with intellectual and/or psychosocial disabilities deprived of their legal capacity. It further recommends to ensure that persons with disabilities have access to justice in practice, and in particular to:

(a) Ensure procedural accommodation, as well as the use of sign language, Braille, augmentative and alternative communication, and all other accessible means, modes and formats of communication in all legal proceedings;

(b) Ensure that justice buildings, courts and tribunals, and police stations, are accessible for persons with physical disabilities;

(c) Provide regular training to law enforcement and judicial officers about the rights of all persons with disabilities and obligations of the State Party under the Convention;

(d) Ensure effective mechanisms for persons with disabilities to report violence, including crimes on the grounds of hatred, as well as access to justice for children with intellectual disabilities, women with disabilities or those living in institutions;

(e) Ensure universal and free legal assistance for persons with disabilities, having low income particularly, and legal assistance and procedural accommodation for persons with psychosocial disabilities;

(f) Support persons with disabilities to practice legal professions and ensure reasonable accommodation for this purpose;

(g) Be guided by article 13 of the Convention in the implementation of target 16.3 of the Sustainable Development Goals.²⁶ The Committee notes with concern that:

(a) Legislation in place is not in line with the Convention, and particularly that persons with psychosocial or intellectual disabilities can be declared interdicted, unfit to benefit from regular procedures, and hence deprived of the liberty for unlimited time;

(b) Forced detention on the grounds of disability is permissible, including in the new draft reform of the penal Code and the Code of criminal procedure;

(c) Persons with disabilities suspected of having committed a crime face extended pre-trial detention and are not allowed bail on the ground that they are a danger to themselves and others;

(d) Persons with psychosocial disabilities can be forcibly interned in a psychiatric establishment and receive non-consensual psychiatric treatment, on the grounds of their impairments;

(e) The deinstitutionalization plan under the national health policy of 2014 has not been implemented.

27. The Committee recalls its guidelines on article 14 of the Convention (A/72/55, annex I) and recommends that the State party:

(a) Take the legal and other measures necessary to ensure that persons with disabilities accused of an offence are entitled to a fair trial and due process guarantees on an equal basis with others;

(b) Revise and repeal the legal provisions that legitimate forced internment and non-consensual psychiatric treatment on the grounds of disability and ensure that all draft legislation is in line with the Convention;

(c) Carry out research on the impact on the personal security of persons deprived of their liberty who are either hospitalized or detained in prison or other secure settings on the basis of their impairment without their free and informed consent with a view to end this practice;

(d) Expedite the implementation of the deinstitutionalization plan under the national health policy of 2014.

25. The Committee is concerned that persons with intellectual and/or psycho-social disabilities are allegedly chained or detained in houses or forcibly placed in psychiatric facilities, and that physical examinations, medical treatments and medications are sometimes carried out without the free consent of persons with disabilities as well as reported cases of chaining, torturing and over-dozing of persons with intellectual disabilities in psychiatric treatment facilities.

26. The Committee recommends that the State party take all legal and other appropriate measures necessary to stop the deprivation of liberty of persons with disabilities on the basis of actual or perceived impairment, and that any examination or treatment of persons with disabilities be undertaken after free and informed consent of the persons concerned, in line with the Committee's guidelines on the right to liberty and security of persons with disabilities, adopted by the Committee at its fourteenth session (17 August-4 September 2015) (see Report of the Committee on the Rights of Persons with Disabilities Supplement No. 55 (A/72/55), Annex). In this regard, the Committee recommends that the State party investigate, prosecute and punish cases of chaining, detention in private homes, and forcible placement and treatment in psychiatric facilities.

29. The Committee is concerned about:

(a) Impairment-based detention and forced institutionalization of persons with disabilities, especially against persons with psychosocial and/or intellectual disabilities;

(b) The condition of "mental hospitals" currently operating in Oman and the number of patients admitted at the Ibn Sina Hospital without their free and informed consent;

(c) Insufficient monitoring of the conditions of persons with disabilities in institutions and other places of detention and lack of training of staff regarding the rights of persons with disabilities to reasonable accommodation.

30. The Committee recommends that the State party:

(a) Guided by the Committee's guidelines on article 14 (A/72/55, Annex) , repeal all legislation that authorizes institutionalization without the free and informed consent of the person, party, and repeal all laws that allow for deprivation of liberty on the basis of impairment;

(b) Ensure due process of law guarantees for all persons with disabilities on an equal basis with others, including access to justice and remedies;

(c) Adopt measures to ensure the rights of persons with disabilities, particularly persons with psychosocial and/or intellectual disabilities, deprived of their liberty in all mental health facilities, and take measures to improve the quality of care therein;

(d) Involve persons with disabilities, through their representative organisations, in monitoring of all places where persons with disabilities may be detained and provide training to mental health professionals and law enforcement and prison officials to respect the rights of persons with disabilities in mental health facilities, prisons and detention centres.

32. The Committee notes with concern that persons with disabilities, particularly with psychosocial disabilities may still be deprived of their liberty in psychiatric hospitals or other institutions, on the basis of their impairment under provisions of the Criminal Code and the Code of Criminal Procedure.

33. The Committee urges the State Party to amend its Criminal Code and the Code of Criminal Procedure and fully harmonize their provisions with article 14 of the Convention and the Committee's guidelines on article 14 of the Convention (A/72/55, annex I).

22. The Committee is concerned about:

(a) Provisions in the State party's Mental Health Act allowing for detention of persons with psychosocial disabilities on the basis of impairment, and their treatment without consent in psychiatric hospitals;

(b) The placement in secure wards without consent in care institutions and psychiatric hospitals, including in overcrowded secure wards;

(c) The lack of reasonable accommodation, such as hygiene and medical care accommodation, in the system of enforcement of criminal sanctions, and in detention places.

23. The Committee recommends that the State party:

(a) Conduct a review and repeal all legislation providing for involuntary commitment and non-consensual psychiatric treatment of persons with disabilities on the grounds of their actual or perceived impairment under any condition, including alleged risk and dangerousness, and be guided by the Committee's guidelines on the right to liberty and security of persons with disabilities (see report of the Committee on the Rights of Persons with Disabilities Supplement No. 55 (A/72/55), annex I);

(b) Ensure the integrity and security of persons with disabilities, residing in institutions and hospitals, in full respect of their dignity and consent;

(c) Provide reasonable accommodation in the system of enforcement of criminal sanctions and places of detention, including provision of suitable health care.

24. The Committee further calls upon the State party to be guided by its obligations under article 14 of the Convention, and the Committee's guidelines on Article 14 of the Convention (2015) (see report of the Committee on the Rights of Persons with Disabilities Supplement No. 55 (A/72/55), annex I), throughout the regional discussions concerning an Additional Protocol to the Council of Europe Convention for the Protection of Human Rights and Dignity of the Human Being with regard to the Application of Biology and Medicine: Convention on Human Rights and Biomedicine (ETS No 164) (Oviedo Convention).

22. The Committee is concerned about:

(a) Provisions in the State party's Mental Health Act allowing for detention of persons with psychosocial disabilities on the basis of impairment, and their treatment without consent in psychiatric hospitals;

(b) The placement in secure wards without consent in care institutions and psychiatric hospitals, including in overcrowded secure wards;

(c) The lack of reasonable accommodation, such as hygiene and medical care accommodation, in the system of enforcement of criminal sanctions, and in detention places.

23. The Committee recommends that the State party:

(a) Conduct a review and repeal all legislation providing for involuntary commitment and non-consensual psychiatric treatment of persons with disabilities on the grounds of their actual or perceived impairment under any condition, including alleged risk and dangerousness, and be guided by the Committee's guidelines on the right to liberty and security of persons with disabilities (see report of the Committee on the Rights of Persons with Disabilities Supplement No. 55 (A/72/55), annex I);

(b) Ensure the integrity and security of persons with disabilities, residing in institutions and hospitals, in full respect of their dignity and consent;

(c) Provide reasonable accommodation in the system of enforcement of criminal sanctions and places of detention, including provision of suitable health care.

24. The Committee further calls upon the State party to be guided by its obligations under article 14 of the Convention, and the Committee's guidelines on Article 14 of the Convention (2015) (see report of the Committee on the Rights of Persons with Disabilities Supplement No. 55 (A/72/55), annex I), throughout the regional discussions concerning an Additional Protocol to the Council of Europe Convention for the Protection of Human Rights and Dignity of the Human Being with regard to the Application of Biology and Medicine: Convention on Human Rights and Biomedicine (ETS No 164) (Oviedo Convention).

27. The Committee is concerned about article 49 of the Criminal Code leading to arbitrary institutionalization of persons with disabilities and about the enduring practice of institutionalizing persons with disabilities against their will and for extended periods of time, including in institutions run by traditional healers.

28. Taking into consideration its guidelines on article 14 (2015), the Committee recommends that the State party review article 49 of the Criminal Code to ensure that persons with disabilities are not arbitrarily institutionalized in the context of criminal procedures, and take measures to eradicate the forced institutionalization of persons with disabilities, in particular with intellectual and/or psychosocial disabilities, including in institutions run by traditional healers.

24. The Committee is concerned that:

(a) The Law on Social Services and Social Assistance allows persons with intellectual and/or psychosocial disabilities to be institutionalized in psychiatric facilities when the necessary psychiatric services are not available in the community;

(b) The legal review of cases of involuntary placement in institutions is ineffective;

(c) Persons residing in institutions may face undue restrictions in relation to their free movement outside such institutions;

(d) Persons with intellectual and/or psychosocial disabilities who are deprived of their liberty may face restrictions on accessing their personal medical files and medication.

25. The Committee, in accordance with its guidelines on article 14 of the Convention regarding the right to liberty and security of persons with disabilities (2015), recommends that the State party:

(a) Repeal all relevant legislation in order to prevent the institutionalization of persons with intellectual and/or psychosocial disabilities and to increase the availability of community-based mental health services;

(b) Repeal the provisions that allow persons with disabilities to be involuntarily committed to mental health institutions and, until as such time that these provisions have been amended, ensure that they have access to a court of law to challenge any such action;

(c) Ensure the free movement of persons residing in institutions;

(d) Ensure access for persons with intellectual and/or psychosocial disabilities who are deprived of their liberty to their personal medical files and medication.

Luxembourg (2017)

28. The Committee is concerned that legislation in place is not in line with the Convention, particularly the 2009 Act on the hospitalization of persons with mental disorders without their consent, which allows the forced internment in a psychiatric establishment and non-consensual psychiatric treatment of persons with disabilities, on the grounds of psychosocial disabilities. The Committee is also concerned that persons with psychosocial and/or intellectual disabilities accused of a criminal offence do not have the right to due process but instead, are subjected to detention in the judicial psychiatric unit within the penitentiary centre (art. 71 of the Penal Code). It is further concerned by the absence of research on the impact on the personal security of persons deprived of their liberty who are either hospitalized or detained in prison, or other secure settings.

29. The Committee recommends that the State party:

- (a) Revise and repeal the legal provisions that legitimate forced internment and non-consensual psychiatric treatment on the grounds of disability;
- (b) Ensure that persons with disabilities accused of an offence are entitled to a fair trial and due process guarantees on an equal basis with others;
- (c) Carry out research on the impact on the personal security of persons deprived of their liberty who are either hospitalized or detained in prison or other secure settings without their free and informed consent.

28. The Committee notes with concern that the current medical approach to disability permits the deprivation of liberty of persons with disabilities on the basis of impairment and provides for involuntary hospitalization and forced institutionalization of children and adults with intellectual and/or psychosocial disabilities. The Committee also notes with concern that, pursuant to article 33 of the Protection and Exercise of the Rights of the Mentally Ill Act, police officers are obliged to deprive a person of liberty based only on the suspicion of “mental illness”. The Committee is concerned about the lack of information on any safeguards in this regard and the possibility of challenging such deprivation of liberty.

29. The Committee urges the State party to repeal laws and protocols permitting any form of deprivation of liberty based on impairment or perceived impairment and to provide effective safeguards and remedies to persons with disabilities who have been deprived of their liberty on the basis of impairment.

30. The Committee is concerned about the deprivation of liberty, on the basis of impairment and alleged dangerousness, of persons with disabilities, including children, and in particular persons with psychosocial and/or intellectual disabilities.

31. The Committee recommends that the State party repeal provisions and practices that allow for the deprivation of liberty of adults with disabilities and children with disabilities on the basis of impairment and introduce legal recourse for persons with disabilities at risk of being deprived of their liberty, including through institutionalization or internment, and to that end be guided by, inter alia, the Committee’s guidelines on article 14 of the Convention.

34. The Committee is concerned at the fact that persons with disabilities in the State party, including persons with psychosocial disabilities, continue to be placed in institutions and at the lack of data on this subject.

35. The Committee recommends that the State party protect and safeguard persons with disabilities from institutionalization and explicitly prohibit their institutionalization.

34. The Committee is concerned that the State party’s legislation provides for involuntary, compulsory treatment and detention both inside and outside hospitals on the basis of actual or perceived impairment.

35. The Committee recommends that the State party:

- (a) Repeal legislation and practices that authorize non-consensual involuntary, compulsory treatment and detention of persons with disabilities on the basis of actual or perceived impairment;
- (b) Take appropriate measures to investigate and eliminate all forms of abuse of persons with disabilities in institutional facilities.

Armenia (2017)

23. The Committee is concerned about:

- (a) The legal provisions allowing arbitrary deprivation of liberty, including involuntary hospitalization and forced institutionalization, of persons with psychosocial and/or intellectual disabilities for lengthy periods of time, sometimes their entire life, and the lack of sufficient safeguards and legal assistance for persons with disabilities who are deprived of their liberty in institutions;
- (b) The overcrowding and poor living and sanitary conditions, including inappropriate nutrition, in places of deprivation of liberty, in particular in residential and penitentiary institutions;
- (c) The lack of reasonable accommodation, including advocacy support, for persons with disabilities in penitentiary institutions.

24. The Committee recommends that the State party:

- (a) Repeal laws and prohibit detention, including involuntary hospitalization and forced institutionalization, as well as non-consensual psychiatric treatment, on the grounds of impairment;
- (b) Ensure that all places of deprivation of liberty, including residential, psychiatric and penitentiary institutions, maintain accessible and humane living conditions responding to the requirements of all persons with disabilities;
- (c) Ensure access to reasonable accommodation, including advocacy support, for persons with disabilities in penitentiary institutions.

26. The Committee is concerned that the current practice permits deprivation of the liberty of persons with disabilities on the basis of impairment and provides for involuntary hospitalization and forced institutionalization of children and adults with intellectual and/or psychosocial disabilities.

27. The Committee urges the State party to repeal laws permitting deprivation of liberty on the basis of impairment, forced treatment and the use of restraints and coercive measures based on a medical-based model of disability, and to provide effective remedies to persons with disabilities deprived of their liberty on the basis of impairment.

31. The Committee is concerned about:

- (a) Involuntary detention of persons with psychosocial disabilities in psychiatric institutions on the basis of impairment, across various State party jurisdictions;
- (b) Legislation at the federal, provincial and territorial levels relating to detention of accused persons with psychosocial and/or intellectual disabilities who may be found unfit to stand trial, in the context of criminal procedures;
- (c) Information regarding inmates with psychosocial and/or intellectual disabilities being inappropriately identified as having “behavioural problems” instead of a disability, which limits the provision of the reasonable accommodation and appropriate health care available to them;
- (d) The lack of reasonable accommodation for women with disabilities within the federal prison system, and the adverse effect of their administrative segregation within detention facilities;
- (e) Information about indigenous persons with disabilities and migrants with disabilities, who, along with persons with intellectual and psychosocial impairments, are overrepresented in prisons in the State party.

32. The Committee urges the State party to:

- (a) Review federal, provincial and territorial policies and practices related to involuntary detention with the aim of bringing those policies and practices into compliance with article 14 of the Convention and the respective guidelines;
- (b) Set up a minimum core obligation across the federal, provincial and territorial jurisdictions regarding the right to stand trial for persons with disabilities, with appropriate accommodation during criminal proceedings;

(c) Ensure access to health services, including psychosocial support, for inmates under the federal jurisdiction on an equal footing with others, on the basis of their free and informed consent;

(d) Adopt and implement guidelines to provide reasonable accommodation for all persons with disabilities who are detained in prison and/or detention centres, and ensure that women in such centres receive appropriate support and reasonable accommodation;

(e) Work in partnership with the Canadian Human Rights Commission and the provincial human rights commissions in order to assess, and set up measures to address, the situation of indigenous and migrant persons with disabilities in prison.

37. The Committee is concerned that non-voluntary confinement and treatment of persons with psychosocial disabilities remains legal, especially on the grounds of having a “serious mental disorder”, such as being considered dangerous to oneself or to others.

38. The Committee recommends that the State party in line with general comment No. 1 (2014) and the guidelines on article 14 (2015) take the legislative amendments necessary to prohibit all forms of non-voluntary detention and/or treatment on the grounds of impairment or impairment-related assumptions, and further ensure adequate and individualized support to persons with intellectual and/or psychosocial disabilities.

35. Al Comité le preocupa la vigencia en el ordenamiento jurídico hondureño de normas sobre salud mental que estipulan la privación de la libertad de personas con discapacidad con base en la presencia real o percibida de una discapacidad psicosocial, como en los hospitales Santa Rosita y Mario Mendoza. Preocupa también al Comité que las personas declaradas inimputables de la comisión de un delito en razón de una deficiencia puedan ser objeto de medidas de seguridad, incluida la detención indefinida. Expresa asimismo su inquietud por la situación de las personas con discapacidad privadas de libertad en las cárceles y otros lugares de detención.

36. El Comité insta al Estado parte a que revise y reforme sus leyes, incluyendo la Ley de Salud Mental y el Código Penal con el objeto de armonizar la legislación con las disposiciones del artículo 14 de la Convención y proteger efectivamente las garantías del debido proceso de las personas con discapacidad, particularmente con discapacidad psicosocial, proporcionando los apoyos que requieran durante los procesos judiciales. El Comité le pide al Estado parte que revise los casos de internamiento en los hospitales Santa Rosita y Mario Mendoza. El Comité insta al Estado parte a que, a través de la Defensoría del Pueblo, proteja judicialmente todos los derechos de las personas con discapacidad, propiciando una debida asistencia jurídica y velando por el cumplimiento de un debido proceso de las personas con discapacidad.

30. The Committee is concerned that persons with disabilities can be detained in institutions, such as hospices, rehabilitation, and care centers on the basis of impairment. The Committee is concerned that having a psychosocial and/or intellectual impairment is a reason for not standing trial and being subjected to detention in psychiatric hospitals, in the context of criminal procedures.

31. The Committee recommends that the State party:

(a) Repeal legislation, policies and practices that allow forced institutionalization of persons with disabilities on the basis of impairment, including for the purpose of psychiatric treatment, rehabilitation or the alleged need of ‘care’; and

(b) Reaffirm the right to a fair trial of persons with disabilities, particularly persons with psychosocial and/or intellectual disabilities, in accordance with the Convention, and end detention on psychiatric hospitals on the basis of impairment.

29. The Committee notes with concern that, pursuant to article 233 (5) of the Code of Criminal Procedure (Law No. 9 of 1961) and articles 14 and 15 of the Public Health Law (No. 47 of 2008), persons with disabilities may be deprived of their liberty on grounds that they “constitute a danger to themselves or to society” as a result of their impairment.

30. The Committee urges the State party to repeal the relevant provisions of the Code of Criminal Procedure and the Public Health Law in order to prohibit detention on the grounds of disability, including involuntary placement in hospitals, institutions or prisons, in line with the Committee’s guidelines (2015) on the right to liberty and security of persons with disabilities (art. 14 of the Convention).

28. The Committee is concerned that:

(a) Legislation in place, particularly Law No. 1402 on mental health is not in line with the Convention and allows the forced internment in a psychiatric establishment and non-consensual psychiatric treatment of persons with disabilities, on the grounds of psychosocial and/or intellectual impairment;

(b) Persons with psychosocial and/or intellectual disabilities accused of a criminal offence do not have the right to due process but are instead subjected to a medical coercive measures;

(c) Persons with disabilities are arbitrarily deprived of their liberty and individual autonomy in institutions for lengthy periods of time, sometimes their entire life, on the basis of an actual or perceived impairment.

29. The Committee urges the State party to:

(a) Revise and repeal the legal provisions that authorize forced internment and non-consensual psychiatric treatment on the grounds of impairment;

(b) Ensure that persons with disabilities accused of an offence are entitled to a fair trial and due process on an equal basis with others;

(c) Take all legal and other measures necessary to stop the deprivation of liberty of persons with disabilities on the basis of an actual or perceived impairment.

Bolivia (2016)

35. The Committee is concerned that due process guarantees are not observed in the State party, especially with regard to persons with intellectual or psychosocial disabilities. It is also concerned that security measures are applied to persons identified in connection with an offence but who have been declared not criminally responsible by reason of “mental disability”.

36. The Committee urges the State party to apply due process guarantees, including the presumption of innocence and the right to a fair trial, to all persons with disabilities, on an equal basis with others. It also recommends that the State party review and amend its criminal legislation to eliminate declarations of non-responsibility on grounds of disability and the security measures that are imposed as a result of these declarations.

37. The Committee is concerned that there is no information about the detention of persons with disabilities against their will in the State party.

38. The Committee urges the State party to prohibit detention on grounds of disability, carry out a survey of persons with disabilities who have been placed in confinement by reason of their disability, and subsequently adopt and implement a plan for their deinstitutionalization that includes social alternatives, has an adequate budget, and is monitored by an independent authority in consultation with organizations of persons with disabilities. In order to implement these recommendations, the Committee recommends that the State party conform to the guidelines on liberty and security of the person (art. 14).

36. The Committee is concerned about the lack of detailed information on the number and situation of persons institutionalized and detained because of their disability. It is also concerned that persons with psychosocial disabilities are deprived of their liberty on the grounds that they require medical treatment and with only the consent of their legal representative.

37. The Committee recommends that the State party explicitly prohibit forced institutionalization on the basis of disability, and that it adopt protocols to guarantee the exercise of the right to free and informed consent of persons with disabilities.

38. The Committee notes with concern that the Criminal Code still provides for the absence of criminal responsibility by reason of an intellectual or psychosocial disability, and that the protective measure of deprivation of liberty is applied without procedural guarantees.

39. The Committee recommends that the State party amend its criminal legislation in line with the Convention, provide reasonable procedural accommodation for persons with disabilities involved in criminal proceedings and guarantee their right, on an equal basis with others, to due process, the presumption of innocence, and legal assistance and qualified defence counsel.

40. The Committee notes with concern that centres of deprivation of liberty for convicted persons are not accessible and do not have specific health and rehabilitation services for persons with disabilities. It is also concerned about the fact that detained persons with disabilities do not have access to administrative benefits on an equal basis with others, for example, participation in vocational activities.

41. The Committee recommends that the State party adopt an accessibility plan for all centres of deprivation of liberty for persons subject to criminal proceedings, and provide health and rehabilitation services and professional and vocational training for persons with disabilities. It also recommends that the State party, in implementing these recommendations, follow the guidelines on liberty and security of person (art. 14 of the Convention).

31. The Committee is concerned that forced detention on the basis of impairment is allowed. The Committee is concerned that the legislation of the State party allows for persons with intellectual and psychosocial disabilities to be declared unfit to stand trial, without due process of law. It is also concerned that persons with disabilities who are declared to be unfit to stand trial are subjected to security measures and, on that account, deprived of their liberty without a time limitation.

32. The Committee recommends that the State party repeal laws permitting deprivation of liberty on the basis of impairment and draft new legislation that prohibits that practice. It also recommends that the State party repeal those laws that allow for persons with intellectual or psychosocial disabilities to be declared unfit to stand trial, and that it allow that such persons benefit from due process of law guarantees. Likewise, security measures cannot be applied to carry out the deprivation of liberty without proof of guilt. The Committee refers the State party to its guidelines on article 14.

39. The Committee notes with concern that persons with intellectual or psychosocial disabilities have frequently been the subject of declarations of non-liability in the context of criminal proceedings, in the absence of procedural safeguards.

40. The Committee recommends that the State party adopt the necessary measures to guarantee due process for persons with disabilities in the context of criminal proceedings, whether as indicted persons, victims or witnesses, and to define specific criteria for providing procedural and age-appropriate accommodations during such proceedings. It also recommends setting up training mechanisms for justice officials, prison officers and public officials responsible for law enforcement throughout the country in accordance with the Convention.

41. The Committee notes with concern that, under the Civil Code, persons with disabilities may be deprived of their liberty on grounds of disability.

42. The Committee urges the State party to bring its laws and policies into line with article 14 of the Convention, by ensuring that persons with disabilities are not deprived of their liberty on grounds of disability. The State party is encouraged to refer to the Committee's guidelines on article 14.

33. The Committee is concerned about restrictive measures for “socially dangerous” persons, including persons who are deemed a danger to themselves or others.

34. The Committee recommends that the State party carry out legal and policy reform in order to prohibit detention, including involuntary hospitalization and/or treatment, on the grounds of disability, as outlined above, so that laws and policies are harmonized with the Committee’s statement on article 14.

35. The Committee is concerned that the criminal law of the State party allows persons with intellectual or psychosocial disabilities to be declared unfit to plead, without application of the rules of due process for a fair trial. It is also concerned that persons with disabilities who are declared unfit to plead may be subjected to security measures involving forced deprivation of liberty for an indefinite time.

36. The Committee recommends that the State party repeal criminal laws that allow persons with intellectual or psychosocial disabilities to be declared unfit to plead, allowing the full application of the rules of due process for a fair trial. It also recommends that the State party ensure that safety measures do not involve indeterminate deprivations of liberty without proof of guilt.

37. The Committee is concerned about the lack of equal treatment of prisoners with disabilities compared with those without disabilities.

38. The Committee recommends that the State party ensure the provision of reasonable accommodation to prisoners with disabilities to ensure their participation in and access to all services and activities, on an equal basis with others, in prisons or other centres of detention.

27. The Committee is concerned:

(a) That persons are detained involuntarily in specialized institutions on the basis of their impairment and are deprived of their liberty because of a disability, including an intellectual or psychosocial disability;

(b) That persons with intellectual and psychosocial disabilities accused of an offence are declared unfit to stand trial and not given due process.

28. The Committee recommends that the State party:

(a) Repeal all legislation that authorizes institutionalization without the free and informed consent of the person, including in cases where consent is substituted by a third party, and repeal all laws that allow for deprivation of liberty on the basis of disability;

(b) Ensure that persons with disabilities accused of an offence are entitled to a fair trial and due process of law guarantees, including the presumption of innocence, on an equal basis with others;

(c) Be guided by the Committee’s guidelines on article 14 of the Convention on the right to liberty and security of persons with disabilities in the implementation of the present recommendations.

33. Al Comité le preocupa la vigencia en el ordenamiento jurídico uruguayo de normas como la Ley 9581 de 1936 sobre salud mental, que estipula la privación de la libertad de personas con discapacidad con base en la presencia real o percibida de una discapacidad psicosocial. Preocupa también al Comité que las personas declaradas inimputables en la comisión de un delito en razón de una deficiencia puedan ser objeto de medidas de seguridad, incluida la detención indefinida. Expresa asimismo su inquietud por la situación de las personas con discapacidad privadas de libertad en centros penitenciarios y otros lugares de detención.

34. El Comité insta al Estado parte a que revise y reforme sus leyes, incluyendo la Ley de salud mental y el Código Penal con el objeto de armonizar la legislación con las disposiciones del artículo 14 y proteger efectivamente las garantías del debido proceso de las personas con discapacidad, particularmente con discapacidad psicosocial o discapacidad intelectual, proporcionando los apoyos que requieran durante los procesos judiciales. El Comité insta al Estado parte a que, a través de la Defensoría del Pueblo, proteja judicialmente todos los derechos de las personas con discapacidad, propiciando una debida asistencia jurídica y velando por el cumplimiento del debido proceso para las personas con discapacidad. Se recomienda también que el Estado parte adopte medidas para que los centros penitenciarios sean accesibles y se realicen ajustes razonables para las personas con discapacidad.

29. Al Comité le preocupa el criterio de “peligrosidad” utilizado para determinar la privación de libertad con base en la presencia real o percibida de una discapacidad psicosocial. Asimismo le preocupa el elevado número de personas declaradas inimputables que son internadas durante períodos prolongados en los hospitales psiquiátricos, en su mayoría en el Hospital Philippe Pinel en Putaendo, y la espera injustificada y prolongada para que las causas de internamiento sean revisadas por un juez, lo cual viola las garantías del debido proceso.

30. El Comité recomienda al Estado parte que revise el criterio de peligrosidad que determina el internamiento forzado en centros psiquiátricos. Asimismo le recomienda revisar y reformar su Código Penal con el objeto de proteger efectivamente las garantías del debido proceso de las personas con discapacidad, particularmente con discapacidad psicosocial y/o intelectual, proporcionando los apoyos que requieran durante los procesos judiciales, considerando el género y la edad.

32. El Comité recomienda al Estado parte que prohíba la institucionalización forzada por motivo de la discapacidad.

29. The Committee is concerned that the Law on Mental Health (1995), the draft amendment to the Law on Mental Health Care and the Civil Code of 2000 allow for persons with psychosocial disabilities to undergo involuntary hospitalization and non- consensual treatment and to be subjected to indefinite or temporary restraints.

30. The Committee is also concerned at the lack of statistical data on the non-consensual treatment of persons with psychosocial disabilities, including when a guardian or family member consented to the treatment.

31. The Committee recommends that the State party:

(a) Immediately repeal laws permitting deprivation of liberty based on impairment, forced treatment and the use of restraints and seclusion, and enact new legislation, prohibiting those practices, including within the current draft amendment to the Law on Mental Health Care;

(b) Involve organizations representing persons with psychosocial disabilities in the development of new legislation;

(c) Collect and use data to monitor and eliminate all forms of involuntary hospitalization and treatment of persons with psychosocial disabilities.

Portugal (2016)

32. The Committee is concerned that the State party’s Criminal Procedure Code declares persons with psychosocial disabilities to be criminally irresponsible, and that their legal safeguards are not respected in criminal proceedings. Likewise, it is concerned about the internment of persons with disabilities based on the concept of dangerousness, as well as deprivation of liberty on the basis of disability under the Mental Health Law (Law 36/1998 and Law 101/1999).

33. The Committee requests that the State party, in accordance with the Convention and the Committee guidelines on article 14 (2015),:

(a) Review its criminal law in order to ensure all persons with disabilities enjoy equal due process guarantees, including the presumption of innocence and the right to a fair trial, on equal basis with others, by providing procedural and reasonable accommodations and access to information and communication at the request of legal and/or administrative proceedings concerning deprivation of liberty; and,

(b) Remove from its criminal law the dangerousness criterion and the preventive and security measures linked with that, in cases where a person with psychosocial disability is accused of a criminal offence, eliminate the possibility of deprivation of liberty under this criterion, and repeal provisions of the Mental Health Law which permit deprivation of liberty on the basis of disability.

25. The Committee is concerned that the Law on the Protection of Persons with Mental Disabilities permits the deprivation of liberty on the basis of impairment and provides for involuntary hospitalization and forced institutionalization of children and adults with intellectual and/or psychosocial disabilities.

26. The Committee urges the State party to repeal laws, including the law on the protection of persons with mental disabilities, and prohibit impairment-based detention of children and adults with disabilities, including involuntary hospitalization and forced institutionalization, and ensure that all relevant legislation and policies in this area are in line with the Convention as interpreted in the Committee's guidelines on art. 14. It should also accelerate deinstitutionalization in consultation with organizations of persons with disabilities and the development of support services in the community.

43. The Committee is concerned about legislation that allows for the deprivation of liberty of persons with disabilities on the basis of their impairment. It is also concerned about the situation experienced by persons with intellectual and psychosocial disabilities who appear to be involved in the commission of crimes.

44. The Committee recommends that the State party repeal provisions allowing for involuntary hospitalization under the Health Care Act and imposition of institutional forensic treatment under the Criminal Code. It also recommends that the State party apply the rules of due process to all persons with disabilities, according to the Committee's guidelines on the right to liberty and security of persons with disabilities.

29. The Committee is concerned that national laws provide for involuntary detention on the basis of impairment. It is also concerned about the lack of information on the safeguards and guarantees in place in the criminal justice system for persons with disabilities who are declared unfit to stand trial, the detention of persons based on that declaration and the application of security measures, often for an indefinite period of time.

30. The Committee recommends that the State party repeal all legislation that authorizes institutionalization on the basis of impairment without the free and informed consent of the person, including cases where consent is substituted by a third party. It also recommends that the declaration of unfitness to stand trial be removed from the criminal justice system and that the State party review the procedures used to penalize persons with disabilities when they commit criminal offences in order to ensure due process guarantees for persons with disabilities on an equal basis with others, for example, the presumption of innocence and the rights to defence and to a fair trial.

26. The Committee is concerned about the deprivation of liberty of persons with disabilities on the basis of impairment, according to the provisions of the 1971 Trial on Indictments Act and article 23 (1) (f) of the Constitution.

27. The Committee recommends that the State party:

- (a) Repeal all constitutional and legal provisions that provide for forced detention on the basis of impairment and involuntary institutionalization of persons with disabilities;
- (b) Repeal legislative and other provisions that allow for detention of persons with disabilities, and permit indefinite postponement of criminal proceedings while ordering incarceration which unduly discriminate against persons with disabilities and do not allow for fair trial standards on an equal basis with others.

28. The Committee is concerned at reports of the arbitrary deprivation of liberty and involuntary treatment of persons with disabilities on the basis of impairment, including situations where it is assumed that persons with disabilities are dangerous to themselves or others on the basis of a diagnosis of impairment.

29. The Committee recommends the State party to take measures, including the repeal of relevant legal provisions, to abolish the practice of involuntary commitment or hospitalization prohibit forced medical treatment, in particular, psychiatric treatments, on the basis of impairment and provide sufficient community-based alternatives.

30. The Committee is concerned that persons with disabilities who are deemed not liable for the commission of a crime on the basis of impairment may be subject to security measures, including indefinite detention. The Committee is also concerned about arbitrary detentions that may amount to inhuman and degrading treatment or torture. It is further concerned about the situation of persons with disabilities deprived of their liberty in prisons and other places of detention, which are severely overcrowded and where psychical and psychological ill-treatment of inmates becomes a norm, as stated by the UN Special Rapporteur on torture and other cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment at the end of his official visit to Brazil in August 2015.

31. The Committee recommends the State party to:

- (a) Abolish security measures that involve the arbitrary detention of persons with disabilities on the basis of impairment and implement alternative measures that are consistent with articles 14 and 19 of the Convention; and
- (b) Ensure that penitentiary facilities are accessible and provide reasonable accommodation for persons with disabilities.

40. The Committee is concerned about the involuntary detention of persons with disabilities in psychiatric hospitals or other institutions on the basis of actual or perceived impairment.

41. The Committee recommends that the European Union take all possible measures to ensure the liberty and security of all persons with all types of disabilities in line with the Convention and the Committee's Guidelines on article 14 (2015).

32. The Committee is concerned about the involuntary detention of persons in specialised institutions on the basis of their impairment as well as the deprivation of liberty based on disability, including psychosocial disability.

33. The Committee recommends that the State party repeal all legislation that authorises institutionalisation without the free and informed consent of the person, including cases where consent is substituted by a third party, and repeal laws that allow for the deprivation of liberty on the basis of disability.

34. The Committee is concerned about the lack of information about persons with disabilities who are allegedly involved in crimes and about the application of the rule of law in such cases.

35. The Committee recommends that the State party ensure that all persons with disabilities, particularly persons with psychosocial or intellectual disabilities, are guaranteed the same substantive and procedural guarantees as others in the context of criminal proceedings, including the presumption of innocence and the right to a fair trial.

Kenya (2015)

27. The Committee notes with concern that persons with disabilities can be detained on the basis of actual or perceived impairment, alleged danger of persons to themselves or to others and alleged need of concealment and/or treatment which is incompatible with the Convention. It is also concerned that persons with disabilities who are considered of “unsound mind” and/or “insane” can be subjected to deprivation of liberty and that they are not entitled to the same guarantees as other persons in the criminal procedures.

28. The Committee recommends that the State party:

(a) Amend legislation to prohibit involuntary placement in particular, to repeal provisions of the Mental Health Act (1989), amend Person Deprived of Liberty Act 2015 which allows detention for purposes of psychiatry treatment and ensure that new legislation is fully compatible with article 14 of the Convention in all cases; and

(b) Repeal the provisions of the Criminal Procedure Code Section 166 concerning the declaration of “insanity” and reaffirm the right to fair trial of persons with disabilities in accordance with the paradigm of the Convention.

25. The Committee is concerned that the legislation of the State party provides for the involuntary hospitalization and institutionalization of persons with disabilities, including children on the basis of their impairments or because they are deemed to represent a danger for themselves and for the society, and that no data is available in this respect.

26. The Committee recommends that the State party amend legislation to prohibit involuntary placement and promote alternative measures in line with the Convention.

27. The Committee is concerned about the involuntary detention of persons in specialised institutions on the basis of their impairment as well as the deprivation of liberty based on disability, including intellectual and/or psychosocial disabilities. It is also concerned that persons with intellectual and/or psychosocial disabilities accused of an offence are declared unfit to stand trial and not given due process. It is also concerned that victims of crimes who are persons with intellectual and/or psychosocial disabilities may be temporarily placed in institutions while their case is being resolved.

28. The Committee recommends that the State party repeal all legislation that authorises institutionalisation without the free and informed consent of the person, including cases where consent is substituted by a third party, and repeal all laws that allow for the deprivation of liberty on the basis of disability. It also recommends that the State party ensure that persons with disabilities accused of an offence are entitled to the provision of procedural accommodations and a fair trial and due process guarantees on an equal basis with others, including the presumption of innocence.

30. The Committee notes with concern that the State party’s law “On psychiatric assistance” allows for non-consensual institutionalization and treatment of persons based on their impairments. Furthermore, the Committee is concerned that despite the improvements in the State party’s Penal Code from April 2014, the challenges in relation to access to hygiene products, medical and technical facilities for persons with disabilities in penitentiary institutions still remain.

31. The Committee urges the State party to repeal laws that allow for deprivation of liberty on the basis of impairment. The Committee also recommends that the State party take measures to implement its legislation providing for reasonable accommodation in prisons in order not to aggravate incarceration conditions based on disability.

27. The Committee is concerned about the deprivation of liberty of persons with psychosocial disabilities, and their removal to medical facilities in New Zealand. Furthermore, the Committee is concerned with the lack of provision of reasonable accommodation to prisoners with disabilities

28. The Committee recommends that the State party:

(a) Repeal all legislation to prohibit detention on the grounds of disability, including involuntary placement in hospitals, institutions, or prisons;

(b) Ensure provision of reasonable accommodation to prisoners with disabilities.

Croatia (2015)

19. The Committee is concerned that people with disabilities are subjected to involuntary detention and admission in institutions on the basis of their impairment. Of particular concern is the practice of detaining involuntarily people with psycho-social and intellectual disabilities.

20. The Committee recommends repealing legal provisions which permit involuntary commitment on the basis of impairment and that laws, including the Act on Protection of Persons with Mental Disorders, are aligned with the Convention.

21. The Committee is concerned that there is a lack of information about people with disabilities allegedly involved in crimes and about the application of the rule of law in these cases.

22. The Committee recommends the State party to review procedures and practices related to investigation, prosecution, and treatment of persons with disabilities committing criminal offences. It is recommended to examine whether the general safeguards and legal standards of criminal justice, i.e. the presumption of innocence, the right to fair trial apply. The Committee's statement on article 14 of the Convention is recommended as guidelines in this regard.

Czech Republic (2015)

26. The Committee notes with concern that persons with disabilities may still be deprived of their liberty on basis of their disability under provisions of the Act on Social Services, the Health Services Act, the Act on Special Judicial Procedures, the Criminal Code and the Civil Procedure Code.

27. The Committee urges the State party to amend aforementioned legislations and fully harmonize their provisions with provisions of article 14 of the Convention. As a guideline it is recommended to take a recent statement of the Committee on article 14 into account.

28. The Committee recommends that the State party adopt a policy to initiate a structural review of the procedures used to sanction persons with disabilities when they commit criminal offences. The system should comply with the general safeguards and guarantees established for all persons accused of a crime in the criminal justice system, inter alia, the presumption of innocence, and the right to defence and to a fair trial. The Committee also recommends the application of reasonable accommodation in prisons in order not to aggravate incarceration conditions based on disability.

26. The Committee is concerned that persons with psychosocial disabilities are being institutionalized in the Padre Billini Centre without their free and informed consent.

27. The Committee recommends that the State party adopt a mechanism to ensure that persons with disabilities, particularly psychosocial disabilities, can give their free and informed consent on placement in psychiatric centres.

28. The Committee notes with concern the absence of procedural safeguards for persons with psychosocial disabilities in criminal proceedings. It is also concerned that the internment of persons with disabilities is based on the concept of dangerousness.

29. The Committee calls on the State party to:

(a) Review its criminal law in order to ensure that all persons with disabilities have guarantees of due process, on an equal basis with others, and are provided with the necessary reasonable accommodation and access to information and communication at the various stages of administrative and judicial proceedings for deprivation of liberty;

(b) Remove from its criminal law the concept of dangerousness in cases where a person with psychosocial disabilities is accused of a crime, as well as the deprivation of liberty based on the same criterion.

Germany (2015)

29. The Committee is concerned about the widespread practice of involuntary placement in institutions of persons with psychosocial disabilities, the lack of protection of their privacy and the lack of available data on their situation.

30. The Committee recommends that the State party take all the immediate necessary legislative, administrative and judicial measures to:

(a) Amend legislation to prohibit involuntary placement and promote alternative measures that are in keeping with articles 14, 19 and 22 of the Convention;

(b) Implement an independent inquiry using a human rights-based review of psychiatric services for persons with disabilities, their privacy, and the collection of relevant data.

31. The Committee notes with concern the lack of information about persons with disabilities in the criminal justice system that have been declared unfit to stand trial, the detention of persons based on that declaration, and the application of safety measures, often for an indefinite period of time.

32. The Committee recommends that the State party:

(a) Initiate a structural review of the procedures used to penalize persons with disabilities when they commit criminal offences;

(b) Ensure that persons with disabilities have equal access to due process guarantees established for all persons accused of a crime in the criminal justice system, inter alia, the presumption of innocence, the right to defence and to a fair trial;

(c) Ensure reasonable accommodation in places of detention.

25. The Committee is concerned that there are insufficient legal safeguards, other than references to Constitution, to ensure persons with intellectual and psychosocial disabilities are protected from forced hospitalization and institutionalization. The Committee is concerned about the lack of information on people with disabilities allegedly involved in crimes, and whether the rules of due process apply in these cases.

26. The Committee recommends that the State party adopt a policy to initiate a structural review of the procedures used to sanction persons with disabilities when they commit criminal offences. The system should comply with the general safeguards and guarantees established for all persons accused of a crime in the criminal justice system, inter alia, the presumption of innocence, and the right to defence and to a fair trial. The Committee also recommends the application of reasonable accommodation in prisons in order not to aggravate incarceration conditions for persons with disabilities.

29. The Committee is concerned that there is no available data on persons with disabilities who are involuntarily placed on psychiatric facilities. It is also concerned that these orders are reported generally based on the alleged "dangerousness" of the person with disabilities, partly based on the concept of insanity.

30. The Committee recommends that the State party:

(a) Repeal the laws that allow for the deprivation of liberty on the basis of disability and potential "dangerousness", with a view to prohibiting disability-based forced detention of children and adults with disabilities;

(b) Ensure that the general safeguards and guarantees established for all persons accused of a crime in the criminal justice system, inter alia, the presumption of innocence, and the right to defence and to a fair trial as well as reasonable accommodation in prisons are provided for persons with disabilities on an equal basis with others.

29. The Committee is concerned that the Mental Health (Compulsory Assessment and Treatment) Act 1992 has been criticized for its lack of human rights principles.

30. The Committee recommends that the State party take all the immediate necessary legislative, administrative and judicial measures to ensure that no one is detained against their will in any medical facility on the basis of actual or perceived disability. The Committee also recommends that the State party ensure that all mental health services are provided on the basis of the free and informed consent of the person concerned, in accordance with the Convention. The Committee further recommends that the Mental Health (Compulsory Assessment and Treatment) Act 1992 be amended to comply with the Convention.

31. The Committee notes that the State party continues to allow the use of seclusion and restraints in psychiatric hospitals. Although there has been a decline in this practice, the situation is not satisfactory.

32. The Committee recommends that immediate steps be taken to eliminate the use of seclusion and restraints in medical facilities.

33. The Committee is concerned that the criminal justice system in New Zealand includes conditions in which a person with disabilities can be declared “unfit to stand trial” and on that basis can be deprived of liberty. The system does not recognize that a person with disabilities should only be deprived of liberty when found guilty of a crime, after criminal procedure has been followed, with all the safeguards and guarantees applicable to everyone.

34. The Committee recommends that the State Party review the criminal justice system to ensure that criminal procedure is followed in accordance with all the safeguards and guarantees that are applicable to non-disabled persons, and that deprivation of liberty should be applied as a matter of last resort and when other diversion programmes, including restorative justice, are insufficient to deter future crime. The Committee also recommends that the State Party ensure that reasonable accommodation in prison settings operates in respect of persons with disabilities.

34. The Committee is concerned at the distinction made by the State party between punishment and treatment, according to which persons considered “unfit to stand trial” on account of their impairment are not punished but are sentenced to treatment. Treatment is a social control sanction and should be replaced by formal criminal sanctions for offenders whose involvement in crime has been determined. The procedure applied when determining whether a person should be sentenced to treatment is not in accordance with the safeguards that a criminal procedure should have if it may result in a sanction being imposed on a person. Sentencing a person to treatment is therefore incompatible with article 14.

35. The Committee recommends that the State party adopt a policy to initiate a structural review of the procedures used to sanction persons with disabilities when they commit criminal offences. The system should comply with the general safeguards and guarantees established for all persons accused of a crime in the criminal justice system, inter alia, the presumption of innocence, and the right to defence and to a fair trial.

36. The Committee is concerned that the Psychiatric Act allows for compulsory hospitalization or treatment in a medical facility in respect of a person with mental health impairments, against her or his will, if the person is considered to be a danger to herself or himself or to others, which amounts to a deprivation of liberty or security on the basis of disability, contrary to article 14 of the Convention.

37. The Committee recommends that the State party take all necessary measures, including revision of the Psychiatric Act, to ensure that persons with disabilities enjoy the right to liberty and security of person. The Committee recommends that the State party ensure that no one will be detained in any facility on the basis of actual or perceived disability.

25. The Committee is concerned that the existing legal provisions in the Mental Health Act, as well as the draft amendment to the Act, allow for deprivation of liberty on the basis of disability. It is also concerned about the high rate of institutionalization, including long-term institutionalization, of persons with psychosocial disabilities without their free and informed consent.

26. The Committee recommends that the State party repeal the existing legal provisions allowing for the deprivation of liberty on the basis of disability, including a psychosocial or intellectual disability, and adopt measures to ensure that health-care services, including all mental health care services, are based on the free and informed consent of the person concerned. The Committee also recommends that until the law is amended, all cases of deprivation of liberty of persons with disabilities in hospitals and specialized institutions be reviewed and that the review include a possibility of appeal.

27. The Committee is concerned about the lack of information on the safeguards and guarantees in force to ensure persons with disabilities who are declared unfit to stand trial the right to a fair trial in the Republic of Korea. The Committee notes the information provided by the State on the provision of legal aid for such persons and the rendering of not-guilty verdicts; however, no information was provided on the actual measures the Republic of Korea applies as sanctions for those persons considered unfit to stand trial.

28. The Committee recommends the establishment of procedural accommodations that ensure fair trial and due process guarantees for persons with disabilities. It also recommends that the declaration of unfitness to stand trial be removed from the criminal justice system in order to allow due process for persons with disabilities on an equal basis with others.

25. The Committee is concerned that the Act on mental health adopted in 1990 allows for the involuntary hospitalization of persons with psychosocial disabilities.

26. The Committee recommends that the State party repeal laws providing for the involuntary hospitalization of persons with psychosocial disabilities on the basis of their disability.

27. The Committee is concerned that the new Act on the Confinement of Persons, adopted in May 2014, which governs safety measures applicable to persons who have been deprived of legal capacity, is not in conformity with the Convention. The measures are forms of social punishment that are adopted not on the basis of the principle of proportionality, but rather in response to a person's perceived "dangerous" state. The procedure used to put in place safety measures for persons who have been deprived of legal capacity is not in accordance with the procedural guarantees established in international human rights law, such as, inter alia, the presumption of innocence, the right to a defence and the right to a fair trial.

28. The Committee recommends that the State party revise the Act of May 2014 to remove the system of safety measures applicable to persons with disabilities who have been deprived of legal capacity. Persons with disabilities who have committed a crime should be tried under the ordinary criminal procedure, on an equal basis with others and with the same guarantees, although with specific procedural adjustments to ensure their equal participation in the criminal justice system.

29. The Committee also recommends that the State party should guarantee the right to reasonable accommodation for all persons with disabilities who are detained in prison; ensure their access to health care on an equal footing with others, on the basis of their free and informed consent, and to the same level of health care as that provided in society at large; establish an independent formal complaints mechanism accessible to all persons detained in prisons or in forensic institutions; and repeal extrajudicial intervention programmes that involuntarily commit individuals to mental health establishments or force them to register with the mental health services. The provision of these services should be based on the free and informed consent of the person concerned.

28. The Committee is concerned that the State party considers that certain persons with disabilities, specifically those who have been abandoned and classified as "serious and chronic cases of oligophrenia”, remain institutionalized and do not have the necessary support to live in the community. The Committee is also concerned that the State party has not taken action to guarantee due process for persons with disabilities accused of having committed an offence. It is also concerned that declaring persons with disabilities unfit to stand trial is a pretext for applying security measures involving their indefinite deprivation of liberty and that they are not entitled to the same guarantees as other persons in the criminal justice system.

29. The Committee recommends that the State party: (a) Draw up a comprehensive deinstitutionalization plan for persons currently in the Julio Endara Psychiatric Hospital that ensures their personal safety and provides them with the guarantees enabling them to exercise their right to be included in the community. The comprehensive plan must include actions to guarantee the accommodation, food and personal assistance services they require to ensure their full inclusion; (b) Refrain from declaring persons with disabilities unfit to stand trial when they are accused of an offence so that they are entitled to due process, on an equal basis with others, and that the general guarantees of criminal law and procedure are observed; (c) Eliminate the security measures that involve forced medical and psychiatric treatment in institutions and promote alternative measures that are in keeping with articles 14 and 19 of the Convention; (d) Ensure that all mental health services are delivered with the free and informed consent of the person concerned.

27. The Committee notes with concern that persons with intellectual or psychosocial disabilities have frequently been the subject of declarations of non-liability in the context of criminal proceedings, in the absence of procedural safeguards. It is also concerned that the reform of the Code of Criminal Procedure maintains non-liability by reason of disability as a concept in the legal system.

28. The Committee recommends that the State party:

(a) Adopt the necessary measures to guarantee due process for persons with disabilities in the context of criminal proceedings, whether as indicted persons, victims or witnesses, and define specific criteria for making reasonable accommodations during such proceedings; (b) Promote training mechanisms for justice and prison officials in accordance with the Convention’s legal paradigm.

29. The Committee is concerned that Mexican legislation authorizes deprivation of liberty in the case of persons with intellectual and psychological disabilities, on the ground of their disability; in particular, that provision is made for their confinement in psychiatric institutions in the context of medical or psychiatric treatment.

30. The Committee urges the State party to:

(a) Eliminate security measures that mandate medical and psychiatric inpatient treatment and promote alternatives that comply with articles 14 and 19 of the Convention; (b) Repeal legislation permitting detention on grounds of disability and ensure that all mental health services are provided based on the free and informed consent of the person concerned.

35. The Committee is concerned that Swedish law allows for a person to be confined against his or her will in a medical facility if he or she has a psychosocial disability and is considered to be a danger to himself or herself or to others. The Committee is further concerned that the law also allows for compulsory psychiatric care in medical institutions or within the community.

36. The Committee recommends that the State party take all the immediate necessary legislative, administrative and judicial measures to ensure that no one is detained against their will in any medical facility on the basis of actual or perceived disability. The Committee also recommends that the State party ensure that all mental health services are provided with the free and informed consent of the person concerned. It recommends that the State allocate more financial resources to persons with intellectual and psychosocial disabilities who require a high level of support, in order to ensure that there are sufficient community-based outpatient services to support persons with disabilities.

28. The Committee is concerned that the law permits the deprivation of liberty based on disability and provides for involuntary hospitalisation and forced institutionalisation of children and adults with intellectual and/or psychosocial disabilities. The Committee is particularly concerned at reports of poor health care in such places.

29. The Committee urges the State party to repeal laws and prohibit disability based detention of children and adults with disabilities including involuntary hospitalisation and forced institutionalisation and ensure that all relevant legislation and policies in this area are in line with the Convention. It should also develop support services in the community and accelerate deinstitutionalisation strategies based on the human rights model of disability in consultation with DPOs.

30. The Committee is concerned at reports of poor living conditions of persons with disabilities in certain places of deprivation of liberty.

31. The Committee calls upon the State party to ensure that all places of deprivation of liberty, particularly prisons, maintain accessible and humane living conditions in line with the Convention. In this regard, the State party should ensure that monitoring bodies such as the Office of the Ombudsman and the National Preventive Mechanism have sufficient resources and unimpeded access to all places of deprivation of liberty in the State party.

29. The Committee is concerned about the situation of persons with disabilities who have been institutionalized on grounds of their disability and women and children with disabilities who are in a situation of abandonment or abuse, and the fact that their disability is the reason for their institutionalization.

30. The Committee calls on the State party to implement strategies to deinstitutionalize persons with disabilities and to protect them from violence, abuse and ill-treatment of any kind through ongoing monitoring by the Ombudsman's Office or other independent human rights monitoring mechanism.

31. The Committee is concerned that persons with disabilities, who are deemed unfit to stand trial due to an intellectual or psychosocial disability can be detained indefinitely in prisons or psychiatric facilities without being convicted of a crime, and for periods that can significantly exceed the maximum period of custodial sentence for the offence. It is equally concerned that persons with disabilities are over-represented in both the prison and juvenile justice systems, in particular women, children and Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander peoples with disability.

32. The Committee recommends that the State party, as a matter of urgency:

(a) Ends the unwarranted use of prisons for the management of un-convicted persons with disabilities, with a focus on Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander persons with disabilities, by establishing legislative, administrative and support frameworks that comply with the Convention;

(b) Establishes mandatory guidelines and practice to ensure that persons with disabilities in the criminal justice system are provided with appropriate supports and accommodation;

(c) Reviews its laws that allow for the deprivation of liberty on the basis of disability, including psychosocial or intellectual disabilities, and repeal provisions that authorize involuntary internment linked to an apparent or diagnosed disability.

33. The Committee is further concerned that under Australian law, a person can be subjected to medical interventions against his or her will, if the person is deemed to be incapable of making or communicating a decision about treatment.

34. The Committee recommends that Australia should repeal all legislation that authorises medical interventions without free and informed consent of the persons with disabilities concerned, and legal provisions that authorize commitment of individuals to detention in mental health services, or the imposition of compulsory treatment either in institutions or in the community via Community Treatment Orders (CTOs).

29. The Committee is deeply concerned that Austrian laws allow for a person to be confined against his or her will in a psychiatric institution where they have a psychosocial disability and it is forecast that they might endanger themselves or other persons. The Committee is of the opinion that the legislation is in conflict with article 14 of the Convention because it allows a person to be deprived of their liberty on the basis of their actual or perceived disability.

30. The Committee urges the State Party to take all necessary legislative, administrative and judicial measures to ensure that no one is detained against their will in any kind of mental health facility. It urges the State party to develop deinstitutionalization strategies based on the human rights model of disability.

31. The Committee also urges the State party to ensure and that all mental health services are provided based on the free and informed consent of the person concerned. It recommends that the State allocate more financial resources to persons with intellectual and psychosocial disabilities who require a high level of support, in order to ensure that there are sufficient community based outpatient services to support persons with disabilities.

31. The Committee is concerned that disability constitutes grounds for deprivation of liberty in the State party. The Committee regrets the lack of information about the situation of persons with psychosocial or intellectual impairments who are held in psychiatric centres and other institutions and about legal remedies available to challenge involuntary institutionalization. The Committee is concerned at the lack of reasonable accommodation for persons with disabilities held in prisons and other detention centres.

32. The Committee calls on the State party to abolish the rules that allow for deprivation of liberty on grounds of disability, give persons with disabilities the ability to hurt themselves or others and mandate care or treatment. It urges the State party to define adequate health-care procedures, such as making psychological care contingent upon the free and informed consent of the concerned party. The Committee calls on the State party to establish a mechanism to monitor the situation of persons with disabilities in prisons and other detention centres and to set up a legal framework for the provision of reasonable accommodation that preserves their dignity.

33. The Committee regrets the lack of information on persons with disabilities who have been committed to institutions against their will, or on the procedures that make involuntary committal possible.

34. The Committee urges the State party to have an independent human rights mechanism gather information on persons with disabilities in institutions, oversee and monitor the situation of persons with disabilities who have been placed in institutions and launch a procedure for their reintegration into society and the community.

35. The Committee notes with concern that the State party is adopting measures on the deprivation of liberty on grounds of disability, such as committal of children, women and men with disabilities to homes or psychiatric hospitals without free and informed consent and for lengthy periods of time. Specifically, the Committee is concerned at the measures the State party is adopting to reinforce the model of deprivation of liberty on grounds of disability, as in the Albino Luis and Pequeño Cotelengo homes.

36. The Committee urges the State party to revise its procedures on committal on grounds of disability in order to ensure that persons with disabilities who are subject to those procedures are able to fully exercise their legal capacity as provided in the Convention. It also urges the State party to institute a broad strategy, including a programme to provide support in decision-making, for the inclusion of homeless persons with disabilities in the community, particularly those with intellectual or psychosocial disabilities.

23. The Committee notes with concern that involuntary long-term committal is still common in the State party, despite the fact that deinstitutionalization strategies have been adopted and the National Mental Health Act (Act No. 26.657) is based on the human rights model of disability.

24. The Committee urges the State party to implement the deinstitutionalization strategies that it has adopted in an effective manner and to develop and implement mental health plans based on the human rights model of disability, along with effective measures to promote the deinstitutionalization of persons with disabilities.

25. The Committee is concerned that, when a person with a psychosocial or intellectual disability is declared to be exempt from criminal responsibility in criminal proceedings, due process guarantees are not upheld and the person is immediately deprived of his or her liberty without even having been shown to be linked to the event in question.

26. The Committee requests the State party to modify its federal and provincial criminal laws so that decisions regarding the application of security measures to persons found to be exempt from criminal responsibility are taken only after due process guarantees concerning the right to a defence and the right to the assistance of a lawyer, including any adjustments in the proceedings that may be necessary in order to guarantee the exercise of such rights, have been upheld.

25. The Committee is concerned that the deprivation of liberty on the grounds of disability is allowed in the state party, and that involuntary civil commitment is perceived as a tool to maintain the public order. In this context, the Committee finds it disturbing that many persons with actual or perceived impairments are involuntarily committed to psychiatric institutions for various reasons, such as being petitioners. In addition, the Committee is concerned that many persons who indeed live with intellectual and psychosocial impairments and require a high level of support lack the adequate resources for their medical and social care and are thus permanently confined at home.

26. The Committee recommends the abolishment of the practice of involuntary civil commitment based on actual or perceived impairment. In addition, the Committee asks the state party to allocate more financial resources to persons with intellectual and psychosocial disabilities who require a high level of support, in order to ensure social support and medical treatment outside their own home when necessary.

27. The Committee notes with appreciation that the State party is dedicated to undertaking measures to provide reasonable accommodation to persons with disabilities that are deprived of their liberty. It also notes with appreciation that “personal liberty is assured by making use of the services voluntarily” (paragraph 87 of the State party’s report: CRPD/C/HUN/1). However, the Committee is concerned about the situation faced by persons under guardianship, where the decision of institutional care is made by the guardian instead of the person him/herself, and guardians are authorised to give consent to mental health care services on behalf of their ward. The Committee further regrets that disability, in some cases, can be the ground for detention.

28. The Committee recommends that the State party review provisions in legislation that allow for the deprivation of liberty on the basis of disability, including mental, psychosocial or intellectual disabilities, and adopt measures to ensure that health care services, including all mental health care services, are based on the free and informed consent of the person concerned.

28. The Committee notes with concern that article 11 of the General Health Law No. 26842 permits involuntary detention for people with “mental health problems”, defined to include people with psychosocial disabilities as well as persons with a “perceived disability” (persons with a drug or alcohol dependence).

29. The Committee calls upon the State party to eliminate Law 29737 which modifies article 11 of the General Health Law, in order to prohibit the deprivation of liberty on the basis of disability, including psychosocial, intellectual or perceived disability.

35. The Committee notes that Act 26/2011 allows a period of one year following its entry into force for the presentation of a bill to govern the scope and interpretation of article 12 of the Convention. The Committee is further concerned that no measures have been taken to replace substitute decision-making by supported decision-making in the exercise of legal capacity.

36. The Committee recommends that the State party review the laws allowing for guardianship and trusteeship, and take action to develop laws and policies to replace regimes of substitute decision-making by supported decision-making, which respects the person's autonomy, will and preferences. It further recommends that training be provided on this issue for all relevant public officials and other stakeholders.

24. With reference to article 14 of the Convention, the Committee is concerned that having a disability, including an intellectual or psychosocial disability, can constitute a basis for the deprivation of liberty under current legislation.

25. The Committee recommends that the State party repeal legislative provisions which allow for the deprivation of liberty on the basis of disability, including a psychosocial or intellectual disability. The Committee further recommends that until new legislation is in place, all cases of persons with disabilities who are deprived of their liberty in hospitals and specialized institutions be reviewed, and that the review include the possibility of appeal.

(Freedom of torture or cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment)*

September 2025

Article 15 - Freedom of torture or cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment

1. No one shall be subjected to torture or to cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment. In particular, no one shall be subjected without his or her free consent to medical or scientific experimentation.

2. States Parties shall take all effective legislative, administrative, judicial or other measures to prevent persons with disabilities, on an equal basis with others, from being subjected to torture or cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment.

27. The Committee is concerned that:

- (a) Persons with disabilities in detention are subjected to degrading treatment, including solitary confinement for perceived disobedience or “non-productivity”, denial of access to medical care and basic necessities, and confinement in conditions incompatible with human dignity, or have acquired secondary disabilities due to their conditions of detention;
- (b) Credible reports indicate that medical and scientific experiments are conducted on persons with psychosocial disabilities and/or intellectual disabilities.

28. The Committee recommends that the State Party:

- (a) Take effective measures to prevent instances of torture or cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment of persons with disabilities in all settings, including by ensuring full compliance with the United Nations Standard Minimum Rules for the Treatment of Prisoners (Nelson Mandela Rules), including accessibility for persons with disabilities, and end practices such as solitary confinement for perceived disobedience or “non-productivity”;
- (b) Prohibit all medical and scientific experiments on persons with disabilities.

28. The Committee notes with concern:

- (a) The prevalence and use of coercion, forced treatment and restrictive measures against children and adults with disabilities in psychiatric institutions, residential institutions, aged care facilities, prisons, early childhood and primary education;
- (b) That oversight, monitoring and reporting of harmful practices, such as forced treatment, restrictive practices and impairment-based detention are not sufficiently accessible for persons with disabilities, do not provide sufficient legal remedies, and are often not well known to persons with disabilities.

29. Recalling its guidelines on deinstitutionalization, including in emergencies, the Committee recommends that the State Party, in close consultation and active involvement of persons with disabilities through their representative organizations, take all legislative, administrative and judicial measures necessary to:

- (a) Prohibit the use of coercion, forced treatment and restrictive practices against children and adults with disabilities in psychiatric institutions, residential institutions, aged care facilities, prisons, early childhood and primary education; and establish alternative non-coercive, age-appropriate support measures that respect the will, preference, dignity and rights of persons with disabilities, and provide training to all medical and non-medical staff on these measures;
- (b) Strengthen the oversight, monitoring and reporting of the National Preventive Mechanism to identify and address harmful practices, such as forced treatment, restrictive practices and impairment-based detention that are lawful or regulated through domestic law, but which do not meet the standards and principles of the Convention.

27. The Committee is concerned about the absence of explicit safeguards to protect persons with disabilities, in particular persons with intellectual and/or psychosocial disabilities, from forced medical treatment in health facilities or in the community and about the lack of independent monitoring of facilities and community treatment orders, and the absence of accessible complaint and redress mechanisms.

28. The Committee recommends that the State party, in close consultation and active involvement of persons with disabilities, through their representative organizations:

- (a) Explicitly prohibit forced medical treatment, including community treatment orders of persons with disabilities;
- (b) Establish an accessible monitoring and complaint mechanism with sufficient financial, human and technical resources to ensure persons with disabilities are not subjected to forced confinement and treatment, including in the home or community, and to investigate and sanction perpetrators of practices that may amount to torture or cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment.

29. The Committee is concerned at reports of the use of restrictive practices, coercion or forced treatment on persons with disabilities, as well as the lack of complaint mechanisms to report these practices and obtain redress, in particular for persons with disabilities who are still in institutions or deprived of their liberty.

30. Recalling its Guidelines on deinstitutionalization, including in emergencies, the Committee recommends that the State party, in close consultation and active involvement of persons with disabilities, through their representative organizations:

(a) Monitor, investigate, document and remedy any allegations of the use of restrictive practices, as well as coercion or forced treatment to persons with disabilities, in particular in the Home for People with Special Needs in Guraidhoo (HPSN), as well as in schools, medical facilities, in interactions with the police and at home;

(b) Establish a competent and effective legal complaint mechanism procedure with sufficient financial, human and technical resources accessible to all persons with disabilities and investigate and sanction perpetrators of practices that may amount to torture or cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment against persons with disabilities, including in police custody, imposing sanctions proportional to the conduct.

29. The Committee is concerned about:

(a) The lack of ratification of the Optional Protocol to the Convention Against Torture and other Cruel, Inhuman or Degrading Treatment or Punishment, despite commitments made by the State Party at its fourth cycle Universal Periodic Review;

(b) Structured Intervention Units (SIUs) that perpetuate solitary confinement conditions, disproportionately affecting prisoners with psychosocial disabilities who are predominantly Indigenous, Black and from other racialized groups, the wide discretion of Correctional Service Canada (CSC) in the use of SIUs, and ongoing concerns from the SIU Implementation Advisory Panel and the Office of the Correctional Investigator over many years without substantive improvements;

(c) The significantly high prevalence of women with psychosocial disabilities, in particular Indigenous women with psychosocial disabilities, in women's prisons who are placed in maximum security and highly restrictive environments in higher rates, often leading to chronic self-injurious or suicidal behaviour;

(d) The prevalence of seclusion, restraint and restrictive practices in residential institutions, psychiatric institutions, hospitals, prisons, and schools; the focus on authorisation rather than elimination in seclusion and restraint policies and guidelines; and the provisions in the British Columbia Mental Health Act that authorise staff to discipline involuntary mental health patients;

(e) The absence of an independent monitoring and oversight mechanism for the mental health system

(a) Accelerate efforts to ratify the Optional Protocol to the Convention Against Torture and other Cruel, Inhuman or Degrading Treatment or Punishment and to designate a disability inclusive and accessible National Preventive Mechanism to ensure independent oversight and monitoring of all places of detention;

(b) Address the concerns and implement the recommendations of the SIU Implementation Advisory Panel and the Office of the Correctional Investigator, and ensure the provision of culturally appropriate, gender and age specific mental health supports within correctional facilities;

- (c) Address the pre-conditions that result in the high prevalence of women with psychosocial disabilities, in particular Indigenous women with psychosocial disabilities, being placed in maximum security and highly restrictive environments in prisons;
- (d) Establish a nationally consistent legislative and policy framework for the elimination, of seclusion, restraint and restrictive practices in residential institutions, psychiatric institutions, hospitals, prisons, and schools and repeal the provisions in the BC Mental Health Act that authorize staff to discipline involuntary mental health patients;
- (e) Designate an independent monitoring and oversight mechanisms for the mental health system based on the principles and standards of the Convention.

27. The Committee is concerned about, the insufficient measures to ensure compliance with the legal framework that prohibits the administration of medical treatment without the consent of the person with disabilities and the lack of accessible procedures for filing complaints and obtaining redress. The committee is particularly concerned that there are no inclusive and accessible national mechanisms to protect persons with disabilities in particular persons with psychosocial disability from torture, inhuman or degrading treatment including protection from using chemical or/and physical restraints.

28. Recalling its guidelines on deinstitutionalization, including in emergencies, the Committee recommends that the State party, in close consultation with and with the active involvement of persons with disabilities, through their representative organizations, take effective measures to ensure full compliance with the legal framework prohibiting the administration of medical treatment without the free and informed consent of persons with disabilities, including by strengthening oversight mechanisms, enforcing accountability for violations, and providing training for healthcare professionals on the rights of persons with disabilities as well as establish effective and inclusive national mechanisms to protect persons with disabilities from torture and inhuman or degrading treatment in particular in the psychiatric facilities, and promote accessible, independent, and effective procedures for persons with disabilities to file complaints and obtaining redress.

40. The Committee is concerned about:

- (a) Forced treatment of persons with intellectual and/or psychosocial disabilities and of autistic children in institutions across Member States, including the use of physical and pharmacological restraints, solitary confinement, forced electro-convulsive therapy and other coercive practices;
- (b) EU funding of research that de facto does not require that persons with disabilities involved are provided with the support necessary to give their personal, free and fully informed consent;
- (c) The lack of mechanisms to prevent torture and other cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment of persons with disabilities in EU external action.

41. Recalling its Guidelines on deinstitutionalization, including in emergencies, the Committee recommends that the European Union, in close consultation and active involvement of persons with disabilities, through their representative organizations:

- (a) Develop initiatives and concrete actions as part of the second half of the Disability Strategy to align EU policy and standards for the psychiatric treatment of persons with disabilities with the Convention, and enact an absolute ban on all forced psychiatric interventions;
- (b) Ensure that EU funded research involving persons with disabilities does not allow surrogate decision-making, and explicitly require their personal, free and fully informed consent. Adopt guidelines for the provision of such consent, including from deaf persons and persons with intellectual disabilities;
- (c) Establish mechanisms to prevent forced treatment of persons with disabilities that may amount to torture and other cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment.

27. The Committee observes with concern the lack of information on the measures taken to eliminate seclusion, psychical, chemical and mechanical restraints and other forms of ill treatment in all settings, such as family settings, psychiatric institutions, hospitals, prisons and educational services, particularly for persons with intellectual and/or psychosocial disabilities.

28. Recalling its Guidelines on denationalization, including in emergencies, in close consultation and with active involvement of persons with disabilities, through their representative organizations, the Committee recommends that the State party:

(a) Adopt the necessary measures for the protection of all persons with disabilities from torture and cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment in all settings, including in justice, education, health, psychosocial and aged care facilities;

(b) Ensure that the complaint procedure is accessible to all persons with disabilities still in institutions and investigate and sanction perpetrators of practices that may amount to torture or cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment against persons with disabilities, imposing sanctions proportional to the conduct.

27. The Committee is concerned about the use of restrictive practices, coercion or forced treatment on persons with disabilities, including older persons in family homes and children with disabilities at schools, as well as the lack of complaint mechanisms to report these practices and obtain redress.

28. Recalling its Guidelines on deinstitutionalization, including in emergencies, the Committee recommends that the State party, in close consultation and active involvement of persons with disabilities, through their representative organizations:

(a) Monitor, investigate, document and remedy any allegations of the use of restrictive practices, as well as coercion or forced treatment to persons with disabilities, including in schools, medical facilities, in interactions with the police and at home;

(b) Establish a competent and effective legal complaint mechanism procedure with sufficient financial, human and technical resources accessible to all persons with disabilities and investigate and sanction perpetrators of practices that may amount to torture or cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment against persons with disabilities, including in police custody, imposing sanctions proportional to the conduct.

29. The Committee is concerned that:

(a) Despite recommendations from treaty bodies such as the Committee against Torture, which has expressed grave concern over allegations of widespread use of torture and other ill-treatment, particularly during pretrial detention, these practices continue, causing death or disability to those affected;

(b) There is a lack of mechanisms for submitting complaints of torture or other ill-treatment against persons with disabilities, especially women and girls, as well as indigenous persons with disabilities, despite the State party's ratification of the United Nations Convention against Torture and Other Cruel, Inhuman or Degrading Treatment or Punishment;

(c) The absence of disaggregated data on torture and other ill-treatment of persons with disabilities, especially women with disabilities and children with disabilities.

30. Recalling its Guidelines on deinstitutionalization, including in emergencies, in close consultation and with active involvement of persons with disabilities, through their representative organizations, the Committee recommends that the State party:

(a) Ensure compliance with the recommendations of the Committee against Torture by establishing a strict evaluation mechanism to prevent all acts of torture or other ill-treatment, particularly towards individuals in prison, and implement restorative justice actions for them;

(b) Ensure the wide dissemination of laws among the general population and persons with disabilities and their organizations, raising awareness about the mandatory nature of laws against ill-treatment and torture, as well as the penalties for non-compliance.

Belarus (2024)

29. The Committee is concerned about:

(a) The lack of comprehensive provisions in the current legislation to specifically criminalize cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment of persons and the disregard to adhering to the legislation on the protection of the rights of persons with disabilities in correctional and psychiatric facilities;

(b) The high rates of gender-based violence, sexual assault and forced hospitalizations encountered by women with disabilities, particularly those who are human rights defenders or political activists;

(c) Reports of incidents of violence and intimidation against members of the lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender and intersex community including persons with disabilities, and the lack of adequate investigation and accountability measures on such cases;

(d) The lack of provision of access to independent national or international observers, to all places of deprivation of liberty in the country, including the psychiatric institutions;

(e) The lack of investigation and accountability measures, in relation to the conduct of law enforcement officials, whose involvement in torture are categorized administratively, as merely “exceeding professional competences”, and the gaps in information on the number and status of persons with disabilities in this situation, as well as the barriers related to access to justice for the victims of such cases, who seek to make complaints on these practices.

30. Recalling the concluding observations adopted by Committee against torture, in 2018 (CAT/C/BLR/CO/5), the Committee recommends that the State party:

(a) Undertake reforms in the legislation with a comprehensive definitional scope to ensure protection of persons with disabilities against any form of torture, cruel, inhuman and degrading treatment;

(b) Adopt measures in the legislative framework, which takes into consideration the disability, as an aggravating circumstance;

(c) Establish a mechanism and system to monitor the institutions comprising persons with disabilities, and allow the access of independent national and international observers and persons with disabilities, also to address complaints, their follow-ups, identify and prescribe punitive measures to perpetrators, and impart restorative justice for the victims including for lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender and intersex community;

(d) Adopt laws to prevent and investigate effectively the practices of torture, violence and intimidation by law enforcement officers including police, provide sanctions for involvement in such practices while ensuring adequate measures for access to justice and restorative justice for the victims with disabilities in regard to such cases.

30. The Committee welcomes the establishment within the Federal Institute for the Protection and Promotion of Human Rights (FIRM) of a mechanism for the prevention of torture and other cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment. However, it is concerned:

(a) That restraints, coercive measures and isolation of persons with disabilities, particularly persons with intellectual and/or psychosocial disabilities, are still legal under domestic law and are often used as a punitive technique or because of a lack of personnel or overcrowding in closed or semi-closed living arrangements;

(b) That the practical implementation of the preventive mechanism's visits to places where persons are deprived of their liberty, including institutions for persons with disabilities, psychiatric institutions and nursing homes, to prevent torture and other inhuman treatment, is not provided for at the regional level.

31. The Committee recommends that the State party:

(a) Unequivocally prohibit all forms of coercive measures on persons with disabilities, including persons with intellectual and/or psychosocial disabilities;

(b) Devise an action plan on the practical execution of visits by the Preventive Mechanism FIRM of persons with disabilities in places where they are deprived of their liberty, including at the regional level, and in collaboration with Unia and the Flanders Human Rights Institute to enable the Preventive Mechanism to monitor all places of detention in the State party, in accordance with the standards set out by the Subcommittee on Prevention of Torture in its General Comment on the definition and scope of places of detention, and raise awareness of the rights of persons with disabilities with all staff, including police personnel, that work with persons with disabilities;

Benin (2024)

29. The Committee is concerned about:

(a) Reports of ill-treatment against persons with disabilities in psychiatric institutions, including the use of chemical restraints and electroshock methods as forms of "treatment";

(b) The lack of information about measures to redress persons with disabilities who are survivors of torture and ill-treatment in the context of institutionalization;

(c) The underreporting and lack of information about the prosecution and conviction of perpetrators in cases of ill-treatment against persons with disabilities living in institutions;

(d) The lack of information on the national commission of human rights of Benin work on cases of ill-treatment against persons with disabilities living in institutions or in detention.

30. Recalling its guidelines on deinstitutionalization, including in emergency situations, the Committee recommends that the State party:

(a) Prohibit and end the use of physical and chemical restraints, seclusion and other restrictive practices in all residential institutions, including in penitentiaries, psychoneurological social services and psychiatric facilities;

(b) Establish accessible mechanisms to provide persons with disabilities who are still living in institutions with redress, including compensation and rehabilitation, and age- and gender-appropriate support and counselling;

(c) Strengthen accessible complaint mechanisms that are confidential for persons with disabilities who are still in institutions, provide persons with disabilities with information in accessible formats about complaint mechanisms and ensure the involvement of organizations of persons with disabilities in the independent monitoring of institutions;

(d) Vigorously investigate, prosecute and sanction perpetrators of practices that may amount to torture or cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment against persons with disabilities and impose appropriate sanctions.

Burkina Faso (2024)

30. The Committee is concerned about:

(a) The conditions of detention in Burkina Faso's prisons and other places of detention, which are characterized by overcrowding, hunger, multifaceted violence between prisoners, ill-treatment, physical violence and sexual abuse, inadequate social assistance and health care and lack of reasonable accommodation for detainees with disabilities, in particular for persons with intellectual and/or psychosocial disabilities;

(b) The use of physical and chemical restraints and the administration of treatment in establishments where persons with disabilities deprived of their liberty are placed;

(c) The lack of operationalization of the National Observatory for the Prevention of Torture and Other Related Practices established under article 20 of the Act on the Prevention and Punishment of Torture and Related Practices;

(d) The revision of the Act on the Prevention and Punishment of Torture and Related Practices, planned but yet to be implemented, in order to designate the National Human Rights Commission as the national body for the prevention of torture, with persons with disabilities taken into account in the national mechanism for the prevention of torture.

31. Recalling its Guidelines on deinstitutionalization, including in emergencies , in close consultation and with active involvement of persons with disabilities, through their representative organizations, the Committee recommends that:

(b) The National Human Rights Commission be given expanded powers to house the national mechanism for the prevention of torture and that it be allocated the necessary funds to carry out its monitoring mission and take into account persons with disabilities.

45. The Committee is concerned about:

(a) The prevalence and increasing use of coercion, forced treatment and restrictive practices in the State party, including physical and chemical restraints against children and adults with disabilities in social care and psychiatric institutions;

(b) Insufficient and ineffective oversight mechanisms across Denmark for children and adults with disabilities in places of detention, social care and psychiatric institutions, and a lack of implementation of recommendations from existing oversight mechanisms, including the national preventive mechanism.

46. Recalling its Guidelines on deinstitutionalization, including in emergencies , the Committee recommends that the Kingdom of Denmark, in close consultation with and with the active involvement of persons with disabilities, through their representative organizations, take all legislative, administrative and judicial measures necessary:

(a) To prohibit the use of coercion, forced treatment and restrictive practices for children and adults with disabilities still in places of detention, social care and psychiatric institutions in the Kingdom of Denmark, establish alternative non-coercive, age-appropriate support measures that respect the will and preference, dignity and rights of persons with disabilities, and provide training to all medical and non-medical staff on these measures;

(b) To establish robust oversight mechanisms and strengthen existing oversight mechanisms across the Kingdom of Denmark to ensure regular inspections of places of detention, social care and psychiatric institutions, ensure regular public reporting to parliament and establish mechanisms to facilitate prompt implementation of recommendations.

30. The Committee is concerned that:

(a) Reports of alleged torture and ill-treatment faced by persons with intellectual and/or psychosocial disabilities in health facilities and psychiatric hospitals, where they face deplorable conditions such as chemical and mechanical restraints as well as coercive treatment. The current Law on Persons with Disabilities (Law 715) does not fully comply with Article 15 of the Convention;

(b) The weak enforcement of existing anti-torture legislation;

(c) Children with intellectual and/or psychosocial disabilities are still being segregated in institutions, where they are subjected to cruel, inhuman and degrading treatment and shackled for periods ranging from days and weeks to months and years.

31. The Committee recommends that the State Party:

(a) Ensure that forced treatment on the grounds of disability is fully prohibited in law and in practice and amend the Law on Persons with Disabilities (Law 715) to fully comply with Article 15 of the Convention, ensuring robust protection against torture, cruel, inhuman, or degrading treatment for all persons with disabilities in all settings;

(b) Improve the enforcement of existing anti-torture legislation by providing comprehensive training for law enforcement and judicial personnel on disability rights and the severe impacts of torture and ill-treatment. Implement strict penalties for violations to deter abuse and ensure accountability;

(c) Establish a national mechanism for the prevention of torture as required by the Optional Protocol to the Convention against Torture;

(d) Prevent ill treatment of children and adults with disabilities in institutions, including mental health facilities, and amend the relevant legislation and the Social Protection Policy 2015 to incorporate provisions that provide for deinstitutionalization for persons with disabilities, and introduce foster families and community-based support.

Netherlands (2024)

(a) The effect of the interpretative declaration to art. 15 of the Convention and the exceptions for unique situations in national legislation, which contain the risk of subjecting persons with disabilities to medical or scientific experimentation without their consent;

(b) The use of forced medical procedures and treatment, such as non-consensual administration of medication or electroconvulsive therapy, on persons with disabilities in psychiatric hospitals and social care institutions, as well as the continued use of solitary confinement in care facilities and reports of the use of tasers by law enforcement officers in mental health institutions, despite motions banning such use;

(c) The dependency of many persons with disabilities on care providers as an intermediate party to file a complaint;

(d) Reports that insufficient measures have been taken by the State party to address the concerns expressed by the Committee against Torture regarding the treatment of children in institutional settings for young people, and reports from organizations of persons with disabilities of abuse and violence in closed youth care facilities like the ZIKOS-institutions.

36. Recalling its Guidelines on deinstitutionalization, including in emergencies , in close consultation and with active involvement of persons with disabilities, through their representative organizations, the Committee recommends that the State party:

(a) Withdraw the interpretative declaration to Article 15 of the Convention and amend national legislation to unequivocally prohibit any medical or scientific experimentation on persons with disabilities without their free and informed consent;

(b) Eliminate in law, policy and practice all forms of forced medical procedures and treatment; cease the use of solitary confinement in care facilities, and develop and implement alternative measures; enforce the ban on the use of tasers by law enforcement officers in mental health institutions, and ensure that actions by law enforcement in institutions are strictly regulated and monitored;

(c) Establish independent and accessible complaint mechanisms that allow persons with disabilities to file complaints directly, without reliance on care providers, and ensure that all complaints are thoroughly investigated and addressed;

(d) Cease placement of children in closed care institutions, closely monitor existing institutions and end operation of all closed youth care facilities; ensure that alternative community-based care and support options are available and accessible.

Ukraine (2024)

30. The Committee is concerned about:

- (a) The persistent violation of rights of persons with disabilities in places of detention and the lack of effective mechanisms for the prevention and investigation of these cases. It is also concerned about the lack of comprehensive policies ensuring accessibility in detention facilities;
- (b) Cases of violations of the rights of women and children with disabilities segregated in institutions, including mistreatment, coercions, invasive gynaecological examinations, as well as cases of forced medication.

31. The Committee recommends that the State Party:

- (a) Ensure the compliance with the United Nations Standard Minimum Rules for the Treatment of Prisoners (the Nelson Mandela Rules) to ensure accessibility for persons with disabilities in detention places, and investigate all allegations of torture, cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment as per the Convention against Torture and its additional protocol, ensuring that victims of these violations receive comprehensive reparations;
- (b) In close consultation and with the active involvement of persons with disabilities through their representative organizations, establish mechanisms for the periodic evaluation of institutions housing persons with disabilities, to completely stop coercions, including ensuring that those affected can file complaints, refer perpetrators to the justice system, and provide comprehensive reparations to victims.

Azerbaijan (2024)

35. The Committee is concerned about:

- (a) Reports of ill treatment against persons with disabilities in psychiatric institutions, including the use of chemical restraints and electroshock methods as forms of "treatment";
- (b) Lack of information about measures to redress persons with disabilities survivors of torture and ill treatment in the context of institutionalization;
- (c) The underreporting and lack of information about prosecution and conviction of perpetrators of cases of ill treatment against persons with disabilities living in institutions.

36. Recalling its guidelines on deinstitutionalization, including in emergency situations (2022), the Committee recommends that the State party:

- (a) Prohibit and end the use of physical and chemical restraints, seclusion and other restrictive practices in all residential institutions, including in penitentiaries, psycho-neurological social services and psychiatric facilities;
- (b) Establish accessible mechanisms to provide persons with disabilities living in institutions with redress, including compensation and rehabilitation, and age- and gender-appropriate support and counselling;
- (c) Strengthen accessible, confidential complaint mechanisms for persons with disabilities in institutions, provide persons with disabilities with information in accessible formats about complaint mechanisms and ensure involvement of organizations of persons with disabilities in independent monitoring of institutions;
- (d) Vigorously investigate suspected perpetrators of practices that may amount to torture or cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment against persons with disabilities, and impose appropriate sanctions.

30. The Committee is deeply concerned that:

¹ When compiling the recommendations, the Concluding Observations were only available in Arabic. This document includes an automated translation to English by DeepL.

- (a) A number of prisoners of conscience who are persons with disabilities have been subjected to torture during interrogation and while in prisons and have been denied access and accommodations to enable them to access and receive available basic care services.
- (b) The lack of a transparent, safe and accessible mechanism for persons with disabilities to report, verify and investigate cases of torture or cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment.

31. The Committee recommends that the State party should:

- (a) Conduct a transparent and independent investigation into reported cases of torture against prisoners and detainees with disabilities through an impartial commission with the participation of independent experts, including experts with disabilities, publish the results of the investigation and take legal action against those found guilty of committing torture or cruel or inhuman treatment.
- (b) Establish an independent and transparent mechanism for reporting cases of torture or cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment and provide accessibility, accommodation and accessible formats to enable persons with disabilities to access it independently and safely.

Costa Rica (2024)

27. El Comité observa con preocupación:

- a) La falta de leyes y medidas para proteger a las personas con discapacidad de los tratamientos médicos sin consentimiento libre e informado, incluso la esterilización y los abortos forzados;
- b) La falta de información sobre las medidas tomadas para prevenir la tortura u otros tratos o penas crueles, inhumanos o degradantes contra personas con discapacidad en instituciones y centros psiquiátricos, y sobre los mecanismos de denuncia para quienes son víctimas de tales prácticas;
- c) La falta de datos estadísticos oficiales y actualizados relativos a personas con discapacidad privadas de libertad, desglosados por lugar de detención y tasa de ocupación y, la falta de información sobre los mecanismos de evaluación y monitoreo para prevenir agresiones y violencia sexual en los centros de detención.

28. Con base en las Directrices sobre Desinstitucionalización, incluso en situaciones de emergencia (2022), el Comité recomienda al Estado parte:

- a) Adoptar las medidas necesarias para garantizar que ninguna persona con discapacidad sea sometida a torturas o tratos o penas crueles, inhumanos o degradantes, incluidos los tratamientos médicos sin consentimiento libre e informado, en particular la esterilización y los abortos forzados; y asegure de que los procedimientos de denuncia sean accesibles a todas las personas con discapacidad y que se investigue y sancione a los autores de prácticas que puedan constituir actos de tortura o tratos o penas crueles, inhumanos o degradantes contra personas con discapacidad, imponiendo sanciones proporcionales;
- b) Asegurar que el Mecanismo Nacional de Prevención de la Tortura supervise regularmente los centros psiquiátricos y que las autoridades competentes eliminen prácticas violatorias como sujeciones a las personas con discapacidad, y garanticen a las víctimas de tortura y malos tratos acceso a mecanismos de denuncia;
- c) Aportar en el próximo informe periódico datos estadísticos oficiales y actualizados relativos a personas con discapacidad privadas de libertad desglosados por lugar de detención y tasa de ocupación, informaciones sobre los mecanismos de evaluación y monitoreo para prevenir agresiones y violencia sexual en los centros de detención, y mecanismos de denuncia que incluyan seguimiento, resarcimiento y castigo a los perpetradores.

33. The Committee is concerned about:

- (a) Reports of ill treatment of persons with disabilities in places of detention, partly due to a lack of accessible sanitary facilities, including toilette and shower facilities, low quality of food, and a lack of access to health care, including rehabilitation;
- (b) Medical treatment of persons with disabilities in special social service centres without their free and informed consent, and coercive mental health treatment by court orders issued to persons with intellectual and/or psychosocial disabilities who were declared to be unfit to stand trial (CRPD/C/KAZ/1, para. 229);
- (c) The lack of access to information and communication technologies of persons with disabilities in special social service centres, the prohibition to be in contact with relatives, including parents, deteriorating sanitary standards, surveillance and lack of measures to protect privacy;
- (d) The risks of gender-based violence for women and girls with disabilities in residential institutions, including physical, psychological and sexual violence and abuse, forced abortion and forced sterilization;
- (e) Reports of children with disabilities, in day-care centres and in special social service centres for children, being subjected to psychological, physical and sexual abuse and labour exploitation, physical restraints, including strait-jackets, psychotropic drugs to sedate, and being sent to psychiatric hospitals to control behaviour and seclusion;
- (f) Absence of mechanisms to report abuse and violence and submit complaints in cases of ill treatment and limited information about available reparation and redress for persons subjected to torture and ill-treatment.

34. Recalling its guidelines on deinstitutionalization, including in emergency situations (2022), the Committee recommends that the State party:

- (a) Ensure that persons with disabilities deprived of their liberty are held in conditions that comply with international standards, in particular the United Nations Standard Minimum Rules for the Treatment of Prisoners, ensure accessibility, including to sanitary facilities, and provide sufficient access to health services and food quality in places of detention;
- (b) Recognize in law the right to not be subjected to medical treatment without free and informed consent and the right to refuse treatment, and introduce protocols and accessible information on the right not to be subjected to medical or scientific experimentation without giving free and informed consent, and apply these rules also to persons with intellectual and/or psychosocial disabilities who were declared to be unfit to stand trial;
- (c) Prohibit and end the use of physical and chemical restraints, seclusion and other restrictive practices in special social service centres;
- (d) Accelerate measures to protect women with disabilities in institutions from all forms of gender-based violence, including forced abortion and forced sterilization, in line with the recommendations of the Committee on the Elimination of Discrimination against Women (2019);
- (e) Strengthen monitoring of all facilities and programs including institutions for persons with disabilities to prevent all forms of exploitation, violence and abuse. Ensure effective involvement of organizations of persons with disabilities in these monitoring processes;
- (f) Take immediate measures to end all forms of violence against children with disabilities in residential and day care institutions, and ensure that perpetrators are prosecuted; reinforce systematic and independent monitoring of institutions where children with disabilities live, and adopt a comprehensive plan for the prevention of human rights violations against children, and the provision of redress, including compensation and rehabilitation, and age- and gender-appropriate support and counselling for the victims;
- (g) Introduce accessible, confidential complaint mechanisms for persons with disabilities who are victims of ill-treatment and violence, and strengthen the capacity of the national preventive mechanism at the Commissioner for Fundamental Rights by providing human, technical and financial resources.
- (h) Vigorously investigate suspected perpetrators of practices that may amount to torture or cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment against persons with disabilities, and impose appropriate sanctions.

28. El Comité observa con preocupación:

- a) Que no se cumple con lo establecido en el artículo 486 del Código Penal que tipifica el delito de tortura y existan numerosos casos de tortura y malos tratos en centros penitenciarios y comisarías documentados por diversos mecanismos internacionales y organizaciones no gubernamentales y se ignora si personas con discapacidad se encuentran en estas condiciones;
- b) La falta de datos estadísticos oficiales y actualizados relativos a la población encarcelada, desglosados por lugar de detención y tasa de ocupación y, en consecuencia, cuantas personas con discapacidad han sido sometidas a detenciones por motivos políticos;
- c) Las denuncias de agresiones y violencia sexual en los centros de detención, con una incidencia particularmente elevada en el caso de las mujeres detenidas y se desconoce cuántas de estas son mujeres con discapacidad;
- d) Los tratos crueles, a los que se somete a las personas con discapacidad en sus hogares, sobre todo a aquellas con discapacidad intelectual y/o psicosocial, quienes son encerrados y aislados, enfrentan encadenamiento, violencia física, maltrato verbal y expulsión del hogar junto con la ausencia de mecanismos creados para investigar las violaciones de los derechos de las personas con discapacidad en sus hogares;
- e) Que no se ha tomado en cuenta la propuesta de ley presentada al Parlamento por las organizaciones de personas con discapacidad en 2022 para evitar este tipo de violencia en el hogar.

29. El Comité recomienda al Estado parte:

- a) Implementar lo establecido en el Artículo 486 del Código Penal sobre delito de tortura e investigar los numerosos casos de tortura y malos tratos en centros penitenciarios y comisarías documentados por diversos mecanismos internacionales y organizaciones no gubernamentales;
- b) Establecer datos actualizados sobre cuantas personas con discapacidad hay en detención y cuantas han sido sometidas a detenciones por motivos políticos;
- c) Establecer un mecanismo de evaluación y monitoreo para prevenir agresiones y violencia sexual en los centros de detención y establecer cuantas personas, especialmente mujeres con discapacidad han sido sometidas a estas agresiones; implementar mecanismos de denuncia que incluyan seguimiento, resarcimiento y castigo a los perpetradores;
- d) Reforzar las medidas para prevenir y combatir todas las formas de violencia contra los niños, niñas y las mujeres con discapacidad, en particular, en el hogar, tanto en zonas urbanas como rurales, estableciendo mecanismos para que las víctimas puedan presentar quejas, su seguimiento y castigo a los perpetradores;
- e) Considerar la propuesta de ley para prevenir los casos de violencia en el hogar hacia personas con discapacidad con el objetivo de promulgarla a la brevedad.

Sweden (2024)

33. The Committee is concerned about:

- (a) The prevalent use of coercion and restrictive practices, and the application of ECT and medical treatments without consent in group homes, special housing and all forms of institutions for children and adults with disabilities, including psychiatric institutions;
- (b) The lack of effective oversight mechanisms for children and adults with disabilities in places of detention, social care institutions, group homes and privately managed facilities, and the lack of implementation of recommendations from existing oversight mechanisms, including the National Preventive Mechanism.

34. The Committee recommends that the State party, in close consultation and active involvement of persons with disabilities through their representative organisations take all necessary legislative, administrative and judicial measures to:

- (a) Prohibit the use of coercion and restrictive practices, and the application of ECT and medical treatments without consent for children and adults with disabilities in group homes, special housing and all forms of institutions, including psychiatric institutions, and establish alternative non-coercive, age-appropriate support measures, and provide training in these measures for all staff;
- (b) Strengthen existing oversight mechanisms to ensure regular inspections of places of detention, social care institutions, group homes and privately managed facilities, ensure regular public reporting to the Parliament and establish mechanisms to facilitate prompt implementation of recommendations.

29. The Committee is concerned:

- (a) That the enactment of the draft Bill criminalizing torture has been pending since 2017;
- (b) About the occurrence of involuntary admission, seclusion, physical, chemical and mechanical restraints and other forms of ill-treatment in family settings, psychiatric institutions, religious institutions, hospitals, prisons and educational services, particularly for persons with intellectual and/or psychosocial disabilities, as well as reports of widespread and systemic patterns of brutality, including against persons with disabilities, in police custody.

30. The Committee recommends that the State party:

- (a) Expedite the enactment of the Bill to criminalize torture, inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment;
- (b) Establish a competent and effective legal complaint mechanism procedure with sufficient financial, human and technical resources accessible to all persons with disabilities and investigate and sanction perpetrators of practices that may amount to torture or cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment against persons with disabilities, including in police custody, imposing sanctions proportional to the conduct.

31. The Committee observes with concern:

- (a) The legislation allowing that, persons with disabilities, in particular persons with psychosocial disabilities, can be subjected to forced treatment, coercive measures, and forced medication in psychiatric interventions and institutions;
- (b) The lack of information on measures taken to prevent torture or cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment against persons with disabilities and concerning complaint mechanisms for those who are victims of these practices.

32. The Committee recommends that the State party:

- (a) Repeal legislation permitting forced treatment, including coercive measures and forced medication, and adopt protocols to ensure free and informed consent concerning medical or scientific interventions;
- (b) Take measures to prevent and prohibit torture or cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment of persons with disabilities, including involuntary medical treatment, as well as establish a complaint mechanism accessible to persons with disabilities in institutions, investigate and sanction perpetrators of these practices, and provide redress for victims.

Austria (2023)

35. The Committee notes the absolute prohibition of net beds, but it is concerned about:

- (a) The legal permissibility and continued use of seclusion, physical and chemical restraints and other restrictive practices on persons with disabilities, in particular persons with psychosocial and/or intellectual disabilities, including children with disabilities, in places of detention;

(b) Insufficient support measures for persons with intellectual and/or psychosocial disabilities, including access to mental health support and services, and a lack of qualified staff in places of detention.

36. The Committee recommends that the State party:

(a) End the use of seclusion, physical and chemical restraints and other restrictive practices in places of detention;

(b) Provide sufficient support measures, including mental health support, and qualified staff in places of detention, particularly for persons with intellectual and/or psychosocial disabilities.

37. The Committee is concerned about the continued performance of sex-altering surgery on intersex children.

38. The Committee recommends the State party enact a legal ban on all non-live-saving sex-altering medical intervention on intersex children.

Germany (2023)

33. The Committee is concerned about:

(a) The use of physical and chemical restraints, seclusion, and other harmful practices, particularly in care and integration assistance facilities and other institutions, psychiatric institutions, and forensic psychiatric care;

(b) The lack of oversight and monitoring of care and integration assistance facilities and other institutions, psychiatric institutions, and forensic psychiatric care and the use of restraints, seclusion and other harmful practices;

(c) The lack of independent complaints and redress mechanisms to address harmful and forced practices perpetrated in care and integration assistance facilities and other institutions, psychiatric institutions, and forensic psychiatric care.

34. The Committee recommends that the State party take all necessary legislative, administrative and judicial measures to:

(a) Prohibit the use of physical and chemical restraints, seclusion and other harmful practices in all institutional settings;

(b) Establish independent monitoring bodies across in all Länder jurisdictions to provide regular oversight of all institutional facilities and to collect and analyse data on the use of forced treatment and coercive practices, and adequately resource existing monitoring mechanisms, including the National Agency for the Prevention of Torture and the Institute for Human Rights in order to strengthen their mandates;

(c) Establish an independent complaints mechanism, accessible to all persons with disabilities in all settings, to receive complaints as well as investigate and sanction institutions and perpetrators of harmful and forced practices, and to support victims by providing legal advice, accessible information, counselling and redress, including compensation and rehabilitation.

(a) Reports of coercive measures, including chemical and physical restraints and solitary confinement on persons with disabilities, in particular persons with intellectual and/or psychosocial disabilities;

(b) Reports of ill-treatment, sexual violence, the use of cage beds, use of psychiatric medication, and deaths of persons with intellectual disabilities in institutions, particularly in hostels, border residencies, including the Bnei Zion and Beit Dafna residential facilities and the lack of measures to provide reparations for survivors of violence and ill-treatment;

(c) Persons with disabilities under guardianship not being protected by the legal requirement to ensure free consent concerning medical or scientific experimentation.

36. Recalling its guidelines on deinstitutionalization, including in emergencies (2022), the Committee recommends that the State party:

- (a) Prohibit and end the use of coercive measures against persons with disabilities in all detention settings, including prisons, large residential facilities, group homes, shared accommodation, day care centres and special environments and ensure human treatment and dignity for persons with disabilities, in particular persons with intellectual and/or psychosocial disabilities;
- (b) Implement the recommendations of the Judge (Ret.) Sulamit Dotan Commission report² and phase out institutionalization on the basis of impairment and close all residential facilities in the State party, including the so-called 'Meonot', (large, full-care extensive residential facilities), 'Hostels' (group homes for approximately 24 persons) and 'shared accommodation' and provide persons with disabilities still living in institutions with emergency assistance to enable them to leave residential facilities;
- (c) Provide remedies and reparations for persons with disabilities who are survivors of violence and ill treatment in Bnei Zion and Beit Dafna residential facilities and all other institutions in the State party;
- (d) Establish procedures to ensure that persons with disabilities under guardianship express their free and informed personal consent concerning medical treatment and medical or scientific experimentation, with appropriate accessible information and support for decision-making.

Malawi (2023)

31. The Committee is concerned about the absence of measures to prevent and protect persons with disabilities from the risks of torture and ill treatment in detention facilities, including in psychiatric hospitals and of accountability and remedies available for persons with disabilities. It is also concerned about the risks of persons with disabilities to corporal punishment in the context of prison-wide searches and collective disciplinary punishments.

32. The Committee recommends that the State party:

- (a) Expedite the ratification of the Optional Protocol to the Convention against Torture and Other Cruel, Inhuman or Degrading Treatment or Punishment as recommended during the State party's universal periodic review, in 2020 and supported by the State party (A/HRC/46/7, see para. 125);
- (b) Enact legislation to prohibit torture and ill treatment in all detention settings including residential institutions for children and adults with disabilities and orphanages, and recognise them as criminal offenses, including treatments and interventions such as the non-consensual administration of drugs, chemical or physical restraints, isolation, solitary confinement, non-consensual medical, scientific, medical or social experimentation, behaviour modification, growth attenuation therapy, and ensure that penalties for torture are commensurate with the gravity of the conduct;

- (d) Raise awareness in the community, medical health care professionals about freedom from torture ill treatment and provide for counselling in the community that support persons with disabilities and their families who are subjected to all forms of torture;
- (e) Introduce in its legislation measures to ensure that acts of ill-treatment or torture are investigated that perpetrators are prosecuted, and that persons with disabilities subjected to such acts receive fair and adequate compensation, reparation and rehabilitation.

Mauritania (2023)

27. The Committee is concerned:

- (a) That despite the existing legal provisions, such as Law 2015/033 on combating torture and slavery, de facto moratorium on the death penalty and corporate punishment, the State party's ² Commission to Examine and Build Management and Operation Protocols for Out-Of-Home Residential Facilities for Persons with Disabilities.

Criminal Code still contains provisions authorizing public stoning to death, whipping and amputation, which could be used by the courts, and the persistence of practice of slavery;

(b)At the imposition by the State party of corporal punishment against persons with disabilities, including children with disabilities;

(c)That despite the existing the State party's commitment to eliminate female genital mutilation, this practice still persists, particularly in wilayas.

28. With reference to recommendations previously made by the Committee against Torture (CAT/C/MRT/CO/2, para.34) and the Committee in the Rights of the Child (CRC/C/MRT/CO/3-5, para.25), the Committee recommends that the State party:

(a)Repeal all provisions permitting public stoning to death, whipping and amputation and strengthen the application of the national legislation, policies and practices that prohibits torture or cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment and punishment of persons with disabilities, and eliminate all forms of slavery;

(b)Abolish corporal punishment against persons with disabilities, including children with disabilities, without any exceptions, in all settings;

(c)Strengthen the implementation of the national legislation and the National Action Plan on the voluntary abandonment of female genital mutilation in wilayas, to eliminate this practice, and strengthen its awareness raising campaigns, trainings and programmes, involving community and religious leaders and the media, government officials, the public and families.

Mongolia (2023)

31.The Committee is concerned that the Law on persons with disabilities does not provide for a mechanism to protect persons with disabilities from torture or cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment. It is also concerned about the continuous occurrence of seclusion, psychical, chemical and mechanical restraints, arbitrary treatment and other forms of ill-treatment in various settings, particularly for persons with intellectual disabilities and persons with psychosocial disabilities.

32.The Committee recommends that the State party immediately put an end to physical restraints and the involuntary use of medications, and:

(a)Adopt the necessary measures for the protection of all persons with disabilities from torture and cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment in all settings, including in justice, education, health, psychosocial and aged care facilities. It further recommends that organizations of persons with disabilities are effectively consulted and involved in this process;

(b)Ensure that the complaint procedure is accessible to all persons with disabilities, and investigate and sanction perpetrators of practices that may amount to torture or cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment against persons with disabilities, imposing sanctions proportional to the conduct.

a)Los tratamientos involuntarios a los que se somete a las personas con discapacidad en el hospital psiquiátrico, incluyendo el aislamiento, la sujeción mecánica, la medicación forzada, la terapia electroconvulsiva, los encierros en celdas individuales y salas de aislamiento y que no exista una legislación que lo prohíba;

b)La carencia de mecanismos accesibles de denuncia e investigación de tratamientos involuntarios, hospitalizaciones prolongadas y malos tratos en los hospitales psiquiátricos, así como la impunidad en estos casos y la ausencia de reparaciones a las víctimas;

c)El incumplimiento de las recomendaciones emitidas en el estudio diagnóstico sobre la situación de las condiciones de vida de las personas privadas de libertad con discapacidad física y/o psicosocial, publicadas por el Mecanismo Nacional de Prevención de la Tortura.

30. Con base en las Directrices sobre Desinstitucionalización, incluso en situaciones de emergencia (2022), el Comité recomienda al Estado parte:

a) Prohibir explícitamente, en la legislación, el aislamiento, la sujeción mecánica, la medicación forzada, la terapia electroconvulsiva, los encierros en celdas individuales y salas de aislamiento, así como los tratamientos forzados en situaciones de crisis;

b) Establecer mecanismos accesibles de denuncia e investigación para que las personas con discapacidad en instituciones puedan denunciar los tratos crueles, inhumanos o degradantes, contar con asistencia jurídica, recursos efectivos, reparaciones para las víctimas y asegurar la sanción de los autores;

c) En coordinación con el Mecanismo Nacional de Prevención de la Tortura, establecer monitoreo constante de las condiciones de las personas privadas de libertad con discapacidad física y/o psicosocial, incluyendo en los sitios de segregación, en hospitales psiquiátricos y hogares de albergue e informar sobre el avance del cumplimiento de las recomendaciones de dicho mecanismo.

25. The Committee observes with concern:

- (a) That involuntary or forced admission is still allowed upon decision from a medical board and therefore persons with disabilities, and in particular persons with psychosocial disabilities, are still subjected to forced treatment;
- (b) That despite the National Police's authority to investigate, address and resolve grievances at the local and national level, this body has not considered that forced treatment of any type amounts to torture.

26. The Committee recommends that the State party:

- (a) Review all relevant legislation, policies and practices that allow for forced treatment;
- (b) Ensure that all persons with disabilities still in institutions have access to procedures to handle complaints relating to forced treatment;
- (c) Ensure that the National Police effectively investigate all suspected cases of cruel, inhuman and degrading treatment or torture, including those resulting from forced treatment of persons with disabilities;
- (d) Prosecute and, where relevant, punish those responsible of acts amounting to torture or cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment committed against persons with disabilities.

Argentina (2023)

31. El Comité observa con preocupación:

- a) Los tratamientos involuntarios a los que se somete a las personas con discapacidad en los hospitales psiquiátricos, incluyendo el aislamiento, la sujeción mecánica, la psicocirugía, la medicación forzada y la terapia electroconvulsiva, y la legislación que legitima esas prácticas;
- b) El limitado alcance de los órganos de revisión nacional y local creados por la Ley Nacional de Salud Mental para investigar las violaciones de los derechos de las personas con discapacidad sometidas a tratamientos forzosos u hospitalizaciones prolongadas;
- c) La falta de mecanismos accesibles de denuncia de tratamientos involuntarios y los malos tratos en los hospitales psiquiátricos y de asistencia jurídica, la impunidad en estos casos y la ausencia de reparaciones a las víctimas.

32. Con base en las Directrices sobre Desinstitucionalización, incluso en situaciones de emergencia (2022), el Comité recomienda al Estado parte:

- a) Prohibir cualquier medida coercitiva impuesta a personas con discapacidad y eliminar las disposiciones jurídicas que las legitiman, incluyendo el aislamiento, la sujeción mecánica y farmacológica, la psicocirugía, la medicación forzada, la inyección psicofarmacológica de efecto prolongado, la terapia electroconvulsiva, así como los tratamientos forzados en situaciones de crisis;
- b) Fortalecer el monitoreo constante de las condiciones de privación de libertad de las personas con discapacidad, en coordinación con los órganos de revisión nacional y local creados por la Ley Nacional de Salud Mental y, en articulación con el Comité Nacional para la Prevención de la Tortura;
- c) Disponer de mecanismos accesibles para denunciar los tratos crueles, inhumanos o degradantes en los hospitales psiquiátricos, así como de asistencia jurídica, recursos efectivos, reparaciones para las víctimas, y asegurar la sanción de los autores.

Georgia (2023)

31. The Committee is deeply concerned about:

- (a) Domestic legislation allowing forced psychiatric treatment and restrictive measures based on doctors' decisions;
- (b) Information about inhumane or degrading treatment particularly of persons with psychosocial and persons with intellectual disabilities, including mechanical and chemical restraints, isolation, seclusion, forced medication, neglect, physical abuse and sexual violence in psychiatric interventions and in institutions.

32. The Committee recommends that the State party:

- (a) Repeal all legislation permitting forced treatment, particularly provisions in the Law on Mental Health, prohibit forced treatment, and establish measures to enable persons with disabilities to oppose medical, including mental health, treatment;
- (b) Adopt measures to prevent and prohibit torture or cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment of persons with disabilities, including involuntary medical treatment, establish a complaints mechanism accessible to persons with disabilities in all institutional settings, and provide legal remedies and redress;
- (c) Adopt measures to ensure that acts of torture or cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment, including involuntary medical treatment, of persons with disabilities are investigated and, where appropriate, perpetrators are prosecuted.

30. Al Comité le preocupa profundamente que se sigan aplicando medidas coercitivas, como la inmovilización, el aislamiento, la medicación forzosa, la terapia electroconvulsiva, la reclusión y contención física o farmacológica a personas con discapacidad, en particular a personas con discapacidad psicosocial o intelectual, sin su consentimiento informado en instituciones psiquiátricas, y que la Secretaría de Salud no cuente con mecanismos de supervisión y vigilancia de dichos tratos o penas crueles, inhumanos o degradantes, así como el débil monitoreo por parte del Mecanismo contra la Tortura.

31. El Comité recomienda al Estado parte que implemente de manera inmediata las medidas contempladas en la Ley de Salud Mental que prohíben tratamientos coercitivos, incluyendo el aislamiento, la terapia electroconvulsiva y la aplicación de drogas psicotrópicas sin consentimiento. Además, que modifique dicha ley para que prohíba explícitamente todas las prácticas restrictivas como las sujeciones físicas, mecánicas y farmacológicas. Adicionalmente, que fortalezca los mecanismos existentes para la supervisión y monitoreo de las instituciones públicas y privadas de salud mental.

31. The Committee is concerned about the occurrence of seclusion, physical, chemical and mechanical restraints and other forms of ill-treatment in family settings, psychiatric institutions, religious institutions, hospitals, prisons and educational services, particularly for persons with intellectual and/or psychosocial disabilities.

32. The Committee recommends that the State party:

(a) Adopt the necessary measures for the protection of all persons with disabilities from torture and cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment in all settings, including in justice, education, health, psychosocial and aged care facilities. It further recommends that organizations of persons with disabilities are effectively consulted and actively involved in this process;

(b) Ensure that the complaint procedure is accessible to all persons with disabilities still in institutions, and investigate and sanction perpetrators of practices that may amount to torture or cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment against persons with disabilities, imposing sanctions proportional to the conduct.

(a) Review the Law on Social Protection of persons with disabilities to bring its full conformity with the Convention and ensure that it includes sufficient budgetary and other measures, as well as awareness-raising activities to promote understanding of the right of choice and self-determination of persons with disabilities concerning their living arrangements, the right not to be obliged to live in a particular living arrangement, and the value of inclusion in, as opposed to segregation from, the community;

25. The Committee is concerned that coercive treatment as well as Chemical and/or mechanical restraint, particularly for persons with psychosocial disabilities which amounts to torture especially in psychiatric facilities is still allowed and therefore in practice.

26. The Committee recommends that the State party:

- (a) Ensure the protection in law and in practice of persons with disabilities, in particular persons with psychosocial disabilities, from all forms of torture including coercive treatment, Chemical and/or mechanical restraints of any type both at home and in psychiatric facilities;
- (b) Establish an accessible mechanism to protect persons with disabilities and their families from torture and to provide effective redress.

31. The Committee observes with concern:

- (a) Reported cases of torture and custodial deaths of persons with disabilities in institutions and the absence of information and disaggregated data, by age and sex, on the issue and on the provision of protection measures, enforceable remedies, accessible services, including shelters, and information in accessible formats for persons with disabilities and their families who have been victims of such torture, including persons with disabilities belonging to minorities, migrant workers and refugees with disabilities;
- (b) The lack of measures adopted to sanction perpetrators of torture or cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment, including corporal punishment against children with disabilities, and the lack of mechanisms to monitor implementation of sanctions.

32. The Committee recommends that the State party:

- (a) Take concrete measures to prevent cases of torture and custodial deaths of persons with disabilities in institutions, collect disaggregated data by age and sex on the issue and establish accessible complaint mechanisms, enforceable remedies, accessible services, and shelters. Additionally, provide information in accessible formats for persons with disabilities and their families who have been victims of such torture, including persons with disabilities belonging to minorities, migrant workers and refugees with disabilities;
- (b) Establish mechanisms to sanction perpetrators of torture or cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment, including corporal punishment against children with disabilities, and ensure monitoring mechanisms for implementation of sanctions.

34. The Committee notes with concern the use of forced medical procedures and treatment, chemical, physical and mechanical restraints, isolation and seclusion in prisons, residential care facilities and psychiatric institutions. It is further concerned about various reports alleging the use of coercive measures on persons with disabilities in institutions, in particular shackling of persons with intellectual and/or psychosocial disabilities.

35. The Committee recommends that the State party:

- (a) Implement the provisions of the Mental Health Law (2012) prohibiting medical experiments from being conducted without the informed consent of persons with disabilities and further prevent any form of torture or cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment of persons with disabilities in residential and psychiatric institutions and ensure access to justice and reparations for victims, including through the establishment of an accessible complaints procedure;
- (b) Explicitly prohibit in law and in practice the use of corporal punishment in all circumstances.

Hong Kong

69. The Committee is concerned about the reports of persons with disabilities being subjected to police brutality during public demonstrations, arbitrary arrest and detention following public demonstrations, and ill-treatment in detention, including denial of urgent medical treatment. The Committee is concerned about the lack of information on procedures in place for conducting independent investigations of violations of the rights of persons with disabilities in relation to their participation in public demonstrations, and about insufficient effective safeguards and sanctions.

70. The Committee recommends that Hong Kong SAR, China establish an independent commission of inquiry to investigate allegations of police brutality against persons with disabilities who participated in public demonstrations; and ensures that persons with disabilities whose rights were violated following their participation in public demonstrations receive adequate support and compensation, including rehabilitation.

Indonesia (2022)

36. The Committee is gravely concerned about:

- (a) The prolonged use of harmful and forced practices against persons with psychosocial disabilities such as shackling, seclusion and restraints, and their continued widespread use in families, the community and in government and privately run social care institutions;
- (b) The prevalence of systemic violence, including sexual violence, neglect, cruel and degrading treatment in social care institutions and faith-healing centres, including the removal of children from mothers with psychosocial disabilities and the lack of complaints and redress mechanisms.

37. The Committee recommends that the State party:

- (a) Prohibit the use of shackling, seclusion and all forms of restraints in all settings, including within families and in social care institutions, and develop and promote non-coercive, community-based mental health supports and services;
- (b) Establish an independent monitoring, safeguards and complaints mechanism that is accessible to all persons with disabilities in all settings, to receive complaints, investigate and sanction institutions, centres and perpetrators of harmful and forced practices, violence, neglect, cruel and degrading treatment.

33. The Committee observes with concern the:

- (a) Forced treatment, including seclusion, physical and chemical restraints, forced medication, forced cognitive and electroconvulsive therapies, of persons with disabilities in psychiatric hospitals, and legislation legitimating such practices, including the Act on Medical Care and Treatment for Persons Who Have Caused Serious Cases Under the Condition of Insanity;
- (b) Lack of scope and independency of the psychiatric review boards for ensuring the prevention of and the reporting on forced and ill-treatment in psychiatric hospitals;
- (c) Lack of independent monitoring systems to investigate violations of the rights of persons with disabilities who receive forced treatment or are long-term hospitalized, and lack of complaint and appeal mechanisms in psychiatric hospitals.

34. The Committee recommends that the State party:

- (a) Abolish all legal provisions, legitimating forced treatment of persons with psychosocial disabilities and leading to their ill-treatment, and ensure, that any intervention, as regards persons with psychosocial disabilities, is based on human rights and obligations under the Convention;
- (b) Establish, in cooperation with representative organizations of persons with disabilities, an effective independent monitoring mechanism for the prevention of and reporting on any forms of forced and ill-treatment of persons with disabilities in psychiatric settings;
- (c) Set up accessible mechanisms to report cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment in psychiatric hospitals, establish effective remedies for victims, and ensure the prosecution and punishment of perpetrators.

Lao People's Democratic Republic (2022)

26. The Committee is concerned that legislation, including the Law No.57 on Persons with Disabilities, lacks special provisions and measures to guarantee persons with disabilities the freedom from torture and inhuman treatment, as well as to combat harmful practices against them.

27. The Committee recommends that the State party:

- (a) Adopt legal provisions and concrete administrative measures to protect persons with disabilities from torture and other cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment, including protocols to ensure free consent concerning medical treatment;
- (b) Ensure that the complaint procedure is accessible to all persons with disabilities, investigate and sanction perpetrators of practices that may amount to torture or cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment against persons with disabilities, such as restraints, isolation, forced medication and sterilization, and electroconvulsive therapy.

29. The Committee is seriously concerned about the continued, and in some cases prolonged, use of solitary confinement, seclusion, physical and chemical restraints and other restrictive practices on persons with disabilities, in particular persons with psychosocial and/or intellectual disabilities, in places of detention.

30. The Committee recommends that the State party take immediate action to eliminate the use of solitary confinement, seclusion, physical and chemical restraints and other restrictive practices in places of detention.

33. The Committee remains concerned about the continuous occurrence of seclusion, psychical, chemical and mechanical restraints and other forms of ill-treatment in family settings, psychiatric institutions, hospitals, prisons and educational services, particularly for persons with intellectual disabilities and persons with psychosocial disabilities.

34. The Committee urges the State party to immediately put an end to the use of psychotropic medications, physical restraints and:

- (a) Adopt the necessary measures for the protection of all persons with disabilities from torture and cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment in all settings, including in justice, education, health, psychosocial and aged care facilities. It further recommends that organizations of persons with disabilities are effectively consulted and involved in this process;
- (b) Ensure that the complaint procedure is accessible to all persons with disabilities still in institutions, and investigate and sanction perpetrators of practices that may amount to torture or cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment against persons with disabilities, imposing sanctions proportional to the conduct.

31. The Committee is concerned about reports of inhuman or degrading treatment of persons with disabilities, including the use of electroshock therapy, restraints, isolation, seclusion, humiliation, forced medication in psychiatric facilities, on the basis of the perceived dangerousness to themselves or to others. It is also concerned at the imposition of corporal punishment against persons with disabilities by the State party.

32. The Committee recommends that the State party:

- (a) Abolish all legislation, policies and practices that allow torture, cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment of persons with intellectual disabilities and persons with psychosocial disabilities, such as the use of electroshock therapy, restraints or isolation, or that allow medication without their free, informed and personal consent, on the basis of their impairment;
- (b) Abolish corporal punishment against persons with disabilities, without exceptions;
- (c) Ensure effective, accessible remedies to all persons with disabilities, including to persons with disabilities in institutions, whose rights against torture or cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment are violated, ensure expeditious and independent investigations of such violations, provide redress and sanction the perpetrators.

Hungary (2022)

31. The Committee is concerned about:

- (a) Reports of solitary confinement, mechanical and chemical restraints, forced medication and other forms of ill-treatment of persons with disabilities in residential and psychiatric institutions;

(b) The practice of placing children with psychosocial disabilities in isolation as a form of punishment.

32. The Committee recommends that the State Party:

(a) Prevent any form of torture or cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment of persons with disabilities in residential and psychiatric institutions and ensure access to justice and reparations for victims, including through the establishment of an accessible complaints procedure;

(b) End the placement of children with psychosocial disabilities in isolation and other types of punishment.

30. The Committee observes with concern:

(a) That involuntary or forced admission is still allowed, and therefore persons with disabilities, and in particular persons with psychosocial disabilities, are still subjected to forced confinement and treatment;

(b) That despite the establishment by the Ministry of Health and Wellness of a Client Complaint Mechanism with a capacity to investigate, address and resolve grievances at the local and national level, this body has not considered that forced treatment of any type amounts to torture.

31. The Committee recommends that the State party:

(a) Review its legislation, policies and practices that allow all forms of involuntary confinement and forced treatment;

(b) Review the regulations of the Client Complaint Mechanism to ensure that the complaint procedure is accessible to all persons with disabilities still in institutions, and investigate and sanction perpetrators of practices that may amount to torture or cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment against persons with disabilities, imposing sanctions proportional to the conduct.

Mexico (2022)

43. The Committee is concerned about:

(a) A lack of measures to identify and prevent all forms of violence against children and adults with disabilities, including gender-based violence, in particular obstetric violence, when accessing sexual and reproductive health services;

(b) The omission of a specific reference to women with disabilities in the General Act to Ensure Women a Life Free of Violence, to measures ensuring accessibility and to procedural accommodations women with disabilities may require to access justice and protective measures on an equal basis with others;

(c) The limited availability of accessible shelters for women with disabilities who are victims of violence, and the lack of effective remedies for persons with disabilities facing violence, including gender-based violence.

44. The Committee recommends that the State party:

(a) Reinforce the implementation of existing legislative and policy measures to prevent all forms of violence against persons with disabilities, including gender-based violence, and to provide effective remedies and redress to victims, both inside and outside of institutions; and amend the General Act to Ensure Women a Life Free of Violence to establish specific standards to support women with disabilities, including support systems that include personal assistance;

(b) Periodically compile disaggregated data on the situation of women and children with disabilities in respect of violence, exploitation and abuse, both inside and outside of public and private institutions;

(c) Ensure that shelters for victims of violence are established and that the facilities and services provided therein are accessible to persons with disabilities, particularly women with disabilities;

(d) Create an independent monitor and oversight mechanism, adhering to article 16 (3) of the Convention, with the involvement and full participation of persons with disabilities and their representative organizations, to effectively monitor and supervise public and private institutions, and publish its findings.

Switzerland (2022)

31. The Committee notes with concern the use of forced medical procedures and treatment, chemical, physical and mechanical restraints, isolation and seclusion in prisons, residential care facilities and psychiatric institutions.

32. The Committee recommends that the State party:

(a) Eliminate in law, policy and practice all forms of forced medical procedures and treatment, and the use of chemical, physical and mechanical restraints, isolation and seclusion;

(b) Ensure that the National Commission for the Prevention of Torture has sufficient human, technical and financial resources and monitoring mechanisms based on Convention standards and principles, and that it actively involves persons with disabilities, including children with disabilities, through their representative organizations.

Venezuela (2022)

30. The Committee is concerned about:

(a) The lack of specific provisions in the State party's legislation to prevent, investigate and punish violence, neglect and abuse in respect of persons with disabilities in institutions, in the home or in public spaces, and the lack of monitoring, redress and disaggregated data, particularly in respect of women and girls with intellectual or psychosocial disabilities, who are often exposed to harassment, abuse and acts of sexual and other types of violence;

(b) Reports of violence against children with disabilities and the fact that corporal punishment against such children is tolerated.

31. The Committee recommends that the State party:

(a) Take all measures necessary to ensure that gender and disability are mainstreamed in legislation on the prevention of violence; the reform of mental health legislation is essential in this connection;

(b) Strengthen existing mechanisms and protocols by incorporating specific measures to prevent, eliminate, monitor, penalize and provide redress for all forms of violence, exploitation or abuse against persons with disabilities, including those who remain in or have left institutions, in the home or in public spaces;

(c) Establish a system for collecting data, disaggregated by sex, age and disability, on complaints of violence and abuse committed against persons with disabilities and gather information on related preventive, protective, monitoring and reparative measures;

25. The Committee observes with concern the continued practice of female genital mutilation against girls and women with disabilities, despite the legal prohibition under the Criminal Code. The Committee is also concerned about the lack of information on the measures taken to eliminate seclusion, physical, chemical and mechanical restraints and other forms of ill treatment in all settings, such as family settings, psychiatric institutions, hospitals, prisons and educational services, particularly for persons with intellectual or psychosocial disabilities.

26. The Committee recommends that the State party:

(a) Adopt measures to protect persons with disabilities, particularly women and girls with disabilities, including in rural areas, from torture and cruel and inhuman and degrading treatment or punishment, particularly female genital mutilation, and provide adequate and free or affordable quality legal advice, quality counselling and compensation to victims;

(b) Strengthen the role and mandate of the National Human Rights Commission in the prevention of torture and cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment and establish a complaint procedure accessible to all persons with disabilities and investigate and sanction perpetrators of practices that may amount to torture or cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment against persons with disabilities, imposing sanctions proportional to the conduct.

32. The Committee observes with concern:

- (a) The lack of mechanisms to ensure free and informed consent of persons with psychosocial disabilities, especially those under guardianship;
- (b) The inhuman and degrading conditions of custodial measures, and at residential and mental health facilities, practices of solitary confinement, seclusion, chemical and mechanical restraints in residential and mental health facilities, including on children and autistic persons;
- (c) Information about forced medications and the so-called "intensive treatment" within units the Units for Difficult Ill-Persons, and practices, including overmedication, and electroconvulsive therapy;
- (d) That children with psychosocial disabilities and autistic children are particularly affected by medical-based therapies and overmedication;
- (e) The lack of access to the records on practices of physical restraints and solitary confinement.

33. The Committee recommends that the State party:

- (a) Enforce mechanisms to prevent all forms of ill-treatment, including independent monitoring and judicial review, as well as introducing the human right-based standards in mental health legislation;
- (b) Establish mechanisms for reporting cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment, and redress and remedy measures for victims, and the prosecution and punishment of perpetrators;
- (c) Eliminate the practice of intensive treatment of persons with psychosocial disabilities and the "Units for Difficult Ill-Persons";
- (d) Take measures to protect children with disabilities who are still in institutions from overmedication and ill-treatment and reinforce independent monitoring of institutions;
- (e) Establish mandatory recording and oversight of records of medical practices in mental health settings and other medico-social and care settings.

Estonia (2021)

30. The Committee observes with concern:

- (a) Practices of involuntary internment and treatment of persons with disabilities, in mental health settings;
- (b) Information indicating that persons with disabilities, particularly, persons with intellectual disabilities, and persons with psychosocial disabilities are exposed to seclusion, solitary confinement, mechanical, physical and chemical restraints, forced medication and other forms of ill treatment in psychiatric settings, residential care and penitentiary facilities.

31. The Committee recommends that the State party:

- (a) Ensure the right of persons with disabilities to make autonomous decisions based on free and informed consent, including through supported decision-making mechanisms concerning any type of medical treatment, and legally recognize involuntary treatment on the basis of disability as a violation of the right of persons with disabilities to be free from cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment;
- (b) Strengthen the role of the National Preventative Mechanism for the prevention of torture and inhuman or degrading treatment to include measures to prevent and eliminate solitary confinement and the use of pharmacological therapeutic treatment, any means of restraint on the basis of disability in all settings, including in psychiatric, residential care and penitentiary facilities;
- (c) Set up a complaint procedure accessible for all persons with disabilities still in institutions, and investigate and sanction perpetrators of practices that may amount to torture or cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment against persons with disabilities, imposing sanctions proportional to the conduct.

29. The Committee is concerned that persons with disabilities are subjected to involuntary commitment and treatment procedures. The Committee is concerned about the lack of information on undertaken visits and procedures in place for conducting independent investigations of violations of the rights of persons with disabilities in institutions (see CRPD/C/ALB/1, para. 101) and about the lack of effective safeguards and sanctions. The Committee is also concerned about the absence of a mechanism mandated to monitor psychiatric institutions or other residential facilities where persons with disabilities are deprived of their liberty.

30. The Committee recommends that the State party take effective legal and administrative measures to prohibit and prevent the practices of involuntary commitment or hospitalization, forced medical treatment and, in particular, forced psychiatric treatment on the basis of impairment. It also recommends that the State party establish an independent mechanism to monitor residential centres for persons with disabilities, including centres where children with disabilities may still reside, in order to prevent, and offer protection from acts that may constitute torture or other cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment.

29. The Committee is seriously concerned about:

- (a) Legislation, policies and practices that permit the use of psychotropic medications, physical restraints and seclusion under the guise of “behaviour modification” and restrictive practices against persons with disabilities, including children, in any setting, including in justice, education, health, psychosocial and aged care facilities;
- (b) The reported abuse of young Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander persons with disabilities by fellow prisoners and prison staff, the use of prolonged solitary confinement, particularly of persons with intellectual or psychosocial disabilities, and the lack of safe and accessible channels for making complaints;
- (c) The lack of engagement with persons with disabilities, through their representative organizations, regarding the designation and establishment of a disability-inclusive national preventive mechanism.

30. The Committee urges the State party to:

- (a) Establish a nationally consistent legislative and administrative framework for the protection of all persons with disabilities, including children, from the use of psychotropic medications, physical restraints and seclusion under the guise of “behaviour modification” and the elimination of restrictive practices, including corporal punishment, in all settings, including the home;
- (b) Introduce policies and measures to protect persons with disabilities, including young Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander persons with disabilities and persons with intellectual or psychosocial disabilities, from abuse by fellow prisoners and prison staff and ensure that persons with disabilities cannot be held in solitary confinement;
- (c) Ensure that organizations of persons with disabilities can effectively engage in the establishment and work of the national preventive mechanism.

30. The Committee is deeply concerned that legislation in the State party continues to allow ill-treatment and the use of physical restraints, electric shocks and drug sedation on persons with disabilities without their free and informed consent in psychiatric and other institutions.

31. Recalling its general comment No. 7 (2018) on the participation of persons with disabilities, including children with disabilities, through their representative organizations, in the implementation and monitoring of the Convention and taking into account target 16.1 of the Sustainable Development Goals, the Committee recommends that the State party, in consultation with organizations of persons with disabilities:

(a) Amend the Mental Health Law and mental health policies to prohibit corporal punishment, isolation, restraint measures and anti-seizure therapies and eliminate any cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment of persons with disabilities;

(b) Establish an independent monitoring mechanism, in consultation with organizations of persons with disabilities, to investigate, monitor and receive complaints of ill-treatment, and apply sanctions for the conducting of any practice without the free and informed consent of persons with disabilities.

24. The Committee is concerned about:

(a) Overcrowding and instances of unrecorded injuries of persons with disabilities in psychiatric facilities, and the lack of information on legal safeguards and monitoring mechanisms in relation to care and treatment for persons with disabilities in facilities of any kind;

(b) The absence of a framework to provide the necessary specific measures and individualized support to prisoners and detainees with disabilities to satisfy their daily requirements in conditions ensuring respect for their dignity;

(c) Reception and detention conditions for persons with disabilities who are refugees, asylum seekers or persons in refugee-like situations (see also CAT/C/GRC/CO/7, paras. 20–21), including detention conditions pending removal to the country of origin under Law No. 3907/2011.

25. The Committee recommends that the State party take effective measures to ensure that the living conditions of persons with disabilities in institutions and facilities of any kind, including reception and detention centres for refugees, asylum seekers and persons in refugee-like situations, respect the dignity of persons with disabilities and comply with the provisions of article 15 of the Convention. It also recommends that the State party provide specific measures and individualized support to prisoners and detainees with disabilities to meet their daily requirements. It further recommends that the State party reinforce and implement safeguards against and mechanisms for monitoring ill-treatment in institutions and facilities where persons with disabilities are held, ensuring, inter alia, that injuries sustained by persons with disabilities in such institutions and facilities are systemically recorded and brought to the attention of the competent monitoring authorities.

32. The Committee is concerned about:

(a) The practice of the “two-finger test” in the prosecution of cases of sexual violence, including rape;

(b) The fact that sanctions against ill-treatment in the Rights of Persons with Disabilities Act cover only certain forms of ill-treatment and require the intention to humiliate (sect. 92 (a));

(c) The prevalence of inherent forms of violence and ill-treatment in institutions, particularly affecting children with disabilities, persons with intellectual or psychosocial disabilities and women with disabilities, including physical and chemical restraints, forced medication, coercion, physical abuse, humiliation, electroconvulsive therapy, shackling, forced labour and corporal punishment, including in childcare facilities;

(d) The absence of measures to prevent and ensure the freedom of persons with disabilities from torture and cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment.

33. The Committee recommends that the State party adopt measures to prevent and stop all forms of ill-treatment against persons with disabilities, including by:

(a) Ensuring that the prohibition of the “two-finger test” is enforced and that sanctions are applied when it is performed, and that accountability mechanisms are implemented in the justice system. The State party should ensure implementation of the recommendations issued by the Committee on the Elimination of Discrimination against Women (CEDAW/C/IND/CO/4-5, para. 11 (e)) about standard procedures for the police on gender-sensitive investigations and treatment of victims and of witnesses;

- (b) Promptly ratifying the Convention against Torture and Other Cruel, Inhuman or Degrading Treatment or Punishment and the Optional Protocol thereto;
- (c) Establishing accessible complaint mechanisms for persons with disabilities in institutions, ensuring oversight by, inter alia, the National Human Rights Commission and state commissions of all places where persons with disabilities are institutionalized, and setting up a task force to collect data about cases of torture and ill-treatment, with the effective involvement of organizations of persons with disabilities;
- (d) Ensuring that all forms of ill-treatment of persons with disabilities constitute criminal offences in line with the definition of torture in international law, that cases of torture and ill-treatment are investigated, prosecuted and the perpetrators sanctioned, and that redress is provided for persons with disabilities who are subjected to ill-treatment.

Iraq (2019)

29. The Committee is concerned about:

- (a) The lack of steps taken by the State party to ratify the Optional Protocol to the Convention against Torture and Other Cruel, Inhuman or Degrading Treatment or Punishment;
- (b) The absence of information on preventive measures taken, on complaints mechanisms accessible to persons with disabilities and measures taken to support persons with disabilities who have become exposed to torture or ill-treatment;
- (c) Corporal punishment being regarded as legal under article 41 (1) of the Criminal Code when it involves the corporal punishment of women by their husbands or of children by their parents or teachers, albeit “within certain limits prescribed by law or by custom”;
- (d) The physicians’ code of conduct (1985) providing an exception to the prohibition of medical experimentation for the purpose of scientific research.

30. The Committee recommends that the State party:

- (a) Ratify the Optional Protocol to the Convention against Torture and Other Cruel, Inhuman or Degrading Treatment or Punishment and establish a national preventive mechanism with a mandate to monitor institutions and other places of detention;
- (b) Establish monitoring mechanisms to prevent torture and cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment in all settings where persons with disabilities are deprived of their liberty, including psychiatric hospitals, prisons, hospices, rehabilitation centres and care homes and also establish a complaints mechanism accessible to persons with disabilities; that it investigate any such cases; that it prosecute and sanction perpetrators of torture or ill-treatment; and that it support victims by providing legal advice, information in accessible formats, counselling and redress, including compensation and rehabilitation;
- (c) Amend or repeal article 41 (1) of the Criminal Code, enact legislation to prohibit all forms of corporal punishment in all settings and enforce the prohibition of violence and torture enshrined in articles 29 (4) and 37 (1) (c) of the Constitution and articles 333 and 421 of the Criminal Code;
- (d) Amend the physicians’ code of conduct (1985) and ensure that persons with disabilities give their free and informed consent prior to being involved in any medical or scientific research.

Kuwait (2019)

30. The Committee is concerned about:

- (a) The lack of measures to prevent the torture and cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment of persons with disabilities, including non-consensual medical treatment in detention and corporal punishment in all settings;
- (b) Conditions of detention of persons with disabilities, in particular persons with disabilities awaiting execution, that amount to cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment;
- (c) Living conditions in residential and mental health facilities resulting from the lack of accessibility and individualized accommodations;
- (d) The absence of data on any complaints of the torture and cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment of persons with disabilities.

31. The Committee recommends that the State party:

- (a) Prohibit all forms of corporal punishment in all settings, ensure that persons with disabilities receive medical treatment on the basis of their free and informed consent and train mental health professionals, law enforcement and prison officials on respecting the rights of persons with disabilities in mental health facilities, prisons and detention centres;
- (b) Guarantee that the conditions of detention of persons with disabilities, in particular persons with disabilities awaiting execution, respect the inherent dignity of those detained;
- (c) Establish an independent mechanism, involving persons with disabilities through their representative organizations, to monitor all places where persons with disabilities may be deprived of their liberty;
- (d) Ensure that persons with disabilities have access to independent, accessible and available complaints mechanisms, effectively investigate cases of torture and cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment of persons with disabilities, prosecute and punish those responsible and systematically collect data on such cases.

Niger (2019)

25. The Committee is concerned about the continued practice of female genital mutilation among girls and women with disabilities and the lack of measures to prevent cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment of persons with disabilities, including medical experimentation without the person's free and informed consent.

26. The Committee recommends that the State party:

- (a) Adopt measures to protect persons with disabilities, particularly women with psychosocial or intellectual disabilities from torture and other cruel and inhuman and degrading treatment or punishment, including female genital mutilation; and provide legal advice, counselling and compensation to victims;
- (b) Protect persons with disabilities from medical experimentation and ensure that the conduct of such experimentation is conditional on their free and informed consent;
- (c) Ensure that persons with disabilities through their representative organisations are consulted in the development of a strategy for the implementation of the Optional Protocol to the Convention against Torture and other Cruel, Inhuman or Degrading Treatment or Punishment (2006).

Norway (2019)

25. The Committee notes that the State party is assessing the use of electroconvulsive treatment. It is concerned that:

- (a) Involuntary administration of electroconvulsive treatment is permitted;
- (b) Persons with disabilities do not receive sufficient and accessible information to inform their decisions and about the possibilities to lodge complaints in cases of forced treatment and the fear of retribution if they do so.

26. The Committee recommends that the State party:

- (a) Prohibit the forced administration of intrusive and irreversible treatments, such as electroconvulsive therapy;
- (b) Establish clear and effective procedural guarantees for persons with disabilities, including provisions in law for supported decision-making and effective complaint mechanisms, and ensure persons with disabilities' effective access to legal advice, including free legal aid, as well as obligatory and accessible information about their rights.

27. The Committee is concerned at:

- (a) Abuse, violence and cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment of persons and children with disabilities, including through corporal punishment in homes, schools, day-care centres and alternative care settings;
- (b) The Basic Law of Governance preventing the monitoring of the rights of children with disabilities in private homes;
- (c) Legal provisions allowing for the research on a person without his or her prior free and informed consent, especially of persons with psychosocial or intellectual disabilities.

28. The Committee recommends that the State party:

- (a) Adopt legislation that prohibits all forms of violence and corporal punishment in all settings, including in homes, schools, day-care centres and alternative care settings, train medical and research personnel on the human rights-based approach to disability and investigate, prosecute and punish perpetrators of such acts;
- (b) Amend the Basic Law of Governance to allow for the monitoring of the rights of children with disabilities in private homes;
- (c) Repeal all legal provisions, including in the Ethics of Scientific Research on Living Creatures Act, allowing for the research, medical and / or scientific experimentation on a person with disabilities without his or her prior, free and informed consent.

Senegal (2019)

27. The Committee is concerned about:

- (a) Reported instances of torture, inhuman and degrading treatment against persons with disabilities, particularly against persons with albinism and autistic persons;
- (b) The lack of accessible community-based services for persons with disabilities, especially women and girls with disabilities exposed to torture, inhuman or degrading treatment and the lack of sanctions against perpetrators.

28. The Committee recommends that the State party:

- (a) Adopt legal provisions and concrete administrative measures to protect persons with disabilities, particularly children and women with disabilities, persons with albinism and persons with psychosocial or intellectual disabilities, from torture and other cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment;
- (b) Adopt measures aimed at supporting victims, through providing legal advice, information in accessible formats, counselling, and redress, including compensation and rehabilitation.

29. The Committee is concerned that the Patient Autonomy Law article 9 and article 763 Law1/2000 of Civil Procedure allow the use of measures of physical, mechanical and chemical restraint against persons with psychosocial disabilities, which include, among others, forced medication, overmedication, electroconvulsive therapy or other treatment and commitment without free and informed consent. The Committee is further concerned about reports of the intentional misuse of forced consent as informed consent, in practice, in the State Party. The Committee is also concerned that people with disabilities in institutions, in particular persons with intellectual disabilities, are at risk of subject to humiliating or ill treatment. Finally, the Committee is concerned by the absence of an independent human rights-based mechanism for monitoring mental health facilities in the State party.

30. The Committee recommends that the State party:

- (a) Eliminate the use of forms of restraint for reasons related to disability in all settings;
- (b) Ensure free and informed consent in all procedures and stages of the mental health system;
- (c) Take immediate actions to eliminate any cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment against persons with disabilities;
- (d) With the equal and active participation of representative organisations of persons with psychosocial disabilities, establish an independent human rights-based mechanism for monitoring mental health facilities and services in all Autonomous Communities.

Türkiye (2019)

32. The Committee is concerned about:

- (a) The absence of information about measures to protect the rights of persons with disabilities and prevent abuse and involuntary admission into psychiatric hospitals, residential facilities, or other institutions;
- (b) Insufficient accommodations available for persons with disabilities in prisons and reports of ill treatment against persons with disabilities therein, and the limited access to remedies in case of ill treatment and risks of reprisals;

(c) The lack of information about monitoring of residential facilities to prevent ill treatment and the restrictions to the monitoring by civil society organizations of persons with disabilities deprived of liberty;

33. The Committee recommends that the State party:

(a) Adopt measures to prevent cases of solitary confinement, seclusion, physical, chemical or mechanical restraints, electro-convulsive therapy, and any other involuntary treatment of persons with disabilities in institutions, and investigate and impose criminal and administrative sanctions to perpetrators;

(b) Take measures to provide persons with disabilities with individualized accommodations and accessibility in prisons, ensuring awareness raising and training of personnel working in mental health facilities and prisons about the rights of persons with disabilities and ensure access for persons with disabilities to legal aid and an attorney during custodial interrogation, adopt a protocol and establish a mechanism to prevent and address reprisals against persons with disabilities in cases of ill treatment, and systematically collect information about measures taken for protecting victims;

(c) Ensure transparency and effectiveness of the existing monitoring mechanisms of detention and residential facilities, the publication of their findings, and collect information about measures taken to address cases of ill treatment and establish and disseminate information in accessible formats, about complaint mechanisms and remedies available, and ensure access of independent monitoring by civil society organizations, including organizations of persons with disabilities.

35. The Committee is concerned about the reported ill treatment of persons with disabilities in institutions, including isolation, which may amount to torture, and cruel and degrading treatment.

36. The Committee recommends that the State party prevent further ill treatment of persons with disabilities, in particular children with disabilities in institutions, and ensure that persons exposed to ill-treatment have access to complaint, and that persons exposed to torture and ill-treatment are entitled to and provided with redress and adequate compensation, including rehabilitation.

25. The Committee notes with concern the legal provisions in the Mental Health Act (Cap. 525) that allow for the use of restraints and seclusion against persons with psychosocial and intellectual disabilities, which may amount to torture, cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment. It is also concerned that organizations of persons with disabilities are not systematically involved in the two National Preventive Mechanisms designed by the State party to implement the Optional Protocol to the Convention against Torture and Other Cruel, Inhuman or Degrading Treatment or Punishment.

26. The Committee recommends that the State party take immediate steps to review and repeal existing legislation, specifically the provisions of the Mental Health Act (Cap. 525) that allow for the use of restraint and seclusion in case of 'mental disorder'. It also calls on the State party to ensure the involvement of organizations of persons with disabilities in the implementation of the Optional Protocol to the Convention against Torture and Other Cruel, Inhuman or Degrading Treatment or Punishment.

26. The Committee is concerned about the lack of:

(a) Data on persons with disabilities in detention places and on their needs related to their disabilities;

(b) Legal obligations for reasonable accommodation, as well as therapeutic and rehabilitation support, necessary medical treatment and lack of capacity of personnel in places of detention, leading to the degrading treatment of persons with disabilities, including overcrowded wards, coercion and overmedication.

27. The Committee recommends that the State party:

- (a) Collect data on persons with disabilities in detention and perform research on their situation and needs;
- (b) Enact legal obligations and allocate relevant funding for reasonable accommodation, as well as therapeutic and rehabilitation support, necessary medical treatment and mandatory capacity-building training of personnel in places of detention, explicitly defining and prohibiting the degrading treatment of persons with disabilities.

South Africa (2018)

28. The Committee notes with concern:

- (a) The high number of unregulated and unsupervised institutions housing persons with disabilities leading to disasters such as the Esidimeni tragedy that resulted in the death of more than 140 persons with psychosocial disabilities;
- (b) The lack of concrete measures, including complaint mechanisms, to prevent abuse and cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment of persons with disabilities, including persons with psychosocial and/or intellectual disabilities and children with disabilities in the home, school and community settings; the lack of accessible community-based services for persons with disabilities, especially women and girls with disabilities who have experienced gender-based violence.
- (c) The increasing incidence of corporal punishment of children with disabilities in the State party with insufficient awareness about complaint mechanisms and support services for children with disabilities exposed to these crimes, and lack of disaggregated data on investigation, prosecutions and disciplinary sanctions against perpetrators of torture and ill-treatment.

29. The Committee recommends that the State Party:

- (a) Adopt legal provisions and concrete administrative measures to protect persons with disabilities, in particular women and girls with disabilities, persons with psychosocial and/or intellectual disabilities, from torture and other cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment, and adopt measures aimed at supporting victims, through providing legal advice, information in accessible formats, counselling, and redress, including compensation and rehabilitation;
- (b) Ensure that perpetrators of these crimes are brought to justice and punished with sanctions commensurate with the gravity of these crimes and collect data on investigation, prosecutions and disciplinary sanctions against perpetrators of abuse and cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment, of persons with disabilities, including children in home, education and community settings;
- (c) Empower the National Human Rights Commission as the national independent monitoring mechanism to monitor all institutions and settings in which persons with disabilities are deprived of their liberty, in line with the Optional Protocol to the Convention against Torture;
- (d) Ratify the Optional Protocol to the Convention against Torture and establish a national preventive mechanism with the mandate to monitor institutions and other places of detention.

28. The Committee is concerned about the situation of persons with disabilities, particularly women and children, who are abandoned and placed in long-stay residential centres or private care homes on the grounds of their disability, without the free and informed consent of the person concerned, where they are subject to torture or cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment, such as being chained.

29. The Committee recommends that the State party prohibit all forms of coercive practices against adults and children with disabilities, including physical restraints and isolation, particularly against persons living in long-stay residential centres or private care homes or are otherwise deprived of their liberty. It also recommends the establishment of an independent mechanism to monitor residential centres for persons with disabilities, including centres for children with disabilities and private homes, in order to prevent, and offer protection from, acts that may constitute torture or other cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment.

34. The Committee notes with concern the reported ill treatment of persons with disabilities in institutions which may amount to torture, and cruel and degrading treatment. The Committee is furthermore concerned about the reported use of drugs to “control sexual behaviour” of persons with disabilities, especially those with intellectual and/or psycho-social disabilities.

35. The Committee recommends that the State party ensure that persons exposed to ill-treatment have access to complaint mechanisms and that victims of torture and ill-treatment are entitled to and provided with redress and adequate compensation, including rehabilitation. The Committee further recommends that the State party review its legislation in relation to forcible administration of drugs in institutions.

25. The Committee is concerned at the reported cases of excessive use of force against persons in psychiatric institutions by judicial police officers and medical staff. It is also concerned about the use of electro-convulsive therapy on persons with disabilities. It is further concerned about the limited capacity of the national preventive mechanism, exercised by the Human Rights Ombudsman, to effectively address allegations of torture and ill treatment against persons with disabilities in institutions.

26. The Committee recommends that the State party eliminate the use of seclusions or physical, chemical or mechanical restraints and any other non-consensual medical treatments in all medical facilities, in particular psychiatric hospitals that may amount to torture, cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment. It also recommends that the State party ensure that independent authorities and organisations of persons with disabilities have access to monitor all facilities, including the Forensic Psychiatric Unit, and develop criteria for gender-sensitive and age-appropriate monitoring activities. It further recommends that the State party investigate all allegations of torture and ill treatment in psychiatric institutions and prosecute perpetrators. The State party should provide fair and adequate compensation, reparation and rehabilitation measures for persons with disabilities who have been subjected to acts of torture and ill treatment. The Committee further recommends that the State party strengthen the capacity and provides adequate human, technical and financial resources to the national preventive mechanism by the Human Rights Ombudsman to effectively address allegations of torture and ill treatment against persons with disabilities in institutions.

25. The Committee is concerned at the reported cases of excessive use of force against persons in psychiatric institutions by judicial police officers and medical staff. It is also concerned about the use of electro-convulsive therapy on persons with disabilities. It is further concerned about the limited capacity of the national preventive mechanism, exercised by the Human Rights Ombudsman, to effectively address allegations of torture and ill treatment against persons with disabilities in institutions.

26. The Committee recommends that the State party eliminate the use of seclusions or physical, chemical or mechanical restraints and any other non-consensual medical treatments in all medical facilities, in particular psychiatric hospitals that may amount to torture, cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment. It also recommends that the State party ensure that independent authorities and organisations of persons with disabilities have access to monitor all facilities, including the Forensic Psychiatric Unit, and develop criteria for gender-sensitive and age-appropriate monitoring activities. It further recommends that the State party investigate all allegations of torture and ill treatment in psychiatric institutions and prosecute perpetrators. The State party should provide fair and adequate compensation, reparation and rehabilitation measures for persons with disabilities who have been subjected to acts of torture and ill treatment. The Committee further recommends that the State party strengthen the capacity and provides adequate human, technical and financial resources to the national preventive mechanism by the Human Rights Ombudsman to effectively address allegations of torture and ill treatment against persons with disabilities in institutions.

29. The Committee is concerned about persons with disabilities being subjected to involuntary medical treatment, including by non-certified traditional healers, and continuing to be physically restrained, in particular persons with intellectual and/or psychosocial disabilities.

30. The Committee recommends that the State party take measures to:

- (a) Ensure that medical treatment is carried out with the free, prior and informed consent of persons with disabilities;
- (b) Train medical personnel on the human rights-based approach to disability;
- (c) Prohibit treatment by non-certified traditional healers;
- (d) Stop persons with intellectual and/or psychosocial disabilities from being physically restrained.

31. The Committee is concerned that female genital mutilation is still not criminalized in the State party and the lack of information regarding women and girls with disabilities in the national strategy 2008-2018 to prevent female genital mutilation and other awareness-raising initiatives.

32. The Committee recommends that the State party strengthen its efforts to criminalize female genital mutilation and, to include women and girls with disabilities in all measures to fight and prevent the practice.

26. The Committee is concerned that involuntary treatment is legally permitted by the Medical Treatment Law and Regulation No. 453 of the Cabinet of Ministers.

27. The Committee recommends that the State party repeal legislative provisions that allow forced treatment and ensure that decisions relating to a person's physical or mental integrity can only be taken with the prior, free and informed consent of the person concerned.

30. The Committee is concerned about legal provisions that allow for the use of restraints against persons with disabilities in psychiatric institutions, which may amount to torture, cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment. It is also concerned that the competence of the mediator, as the mechanism of protection for the rights of persons with disabilities, does not extend to private institutions.

31. The Committee recommends that the State party take immediate steps to eliminate the use of restraints in medical facilities that may amount to torture, cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment and to ensure that independent authorities have the competence to monitor all facilities and programmes serving persons with disabilities, including private hospitals and mental health facilities, and communal homes.

30. The Committee notes with concern that article 43 of the Protection and Exercise of the Rights of the Mentally Ill Act allows for force, restraining and isolation of persons with an intellectual and/or psychosocial disability. It is concerned about reports according to which force has been used against persons with disabilities who refuse to take medication in psychiatric hospitals.

31. The Committee recommends that the State party make the necessary legislative amendments and take effective measures to prohibit the practice of involuntary commitment or hospitalization, forced medical and/or forced psychiatric treatment, chemical or physical restraining, coercive measures and isolation, which amount to torture or cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment, and ensure that any use of these practices, treatments and methods by staff is adequately prosecuted and sanctioned. In this regard, the Committee also recommends that the State party carry out independent, regular and unannounced checks on institutions.

32. The Committee is concerned about the absence of measures to prevent, in practice, abuse of, violence against and cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment of persons with disabilities, including the conduct of medical procedures and experimentation on a person without his or her free and informed consent, and corporal punishment in the home and in alternative care and day-care settings.

33. The Committee recommends that the State party:

(a) Adopt legal provisions and concrete administrative measures to protect persons with disabilities, in particular women with intellectual and/or psychosocial disabilities, from torture and other cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment, and adopt measures aimed at supporting such victims through the provision of legal advice, counselling, compensation and redress;

(b) Adopt concrete measures to ensure in practice that persons with disabilities are not subjected to medical procedures and experimentation without their free and informed consent;

(c) Empower the National Human Rights Council, as the national preventive mechanism, to monitor all settings in which persons with disabilities may be deprived of their liberty, in line with the Optional Protocol to the Convention against Torture and Other Cruel, Inhuman or Degrading Treatment or Punishment.

36. The Committee is concerned that, although the State party has various legal instruments that deal with the prevention of torture, none of them specifically covers the situation of persons with disabilities. The Committee is further concerned that persons with disabilities are administered treatment without their free and informed consent.

37. The Committee recommends that the State party expressly prohibit practices deemed to be disciplinary or corrective against persons with psychosocial disabilities who are living in public or private psychiatric centres or are otherwise deprived of their liberty. It also recommends that the State party adopt protocols to guarantee that persons with disabilities may exercise their right to free and informed consent in connection with any type of treatment.

36. The Committee is concerned about the continued use of physical, mechanical and chemical restraint, including the use of Taser guns and similar weapons, on persons with disabilities, which affects persons with psychosocial disabilities in prisons, the youth justice system, health-care and education settings, as well as practices of segregation and seclusion. The Committee is deeply concerned that these measures disproportionately affect black and other persons with disabilities belonging to ethnic minorities. It is also concerned about the absence of a unified strategy in the State party to review these practices. The Committee is further concerned at the occurrence of non-consensual electroconvulsive therapy across the devolved governments and particularly in Northern Ireland, and about excessive antipsychotic medication in England and Wales.

37. The Committee recommends that the State party:

(a) Adopt appropriate measures to eradicate the use of restraint for reasons related to disability within all settings and prevent the use of Taser guns against persons with disabilities, as well as practices of segregation and isolation that may amount to torture or inhuman or degrading treatment;

(b) Set up strategies, in collaboration with monitoring authorities and national human rights institutions, in order to identify and prevent the use of restraint for children and young persons with disabilities;

(c) Implement the outstanding recommendations contained in the February 2015 report of the inquiry by the Equality and Human Rights Commission entitled “Preventing Deaths in Detention of Adults with Mental Health Conditions”;

(d) Prohibit any use of non-consensual electroconvulsive therapy on the basis of any form of impairment, in all regions, ensure that safeguards are based on the human rights model and are not limited to medical criteria, and work through appropriate authorities to ensure monitoring of this development, particularly in Northern Ireland.

25. The Committee is concerned about the inhuman and degrading treatment of persons with disabilities in institutions, including children with intellectual and/or psychosocial disabilities in specialized institutions, perpetrated by staff members, caregivers and other residents, as well as about neglect and the use of physical restraints as means of treatment and punishment. It is also concerned about the inefficiency and inadequacy of complaints systems and the lack of monitoring of institutions.

26. The Committee recommends that the State party take measures to protect persons with disabilities who remain institutionalized, in particular children with intellectual and/or psychosocial disabilities, from coercive, inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment and prohibit all forms of such treatment. It also recommends that the State party develop an effective investigation and monitoring system to prevent all forms of inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment of persons with disabilities in institutions, and to ensure the prompt investigation of such cases.

28. The Committee is concerned that despite the Ombudsman’s recommendations and the establishment of the National Mechanism for Prevention of Torture and other Inhumane or Humiliating Treatment or Punishment of Bosnia and Herzegovina, there is a lack of information about the protocols prohibiting the use of coercive measures, including physical, mechanical and chemical restraints, excessive antipsychotic therapy and the prolonged isolation of adults and children with psychosocial and/or intellectual disabilities. According to the Committee against Torture (see CAT/C/BIH/CO/2-5, para. 8), the State party has not provided a comprehensive, systematic and harmonized approach to handling cases involving victims of torture and civilian war victims.

29. The Committee recommends that the State party take effective legal and administrative measures to prohibit the practices of involuntary commitment or hospitalization, and forced medical treatment and, in particular, forced psychiatric treatment on the basis of impairment, and that it provide sufficient community-based alternatives. It also recommends that the State party revise the current legislation in relation to survivors of torture and sexual violence, with special attention to providing appropriate compensation and access to effective remedies, and that it consider revising the way in which burden of proof is currently applied.

38. El Comité urge al Estado parte a que prohíba la institucionalización forzada por motivo de discapacidad y adopte medidas para abolir la práctica de internamiento u hospitalización no consentida. Además, le recomienda el establecimiento de un mecanismo independiente que supervise los centros de internamiento de personas con discapacidad, incluidos los centros donde se encuentran niños y niñas con discapacidad, a fin de ofrecer prevención y protección contra actos que puedan considerarse como tortura y otros tratos y penas crueles, inhumanos o degradantes.

40. El Comité recomienda al Estado parte que garantice suficientes recursos humanos y económicos para las funciones de prevención y protección contra la tortura. También recomienda que el Estado parte adopte medidas para capacitar y formar a todo el personal que trabaja dentro de estos centros de privación de libertad con el fin de garantizar el respeto de los derechos humanos de las personas con discapacidad.

32. The Committee is concerned about:

- (a) The absence of complaint mechanisms for persons with disabilities in cases of torture, cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment particularly in residential institutions or psychiatric hospitals;
- (b) The enforcement of mutilation as a form of criminal sentence, and the stigmatization against persons who have impairment as a consequence of such punishment; and,
- (c) The absence of measures to protect persons with disabilities against obligatory medical or scientific research/experimentation.

33. The Committee recommends that the State party:

- (a) Establish a mechanism to file complaints against all forms of torture, cruel, inhuman or degrading punishment and a monitoring mechanism to prevent torture in all settings where persons with disabilities are deprived of their liberty;
- (b) Enact legislation to prohibit all corporal punishment of children with disabilities and to protect them from such practice;
- (c) Provide explicit guidelines for judges in order to replace the punishment of mutilation for other type of penalties, and combat stigma against persons with physical impairments due to mutilation; and
- (d) Introduce the requirement of and protocols to ensure free and informed consent of persons with disabilities concerning scientific research.

Jordan (2017)

31. The Committee notes with concern the reported ill-treatment of persons with disabilities in “shelters”, including cases of physical and psychological abuse, which amounts to torture and cruel and degrading treatment. The Committee is concerned about the reported practice of “protective custody” as a measure to protect women with disabilities from violence by restricting their liberty of movement.

32. The Committee recommends that the State party ensure that:

- (a) Investigations are launched into reported cases of cruel and degrading treatment of persons with disabilities in “shelters”, with a view to establishing administrative and criminal responsibility;
- (b) Persons exposed to torture and ill-treatment have access to independent complaint mechanisms and that victims are legally entitled to and provided with redress and adequate compensation and rehabilitation;
- (c) Replace “protective custody” with effective measures for protecting women with disabilities from violence while respecting their liberty of movement.

30. The Committee is concerned about the inhuman and degrading treatment of persons with disabilities in institutions perpetrated by staff members, caregivers or other residents, including acts of neglect and the use of chemical and physical restraints, solitary confinement and forced medication as punishment. It is also concerned about the inefficiency and inadequacy of complaints systems, delays in investigations and lack of monitoring of institutions.

31. The Committee urges the State party to take measures to protect persons with disabilities who remain institutionalized from forced, inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment and to prohibit all such acts. It recommends that the State party develop an effective investigation and monitoring system to prevent all forms of inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment against persons with disabilities in institutions, and to ensure the prompt investigation of such cases.

Bolivia (2016)

39. The Committee is concerned that the Torture Prevention Service does not have a mandate to monitor the situation of persons with disabilities who are institutionalized against their will or, in particular, information on acts that could be deemed torture or cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment committed against persons with disabilities.

40. The Committee urges the State party to broaden the powers of the Torture Prevention Service to include the monitoring of facilities where persons with disabilities are held and to put in place an effective mechanism for preventive action and protection and defence of the rights of persons with disabilities who are institutionalized.

42. The Committee notes with concern that the State party has not ratified the Optional Protocol to the Convention against Torture and Other Cruel, Inhuman or Degrading Treatment or Punishment, and that there are no national mechanisms to prevent or protect against torture, or legislation establishing as separate offences specific forms of torture committed against persons with disabilities.

43. The Committee urges the State party to ratify the Optional Protocol to the Convention and to establish a national mechanism for the prevention of torture, whose mandate should include monitoring of institutions for the seclusion or internment of persons with disabilities, including psychiatric hospitals and long-term residential centres, within its mandate.

33. The Committee is deeply concerned by reports of the use of coercive measures, including physical restraint and seclusion, of adults and children with psychosocial and/or intellectual disabilities, and that corporal punishment is lawful at home.

34. The Committee urges the State party to prohibit all forms of coercive treatments against adults and children with disabilities, including physical restraint and isolation, which are considered to be cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment, and the use of corporal punishment.

43. The Committee is concerned that the steps being taken by the State party, in response to the concluding observations of the Committee against Torture (CAT/C/GTM/CO/5-6), to separate convicted prisoners and persons with disabilities in mental health hospitals, closed institutions and prisons, and the implementation of the precautionary measures requested by the Inter-American Commission on Human Rights for persons with disabilities at the Federico Mora National Mental Health Hospital, do not adequately protect persons with disabilities and are not in line with the Convention.

44. The Committee recommends that the State party duly implement the concluding observations of the Committee against Torture (CAT/C/GTM/CO/5-6) and the precautionary measures requested by the Inter-American Commission on Human Rights with regard to the Federico Mora National Mental Health Hospital, in accordance with the principles and obligations set out in the Convention and these concluding observations. It also recommends establishing an independent mechanism for the monitoring of closed institutions for persons with disabilities, including those for children with disabilities, in order to prevent and protect against acts that could be considered torture or cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment.

39. The Committee is concerned about medical experimentation on persons with disabilities without their free and informed consent.

40. The Committee recommends that the State party repeal as a matter of urgency all laws that allow legal guardians to consent to medical experimentation on behalf of persons with disabilities.

41. The Committee is concerned that the remit of the mandate of the national preventive mechanism does not extend to psychiatric institutions or other residential facilities for persons with disabilities where they are deprived of their liberty.

42. The Committee recommends that the national preventive mechanism immediately visit and report on the situation in psychiatric institutions or other residential facilities for persons with disabilities, especially those with intellectual and/or psychosocial disabilities.

United Arab Emirates (2016)

29. The Committee is concerned that:

(a) Federal Act No. 10 of 2008 on medical liability and other laws allow guardians or legal representatives to consent to medical research or experiments on behalf of persons with disabilities;

(b) Corporal punishment remains lawful in alternative care settings, at home, in day care establishments and as a sentence for committing a crime and that it is not explicitly prohibited in private schools;

(c) Parents have the right to “chastise” their children, including children with disabilities;

(d) There is a lack of information on how corporal punishment affects persons with disabilities in all settings, including migrant workers, especially domestic migrant workers.

30. The Committee recommends that the State party:

(a) Repeal all laws, including Federal Act No. 10 of 2008, allowing guardians or legal representatives to consent to medical research or experiments on behalf of persons with disabilities;

(b) Prohibit all forms of corporal punishment in all settings;

(c) Provide information in its next periodic report on measures taken to protect persons with disabilities, including migrant workers with disabilities, from corporal punishment.

Uruguay (2016)

37. Al Comité le preocupa que no se destinen suficientes recursos para la prevención y el monitoreo de casos de tortura u otros tratamientos considerados crueles, inhumanos o degradantes dentro de los centros donde se encuentran personas con discapacidad privadas de la libertad.

33. El Comité se encuentra profundamente preocupado por las evidencias de que en el Estado parte se lleven a cabo prácticas tales como: psicocirugías, tratamientos electroconvulsivos, aislamientos prolongados en celdas sin calefacción ni servicios básicos, contenciones físicas y otros tratamientos considerados crueles, inhumanos o degradantes, con el único propósito de “disciplinar” o “corregir conductas desviadas”, a personas con discapacidad psicosocial.

34. El Comité recomienda al Estado parte la prohibición explícita de prácticas consideradas “disciplinarias” o “correctivas” contra las personas con discapacidad psicosocial internadas en centros psiquiátricos públicos y privados u otros de privación de libertad. Asimismo, solicita que se inicien procesos de investigación sobre los hechos denunciados, con el fin de establecer las responsabilidades administrativas y penales correspondientes. Igualmente solicita que se anule la Regulación Exenta 656 del Ministerio de Salud (2002), se revise el mandato de la Comisión Nacional de Protección de los Derechos de las Personas con Enfermedades Mentales y se asegure que la Comisión ejerza funciones de prevención y protección de tales derechos, en línea con la Convención.

35. El Comité observa la ausencia de protocolos policiales y de las fuerzas de seguridad sobre el trato de las personas con discapacidad, lo cual ha resultado en violaciones a sus derechos e incluso fallecimientos como consecuencia del abuso o la negligencia.

37. Al Comité le preocupa la ausencia de un mecanismo nacional para la prevención de la tortura y de otros mecanismos de supervisión de centros de privación de libertad que monitoreen la situación de los derechos humanos de las personas internas.

27. The Committee is concerned about reports of the use of coercive measures including physical and chemical restraints as well as excessive antipsychotic therapy, and prolonged isolation of adults and children with psychosocial and with intellectual disabilities, considered as cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment, despite reports and recommendations by the national prevention mechanism for the prevention of torture.

28. The Committee urges the State Party to prohibit all forms of coercive treatments against adults and children with disabilities, including physical and chemical restraints as well as excessive antipsychotic therapy and isolation considered to be cruel, inhuman or degrading treatments, as recommended by the national preventive mechanism against torture, and it calls upon the State Party to initiate administrative and criminal investigations on the reported cases in order to establish the respective responsibilities.

45. The Committee is deeply concerned about inhuman or degrading treatment through the use of physical, mechanical and chemical restraints, and the use of isolation and seclusion for persons with psychosocial disabilities.

46. The Committee recommends that the State party immediately discontinue these practices and reform laws and policies which allow for such practices to take place.

31. The Committee is concerned about reports of inhuman or degrading involuntary treatment of persons with disabilities, including the use of electroshock therapy, restraints, isolation and seclusion, on the basis of the perceived dangerousness to themselves or others on impairment.

32. The Committee recommends that the State party take effective and appropriate measures, including those of a legislative nature, to prevent inhuman or degrading medical treatment on the basis of actual or perceived impairment.

28. The Committee is concerned about the information on inhumane and cruel forced medical treatments, physical and chemical restraints, as well as isolation faced by persons with disabilities, particularly persons with psychosocial and intellectual disabilities, in psychiatric hospitals. It is also concerned about the absence of measures to ensure that persons with disabilities are enabled to provide their free consent to medical or scientific experimentation.

It is further concerned about the absence of monitoring by the Uganda Human Rights Commission of centres where persons with disabilities have been deprived of their liberty.

29. The Committee urges the State party to:

- (a) Investigate cases of physical ill-treatment, torture, inhuman and degrading treatment and adopt protocols that guarantee full respect of the human rights of persons with disabilities;
- (b) Review and revise the Mental Health Act to ensure compliance with the Convention and ensure that the current Mental Health Bill, 2014, is in compliance with the Convention;
- (c) Ban forced hospitalization and forced treatment and other non- consensual practices;
- (d) Strengthen the legal mandate and the funding of the Uganda Human Rights Commission to enable it to discharge its mandate of monitoring the centres where persons with disabilities remain deprived of their liberty.

Brazil (2015)

28. The Committee is concerned at reports of the arbitrary deprivation of liberty and involuntary treatment of persons with disabilities on the basis of impairment, including situations where it is assumed that persons with disabilities are dangerous to themselves or others on the basis of a diagnosis of impairment.

29. The Committee recommends the State party to take measures, including the repeal of relevant legal provisions, to abolish the practice of involuntary commitment or hospitalization prohibit forced medical treatment, in particular, psychiatric treatments, on the basis of impairment and provide sufficient community-based alternatives.

30. The Committee is concerned that persons with disabilities who are deemed not liable for the commission of a crime on the basis of impairment may be subject to security measures, including indefinite detention. The Committee is also concerned about arbitrary detentions that may amount to inhuman and degrading treatment or torture. It is further concerned about the situation of persons with disabilities deprived of their liberty in prisons and other places of detention, which are severely overcrowded and where psychical and psychological ill-treatment of inmates becomes a norm, as stated by the UN Special Rapporteur on torture and other cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment at the end of his official visit to Brazil in August 2015.

31. The Committee recommends the State party to:

- (a) Abolish security measures that involve the arbitrary detention of persons with disabilities on the basis of impairment and implement alternative measures that are consistent with articles 14 and 19 of the Convention; and
- (b) Ensure that penitentiary facilities are accessible and provide reasonable accommodation for persons with disabilities.

42. The Committee is concerned that research funded by the European Union is not accompanied by ethics guidelines which ensure that all persons with disabilities involved in such research are enabled to give informed consent.

43. The Committee recommends that the European Union review its ethics guidelines on research in this regard and especially set good practice examples by developing consent forms in accessible and easy-to-read formats, and prevent substituted decision-making in this area.

36. The Committee is concerned that the State party has not adopted a definition of torture, including mental torture, or explicitly criminalised torture, in the Criminal Code.

37. The Committee recommends that the State party adopt a definition of torture, including mental torture, and that it ensure that all relevant mechanisms and programs incorporate the absolute prevention of cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment against persons with disabilities.

29. The Committee is concerned about the information on forced medical treatments, physical and chemical restraints, as well as isolation faced by persons with disabilities in psychiatric hospitals. It is also concerned about the absence of measures to ensure that persons with disabilities are enabled to provide their free consent to medical or scientific experimentation.

30. The Committee recommends that the State party:

(a) Establish a mechanism on the prevention of torture, considering in particular the protection of persons with disabilities;

(b) Provide support to persons with disabilities including providing information in accessible formats in order to be able to give free and informed consent in relation to medical treatment and scientific experimentation; and

(c) Train health professionals on rights of persons with disabilities specifically on the right to free and informed consent.

29. The Committee is concerned that corporal punishment remains lawful and by the lack of information on how this affects persons with disabilities in all settings, including in alternative care settings, at home, at schools and as a sentence for crime.

30. The Committee recommends that the State party enact a prohibition of all corporal punishment and that it implement the recommendations of the Committee against Torture (CAT/C/QAT/CO/2 para. 12 and 19) insofar as they relate to persons with disabilities. It also requests that the State party provide information in this regard in its next periodic report.

32. The Committee is concerned about the various forms of abuse, including those that can amount to cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment against persons with disabilities, particularly boys and girls in condition of institutionalization.

33. The Committee recommends that the State Party evaluate the impact and effectiveness of its training programs for the prevention and absolute prohibition of torture and ill-treatment according to the concluding observations of the Committee against Torture (CAT/C/UKR/CO/6-PARA 18 (e)). These training programs should incorporate, explicitly, the prevention of cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment against persons with disabilities.

23. The Committee is concerned about the hard situation in a significant number of social care institutions and psychiatric facilities where persons with disabilities, mostly women, have to live under degrading and overcrowded conditions for the rest of their lives. It is concerned about the frequent use of involuntary treatment and restraint measures as well as other forms of degrading treatment. The Committee is concerned that these laws do not sufficiently protect persons with disabilities against violence in institutions and involuntary and degrading treatment.

24. The Committee urgently recommends that immediate steps are taken to address the hard situations in institutions, to end involuntary treatment and stop the use of restraint measures. It is further suggested that the respective legislation is brought into alignment with the Convention. The Committee further recommends the investigation and prosecution of all human rights violations.

29. The Committee notes with concern the practice of surgical castration of persons with disabilities deprived of liberty as a form of punishment.

30. The Committee urges the State party to cease with the practice of surgical castration and any kind of forced treatment of persons with disabilities deprived of liberty as a form of punishment.

31. The Committee is deeply concerned that, mechanical and chemical restraints, which may amount to torture, and cruel, inhuman and degrading treatment, are a common practice in psychiatric institutions.

32. The Committee urges State Party to immediately ban and prohibit the practice of the use of mechanical and chemical restraints of persons with psychosocial disabilities in psychiatric hospitals, and to strengthen monitoring and inspection of those facilities to prevent such practices.

33. The Committee recommends that the State party ensure that persons deprived of liberty have access to independent monitoring and complaint mechanisms and that victims of torture and ill-treatment are entitled to and provided with redress and adequate compensation, including rehabilitation.

30. The Committee is concerned at the existence of forced medical treatment, and particularly of forced psychiatric treatment that may constitute torture or cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment.

31. The Committee recommends that the State explicitly prohibit medical treatment, particularly psychiatric treatment, administered without the free and informed consent of the person with disabilities concerned; it also recommends the establishment of an independent mechanism to monitor internment centres for persons with disabilities in order to prevent and offer protection from acts that may constitute torture or other cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment.

33. The Committee is deeply concerned that the State party does not recognize the use of physical and chemical restraints, solitary confinement and other harmful practices, as acts of torture. It is further concerned by the use of physical and chemical restraints, in particular for persons with psychosocial disabilities in institutions and older persons in residential care.

34. The Committee recommends that the State party:

(a) carry out a review with a view to formally abolishing all the practices regarded as acts of torture;

(b) Prohibit the use of physical and chemical restraints in older persons' care settings and institutions for persons with disabilities;

(c) Consider compensation for the victims of such practices.

Turkmenistan (2015)

31. The Committee is concerned about the lack of data on persons with disabilities who are subjected to compulsory medical treatment by court orders. It is also concerned that persons under guardianship may be subjected to medical experimentation without their individual free and informed consent.

32. The Committee encourages the State party to repeal all legislation that authorizes compulsory medical treatment, medical experimentation included, without the free and informed consent of the person.

38. The Committee is deeply concerned at the number of cases of coercive treatment of persons admitted to psychiatric institutions, and at the methods used in the coercive and involuntary treatment of persons with disabilities in psychiatric institutions, in particular the use of straps or belts for more than 48 hours, the use of chemical restraints, or the reportedly frequent application of involuntary electroconvulsive therapy.

39. The Committee recommends that the State party amend its laws and regulations in order to abolish the use of physical, chemical, and other medical non-consensual measures, with regard to persons with psychosocial disabilities in institutions. It particularly recommends that the State party provide training on treatment in accordance with the Convention to medical professionals and personnel in care institutions and other similar institutions on preventing torture and cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment.

29. The Committee is concerned that, in psychiatric hospitals, persons with psychosocial disabilities are subjected to acts considered cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment, including solitary confinement, constant beating, restraint and excessive drug treatment.

30. The Committee urges the State party to abolish forced treatment that subjects persons with disabilities to cruel, inhuman and degrading treatment and punishment. As long as institutionalization continues, the Committee urges the State party to protect persons with disabilities in psychiatric hospitals from violence, abuse and ill-treatment of any kind through the establishment of effective external independent monitoring mechanisms that ensure the representation of organizations of persons with disabilities.

31. The Committee finds alarming the fact that human rights violations, such as physical restraint and placement in isolation, are committed against persons with disabilities interned in psychiatric hospitals and may even amount to acts of torture or cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment. It is also concerned that the mechanisms designated for the prevention of such situations do not offer effective remedies.

32. The Committee urges the State party to initiate administrative and criminal investigation processes, with a view to punishing the perpetrators of practises that violate the rights of persons with disabilities living in institutions. The Committee recommends that the State party abolish the use of physical restraint and isolation in institutions for persons with disabilities. It also requests the Government to strengthen the national torture prevention mechanism by providing it with sufficient funds, trained staff and guaranteed independence in the exercise of its functions.

37. The Committee is deeply concerned at the reported number of cases relating to the use of electroconvulsive therapy and at its possible use as a compulsory treatment. The Committee is also concerned at reports that such treatment is performed more often on women.

38. The Committee recommends that the State party abolish the use of non-consensual practices with regard to persons with psychosocial disabilities in medical institutions. It further recommends that the State party provide training to medical professionals and personnel in care and other similar institutions on the prevention of torture, cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment, as provided for under the Convention.

39. The Committee is concerned about the methods used in coercive and involuntary treatment of boys and girls with disabilities in mental health care settings, in particular the use of straps or belts and the use of seclusion, as reported by the Ombudsman for Children in Sweden.

40. The Committee urges the State party to implement the recommendations of the Ombudsmen for Children in relation to boys and girls with disabilities in mental health care settings.

28. The Committee is concerned that the law permits the deprivation of liberty based on disability and provides for involuntary hospitalisation and forced institutionalisation of children and adults with intellectual and/or psychosocial disabilities. The Committee is particularly concerned at reports of poor health care in such places.

29. The Committee urges the State party to repeal laws and prohibit disability based detention of children and adults with disabilities including involuntary hospitalisation and forced institutionalisation and ensure that all relevant legislation and policies in this area are in line with the Convention. It should also develop support services in the community and accelerate deinstitutionalisation strategies based on the human rights model of disability in consultation with DPOs.

30. The Committee is concerned at reports of poor living conditions of persons with disabilities in certain places of deprivation of liberty.

31. The Committee calls upon the State party to ensure that all places of deprivation of liberty, particularly prisons, maintain accessible and humane living conditions in line with the Convention. In this regard, the State party should ensure that monitoring bodies such as the Office of the Ombudsman and the National Preventive Mechanism have sufficient resources and unimpeded access to all places of deprivation of liberty in the State party.

Costa Rica (2014)

31. The Committee deeply regrets the progress made in the adoption of Bill No. 17777 on Biomedical Research, which was passed by the Legislative Assembly on second reading in April 2014 and authorizes the guardians of persons declared legally incapable to make decisions concerning their participation in scientific experimentation and research without their free and informed consent.

32. The Committee calls on the State party to withdraw Bill No. 17777 on Biomedical Research from the legislative agenda as a matter of urgency.

33. The Committee is concerned that persons with disabilities are forcibly interned in psychiatric institutions and are subjected to acts considered cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment.

34. The Committee urges the State party to ensure that the national mechanism for the prevention of torture monitors psychiatric institutions on an ongoing basis and that the competent authorities eliminate practices involving forced internment on grounds of disability. In addition, as long as institutionalization continues, the State party should ensure that the clinical treatments administered to interned persons fully respect their dignity and human rights.

35. The Committee is concerned that persons with disabilities, particularly those with intellectual impairment or psychosocial disability, are subjected to unregulated behaviour modification or restrictive practices such as chemical, mechanical and physical restraint and seclusion, in environments including schools, mental health facilities and hospitals.

36. The Committee recommends the State party to take immediate steps to end such practices including by establishing an independent national preventative mechanism to monitor places of detention including mental health facilities, special schools, hospitals, disability justice centres and prisons, to ensure that persons with disabilities including those with psychosocial disabilities are not subjected to intrusive medical interventions.

32. The Committee notes with concern the continued use of net beds and other forms of non-consensual practices in the State party's psychiatric hospitals and institutions where people with intellectual, mental and psychosocial disabilities are confined.

33. The State party should abolish the use of net beds, restraints and other non-consensual practices used against persons with intellectual, mental and psychosocial disabilities in psychiatric hospitals and institutions. It is further recommended that the State party should continue to provide training to medical professionals and personnel in the care and other similar institutions on the prevention of torture, cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment as provided by the Convention.

33. The Committee notes with concern that there is no legal requirement to obtain the prior, free and informed consent of persons with disabilities regarding psychiatric procedures. It is also concerned at the lack of a mechanism overseeing the conditions of persons with disabilities being treated in psychiatric institutions, including children, and the lack of measures to prevent torture and other cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment in such institutions and to punish perpetrators.

34. The Committee urges the adoption of legislation and other effective measures for the prevention of torture and other cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment against persons with disabilities in psychiatric or other institutions. Specifically, the Committee recommends that the State party prohibit and prevent the practice of conducting medical or scientific experiments on persons with disabilities without their free and informed consent, and that it establish a mechanism to oversee psychiatric and other institutions.

37. The Committee takes note with satisfaction of the creation of the national mechanism for prevention of torture and other cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment in the State party. It is nevertheless concerned at the scant progress made in implementing the recommendations of the Subcommittee on Prevention of Torture and Other Cruel, Inhuman or Degrading Treatment or Punishment, in particular with regard to persons with psychosocial disabilities interned in Tacumbú prison.

38. The Committee recommends that the mandate of the State party's national prevention mechanism include oversight of psychiatric hospitals and homes and the detention conditions of persons with psychosocial disabilities in such establishments, paying particular attention to Tacumbú prison. It also asks the State party to encourage the transfer of persons with psychosocial disabilities to social rehabilitation centres and their inclusion in the life of the community.

27. The Committee notes with concern that Senate approval of the bill that would create a national mechanism for the prevention of torture has been delayed.

28. The Committee urges the State party to immediately approve the bill on the creation of a national mechanism for the prevention of torture so that institutionalized persons with disabilities can be monitored and protected from actions that may constitute acts of torture or other forms of cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment or punishment.

27. For those involuntarily committed persons with actual or perceived intellectual and psychosocial impairments, the Committee is concerned that the "correctional therapy" offered at psychiatric institutions represents an inhuman and degrading treatment. Further, the Committee is concerned that not all medical experimentation without free and informed consent is prohibited by Chinese law.

28. The Committee urges that the state party cease its policy of subjecting persons with actual or perceived impairments to such therapies and abstains from involuntarily committing them to institutions. Further it urges the state party to abolish laws which allow for medical experimentation on persons with disabilities without their free and informed consent.

29. The Committee is concerned that Act CLIV of 1997 on Healthcare provides for a legal framework for subjecting persons with disabilities whose legal capacity is restricted to medical experimentation without their free and informed consent, as consent may be given by their legal guardians. The Committee also notes with concern that there is no independent medical examination body mandated to examine alleged victims of torture and guarantee respect for human dignity during the conduct of medical examinations, as stated by the Human Rights Committee (CCPR/C/HUN/CO/5).

30. The Committee urges the State party to amend Act CLIV on Healthcare and abolish its provisions that provide a legal framework for subjecting persons with disabilities with restricted legal capacity to medical experimentation without their free and informed consent. The Committee recommends the State party to implement the recommendation made by the Human Rights Committee in 2010 (CCPR/C/HUN/CO/5) to "establish an independent medical examination body mandated to examine alleged victims of torture and guarantee respect for human dignity during the conduct of medical examinations."

30. The Committee is concerned at consistent reports of the use of continuous forcible medication, including neuroleptics, and poor material conditions in psychiatric institutions, such as the hospital Larco Herrera, where some persons have been institutionalized for more than ten years without appropriate rehabilitation services.

31. The Committee urges the State party to promptly investigate the allegations of cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment, or punishment in psychiatric institutions, to thoroughly review the legality of the placement of patients in these institutions, as well as to establish voluntary mental health treatment services, in order to allow the persons with disabilities to be included in the community and release them from the institutions.

(Freedom from exploitation, violence and abuse)

Article 16 - Freedom from exploitation, violence and abuse

1. States Parties shall take all appropriate legislative, administrative, social, educational and other measures to protect persons with disabilities, both within and outside the home, from all forms of exploitation, violence and abuse, including their gender-based aspects.
2. States Parties shall also take all appropriate measures to prevent all forms of exploitation, violence and abuse by ensuring, inter alia, appropriate forms of gender- and age-sensitive assistance and support for persons with disabilities and their families and caregivers, including through the provision of information and education on how to avoid, recognize and report instances of exploitation, violence and abuse. States Parties shall ensure that protection services are age-, gender- and disability-sensitive.
3. In order to prevent the occurrence of all forms of exploitation, violence and abuse, States Parties shall ensure that all facilities and programmes designed to serve persons with disabilities are effectively monitored by independent authorities.
4. States Parties shall take all appropriate measures to promote the physical, cognitive and psychological recovery, rehabilitation and social reintegration of persons with disabilities who become victims of any form of exploitation, violence or abuse, including through the provision of protection services. Such recovery and reintegration shall take place in an environment that fosters the health, welfare, self-respect, dignity and autonomy of the person and takes into account gender- and age-specific needs.
5. States Parties shall put in place effective legislation and policies, including women- and child-focused legislation and policies, to ensure that instances of exploitation, violence and abuse against persons with disabilities are identified, investigated and, where appropriate, prosecuted

29. The Committee notes with concern that:

- (a) Persons with disabilities are subjected to violence, abuse, physical punishments and physical or chemical restraints for failing to meet forced labour quotas or based on their disabilities, including in prison facilities and upon return from abroad;
- (b) There is a lack of accessible and safe avenues for reporting exploitation, violence and abuse, including gender-based violence, insufficient independent monitoring of places of detention, and inadequate victim support, legal aid, and rehabilitation services, particularly for women and girls with disabilities;
- (c) The State Party does not keep strict records of compliance and monitoring of the Law on the Protection and Promotion of the Rights of Women, which stipulates that no one shall commit an act of abducting, trafficking, raping or gang raping a woman.

30. The Committee recommends that the State Party:

- (a) Criminalise and effectively prosecute all forms of exploitation, violence and abuse against persons with disabilities, including forced labour, physical punishment, and abuse in detention facilities;
- (b) Establish accessible, independent complaint and reporting mechanisms in all settings, ensure regular monitoring of detention facilities by independent bodies including organisations of persons with disabilities, and provide adequate victim support, legal aid and rehabilitation services;
- (c) Establish a monitoring and oversight mechanism with the participation of organisations of persons with disabilities, authorised to receive and follow up on complaints of exploitation, violence or abuse, including sexual abuse of persons with disabilities, especially women and girls with disabilities, that statistics are available, and that restorative justice is provided to victims.

30. The Committee notes with concern:

- (a) The prevalence of exploitation, violence and abuse against persons with disabilities in institutions, the community and the family home, in particular against women with disabilities and children with disabilities;
- (b) Insufficient actions to address violence experienced by women and girls with disabilities within plans to address gender-based violence;
- (c) The inaccessibility and negative attitudes within victim support services and shelters, including the lack of knowledge concerning responding to the specific and unique forms of exploitation, violence and abuse experienced by persons with disabilities.

31. Recalling General Comment No. 3 on women and girls with disabilities, the Committee recommends that the State Party, in close consultation and active involvement of persons with disabilities, including women and girls with disabilities, through their representative organisations:

- (a) Develop and implement comprehensive violence prevention and response strategies across the State Party, including culture-, gender-, age-, disability specific measures, access to justice measures and the establishment of accessible culture-, gender, age-appropriate and disability inclusive support and rehabilitation and covering institutions, the community and the family home.
- (b) Transpose the EU Directive on Combating Violence against Women into national law and policy, and substantially strengthen the intersectional components and specific measures taken to address the situation of women and girls with disabilities in implementation of the Council of Europe Convention on Preventing and Combating Violence against Women and Domestic Violence;
- (c) Ensure that all its strategies and programmes on violence prevention are disability inclusive, ensure the accessibility of all victim support services and shelters, carry out capacity building to recognise and respond to the specific forms of exploitation, violence and abuse experienced by persons with disabilities, including women and girls with disabilities.

Kiribati (2025)

29. The Committee positively notes the Te Rau N Te Mwenga (Family Peace) Act 2014 and its Implementation Plan 2017 and other policy and programs to protect against exploitation, violence and abuse, including gender-based violence. However, it is concerned that these mechanisms are not fully inclusive or accessible to persons with disabilities, including the absence of accessible shelters, counselling and complaint mechanisms, and limited community awareness and training of police, health and social service personnel in addressing cases of violence against persons with disabilities.

30. Recalling its statement of 25 November 2021 on the elimination of gender-based violence against women and girls with disabilities, and targets 5.1, 5.2 and 5.5 of the Sustainable Development Goals, the Committee recommends that the State party take a coordinated approach to address all forms of exploitation, violence and abuse experienced by persons with disabilities, including gender-based violence by ensuring the Implementation Plan for the Family Peace Act and other violence prevention mechanisms and the National Disability Policy and Action Plan act together and contain measures to address inaccessible shelters, counselling and complaint mechanisms, limited community awareness and training of police, health and social service personnel.

31. The Committee is concerned about the exploitation, violence and abuse experienced by persons with disabilities, in particular about reports of gender-based violence women and girls with disabilities, and the practice of ruqia, as well as about the lack of accessible shelters and complaint mechanisms available in outer islands.

32. Recalling its statement of 25 November 2021 on the elimination of gender-based violence against women and girls with disabilities, and targets 5.1, 5.2 and 5.5 of the Sustainable Development Goals, the Committee recommends that the State party:

(a) Take all necessary steps to raise awareness about measures for the protection of persons with disabilities from exploitation, violence and abuse, including acts committed under ruqia practice, and adopt a comprehensive strategy to prevent exploitation, violence and abuse of persons with disabilities, especially women and girls with disabilities, including older women, persons with intellectual and/or psychosocial disabilities and persons with disabilities who are confined to their family homes, and ensure that persons with disabilities have information about how to avoid, recognize and report cases and have access to independent complaint mechanisms and appropriate remedies, such as redress and adequate compensation, including rehabilitation;

(b) Ensure that the Plans of actions related to Domestic Violence Prevention Act (2012) and other relevant legislation and policies, guarantee the accessibility and inclusiveness of persons with disabilities to the mechanisms for reporting, preventing and protecting from exploitation, violence and abuse, including domestic violence;

(c) Provide training for the families of persons with disabilities and for their caregivers, religious community, health professionals and law enforcement officers to enable them to recognize all forms of exploitation, violence and abuse, and to better communicate and work with persons with disabilities who are victims of violence.

31. The Committee is concerned about the prevalence of gender-based violence against women and girls with disabilities, particularly Indigenous women and girls with disabilities, in both family and institutional settings, and the lack of accessible women's shelters and services for victim-survivors with disabilities of gender-based violence.

32. The Committee recommends that the State Party, in close consultation and active involvement of women with disabilities, through their representative organisations:

(a) Ensure that issues and concerns of women and girls with disabilities are integral to the implementation of the Final report of the National Inquiry into Missing and Murdered Indigenous Women and Girls;

(b) Ensure that audits of accessibility of shelters are conducted regularly as part of the Disability Inclusion Action Plan and the National Action Plan to End Gender Based Violence and result in comprehensive measures to address gaps in accessible and culturally appropriate shelters and services for victim-survivors with disabilities of gender-based violence.

Dominican Republic (2025)

29. The Committee is concerned about:

(a) Reports about trafficking in persons with disabilities, particularly children with disabilities, who are victims of exploitation through begging and of forced unions with the aims of servitude from girls and adolescents with disabilities;

(b) Insufficient measures to identify and prevent all forms of violence against children and adults with disabilities, including structural and systemic violence in all settings and gender-based violence;

(c) The lack of specific data on cases of violence and abuse perpetrated against persons with disabilities in all settings, and the failure to collect and publish such data, disaggregated by sex and age, including data on the number of prosecutions, convictions and sentences imposed on perpetrators.

30. Recalling its statement of 25 November 2021 on the elimination of gender-based violence against women and girls with disabilities, and targets 5.1, 5.2 and 5.5 of the Sustainable Development Goals, the Committee recommends that the State party, in close consultation with and with the active involvement of persons with disabilities, through their representative organizations:

(a) Investigate the situation of persons with disabilities, especially children with disabilities, who are forced to beg or forced into servitude, and take effective measures to protect them from exploitation, violence and abuse and ensure that perpetrators are sanctioned;

(b) Reinforce the implementation of existing legislative and policy measures to prevent all forms of violence against persons with disabilities, including gender-based violence, and provide effective remedies and redress to victims;

(c) Establish a comprehensive system to collect and monitor data on all forms of violence against persons with disabilities, including data disaggregated by gender, age, impairment and other relevant factors, and conduct comprehensive disability-inclusive research.

42. The Committee notes with concern that:

(a) Persons with disabilities are at heightened risk of violence and abuse, in particular women, older persons, LGBTIQ+ persons and children with disabilities, and persons with disabilities living in closed settings;

(b) The Directive on combating violence against women does not explicitly prohibit rape, forced sterilisation and sexual harassment and other forms of gender-based violence;

(c) Access to specialized services for victims with disabilities of gender-based violence is insufficient and that there are no specific protection mechanisms for deaf women and girls accessing services or reporting abuse;

(d) There is no systematic monitoring of institutional settings.

43. Recalling its statement of 24 November 2021 on the elimination of gender-based violence against women and girls with disabilities, the Committee recommends that the European Union:

(a) Explicitly prohibit rape, forced sterilization and sexual harassment and other forms of gender-based violence against persons with disabilities;

(b) Ensure that persons with disabilities, through their representative organisations, are closely consulted and actively involved in the implementation and monitoring of the Strategy on the Rights of the Child, the Istanbul Convention, the Directive on combating violence against women, and of the Anti-Trafficking Directive;

(c) Combat violence and abuse of children and adults with disabilities in institutional settings, including in psychiatric facilities, and provide funds for the establishment of independent monitoring of such settings.

29. The Committee notes the establishment of Legal Protection against Violence Framework and the reopening of Victims of Crimes Office in 2022. However, it is concerned that these mechanisms are not fully accessible for persons with disabilities, and about the lack of awareness among the general population and particularly among persons with disabilities about measures for the protection of persons with disabilities from exploitation, violence and abuse.

30. Recalling its statement of 24 November 2021 on the elimination of gender-based violence against women and girls with disabilities, and targets 5.1, 5.2 and 5.5 of the Sustainable Development Goals, the Committee recommends that the State party:

(a) Take all necessary steps to raise awareness about measures for the protection of persons with disabilities from exploitation, violence and abuse, and adopt a comprehensive strategy to prevent exploitation, violence and abuse targeting persons with disabilities, especially those who are institutionalized, and ensure that persons with disabilities have information about how to avoid, recognize and report cases and that persons with disabilities who are victims of exploitation, violence or abuse have access to independent and fully accessible complaint mechanisms and appropriate remedies, such as redress and adequate compensation, including rehabilitation;

(b) Provide continuous training for the families of persons with disabilities and for their caregivers, health professionals and law enforcement officers to enable them to recognize all forms of exploitation, violence and abuse, and to better communicate and work with persons with disabilities who are victims of violence.

29. The Committee is concerned about the gender-based violence experienced by women and girls with disabilities, as well as reports of exploitation, violence and abuse of children and older persons with disabilities.

30. Recalling its statement of 25 November 2021 on the elimination of gender-based violence against women and girls with disabilities, and targets 5.1, 5.2 and 5.5 of the Sustainable Development Goals, the Committee recommends that the State party:

- (a) Take all necessary steps to raise awareness about measures for the protection of persons with disabilities from exploitation, violence and abuse, and adopt a comprehensive strategy to prevent exploitation, violence and abuse of persons with disabilities, especially women and girls with disabilities, including older women, persons with intellectual and/or psychosocial disabilities and persons with disabilities who are confined to their family homes, and ensure that persons with disabilities have information about how to avoid, recognize and report cases and have access to independent complaint mechanisms and appropriate remedies, such as redress and adequate compensation, including rehabilitation;
- (b) Ensure that the Plans of actions related to Tuvalu Family Protection and Domestic Violence, guarantee the accessibility and inclusiveness of persons with disabilities to the mechanisms for reporting, preventing and protecting from exploitation, violence and abuse, including domestic violence;
- (c) Ensure that draft Policy for the protection of all children in Education Institutions addresses accessibility and reasonable accommodation for children with disabilities;
- (d) Provide training for the families of persons with disabilities and for their caregivers, church groups, health professionals and law enforcement officers to enable them to recognize all forms of exploitation, violence and abuse, and to better communicate and work with persons with disabilities who are victims of violence.

31. The Committee notes with concern that:

- (a) Women and girls with disabilities face higher risks of gender-based violence and have limited access to protective services, shelters, and legal recourse to address violence and discrimination;
- (b) Information indicating that the risk of abuse, especially sexual abuse, for children with disabilities is three to four times higher than for children without disabilities, and even higher for children with hearing and visual impairments and those with psychosocial and/or intellectual disabilities and there is a lack of timely detection of cases of violence, abuse, and exploitation of children with disabilities, as provided in the 2016 Children's Act, along with poor monitoring and evaluation, and insufficient mechanisms for reporting these violations
- (c) The absence of specific data on violence, neglect and abuse against persons with disabilities makes it impossible to fully understand the magnitude of the problem and the measures required to prevent, punish, and apply restorative justice;
- (d) While Article 14 of the Law on Persons with Disabilities prohibits neglect and abuse, there are no clear mechanisms for monitoring compliance or holding caregivers accountable for neglect or abuse their follow-up, sanctions, and restorative actions;
- (e) Limitations in both legislation and enforcement practices, as well as specific regulations, fail to adequately address gender-based violence against women and girls with disabilities, and there are insufficient communication methods to educate and raise awareness on prevention and protection;
- (f) While women with disabilities receive timely support from local authorities when gender-based violence occurs, they often do not know where to go or which support agency is responsible;
- (g) Social work centres in the country lack physical accessibility, access to information and communication, including through digital means, and personnel trained to attend to persons with disabilities.

32. Recalling its statement of 24 November 2021 on the elimination of gender-based violence against women and girls with disabilities, and targets 5.1, 5.2 and 5.5 of the Sustainable Development Goals, the Committee recommends that the State party:

- (a) Ensure that the national strategy against gender-based violence includes specific policies to prevent and combat gender-based violence against women and girls with disabilities, including accessible mechanisms for the submission of complaints, implementation across local and central levels, provide accessible support services, shelters, and legal assistance for victims/survivors;
- (b) Reform the Children's Act of 2016 to specifically include preventative measures for violence against children with disabilities, including indigenous children with disabilities, case detection, mechanisms for the submission of complaints, follow-up, sanctions, and justice for the victims;
- (c) Establish actions for the collection of data disaggregated by age, sex, and type of disability on violence faced by persons with disabilities, especially women and children with disabilities;
- (d) Amend Article 14 of the Law on Persons with Disabilities to include supervision and monitoring mechanisms for the abuse and abandonment of persons with disabilities, hold those responsible accountable, and establish restorative actions for the victims;
- (e) Guarantee the establishment of education and awareness-raising programmes on violence prevention for all women and girls with disabilities, in accessible formats, modes, and media;
- (f) Strengthen training for local authorities to learn about and detect gender-based violence early, and ensure wide dissemination among organizations of persons with disabilities on local support agencies that offer physical accessibility, effective communication and information, and trained personnel;
- (g) Ensure that social work centres are established nationwide, providing physical, informational, and communication accessibility, including by digital means, along with personnel trained to serve persons with disabilities;

Belarus (2024)

31. The Committee is concerned about:

- (a) The lack of provisions in national policy and legislation of the State party with effective measures, specifically to prevent and protect women and children with disabilities from discrimination, violence, sexual abuse and bullying;
- (b) The lack of availability of "Crisis" rooms for some "categories" of persons with disabilities, and the insufficiency of staff with the required trainings to provide support for women and girls with disabilities victims of violence;
- (c) The low level of awareness on forms of gender-based violence, including sexual violence among persons with disabilities and their rights of remedy.

32. The Committee recommends that the State party:

- (a) Amend the national legislation in regard to the rights of children, to incorporate and strengthen measures in the prevention of bullying, sexual abuse and violence against children with disabilities.
- (b) Adopt national legislation to prevent violence, as well as protect and provide remedy for the victims including persons with disabilities, prosecuting the perpetrators, ensuring justice to the victims with the support of inclusive rehabilitation and services that respond to the requirements of the women and children with disabilities, persons with psychosocial disabilities and/or intellectual disabilities;

(c) Provide wide access to legal aid and information, training and awareness-raising initiatives to the aid workers or staff, as well as budgets earmarked for the prevention and protection from violence and abuse against persons with disabilities;

(d) Implement measures expeditiously, to make the “Crisis” rooms accessible for all victims of violence with disabilities;

(e) Raise awareness among women with disabilities, including women with intellectual disabilities and women with psychosocial disabilities, about the various forms of gender-based violence, including sexual violence, their right to be free from these forms of violence and the complaint procedures for reporting cases of gender-based violence.

Belgium (2024)

32. The Committee takes note that the national action plan to combat gender-based violence (2021-2025) also addresses gender-based violence against persons with disabilities. It is nevertheless concerned:

(a) That there is a widespread lack of awareness among women and girls with disabilities about complaint and redress mechanisms in cases of gender-based violence;

(b) That accessibility of support measures, sexual-assault centres (SAC) and emergency shelters for women and girls with disabilities who are victims of gender-based violence is not guaranteed;

(c) About reports of retaliatory measures, such as being expelled from institutions, without providing the support necessary to live independently in the community, being used against women and girls with disabilities who lodge complaints.

(a) Ensure that persons with disabilities, including women and girls with disabilities, are provided with accessible information on how to avoid, recognize and report cases of violence, including gender-based violence, and that persons with disabilities who are victims of exploitation, violence or abuse have access to independent complaints mechanisms and appropriate remedies, such as redress and adequate compensation, including rehabilitation;

(b) Ensure that services for victims of gender-based violence, including support and sexual assault centres (SAC) and emergency shelters, are accessible to women and girls with disabilities, including through accessible buildings and facilities, accessible information and communication, and the provision of disability-related supports and assistance;

(c) Ensure that persons with disabilities, including women and girls with disabilities, who are victims of violence in residential institutions, are protected from any retaliatory countermeasures for lodging complaints.

31. The Committee is concerned by the lack of information about the application in practice of the provisions of Act on the Protection and Promotion of the Rights of Persons with Disabilities that prohibit exploitation, violence and abuse directed at persons with disabilities and statistical data on the beneficiaries of the counselling centers and toll free numbers . The Committee also notes with concern:

- (a) The lack of awareness among the general population, including among persons with disabilities, of measures for the protection of persons with disabilities from exploitation, violence and abuse, and the lack of a comprehensive strategy to address all forms of exploitation, violence and abuse of persons with disabilities, in all settings, including in the family, at school and in the workplace;
- (b) The absence of measures and resources to ensure the effective implementation of existing national legislation, policies and strategies to protect all persons with disabilities in all contexts from all forms of exploitation, violence and abuse;
- (c) The lack of resources allocated to combat gender-based violence against women with disabilities and the lack of services and accessible shelters for women and girls who are victims of violence, including women with psychosocial and/or intellectual disabilities, particularly in rural areas;
- (d) That children with disabilities are exposed to higher rates of violence and bullying than other children and that information and statistical data on violence against children with disabilities and related complaints are not available;
- (e) The inadequate training of persons with disabilities, support persons, health personnel and law enforcement officials on recognizing all forms of exploitation, violence and abuse.

32. The Committee recommends that the State party:

- (a) Take all steps necessary to raise awareness about measures to protect persons with disabilities from exploitation, violence and abuse, and adopt a comprehensive strategy to prevent exploitation, violence and abuse of persons with disabilities, especially women and girls with disabilities, including older women, persons with psychosocial and/or intellectual disabilities and persons with disabilities who are still institutionalized;
- (b) Ensure that services for women and girls with disabilities who are victims of gender-based violence, including support centres and emergency shelters, are accessible physically and in terms of information and communication, and that the required support is provided;
- (c) Ensure that fast track courts, gender-based violence centres and other institutions implementing programmes to address gender-based violence are fully accessible to persons with disabilities in terms of the built environment, information and communications technologies and training of staff;
- (d) Take effective measures to ensure that children with disabilities are adequately protected from bullying, exploitation, violence and abuse in schools and care institutions, and that perpetrators are punished;
- (e) Ensure that persons with disabilities and support persons have information about how to avoid, recognize and report cases of violence, including gender-based violence and that persons with disabilities who are victims of exploitation, violence or abuse have access to independent complaints mechanisms and appropriate remedies, such as redress.

Burkina Faso (2024)

32. The Committee is concerned about:

- (a) Reported cases of exploitation, violence and abuse of children with disabilities, including corporal punishment at home, at school and in institutions, as well as exploitation through forced begging;
- (b) 42 children with disabilities, including nine girls, identified in eight provinces (Kossi, Comoé, Bam, Kadiogo) who have been subjected to violence and abuses;
- (c) The situation of ill-treatment of persons with disabilities particularly the isolation, confinement and shackling of which they are sometimes victims at home;

(d) Information indicating violations of the rights of persons with disabilities in private and public rehabilitation centres.

33. Recalling its statement of 24 November 2021 on the elimination of gender-based violence against women and girls with disabilities , and targets 5.1, 5.2 and 5.5 of the Sustainable Development Goals, the Committee recommends to:

(a) Adopt effective legislation and measures to ensure that children with disabilities are adequately protected from violence, abuse, and exploitation including through forced begging, that perpetrators are punished; promote positive, non-violent and participatory forms of child-rearing through awareness-raising campaigns and training programmes in accessible formats; and enforce the provisions of the 2018 Criminal Code which prohibits and punishes all forms of corporal punishment, exploitation, violence and abuse, including domestic violence, sexual violence, school violence and neglect against persons with disabilities, in particular women and girls with disabilities and persons with disabilities living in and/or wandering the streets;

(b) Adopt effective legislation and criminalize unlawful restraint and confinement of persons with disabilities, in particular women with disabilities and persons with intellectual and/or psychosocial disabilities;

(c) Ensure that all facilities, residential care, psychiatric institutions, public and private rehabilitation centers are subjected to independent monitoring in line with article 16 (3) of the Convention, through the involvement of civil society organizations, including disability rights-based organizations, in order to prevent exploitation and abuse of and violence against persons with disabilities.

Denmark (2024)

47. The Committee is concerned about:

(a) The prevalence of many forms of violence against children and adults with disabilities in institutions, including social care and psychiatric institutions, particularly the prevalence of gender-based violence and the high incidence of sexual violence against women and girls with disabilities in institutions;

(b) The lack of accessible shelters and accessible procedures to obtain or retain services for persons with disabilities, including personal assistance, while residing in shelters, for all persons with disabilities, especially women and girls with disabilities;

(c) The inadequate implementation of the legal and policy frameworks to prevent and respond to exploitation, violence and abuse, including gender-based violence and abuse, across the Kingdom of Denmark.

(a) Further develop and implement comprehensive and effective violence prevention and response action plans across the Kingdom of Denmark that are underpinned by the principles and standards of the Convention, including through measures for law and policy reform and development, the inclusion of culture, gender and age specific requirements, responses that address all forms of violence against children and adults with disabilities in all settings, including in institutions, community awareness-raising strategies, access to justice, and the establishment of accessible culture, gender and age appropriate supports and rehabilitation;

(b) Render the Council of Europe Convention on Preventing and Combating Violence against Women and Domestic Violence applicable in the Faroe Islands;

(c) Ensure that the mandates of monitoring and oversight mechanisms across the Kingdom of Denmark, including the national preventive mechanism, extend to all forms of detention and institutional settings where children and adults with disabilities are detained or reside.

Ghana (2024)

32. The Committee is concerned that:

(a) The Domestic Violence Act 2007 (Act 732) failed to adequately address the unique challenges that persons with disabilities, particularly women and girls with disabilities, face;

(b) Laws and policies in the State Party related to violence lack to address disability or persons with albinism, including domestic violence and accessible services and the need for trained personnel for women and girls with disabilities;

(c) Persons with disabilities who experience violence and abuse lack access to effective recovery services;

(d) There is lack of specific programs to protect children with disabilities including children with intellectual and/or psychosocial disabilities, with autism and albinism from discrimination, exclusion, violence, abuse, corporal punishment, and neglect by teachers, peers and family members, violence at home, on the street or in institutions including actions to prevent the use of derogatory language.

33. The Committee recommends that the State Party:

(a) Review the 2023 - 2032 National Gender Policy to ensure that it explicitly addresses women and girls with disabilities, including those with intellectual and or psychosocial disabilities and those with albinism, and that it also prevents domestic violence and that it has mechanisms for women and girls with disabilities to file complaints, and that such complains are followed up including providing restorative justice for victims and sanctions for perpetrators;

(b) Remove barriers within the justice system, such as the requirement to pay for medical forms confirming abuse;

(c) Ensure persons with disabilities, particularly women and girls who experience gender-based violence have access to recovery services;

(d) Expedite the passage of amendments to the Children's Act, 1998 (Act 560) and the Juvenile Justice Act, 2003 (Act 653) to align them with the Convention to protect children with disabilities including children with intellectual and or psychosocial disabilities.

27. The Committee is concerned that:

(a) The annual statistics provided by the State party on the number of cases of violence against persons with disabilities registered by the police and the courts may not reflect the actual situation, resulting in part from the lack of effective awareness among the general population and persons with disabilities about the reporting mechanisms and measures for the protection of persons with disabilities from exploitation, violence and abuse, in all settings, including in the family, at school and in the workplace;

(b) Shelters largely remain inaccessible for persons with disabilities, particularly women and girls with disabilities, who are victims of violence;

(c) There is insufficient information about whether the Family Welfare and Protection Officers and Enforcement Officers effectively carry out assessments and independent monitoring in all shelters and institutions, irrespective of their license status, and whether allegations are effectively investigated.

28. Recalling its statement of 24 November 2021 on the elimination of gender-based violence against women and girls with disabilities, and targets 5.1, 5.2 and 5.5 of the Sustainable Development Goals, the Committee recommends that the State party:

(a) Elaborate a policy to prevent and reduce violence against persons with disabilities, and establish a system for the regular collection, analysis and publication of statistical data on complaints regarding violence and exploitation against persons with disabilities, including gender-based violence, in all settings such as in the family, workplace, schools and institutions. The system should include prosecution and conviction rates and information about sentences for perpetrators and reparations, including compensation, for victims/survivors;

(b) Raise awareness about the protection of persons with disabilities from exploitation, violence and abuse and ensure that they are provided with accessible information about how to avoid, recognize and report cases of violence, exploitation and abuse and about available complaint mechanisms and remedies, including compensation and rehabilitation;

(c) Ensure that services and shelters for persons with disabilities who are victims of violence, particularly women and girls with disabilities, are accessible physically and in terms of information and communication, with disability-inclusive protocols in place;

(d) Ensure that there is independent, effective and regular monitoring and oversight of all shelters, facilities, institutions and programmes that provide services to persons with disabilities, in close consultation and with active involvement of persons with disabilities, through their representative organizations, and ensure that cases are effectively investigated and resolved.

Netherlands (2024)

37. The Committee is concerned about:

(a) The insufficient protection of students with disabilities through the Policy vision on the promotion and protection of sexual health in schools and the lacking accessibility of it;

(b) The significant number of persons with disabilities who have experienced sexual violence and the high risk of violence and abuse for women and girls with disabilities, both in public and in private spheres, and about reports that women and girls with disabilities who are victims of sexual violence cannot access the Sexual Assault Center (Centrum Seksueel Geweld), the Domestic Violence Advice and Reporting Center (Veilig Thuis), or numerous shelters for women, as well as the lack of accessible information about sexual violence and victim support services;

(c) The lack of comprehensive data collection, research and monitoring on the prevalence and nature of violence, including sexual abuse, against persons with disabilities, including women, children, older persons, as well as migrants, asylum seekers and refugees with disabilities;

(d) The lack of an action plan to implement the Council of Europe Convention on preventing and combating violence against women and domestic violence (the Istanbul Convention).

38. Recalling its statement of 24 November 2021 on the elimination of gender-based violence against women and girls with disabilities, and targets 5.1, 5.2 and 5.5 of the Sustainable Development Goals, the Committee recommends that the State party, in close consultation and with active involvement of persons with disabilities, through their representative organizations:

- (a) Review its policy and measures for the promotion and protection of sexual health in school settings and ensure full accessibility and early identification of violence and abuse against students with disabilities;
- (b) Implement comprehensive and targeted measures to prevent and address sexual violence and abuse against persons with disabilities, especially women and girls with disabilities, including suitably equipped and accessible support services for survivors; guarantee that women and girls with disabilities who are victims of sexual violence can access the centres and shelters for women; Ensure accessibility of such centres and shelters and of information on sexual violence, victim support services and reporting mechanisms;
- (c) Establish a comprehensive data collection system and monitoring mechanisms to gather disaggregated data on all forms of violence against persons with disabilities, including intersectional data on gender, age, type of disability, and other relevant factors, and conduct comprehensive disability-inclusive research;
- (d) Develop an action plan to implement the Council of Europe Convention on Preventing and Combating Violence against Women and Domestic Violence (the Istanbul Convention), specifically addressing the requirements of women and girls with disabilities.

Ukraine (2024)

32. The Committee is concerned about:

- (a) The increased cases of gender-based violence and domestic violence, and trafficking of women and girls with disabilities –particularly for those with intellectual and/or psychosocial disabilities–, as well as the increase of women and girls who have acquired impairment during the conflict;
- (b) The prevalence of exploitation, violence and abuse against children and adults with disabilities, in particular women and girls with disabilities, as well as the increase of gender-based violence and heightened risk of sexual violence and trafficking;
- (c) The lack of accessible complaints mechanisms and places of refuge for persons with disabilities, and that shelters are not accessible either physically or in terms of information and communication, particularly for women and girls with disabilities;
- (d) The lack of disability perspective in projects and programs to avoid and sanction gender-based violence;
- (e) The lack of comprehensive data and information on complaint mechanisms for victims.

33. The Committee recalls its previous recommendations (CRPD/C/UKR/CO/1, paras.12 and 33), its Statement of 24 November 2021 on the elimination of gender-based violence against women and girls with disabilities, and targets 5.1, 5.2 and 5.5 of the Sustainable Development Goals, and recommends that the State Party:

- (a) Investigate cases of gender-based violence and implement gender-intersectional policies to address these cases, providing comprehensive attention to all, including women who have acquired impairment in the context of the armed conflict;
- (b) Investigate and implement measures to prevent, punish and redress the increase in domestic violence, exploitation, abuse and trafficking;
- (c) Establish adequate mechanisms so that persons with disabilities, especially women and children facing violence of any kind, have access to immediate protection and support services, and to file complaints, including resources for follow-up and restorative measures;
- (d) Ensure that projects and programs against gender-based violence include a human rights approach to disability;
- (e) Implement the necessary actions to collect disaggregated data on cases of violence against women and children with disabilities;

(f) Ensure compliance with the Council of Europe Convention on Preventing and Combating Violence against Women and Domestic Violence.

Azerbaijan (2024)

37. The Committee observes with concern:

- (a) Information about prevailing forms of violence against persons with disabilities, including gender-based violence, trafficking in persons, physical, sexual psychological and economic violence;
- (b) That the definition of rape in the Criminal Code is still based on the use of force or threat by the perpetrator rather than lack of consent, the absence of legislation specifically criminalizing marital rape, and the practice of the “corroboration rule”, whereby the testimony of a witness is required in addition to a victim’s testimony in cases of rape, which leads to additional obstacles for women and girls with disabilities to access to justice in cases of sexual violence;
- (c) The absence of disaggregated data about cases of violence against persons with disabilities, including in the family, the workplace, schools, and in institutions;
- (d) Lack of information about complaint mechanisms concerning cases of violence against persons with disabilities and on how persons with disabilities are informed about mechanisms to report violence;
- (e) Reports about lack of accessible support for persons with disabilities who are victims of violence, in particular affecting women and girls with disabilities’ effective access to referral and support available in cases of violence including gender-based violence.

38. Recalling its statement of 24 November 2021 on the elimination of gender-based violence against women and girls with disabilities and targets 5.1, 5.2 and 5.5 of the Sustainable Development Goals, the Committee recommends that the State party:

- (a) Expedite the adoption of amendments to its Law on the Prevention of Domestic Violence with the aim to include specific requirements of women and girls with disabilities, including those internally displaced persons and in refugee-like situations, and ensure that the action plan on combatting domestic violence for 2025-2029 provides for appropriate support for women and girls with disabilities subjected to gender-based violence;
- (b) Incorporate in its legislation a definition of rape based on lack of consent that covers any non-consensual sexual act and takes into account all aggravating circumstances, in line with international human rights standards, criminalize marital rape, and adopt legal procedural guidelines for the repeal of the “corroboration rule” in rape cases, including in relation to women with disabilities;
- (c) Ensure that data collection systems inform policies to prevent violence, exploitation and abuse against persons with disabilities, and that it is disaggregated by age, sex, gender, disability, ethnicity, migrant status, refugee status, and the relationship between the victim and the perpetrator;
- (d) Ensure that persons with disabilities, including women and girls with disabilities, have information in accessible formats about how to prevent, recognize and report cases of violence and about available complaint mechanisms and remedies, including compensation and rehabilitation;
- (e) Ensure that persons with disabilities, including women and girls with disabilities, have access to support available for victims of violence, including shelters and that support measures address the diversity of persons with disabilities and their particular requirements.

32. The Committee is deeply concerned about the lack of:

- (a) An inclusive national strategy to prevent and protect against all forms of violence.

(b) Measures to ensure the protection of persons with disabilities from violence in the Protection from Domestic Violence Act No. 17 of 2015

(c) Information on and response to cases of violence against persons with disabilities.

(d) Inclusive services and programmes to prevent and protect against violence and rehabilitate survivors.

33. The Committee recommends that the State party take immediate measures to:

(a) Develop a comprehensive and inclusive national strategy for persons with disabilities to prevent and protect against all forms of violence, in close consultation and with the active participation of persons with disabilities and their organisations

(b) Review the Protection from Domestic Violence Act and the Penal Code and include provisions to ensure that physical and verbal violence and bullying against persons with disabilities are criminalised.

(c) Collect information and data on cases of domestic, institutional and other violence against persons with disabilities and actions taken against them.

(d) Providing accessibility and accommodation in programmes and services for prevention, protection from violence, rehabilitation of survivors and training of personnel to communicate effectively with persons with disabilities.

(e) Develop specialised training for persons with disabilities, including persons with intellectual disabilities and persons with psychosocial disabilities, on violence prevention and reporting.

29. El Comité observa con preocupación:

a) Las medidas insuficientes para identificar y prevenir todas las formas de violencia contra los niños y los adultos con discapacidad, con especial atención a la violencia estructural y sistemática, en todos los entornos, incluida la violencia de género, en particular la violencia obstétrica cuando se utilizan los servicios de salud sexual y reproductiva;

b) La falta de datos específicos sobre casos de violencia y abuso contra personas con discapacidad, donde se recopilan y publican los datos desglosados por sexo y edad, sobre violencia y abuso contra personas con discapacidad en todos los entornos, incluido el número de procesamiento, condenas y sentencias impuestas a los perpetradores.

30. El Comité recomienda que el Estado parte:

a) Refuerce la aplicación de las medidas legislativas y políticas existentes para prevenir todas las formas de violencia contra las personas con discapacidad, incluida la violencia de género, y proporcionar recursos y reparaciones eficaces a las víctimas, tanto en las instituciones como fuera de ellas;

b) Establecer un sistema de recopilación de datos cuantitativos sobre las manifestaciones de violencia contra las mujeres y las niñas con discapacidad, en el que se disponga de datos, desglosados por sexo y edad, sobre la violencia y el abuso contra las personas con discapacidad en todos los entornos, incluido el número de procesamiento, condenas y sentencias impuestas a los perpetradores.

35. The Committee observes with concern:

(a) That legislation and policies for the protection against violence, abuse and exploitation lack measures to specifically protect persons with disabilities;

(b) The absence of measures to prevent violence and exploitation against persons with disabilities in all settings, including in the family and in institutions and accessible support services for victims of violence;

(c) Information about corporal punishment of children with disabilities;

(d) The overall lack of information about violence faced by young persons with disabilities, women and girls with disabilities and persons with psychosocial and/or intellectual disabilities, and the low number of complaints about violence and abuse against persons with disabilities.

36. Recalling its statement of 24 November 2021 on the elimination of gender-based violence against women and girls with disabilities and targets 5.1, 5.2 and 5.5 of the Sustainable Development Goals, the Committee recommends that the State party:

(a) Mainstream the rights of persons with disabilities in legislation, including in the law on prevention of domestic violence, the health care law and the criminal code, and in policies and strategies for combatting violence, abuse and exploitation, and provide effective protection from violence, abuse and exploitation to all persons with disabilities in private and public spheres;

(b) Design and implement a comprehensive strategy with a clear timeframe, indicators and adequate funding for the protection of persons with disabilities, particularly persons with disabilities in institutions and children with disabilities, from exploitation, violence and abuse, addressing prevention, early recovery, legal remedies including compensation and reparation, and access to psychosocial support and accessible shelters for victims in emergencies;

(c) Prohibit all forms of corporal punishment in all settings, including in schools, day-care facilities and other institutional settings;

(d) Provide persons with disabilities with information about their legal protection against violence, establish accessible reporting mechanisms and referral systems for cases of violence, in close consultation with and with the active involvement of organizations of persons with disabilities, and strengthen the capacity of families of persons with disabilities, support personnel, staff of the crisis centres, and law enforcement officers to recognize and report all forms of exploitation, violence and abuse.

30. Al Comité le preocupa que:

a) Durante el periodo 2018-2019 predominó la práctica de agresiones físicas en las personas detenidas y que desde el 2019 hasta la actualidad se han incorporado las agresiones psicológicas, las técnicas de aislamiento prolongado y la sobreexposición sensorial, y que se desconoce cuántas personas con discapacidad han sido sometidas a dichas agresiones;

b) Desde el 2015 existe violencia y campañas de colonización en el norte del país, en contra de poblaciones indígenas y que se desconoce cuántas personas indígenas con discapacidad se han visto afectadas;

c) Se ha documentado una grave situación de violencia sexual contra niñas y adolescentes en el Estado parte, así como de intimidación física, pornografía infantil y acto sexual con adolescentes mediante pago, maltrato infantil, proxenetismo, rufianería y trata de personas con fines de esclavitud, explotación sexual y que se desconoce cuántas de estas agresiones se dieron en contra de mujeres y niñas con discapacidad;

d) Se tiene información de que uno de los componentes más repetitivos en las condiciones de detención a mujeres es el uso de violencia sexual y violencias basadas en género, incluyendo amenazas de muerte o de quitarles a sus hijos, privación de medicamentos y otros insumos de aseo necesarios, trabajos forzosos, desnudez forzosa, amenaza de violación, abuso sexual y violación;

e) Que la Ley Integral contra la Violencia hacia las Mujeres (Ley 779), no sea interseccional, al no especificar sobre mujeres y niñas con discapacidad, personas LGBT, mujeres indígenas con discapacidad, que no contemple el delito de tráfico de personas y que priorice la mediación en casos de violencia contra las mujeres.

31. En consonancia con las metas 5.1, 5.2 y 5.5 de los Objetivos de Desarrollo Sostenible y su Declaración del 24 de noviembre de 2021 en la que pide que se adopten medidas para eliminar la violencia de género contra las mujeres y las niñas con discapacidad, el Comité recomienda al Estado parte que, en consulta estrecha y colaboración activa con las personas con discapacidad y las organizaciones que las representan:

- a) Establezca un mecanismo de monitoreo, con base en el Protocolo Facultativo de la Convención contra la Tortura, especialmente de las personas con discapacidad, en los lugares de detención para evitar agresiones físicas, psicológicas, técnicas de aislamiento prolongado, sobreexposición sensorial o cualquier otra práctica considerada como tortura por la legislación internacional en las personas detenidas, documentando cuantas personas con discapacidad, especialmente mujeres han sido sometidas a estas prácticas;
- b) Tome acciones urgentes para evitar que las personas indígenas con discapacidad sean afectadas por explotación, violencia y abuso;
- c) Implemente medidas para prevenir que las mujeres en general y las mujeres con discapacidad en particular sean víctimas de violencia sexual, incluyendo el establecimiento de un mecanismo de quejas, su seguimiento, castigo a los perpetradores y resarcimiento a las víctimas;
- d) Establezca protocolos con enfoque de género y discapacidad en las instituciones de detención para prevenir y sancionar la violencia basada en género;
- e) Reforme la Ley 779 para incluir el delito de tráfico de mujeres, que especifique a mujeres y niñas con discapacidad y mujeres indígenas con discapacidad, las personas con discapacidad LGBT, que elimine el requisito de la mediación y priorice al enjuiciamiento en los casos de violencia de género contra las mujeres.

Sweden (2024)

35. The Committee is concerned about:

- (a) The prevalence of all forms of exploitation, violence and abuse against children and adults with disabilities, in particular women and girls with disabilities;
- (b) The directives to the government inquiry into special residential homes omitting explicit reference to the Convention;
- (c) That persons with disabilities who are subjected to violence in institutional settings are not recognised as victims of crime.

36. The Committee recommends that the State party, in close consultation and active involvement of organizations of persons with disabilities, in particular organizations of women and girls with disabilities:

- (a) Develop a comprehensive and effective violence prevention and response strategy in line with the Council of Europe Convention on Preventing and Combating Violence against Women and Domestic Violence that responds to gender- and age-specific requirements to address all forms of violence against children and adults with disabilities in all settings, including in institutions, and take measures to ensure access to justice, gender- and age-appropriate supports and rehabilitation;
- (b) Take immediate action to ensure the government inquiry into special residential homes is explicitly underpinned by the standards and principles of the Convention, along with the Convention on the Rights of the Child and the European Convention on Human Rights;
- (c) Take all legislative, administrative, and policy measures to ensure that children and adults with disabilities who are subjected to violence in institutional settings, including compulsory care are recognised as victims of crime to ensure reporting, investigation and prosecution on an equal basis with others.

31. The Committee notes with concern:

- (a) The lack of awareness among the general population, including among persons with disabilities about measures for the protection of persons with disabilities from exploitation, violence and abuse, and the lack of a comprehensive strategy against all forms of exploitation, violence and abuse against persons with disabilities, in all settings, including in the family, at school and in the workplace;

- (b) The absence of sufficient measures and resources to ensure the effective implementation of existing national legislation, policies and strategies to protect all persons with disabilities in all contexts against all forms of exploitation, violence and abuse;
- (c) The lack of resources allocated to combat gender-based violence against women with disabilities, as well as lack of services and accessible shelters for women and girls who are victims of violence, including women with psychosocial and/or intellectual disabilities, in particular in rural areas;
- (d) That children with disabilities are exposed to higher rates of violence and bullying than other children and about the limited availability of information and statistical data regarding violence against children with disabilities and related complaints;
- (e) Reported cases of violence against persons with albinism;
- (f) Inadequate training of the staff, carers and families of persons with disabilities, health personnel and law enforcement officials to recognize all forms of exploitation, violence and abuse.

32. The Committee recommends that the State party:

- (a) Take all necessary steps to raise awareness about measures for the protection of persons with disabilities from exploitation, violence and abuse, and adopt a comprehensive strategy to prevent exploitation, violence and abuse of persons with disabilities, especially women and girls with disabilities, including older women, persons with psychosocial and/or intellectual disabilities and persons with disabilities who are institutionalized, and ensure that persons with disabilities have information about how to avoid, recognize and report cases and that persons with disabilities who are victims of exploitation, violence or abuse have access to independent complaint mechanisms and appropriate remedies, such as redress and adequate compensation, including rehabilitation;
- (b) Ensure that services for women and girls with disabilities who are victims of gender-based violence, including support centres and emergency shelters, are accessible physically, and in terms of information and communication and the required support is provided;
- (c) Ensure that fast track courts, gender-based violence centres and other institutions implementing anti gender-based violence programmes are fully accessible to persons with disabilities in terms of the built environment, ICTs and training of staff;
- (d) Take effective measures to ensure that children with disabilities are adequately protected from bullying, exploitation, violence and abuse in schools and institutions of care, , and that perpetrators are punished;
- (e) Take specific legal, political and administrative measures designed to protect persons with albinism and to punish those who seek to exploit and abuse them;
- (f) Provide continuous training for the families of persons with disabilities and for their caregivers, health professionals and law enforcement officers to enable them to recognize all forms of exploitation, violence and abuse, and to better communicate and work with persons with disabilities who are victims of violence.

33. The Committee notes that Law 1/2015 to eradicate gender-based violence and domestic violence establishes that information must be accessible for persons with disabilities, and that the Immediate Action Protocol in cases of abuse against children and adolescents provides special attention to children and adolescents with disabilities. Nevertheless, it is concerned about:

- (a) The lack of a comprehensive strategy to prevent, address, and punish all forms of exploitation, violence and abuse against persons with disabilities, in particular, women and children with disabilities and persons with intellectual and/or psychosocial disabilities, in all settings, including in the family, at school and in the workplace;
- (b) The limited information concerning support services for women and girls with disabilities who are victims of gender-based violence, including those provided by the Service for Victims of Gender-Based Violence;

(c)The absence of disaggregated data by disability on gender-based violence against women with disabilities and regarding violence against children with disabilities.

34. With reference to the Committee's statement of 24 November 2021, in which it called for action to be taken to eliminate gender-based violence against women and girls with disabilities, and recalling targets 5.1, 5.2 and 5.5 of the Sustainable Development Goals, the Committee recommends that the State party:

(a) Adopt a comprehensive strategy to prevent, address, and punish exploitation, violence and abuse of persons with disabilities, especially women and children with disabilities and persons with intellectual and/or psychosocial disabilities, ensuring that they have information about how to report these cases and that persons with disabilities who are victims have access to independent complaint mechanisms and appropriate remedies, including rehabilitation;

(b) Ensure that services for women and girls with disabilities who are victims of gender-based violence, including the Service for Victims of Gender-Based Violence and emergency accommodation, are accessible physically and in terms of information and communication and that required support is provided;

(c) Collect data on gender-based violence against women with disabilities and regarding violence against children with disabilities, disaggregated by sex, age, disability, nationality and the relationship between the victim and the perpetrator.

39. The Committee notes the expanded protection of victims of domestic violence in the Violence Protection Act 2019, but it is concerned about the high rates of violence against persons with disabilities, particularly of persons with disabilities in institutions, of women and girls with disabilities, and of persons with psychosocial and/or intellectual disabilities, as evinced by a study of the Federal Ministry of Employment, Social Affairs, Health and Consumer Protection, published in 2019, the wide-spread lack of concepts promoting sexual self-determination, violence prevention concepts, standard reporting procedures with effective remedies and shortages in qualified staff in institutions.

40. The Committee recalls its general comment No. 3 (2016) on women and girls with disabilities and recommends that the State party, in close consultation with and with the active involvement of organizations of persons with disabilities, in particular women and girls with disabilities, develop measures to address the high rate of violence against persons with disabilities in institutional settings, such as concepts promoting sexual self-determination, violence prevention concepts and accessible standard reporting procedures with effective remedies, and provide sufficient qualified staff. Recalling its Guidelines on deinstitutionalization, including in emergencies, the Committee further recommends the State party dismantle institutional settings, and provide to persons with disabilities, including women and girls with disabilities, adequate support for living in the community, with recovery community support services and redress.

35. The Committee is deeply concerned about:

(a) The high rates of all forms of violence against persons with disabilities, in particular women and girls with disabilities, and the lack of a comprehensive and effective violence prevention and response strategy to protect against violence in all public and private settings;

(b) The lack of purview of the Protection Against Violence Act to cover all forms of violence experienced by persons with disabilities in all institutional settings, in particular for women and girls with disabilities.

36. The Committee recommends that the State party, in close consultation with and active involvement of organisations of persons with disabilities, in particular organisations of women and girls with disabilities:

- (a) Develop a comprehensive and effective violence prevention and response strategy in line with the Council of Europe Convention on Preventing and Combating Violence against Women and Domestic Violence (Istanbul Convention), which responds to gender and age specific requirements, ensures that all shelters, refuges and counselling centres are accessible and widely available, and establishes independent monitoring bodies with complaints and redress mechanisms;
- (b) Undertake legislative and policy reform to ensure protection against all forms of violence and abuse experienced by persons with disabilities in all institutional settings, in particular for women and girls with disabilities.

Israel (2023)

37. The Committee is concerned about:

- (a) The lack of disaggregated data about violence, exploitation and abuse against persons with disabilities, including gender-based violence, and the lack of accessible information about specific programmes to prevent all forms of exploitation, violence and abuse;
- (b) Violence protection measures that remove persons with disabilities from home and place them in institutions;
- (c) The lack of power of the Commission for Equal Rights of Persons with Disabilities to investigate complaints concerning violence and ill-treatment of persons with disabilities, including those in institutions;
- (d) Reports indicating the incidence of gender-based violence against women and girls with disabilities in the occupied territories, including in Gaza, Area C and East Jerusalem, including intimate partner violence, sexual abuse, exploitation and forced marriage and the limited access to redress.

38. Recalling the Committee's statement of 24 November 2021 on the elimination of gender-based violence against women and girls with disabilities, and recalling targets 5.1, 5.2 and 5.5 of the Sustainable Development Goals, the Committee recommends that the State party:

- (a) Collect disaggregated data about violence, exploitation and abuse against persons with disabilities, including gender-based violence to inform public policies and programmes for the prevention of violence, including physical, psychological, financial, intimate partner violence, trafficking, sexual and other types of exploitation, violence and abuse;
- (b) Repeal provisions and practices concerning placement in institutions as a protective measure and adopt measures to effectively protect persons with disabilities from violence, in close consultation with and the active involvement of organizations of persons with disabilities, in particular organisations of women and girls with disabilities;
- (c) Provide the Commission for Equal Rights of Persons with Disabilities with powers to investigate complaints concerning violence against persons with disabilities and ensure independent monitoring of all facilities and programmes designed to serve persons with disabilities, in line with article 16 (3) of the Convention;
- (d) Take measures to ensure that persons with disabilities, in particular women and girls with disabilities in the occupied territories have access to redress, including to psychosocial support, legal counselling, assistance and services during emergencies, such as in-person services responding to gender-based violence.

33. The Committee is concerned about:

- (a) Cases of violence, neglect and abuse against persons with disabilities, including persons with albinism in the family, schools and in the community, and that current legislation, including the Disability Act of 2012, the Penal Code and the Prevention of Domestic Violence Act 2006, and the National Action Plan to Combat Gender-based Violence 2021 lack provisions to combat all forms of exploitation, violence and abuse against persons with disabilities;
- (b) The prevalence of sexual violence, including sexual abuse and harassment against women and girls with disabilities, affecting girls with intellectual disabilities and with psychosocial disabilities in special schools, in absence of investigations, prosecutions and redress for survivors of violence;

(c) That legislation criminalizing unlawful sexual activities, in particular the Penal Code and programmes to address gender-based violence, such as the National Action Plan to combat Gender Based Violence (2016) and the National Guidelines on Provision of Services to Physical and Sexual Violence, 2015 do not contain specific mechanisms for supporting women and girls with disabilities;

(d) The lack of accessibility, including sign language interpretation and reasonable accommodation of Victim Support Units in the police stations and shelters for victims of violence and the underfunding of these units;

(e) Information about girls with disabilities and children with intellectual disabilities who are subjected to begging, including by their guardians and in absence of a dignified opportunity for self-realization.

34. Recalling its statement of 24 November 2021, in which it called for action to be taken to eliminate gender-based violence against women and girls with disabilities, and recalling targets 5.1, 5.2 and 5.5 of the Sustainable Development Goals, the Committee recommends that the State party:

(a) Ensure that legislation criminalizing, protecting against and preventing all forms of violence, abuse and neglect include persons with disabilities, and harmful practices affecting them. The State party should introduce remedies for victims, redress and reparations, including appropriate compensation, age-appropriate and gender-sensitive psychosocial rehabilitation for survivors of violence;

(b) Set-up a process to expeditiously investigate cases of sexual abuse against children with disabilities in special schools and in other settings, hold perpetrators accountable and raise awareness among parents, school personnel and the community about the gravity of these conducts. The State party should adopt reparations for children affected by acts of violence, consider the immediate closure of special education settings and mandate the Malawi Human Rights Commission with the task to conduct periodic monitoring of all facilities and programmes designed for persons with disabilities, including special schools and institutions where cases of violence against children with disabilities have been reported.

(c) Ensure that legislation and programmes adopted for the recovery, rehabilitation and social reintegration of victims of sexual violence, abuse and exploitation, include women and girls with disabilities, and provide them with guidance for identification of instances of violence, and accessible forms and protocols to submit complaints in cases of violence and abuse;

(d) Allocate resources for strengthening Victim Support Units and shelters for victims of violence, in particular to ensure physical accessibility, accessibility to information, disability-inclusive protocols to address requirements, interviews and the situation of persons with disabilities seeking support;

(e) Adopt a national strategy to combat violence and all forms of exploitation against persons with disabilities in private and public spheres, including begging. This strategy should i) encompass actions to prevent all forms of violence, information in accessible formats, ii) strengthen support available for survivors of violence, including counselling and psychosocial rehabilitation, iii) prioritize the development of social support services and community networks for preventing and combating poverty and deprivation.

Mauritania (2023)

29. The Committee notes with concern:

(a) The lack of awareness among the general population, including among persons with disabilities, about measures for the protection of persons with disabilities from exploitation, violence and abuse, in all settings, including in the family, at school and in the workplace;

(b) The lack of sufficient measures to ensure the effective implementation of the national legislation, policies and strategies to protect persons with disabilities in all settings, particularly older persons with disabilities, women and children with disabilities, persons with intellectual disabilities, persons with psychosocial disabilities, persons with albinism, refugees, asylum-seekers and migrants with disabilities from trafficking and all forms of exploitation, violence and abuse;

(c) Reported cases of exploitation, against children with disabilities through forced begging.

30. The Committee recommends that the State party:

(a) Take effective measures to raise awareness about the protection of persons with disabilities from exploitation, violence and abuse and ensure that persons with disabilities are provided with information about how to avoid, recognize and report cases of violence, exploitation and abuse; and ensure that persons with disabilities who are victims of exploitation, violence or abuse have access to independent complaint mechanisms and appropriate remedies, including counselling;

(b) Strengthen the implementation of the national legislation, policies and strategies to protect persons with disabilities in all settings, particularly older persons with disabilities, women and children with disabilities, persons with intellectual disabilities, persons with psychosocial disabilities, persons with albinism, refugees, asylum-seekers and migrants with disabilities from trafficking and all forms of exploitation, violence and abuse;

(c) Take effective measures to ensure that children with disabilities are adequately protected from exploitation, violence and abuse, including exploitation through forced begging, and that perpetrators are sanctioned.

33. The Committee notes with concern:

(a) The lack of awareness among the general population and particularly among persons with disabilities about measures for the protection of persons with disabilities from exploitation, including trafficking, and violence and abuse, and the lack of a comprehensive strategy against all forms of exploitation, violence and abuse against persons with disabilities, in all settings, including in the family, at school and in the workplace;

(b) The lack of specific measures to protect persons with disabilities, in particular all women and girls with disabilities disability against all forms of violence, exploitation and abuse, in particular women and girls with intellectual and/or psychosocial disability;

(c) Inadequate training of the staff, carers and families of persons with disabilities, health personnel and law enforcement officials to recognize all forms of exploitation, violence and abuse.

34. The Committee recommends that the State party:

(a) Take all necessary steps to raise awareness about measures for the protection of persons with disabilities from exploitation, including trafficking, and violence and abuse, and adopt a comprehensive strategy to prevent exploitation, violence and abuse targeting persons with disabilities, especially persons with psychosocial and/or intellectual disabilities and those who are institutionalized, and ensure that persons with disabilities have information about how to avoid, recognize and report cases and that persons with disabilities who are victims of exploitation, violence or abuse have access to independent complaint mechanisms and appropriate remedies, such as redress and adequate compensation, including rehabilitation;

(b) Adopt appropriate legislative, administrative, social, educational and other measures to protect persons with disabilities, both within and outside the home, from all forms of exploitation, violence and abuse and ensure that services for women and girls with disabilities victims of gender based violence, including support centres and emergency shelters, are accessible and the required support is provided;

(c) Provide continuous training for the families of persons with disabilities and for their caregivers, health professionals and law enforcement officers to enable them to recognize all forms of exploitation, violence and abuse, and to better communicate and work with persons with disabilities who are victims of violence.

31. Al Comité le preocupa:

- a) El estancamiento en la implementación de las líneas de acción del Área/eje 14 Protección contra la explotación, la Violencia y el Abuso de las personas con discapacidad, especialmente las indígenas, las mujeres y niños;
- b) La falta de accesibilidad en albergues destinados a víctimas de explotación, violencia y abuso;
- c) La carencia de medidas de protección establecidas en favor de personas con discapacidad que son colocadas en situación de mendicidad por parte de organizaciones delictivas;
- d) La falta de información sobre las denuncias por hechos de violencia contra las mujeres y niñas con discapacidad ingresados en el sistema judicial y reportar los mismos al Sistema Unificado y Estandarizado de justicia.

32. En consonancia con las metas 5.1, 5.2 y 5.5 de los Objetivos de Desarrollo Sostenible y su Declaración del 24 de noviembre de 2021 en la que pide que se adopten medidas para eliminar la violencia de género contra las mujeres y las niñas con discapacidad, el Comité recomienda al Estado parte:

- a) Reforzar las acciones para el avance de las líneas de acción del Área/eje 14 sobre protección contra la explotación, la violencia y el abuso, particularmente de las personas con discapacidad, especialmente las personas indígenas, las mujeres y niños con discapacidad;
- b) Garantizar el acceso a albergues accesibles y con personal capacitado para las personas con discapacidad víctimas de explotación, violencia y abuso;
- c) Acatar las anteriores observaciones finales (CRPD/C/PRY/CO/1, párrafo 42), y tomar acciones urgentes para prevenir que las personas con discapacidad vivan en condiciones de abandono, sean víctimas de trata y/o sean obligadas a la mendicidad por organizaciones delictivas, así como establecer las medidas de investigación y penalización pertinentes;
- d) Recopilar información sobre las denuncias presentadas por mujeres y niñas con discapacidad víctimas de violencia, tanto en el hogar como en escuelas o instituciones, sobre su seguimiento, medidas de sanción y de reparación, tanto en zonas rurales como urbanas y fortalecer el Sistema Unificado y Estandarizado para que funcione como un sistema unificado, coordinado y coherente de obtención de datos sobre la violencia contra mujeres y niñas con discapacidad.

27. The Committee notes with concern:

- (a) The lack of awareness amongst the general population and particularly amongst persons with disabilities about measures in place for their protection from exploitation, violence and abuse, and the lack of a comprehensive strategy against all forms of exploitation, violence and abuse against those persons, in all settings, including in the family, at school and in the workplace;
- (b) The limited availability of information and statistical data regarding violence against persons with disabilities and related complaints submitted relating to such violence;
- (c) The lack of accessible shelters for women and girls who are victims of violence, including women with psychosocial and/or intellectual disabilities;
- (d) The inadequate training of the staff, caregivers and families of persons with disabilities, health personnel and law enforcement officials to recognize all forms of exploitation, violence and abuse.

28. The Committee recommends that the State party:

- (a) Adopt a comprehensive strategy to prevent exploitation, violence and abuse targeting persons with disabilities, especially persons with psychosocial and/or intellectual disabilities and those who are institutionalized, raise awareness about measures in place for their protection from exploitation, violence and abuse, and ensure that those persons have information about how to avoid, recognize and report cases of exploitation, violence and abuse, and ensure that those who are victims of exploitation, violence or abuse have access to effective remedies, such as restorative justice, including rehabilitation;
- (b) Ensure that data collected on violence against persons with disabilities disaggregate cases of gender-based violence against women and girls with disabilities, in the private and public spheres, and take measures to ensure access to support services for those who are victims of gender-based violence, including through appropriate funding;
- (c) Take necessary measures to ensure the funding and support for shelters for victims of violence, and to ensure that the facilities and services provided therein are accessible to persons with disabilities, particularly women and girls;
- (d) Ensure that health professionals and law enforcement officers are trained to recognize all forms of exploitation, violence and abuse, and to better communicate and work with persons with disabilities who are victims of violence and offer such training for their families and caregivers.

Argentina (2023)

33. Al Comité le preocupa lo siguiente:

- a) La Ley 26.485 sobre la Protección Integral para Prevenir, Sancionar y Erradicar la Violencia contra las Mujeres, el Plan Nacional de Acción contra las Violencias por Motivos de Género 2020-2022 y el Programa de Fortalecimiento para Dispositivos Territoriales de Protección Integral de Personas en Contexto de Violencia por Motivos de Género no incorporan la perspectiva de discapacidad;
- b) La escasa protección de las niñas, los niños y las mujeres con discapacidad, en particular de quienes se encuentran en instituciones, frente a la violencia sexual y a los malos tratos;
- c) Las barreras que enfrentan para acceder a la justicia las mujeres y niñas con discapacidad que experimentan violencia basada en género, entre otras cosas, instalaciones, información, refugios y mecanismos de denuncia inaccesibles, órdenes de protección inefectivas, así como falta de asistencia jurídica, apoyos y ajustes de procedimiento;
- d) El alcance limitado de la línea telefónica 144 y del Programa Nacional Acompañar, y la incompatibilidad de este Programa dirigido a mujeres y personas LGBTQI+ en situación de violencia de género con la percepción de pensiones no contributivas;
- e) La información dispersa sobre casos de violencia contra personas con discapacidad, incluyendo en instituciones.

34. En consonancia con las metas 5.1, 5.2 y 5.5 de los Objetivos de Desarrollo Sostenible y su Declaración del 24 de noviembre de 2021 en la que pide que se adopten medidas para eliminar la violencia de género contra las mujeres y las niñas con discapacidad, el Comité recomienda al Estado parte:

- a) Incorporar la perspectiva de discapacidad en la legislación y políticas relativas a la prevención y abordaje de la violencia basada en género;
- b) Reforzar las medidas para prevenir y combatir todas las formas de violencia contra los niños, niñas y las mujeres con discapacidad, en particular, en instituciones;
- c) Intensificar esfuerzos para eliminar las barreras que enfrentan las mujeres y niñas con discapacidad víctimas de violencia basada en género para acceder a la justicia, garantizando la accesibilidad en instalaciones, mecanismos de información y denuncia, refugios, así como la efectividad de las órdenes de protección, el asesoramiento jurídico y psicológico gratuito, la asistencia económica, la rehabilitación, ajustes de procedimiento y otros servicios de apoyo;
- d) Ampliar el alcance efectivo de la línea telefónica 144 y del Programa Acompañar en todas las jurisdicciones, en particular en las zonas rurales, y compatibilizar este Programa con las pensiones no contributivas;
- e) Contar con un registro integrado y desagregado respecto al número de casos denunciados, investigaciones, procesamientos y condenas en casos de violencia contra personas con discapacidad, incluyendo en instituciones, y la reparación proporcionada a las víctimas.

Georgia (2023)

33. The Committee is concerned about:

- (a) The absence of specific frameworks to prevent and address gender-based violence against women with disabilities, including different forms of abuse and harassment;
- (b) Limited scope of actions to detect cases of gender-based violence against women, particularly sexual violence and affecting women with intellectual disabilities and women with psychosocial disabilities;
- (c) Insufficient referral programmes and measures to provide persons with disabilities who have been exposed to violence with access to physical and psychosocial rehabilitation;
- (d) Reports of corporal punishment, abuse and domestic violence particularly affecting children with disabilities in rural areas and autistic children.

34. With reference to the Committee's statement issued on 24 November 2021 calling for action to be taken to eliminate gender-based violence against women and girls with disabilities, and recalling targets 5.1, 5.2 and 5.5 of the Sustainable Development Goals, the Committee recommends that the State party:

- (a) Adopt a strategy for guaranteeing women and girls with disabilities' protection against all forms of gender-based violence, exploitation and abuse, in consultation with organizations of persons with disabilities, particularly organizations of women and girls with disabilities;
- (b) Disseminate accessible information among women with disabilities, including women with intellectual disabilities and women with psychosocial disabilities, about different forms of gender-based violence, including sexual violence, and their right to be free from these forms of violence, and about complaint procedures concerning gender-based violence;
- (c) Ensure that referral programmes and psychosocial support are available and accessible for women with disabilities who are victims of gender-based violence. The Committee recommends the State party address the situation of women and girls with disabilities in implementing the recommendations issued by the Committee on the Elimination of Discrimination Against Women in its concluding observations to Georgia (CEDAW/C/GEO/6) concerning gender-based violence against women;
- (d) Enact legislation to ban all corporal punishment, abuse and domestic violence, particularly regarding children with disabilities living in poverty and autistic children.

32. Al Comité le preocupa profundamente:

- a) La violencia que se produce en los centros de rehabilitación y terapia, muchos de ellos privados, donde las niñas y los niños autistas son sometidos a "curas" y "tratamientos" como la privación de sueño, dietas extremas, colocación de cabeza en barriles y uso de camisas de fuerza;
- b) La violencia ejercida contra las mujeres y niñas con discapacidad especialmente en las zonas remotas y rurales y especialmente a las de grupos indígenas;
- c) Las muertes que han sucedido en instituciones, incluyendo en los hospitales psiquiátricos y que no se ha realizado una investigación criminal exhaustiva.

33. El Comité recomienda al Estado parte que:

- a) Fortalezca su estrategia de supervisión sistemática y el mecanismo de evaluación de los centros de rehabilitación y terapia públicos y privados, así como de los proveedores de servicios a personas con discapacidad, para garantizar la protección de la integridad personal de los niños con discapacidad, incluyendo sanciones y cierres permanentes de los centros y otros proveedores de servicios que persistan en dicho trato degradante;
- b) Establezca un mecanismo de seguimiento para detectar, prevenir y sancionar la violencia contra las niñas y mujeres con discapacidad especialmente las de grupos indígenas en áreas remotas y rurales;
- c) Garantice la investigación criminal exhaustiva, el castigo a los responsables y la justicia restaurativa para los familiares de las víctimas de muertes en instituciones, incluyendo en hospitales psiquiátricos.

Togo (2023)

33. The Committee notes with concern:

- (a) The lack of awareness among the general population, including among persons with disabilities about measures for the protection of persons with disabilities from exploitation, violence and abuse, and the lack of a comprehensive strategy against all forms of exploitation, violence and abuse against persons with disabilities, in all settings, including in the family, at school and in the workplace;
- (b) That children with disabilities are exposed to higher rates of violence than other children and about the limited availability of information and statistical data regarding violence against children with disabilities and related complaints;
- (c) The lack of accessible shelters for women and girls who are victims of violence, including women with psychosocial and/or intellectual disabilities;
- (d) Inadequate training of the staff, carers and families of persons with disabilities, health personnel and law enforcement officials to recognize all forms of exploitation, violence and abuse.

34. The Committee recommends that the State party:

- (a) Take all necessary steps to raise awareness about measures for the protection of persons with disabilities from exploitation, violence and abuse, and adopt a comprehensive strategy to prevent exploitation, violence and abuse of persons with disabilities, especially women and girls with disabilities, including older women, persons with psychosocial and/or intellectual disabilities and persons with disabilities who are institutionalized, and ensure that persons with disabilities have information about how to avoid, recognize and report cases and that persons with disabilities who are victims of exploitation, violence or abuse have access to independent complaint mechanisms and appropriate remedies, such as redress and adequate compensation, including rehabilitation;
- (b) Develop and implement a plan of action to eliminate all forms of violence and abuse against children with disabilities, including corporal punishment, within and outside of institutions and collect disaggregated data in order to ensure effective implementation and monitoring;
- (c) Ensure that services for women and girls with disabilities who are victims of gender-based violence, including support centres and emergency shelters, are accessible physically, and in terms of information and communication and the required support is provided;
- (d) Provide continuous training for the families of persons with disabilities and for their caregivers, health professionals and law enforcement officers to enable them to recognize all forms of exploitation, violence and abuse, and to better communicate and work with persons with disabilities who are victims of violence.

Tunisia (2023)

27. The Committee is concerned by the omission of provisions on the elimination of violence against women with disabilities, including the omission of conjugal violence in the Law No. 2017-58 of August 11, 2017 which is on the elimination of violence against women. It is also concerned by the absence of accessible data on the number of reclamations and cases of violence against women with disabilities. It is further concerned that the hotline to report cases of violence against women provided by the Ministry of Family, Women and Children is not accessible to women who are deaf or hard of hearing or deafblind while the staff who respond are not trained to work with women with disabilities.

28. The Committee recommends that the State party, with the meaningful involvement and active participation of persons with disabilities and their representative organizations:

- (a) Amend the law 58-2008, of, to include provisions on the elimination of violence against women with disabilities, notably in “violence conjugal”;
- (b) Ensure data on violence against women, disaggregated by women with disabilities who are victims of violence, especially women, girls and children;
- (c) Establish a reporting mechanism for cases of violence against women with disabilities; Set up without delay training for all the professionals involve in violence against women, to work with persons with disabilities, in particular about their rights and the specific care they need.

Bangladesh (2022)

(a) Adopt concrete measures to provide protection for persons with disabilities subjected to exploitation, violence and abuse, particularly older women and girls with disabilities and persons with intellectual and/or psychosocial disabilities, including by constituting accessible shelters.

(b) Introduce mechanisms for effective complaints, sanctions, remedies and redress for victims and establish an independent mechanism to prevent exploitation, violence and abuse against persons with disabilities, with the mandate to monitor facilities and programmes designed to serve persons with disabilities, and provide them with adequate resources to make them functional and effective;

(c) Adopt concrete and effective measures to ensure that children with disabilities are protected from all forms of violence, abuse and harmful practices, particularly begging;

China (2022)

36. The Committee is concerned about:

(a) Reports of violence against and abuse of persons with disabilities, particularly women and girls with disabilities victims of domestic violence, trafficking and forced marriage;

(b) The lack of a rigorous evidence base and comprehensive data on the prevalence of exploitation, violence and abuse against all persons with disabilities, in particular women and girls with disabilities victims of domestic violence, trafficking and forced marriage;

(c) The absence of effective measures for remedies such as compensation, rehabilitation and social reintegration of victims of violence, particularly women and girls with disabilities.

37. The Committee recommends that the State party take all necessary steps to prevent exploitation, violence and abuse against persons with disabilities, including:

(a) In keeping with the recommendation made by the Committee on the Elimination of Discrimination against Women, following its consideration of the combined seventh and eighth periodic reports of China (CEDAW/C/CHN/CO/7-8), systematically monitor and collect disaggregated data on the locations and prevalence of exploitation, violence and abuse against persons with disabilities, including women and girls with disabilities victims of domestic violence, trafficking and forced marriage;

- (b) Strengthen measures to prevent and combat all forms of violence against persons with disabilities;
- (c) Ensure that all persons with disabilities have access to confidential mechanisms for reporting violence; that reports of exploitation, violence and abuse are promptly investigated; that perpetrators are prosecuted and punished; and that appropriate remedies are provided to victims of abuse, such as redress and adequate compensation, including accessible shelters, gender- and age-sensitive physical and psychological recovery support, and rehabilitation;
- (d) Revise the Law on the Protection of Rights and Interests of Women with a view to including a disability perspective and addressing the specific risks of gender-based violence and the barriers to protection faced by women and girls with disabilities.

Indonesia (2022)

38. The Committee notes with concern:

- (a) The existence of practices related to exploitation, forced labour and trafficking of persons with disabilities, such as being traded as beggars, drug couriers, or low paid workers;
- (b) The high levels of exploitation, violence and abuse experienced by persons with disabilities, in particular women and children with disabilities, and the lack of accessible victim support services, protective and complaints mechanisms and effective remedies;
- (c) The ineffective application of the law on sexual violence due to the limited definition of rape and the lack of prohibition of marital rape in the Penal Code, the fact that the Penal Code does not reflect the experience of women and girls with disabilities and the lack of resources and financial aid to conduct forensic reports and DNA testing;
- (d) The lack of information and disaggregated data regarding violence against women and girls with disabilities, including in relation to complaints.

39. The Committee recommends that the State party:

- (a) Implement measures to prevent and punish exploitation, forced labour and trafficking for the purpose of labour exploitation of persons with disabilities, including being traded as beggars, drug couriers and low paid workers;
- (b) Adopt a comprehensive strategy, in close consultation with persons with disabilities, to prevent and respond to all forms of exploitation, violence and abuse, including specific gender and age-appropriate measures, an accessible independent complaint mechanism and appropriate remedies, and accessible victim support services;
- (c) Amend the Penal Code to prohibit marital rape and to reflect broader definitions of rape that recognise the experience of women and girls with disabilities, and ensure resources and financial aid for forensic reports and DNA testing;
- (d) Ensure robust disaggregated data is collected on violence against persons with disabilities, including gender-based violence against women and girls with disabilities, in the private and public spheres.

Japan (2022)

35. The Committee is concerned about:

- (a) Reported sexual violence and domestic violence against children and women with disabilities, in particular, persons with intellectual or psychosocial or sensory disabilities, and those placed in institutional settings, and the lack of their protection against sexual violence and remedies for them;
- (b) Lack of scope and effectiveness of the Persons with Disabilities Act on the Prevention of Abuse of Persons with Disabilities and Support for Caregivers, precluding the prevention of, the reporting and investigation on violence against persons with disabilities, including children and women with disabilities, in educational, medical and criminal justice settings;
- (c) Lack of accessible support services for victims, accessible information and reporting mechanisms, including independent reporting systems in residential institutions, and the lack of expertise, accessibility and reasonable accommodations, in the judicial processes related to sexual violence;

(d) Absence of representatives of organisations of persons with disabilities in the “Study Group on Criminal Law Related to Sexual Crimes”, established by the Ministry of Justice in 2020, regarding sexual crimes against children and persons with disabilities.

36. In line with its statement issued on 24 November 2021 calling to take action to eliminate gender-based violence against women and girls with disabilities, now, and with targets 5.1, 5.2 and 5.5 of the Sustainable Development Goals, the Committee recommends that the State party:

(a) Carry-out the fact-finding investigation on sexual violence and domestic violence against girls and women with disabilities and strengthen measures for combating all forms of violence against children and women with disabilities, providing them with accessible information about the complaint and redress mechanisms available to them, and ensuring that these acts are promptly investigated, that perpetrators are prosecuted and punished, and that remedies are provided for victims;

(b) Review the Act on the Prevention of Persons with Disabilities and Support for Caregivers for extending the scope of prevention of violence against persons with disabilities in all settings, and for establishing measures to investigate violence and abuse against persons with disabilities and to their remedy;

(c) Develop strategies at all levels to ensure the accessibility of victim support services, information on support services and reporting mechanisms, including in residential institutions, and to provide professional development programmes for the relevant judicial and administrative officers on the human rights model of disability, accessibility and reasonable accommodations, in the judicial processes;

(d) Ensure the meaningful participation of representatives of organisations of persons with disabilities in the “Study Group on Criminal Law Related to Sexual Crimes”.

Lao People’s Democratic Republic (2022)

28. The Committee notes with concern:

(a) The lack of provisions on disability-sensitive referral systems, recovery services and facilities, reintegration, accessible information, and education on exploitation, violence and abuse under Law No. 56 on preventing and combating violence against women and children;

(b) The absence of a comprehensive strategy against all forms of exploitation, violence and abuse against persons with disabilities in all settings, including in the family, at school and in the workplace;

(c) The lack of information and statistical data regarding violence against women and girls with disabilities and related complaints submitted by them;

(d) The insufficient resources of the Centre for Counselling and Protection of Women and Children, as well as the lack of accessible shelters for women and girls who are victims of violence, and the lack of effective remedies and redress for persons with disabilities facing violence;

(e) Inadequate training of the staff, carers and families of persons with disabilities, health personnel and law enforcement officials to recognize all forms of exploitation, violence and abuse.

29. In line with its statement issued on 24 November 2021 calling for action to be taken immediately to eliminate gender-based violence against women and girls with disabilities, and with targets 5.1, 5.2 and 5.5 of the Sustainable Development Goals, the Committee recommends that the State party:

(a) Ensure that legislation and policies to prevent and combat all forms of violence include persons with disabilities, including the Law No. 56 on preventing and combating violence against women and children;

(b) Adopt a comprehensive strategy to prevent exploitation, violence and abuse targeting persons with disabilities, especially women and girls with psychosocial and/or intellectual disabilities, women and girls belonging to ethnic and religious groups, persons affected by leprosy and victims of unexploded ordnance, and ensure that persons with disabilities have information about how to avoid, recognize and report cases and that victims of exploitation, violence or abuse have access to independent complaint mechanisms and appropriate remedies;

(c) Collect data on violence against persons with disabilities, identifying gender-based violence against women and girls with disabilities, in the private and public spheres, and ensure budget allocations and access to support services for women and girls with disabilities who are victims of gender-based violence;

(d) Ensure that shelters for victims of violence are accessible to persons with disabilities and provide the necessary resources to the Centre for Counselling and Protection of Women and Children;

(e) Provide continuous training for the families of persons with disabilities and for their caregivers, health professionals and law enforcement officers to enable them to recognize all forms of exploitation, violence and abuse, and to better communicate and work with persons with disabilities who are victims of violence.

New Zealand (2022)

28. The Committee notes with concern:

(a) The lack of provisions on disability-sensitive referral systems, recovery services and facilities, reintegration, accessible information, and education on exploitation, violence, and abuse under the Law No.56 on Preventing and Combatting Violence against Women and Children;

(b) The absence of a comprehensive strategy against all forms of exploitation, violence and abuse against persons with disabilities, in all settings, including in the family, at school and in the workplace;

(c) The lack of information and statistical data regarding violence against women and girls with disabilities and related complaints submitted by them;

(d) The insufficient resources of the Centre for Counselling and Protection of Women and Children, as well as the lack of accessible shelters for women and girls who are victims of violence, and the lack of effective remedies and redress for persons with disabilities facing violence;

(e) Inadequate training of the staff, carers and families of persons with disabilities, health personnel and law enforcement officials to recognize all forms of exploitation, violence and abuse.

29. In line with its statement [issued on 24 November 2021] calling to take action to eliminate gender-based violence against women and girls with disabilities, now, and with targets 5.1, 5.2 and 5.5 of the Sustainable Development Goals, the Committee recommends that the State party:

(a) Ensure that legislation and policies to prevent and combat all forms of violence include persons with disabilities, including the Law No.56 on Preventing and Combatting Violence against Women and Children;

(b) Adopt a comprehensive strategy to prevent exploitation, violence and abuse targeting persons with disabilities, especially women and girls with psychosocial and/or intellectual disabilities, women and girls belonging to ethnic and religious groups, persons affected by leprosy and victims of unexploded ordnance, and ensure that persons with disabilities have information about how to avoid, recognize and report cases and that victims of exploitation, violence or abuse have access to independent complaint mechanisms and appropriate remedies;

(c) Collect data on violence against persons with disabilities, identifying gender-based violence against women and girls with disabilities, in the private and public spheres, and ensure budget allocations and access to support services for women and girls with disabilities who are victims of gender-based violence;

(d) Ensure that shelters for victims of violence are accessible to persons with disabilities and provide the necessary resources to the Centre for Counselling and Protection of Women and Children;

(e) Provide continuous training for the families of persons with disabilities and for their caregivers, health professionals and law enforcement officers to enable them to recognize all forms of exploitation, violence and abuse, and to better communicate and work with persons with disabilities who are victims of violence.

35. The Committee notes with concern:

- (a) The lack of awareness among the general population and in particular among persons with disabilities about measures for the protection of persons with disabilities from exploitation, violence and abuse, and the lack of a comprehensive strategy to combat all forms of exploitation, violence and abuse against persons with disabilities, in all settings, including in the family, at school and in the workplace;
- (b) That children with disabilities are exposed to higher rates of violence than other children and about the limited availability of information and statistical data regarding violence against children with disabilities and related complaints;
- (c) The lack of accessible shelters for women and girls who are victims of violence, including women with psychosocial disabilities and/or intellectual disabilities;
- (d) The inadequate training of the staff, caregivers and families of persons with disabilities, health personnel and law enforcement officials on recognizing all forms of exploitation, violence and abuse.

36. The Committee recommends that the State party:

- (a) Take all necessary steps to raise awareness about measures for the protection of persons with disabilities from exploitation, violence and abuse, adopt a comprehensive strategy to prevent exploitation, violence and abuse targeting persons with disabilities, in particular persons with psychosocial disabilities and/or intellectual disabilities and those who are institutionalized, and ensure that persons with disabilities have information about how to avoid, recognize and report cases and that persons with disabilities who are victims of exploitation, violence or abuse have access to independent complaint mechanisms and appropriate remedies, such as redress and adequate compensation, including rehabilitation;
- (b) Develop and implement a plan of action to eliminate all forms of violence and abuse against children with disabilities within and outside of institutions and collect disaggregated data in order to ensure effective implementation and monitoring;
- (c) Ensure that services for women and girls with disabilities who are victims of gender-based violence, such as support centres and emergency shelters, are accessible and that the required support is provided;
- (d) Provide ongoing training for the families of persons with disabilities and for their caregivers, health professionals and law enforcement officers to enable them to recognize all forms of exploitation, violence and abuse and to better communicate and work with persons with disabilities who are victims of violence.

Singapore (2022)

33. The Committee notes with concern:

- (a) The lack of awareness among the general population including among persons with disabilities about measures for the protection of persons with disabilities from exploitation, violence and abuse, and the lack of a comprehensive strategy against all forms of exploitation, violence and abuse against persons with disabilities, in all settings, including in the family, at school and in the workplace;
- (b) The lack of specific measures to protect all women and girls with disabilities, in particular women and girls with intellectual disabilities and women and girls with psychosocial disabilities, against all forms of gender-based violence, the lack of accessible shelters for women and girls with disabilities who are victims of violence, exploitation and abuse, as well as the limited availability of information and statistical data regarding violence against women and girls with disabilities and related offenses.

34. The Committee recommends that the State party:

- (a) Take effective measures to raise awareness about the protection of persons with disabilities from exploitation, violence and abuse, and adopt a comprehensive strategy to prevent exploitation, violence and abuse of persons with disabilities, especially persons with psychosocial disabilities, persons with intellectual disabilities and persons with disabilities in institutions, ensure that persons with disabilities are provided with information about how to avoid, recognize and report cases violence, exploitation and abuse, and that persons with disabilities who are victims of exploitation, violence or abuse have access to independent complaint mechanisms and appropriate remedies, including rehabilitation;

(b)Collect data on violence, exploitation and abuse against persons with disabilities to identify all instances of gender-based violence against women and girls with disabilities, in the private and public spheres, and ensure budget allocations and access to support services and shelters for women and girls with disabilities who are victims of gender-based violence, exploitation and abuse.

Hungary (2022)

33.The Committee is concerned about:

(a)The systematic abuse, including sexual abuse, mistreatment and neglect of persons with disabilities, particularly of children with disabilities and persons with intellectual disabilities, as a result of the perpetuation of institutional forms of care for persons with disabilities;

(b)The lack of independent monitoring of residential care and psychiatric institutions;

(c)The lack of well-defined investigation methods and procedures for combating hate crimes against persons with disabilities;

(d)The lack of accessibility and required accommodations for women with disabilities in services for victims of domestic violence;

(e)Insufficient consideration of the recommendations raised by the Committee on the Rights of the Child in 2020 on cases of child sexual abuse and maltreatment of children with disabilities in institutional care.

34.The Committee, recalling targets 5.1, 5.2 and 5.5 of the Sustainable Development Goals, recommends that the State party:

(a)Develop a comprehensive strategy and legal safeguards to prevent and combat all forms of violence and exploitation against persons with disabilities, including by repealing section 126 (9) of the decree of the Ministry of Public Welfare 15/1998 (IV. 30) on the tasks and operational conditions of child welfare and child protection services and professionals providing personal care in order to abolish the use of isolation rooms for children with psychosocial disabilities in institutions for children;

(b)Ensure that all facilities, residential care and psychiatric institutions are subjected to independent monitoring in line with article 16 (3) of the Convention, through the involvement of civil society organizations, including disability rights-based organizations, in order to prevent exploitation and abuse of and violence against persons with disabilities;

(c)Establish well-defined investigation methods, protocols and procedures for combating hate crimes against persons with disabilities;

(d)Ensure that all services for girls and women with disabilities who are survivors of domestic violence, including support centres and emergency shelters, are accessible and the required support is provided;

(e)Ratify the Convention on Preventing and Combating Violence against Women and Domestic Violence adopted by the Council of Europe, with the aim of ensuring the necessary protection of the rights of women with disabilities, including access to support services and redress for victims of violence;

(f)Ensure the full implementation of the recommendations of the Committee on the Rights of the Child in 2020.

Jamaica (2022)

32.The Committee notes with concern:

(a)The lack of awareness among the general population and particularly among persons with disabilities about measures for the protection of persons with disabilities from exploitation, violence and abuse, and the lack of a comprehensive strategy against all forms of exploitation, violence and abuse against persons with disabilities, in all settings, including in the family, at school and in the workplace;

- (b)The limited availability of information and statistical data regarding violence against women and girls with disabilities and related complaints submitted by them;
- (c)The lack of accessible shelters for women and girls who are victims of violence, including women with psychosocial or intellectual disabilities;
- (d)Inadequate training of the staff, carers and families of persons with disabilities, health personnel and law enforcement officials to recognize all forms of exploitation, violence and abuse.

33.The Committee recommends that the State party:

- (a)Take all necessary steps to raise awareness about measures for the protection of persons with disabilities from exploitation, violence and abuse, and adopt a comprehensive strategy to prevent exploitation, violence and abuse targeting persons with disabilities, especially persons with psychosocial or intellectual disabilities and those who are institutionalized, and ensure that persons with disabilities have information about how to avoid, recognize and report cases and that persons with disabilities who are victims of exploitation, violence or abuse have access to independent complaint mechanisms and appropriate remedies, such as redress and adequate compensation, including rehabilitation;
- (b)Ensure that data collected on violence against persons with disabilities identifies all instances of gender-based violence against women and girls with disabilities, in the private and public spheres, and also ensure budget allocations and access to support services for women and girls with disabilities who are victims of gender-based violence;
- (c)Ensure that shelters for victims of violence are established and that the National Shelter Strategy (2018), which guides the development of a nationwide system of safe spaces for victims and survivors, includes a requirement to ensure that facilities and services provided are accessible to persons with disabilities, particularly women and children;
- (d)Provide continuous training for the families of persons with disabilities and for their caregivers, health professionals and law enforcement officers to enable them to recognize all forms of exploitation, violence and abuse, and to better communicate and work with persons with disabilities who are victims of violence.

43.The Committee is concerned about:

- (a)A lack of measures to identify and prevent all forms of violence against children and adults with disabilities, including gender-based violence, in particular obstetric violence, when accessing sexual and reproductive health services;
- (b)The omission of a specific reference to women with disabilities in the General Act to Ensure Women a Life Free of Violence, to measures ensuring accessibility and to procedural accommodations women with disabilities may require to access justice and protective measures on an equal basis with others;
- (c)The limited availability of accessible shelters for women with disabilities who are victims of violence, and the lack of effective remedies for persons with disabilities facing violence, including gender-based violence.

44.The Committee recommends that the State party:

- (a)Reinforce the implementation of existing legislative and policy measures to prevent all forms of violence against persons with disabilities, including gender-based violence, and to provide effective remedies and redress to victims, both inside and outside of institutions; and amend the General Act to Ensure Women a Life Free of Violence to establish specific standards to support women with disabilities, including support systems that include personal assistance;
- (b)Periodically compile disaggregated data on the situation of women and children with disabilities in respect of violence, exploitation and abuse, both inside and outside of public and private institutions;
- (c)Ensure that shelters for victims of violence are established and that the facilities and services provided therein are accessible to persons with disabilities, particularly women with disabilities;

(d) Create an independent monitor and oversight mechanism, adhering to article 16 (3) of the Convention, with the involvement and full participation of persons with disabilities and their representative organizations, to effectively monitor and supervise public and private institutions, and publish its findings.

Switzerland (2022)

33. The Committee notes with concern:

(a) The reported high incidence of exploitation, violence and abuse against persons with disabilities, including in institutions, and in particular against women and children with disabilities;

(b) The lack of a rigorous evidence base and comprehensive data on the prevalence of exploitation, violence and abuse against all persons with disabilities, including older women, children and refugees with disabilities; and the omission of women with disabilities from the prevalence study on violence against women and domestic violence under the 2030 Gender Equality Strategy and its action plan;

(c) The lack of accessible victim support services, the lack of accessible information on support services and reporting mechanisms, the lack of accessible reporting mechanisms, including independent reporting systems in institutions, and the lack of expertise, accessibility and reasonable accommodation provided by judicial authorities.

34. The Committee recommends that the State party:

(a) Strengthen measures to prevent and combat all forms of violence, including stigmatization and stereotypes, against persons with disabilities and provide them with accessible, age-appropriate information about forms of violence and about the complaints and redress mechanisms available to them;

(b) Develop a robust evidence base on exploitation, violence and abuse against adults and children with disabilities, including through comprehensive disability-inclusive research and prevalence studies, and include women and girls with disabilities in the prevalence study on violence against women and domestic violence;

(c) Develop strategies at the federal and cantonal levels to ensure the accessibility of victim support services, information on support services and reporting mechanisms, to ensure the accessibility and independence of reporting mechanisms, including in institutions, and to provide professional development programmes for the relevant judicial and administrative officers on the human rights model of disability, accessibility and reasonable accommodation;

(d) Ensure that all persons with disabilities, including older women, children and refugees with disabilities and persons with disabilities living in institutions, have access to confidential mechanisms for reporting violence, that reports of exploitation, violence and abuse, including in institutions, are promptly investigated, that perpetrators are prosecuted and punished, and that remedies are provided for victims of violence, including redress, reparations and recovery.

30. The Committee is concerned about:

(a) The lack of specific provisions in the State party's legislation to prevent, investigate and punish violence, neglect and abuse in respect of persons with disabilities in institutions, in the home or in public spaces, and the lack of monitoring, redress and disaggregated data, particularly in respect of women and girls with intellectual or psychosocial disabilities, who are often exposed to harassment, abuse and acts of sexual and other types of violence;

(b) Reports of violence against children with disabilities and the fact that corporal punishment against such children is tolerated.

31. The Committee recommends that the State party:

(a) Take all measures necessary to ensure that gender and disability are mainstreamed in legislation on the prevention of violence; the reform of mental health legislation is essential in this connection;

(b) Strengthen existing mechanisms and protocols by incorporating specific measures to prevent, eliminate, monitor, penalize and provide redress for all forms of violence, exploitation or abuse against persons with disabilities, including those who remain in or have left institutions, in the home or in public spaces;

(c) Establish a system for collecting data, disaggregated by sex, age and disability, on complaints of violence and abuse committed against persons with disabilities and gather information on related preventive, protective, monitoring and reparative measures;

(d) Intensify its efforts to prevent and eliminate violence and corporal punishment against children in general and against children with disabilities in particular.

Djibouti (2021)

27. The Committee notes with concern:

(a) The lack of sufficient measures to ensure the effective implementation of Act No. 66/AN/719/8th L (2020) and Act no. 133/AN/16/7 L (2016) to protect persons with disabilities in all settings, particularly older persons with disabilities, women and children with disabilities and persons with intellectual or psychosocial disabilities, from trafficking and all forms of violence, abuse and harmful practices, and the absence of measures for compensation and accessible services for their rehabilitation and social integration;

(b) The lack of mechanisms for identifying, investigating and prosecuting cases of exploitation, violence and abuse against persons with disabilities, particularly refugees and migrants with disabilities, persons with albinism, and persons with disabilities fleeing armed conflicts.

28. The Committee recommends that the State party:

(a) Adopt measures and programmes to protect all persons with disabilities, particularly older persons with disabilities, women and children with disabilities and persons with intellectual or psychosocial disabilities, from trafficking and all forms of violence, exploitation, abuse and harmful practices, and to establish mechanisms for redress, compensation and accessible services for their rehabilitation and social integration;

(b) Establish a complaint mechanism to ensure the investigation and prosecution of cases of trafficking and exploitation, violence and abuse against persons with disabilities and conduct capacity-building programmes for law enforcement officials on the identification and response to abuse and violence victims of disabilities.

34. The Committee notes with concern:

(a) Violence against persons with disabilities in residential and mental health facilities, including humiliation and sexual abuse, and in families;

(b) That women with disabilities are at a higher risk of harassment, gender-based violence, including sexual violence;

(c) Complex reporting mechanisms for persons with disabilities facing ill treatment in residential and mental health facilities, fear of reprisals by applicants, the rejection of complaints about abuse, in absence of redress and remedy measures.

35. The Committee, recalling the Council of Europe Convention on Preventing and Combating Violence against Women and Domestic Violence (the Istanbul Convention), and the Sustainable Development Goal 5, targets 5.1, 5.2 and 5.5, recommends that the State party:

(a) Adopt a strategy to prevent violence and abuse in residential and mental health facilities, including through development of mechanisms for reporting violence against persons with disabilities in all settings;

(b) Strengthen measures to prevent and protect women and girls with disabilities against gender-based violence, ensuring sustainability of these measures and periodic monitoring;

(c) Adopt measures to ensure access to justice and remedies for victims of violence, and redress including reparations and rehabilitation in the community, support for social inclusion, and ensure that perpetrators are prosecuted and punished.

Estonia (2021)

32. The Committee notes with concern:

(a) The lack of a comprehensive strategy against all forms of exploitation, violence and abuse against persons with disabilities, in all settings, including in family, school, and the workplace;

(b)The absence of disaggregated information about gender-based violence against women and girls with disabilities, and the lack of a gender-based and disability perspective concerning support measures for women and girls with disabilities, including psychosocial support and legal counselling for them;

(c)The lack of information concerning all instances of exploitation and violence in all facilities and programmes designed to serve persons with disabilities;

(d)The absence of information about measures to enforce the prohibition of corporal punishment against children with disabilities in all settings.

33.The Committee, recalling the Council of Europe Convention on Preventing and Combating Violence against Women and Domestic Violence (the Istanbul Convention), and targets 5.1, 5.2 and 5.5 of the Sustainable Development Goals, recommends that the State party:

(a)Adopt a comprehensive strategy to prevent and combat all forms of violence and exploitation against persons with disabilities, and ensure that the Violence Prevention Plan and other related violence prevention programmes explicitly include persons with disabilities, particularly children with disabilities still in institutions, women with disabilities, and lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, and intersex persons with disabilities, providing support for victims, and sanctions of perpetrators. The State party should strengthen measures to combat disability stigma and stereotypes, and provide persons with disabilities with accessible information about all forms of violence, complaint mechanisms, and redress available for them;

(b)Ensure that data collection on violence against persons with disabilities, identifies all instances of gender-based violence against women and girls with disabilities, in the private and public spheres, and ensure budget allocations and access to support services for women and girls with disabilities victims of gender-based violence;

(c)Ensure that all private and public residential care, psychiatric and penitentiary facilities are subject to independent monitoring, in line with article 16 (3) of the Convention, and ensure involvement of civil society organizations in independent monitoring mechanisms;

(d)Ensure that the prohibition of corporal punishment is adequately monitored and enforced in all settings, including schools, including in relation to children with disabilities and that positive, non-violent and participatory forms of child rearing and discipline are promoted through awareness campaigns and training programmes, and in accessible formats.

31.The Committee notes with concern reports of violence against and abuse of persons with disabilities, especially in institutions, and about the absence of effective measures for remedies, such as compensation, rehabilitation and social reintegration of victims of violence, particularly children and women with disabilities. The Committee is also concerned about the lack of information on the concrete results of the implementation of the Law on Measures against Violence in Family Relations enacted in 2018 as well as about the lack of availability of comprehensive data and statistics of persons with disabilities victims of violence, sexual violence and abuse or multiple discrimination.

32.The Committee recommends that the State party take all necessary steps to prevent exploitation, violence and abuse against persons with disabilities, both inside and outside of institutions. The Committee further recommends that the State party:

(a)Revise the current monitoring and inspection procedures of social care homes and psychiatric institutions to prevent violence against and abuse of persons with disabilities, and particularly of children and women with disabilities;

(b)Ensure that persons deprived of liberty have access to independent complaints mechanisms and that appropriate remedies are provided to victims of abuse, such as redress and adequate compensation, including rehabilitation;

(c)Ensure the implementation of the Law on Measures against Violence in Family Relations, ensuring a disability perspective and addressing the specific risks of gender-based violence and the barriers to protection faced by women and girls with disabilities.

Australia (2019)

31. The Committee is concerned about:

- (a) The lack of additional oversight, complaint and redress mechanisms needed for persons with disabilities who are not eligible for the National Disability Insurance Scheme, older persons with disabilities and, particularly, women with disabilities;
- (b) The lack of resources and redress mechanisms available to the Royal Commission into Violence, Abuse, Neglect and Exploitation of Persons with Disabilities;
- (c) The non-implementation of the recommendations contained in the report of the Australian Human Rights Commission A Future without Violence;
- (d) The lack of an explicit reference to women and girls with disabilities in the National Plan to Reduce Violence against Women and their Children 2010–2022;
- (e) Insufficient expertise and structural barriers within services dealing with domestic violence, sexual assault and related crises to adequately support women and girls with disabilities;
- (f) The fact that the instruments to collect data on violence against women and girls with disabilities are limited in both number and scope.

32. The Committee recommends that the State party:

- (a) Establish a national accessible oversight, complaint and redress mechanism for persons with disabilities who have experienced violence, abuse, exploitation and neglect in all settings, including all those not eligible for the National Disability Insurance Scheme and, particularly, older women with disabilities;
- (b) Ensure adequate resources and a redress mechanism for the Royal Commission into Violence, Abuse, Neglect and Exploitation of Persons with Disabilities;
- (c) Implement the recommendations contained in the report of the Australian Human Rights Commission A Future without Violence;
- (d) Ensure the inclusion of women and girls with disabilities in the National Plan to Reduce Violence against Women and their Children 2010–2022, beyond project-based programmes and activities;
- (e) Ensure gender- and age-sensitive services to address gender-based violence that are inclusive and accessible to all women and girls with disabilities and ensure that staff are adequately trained;
- (f) Address the methodological restrictions in data-collection instruments used to capture data on violence against women and girls with disabilities.

Ecuador (2019)

31. The Committee is concerned because:

- (a) Ecuadorian law lacks specific provisions for the prevention of gender-based violence, neglect and abuse directed at persons with disabilities that take into account multiple and intersectional discrimination, especially such discrimination against girls and women with psychological or intellectual disabilities, Montubio persons, indigenous persons, migrants, asylum seekers and refugees with disabilities in the public and private institutional and other spheres;
- (b) Persons with disabilities who are still living in institutions, particularly women with intellectual or psychosocial disabilities, continue to be exposed to harassment, abuse and acts of sexual and other types of violence;
- (c) Ecuadorian law does not explicitly prohibit the corporal punishment of children, including children with disabilities, in all settings;
- (d) No data disaggregated by sex, age and ethnic origin are available on cases and complaints of violence or abuse committed in the public and private spheres against persons with disabilities, especially girls and women, and there is a lack of information on preventive, case management, protective and reparative measures, including sanctions.

32. Taking into account the recommendation made in paragraph 32 of its concluding observations on the State party's initial report (CRPD/C/ECU/CO/1), the Committee recommends that the State party:

- (a) Adopt all necessary measures, and review those measures already in place, to ensure that gender and disability are mainstreamed in its legislation on the prevention of violence and reinforce existing mechanisms and protocols by incorporating specific measures for preventing, eliminating, monitoring, penalizing and providing redress for all forms of violence, exploitation or abuse of persons with disabilities, especially children, women and older adults with disabilities, persons with psychosocial or intellectual disabilities, indigenous persons, migrants and refugees, persons of African descent and persons in poverty and persons living in rural areas who have disabilities;
- (b) Guarantee full access for all girls and women with disabilities to assistance programmes for victims of gender-based violence, including shelters that ensure the accessibility of the physical environment and of information and communications and that are staffed by trained personnel;
- (c) Introduce legislation that explicitly prohibits the corporal punishment of children, especially indigenous children with disabilities, both in the home and in shelters, in line with targets 5.2 and 16.2 of the Sustainable Development Goals;
- (d) Compile data, disaggregated by sex, age, disability and ethnic origin, on complaints of violence and abuse committed in the public and private spheres against persons with disabilities and on preventive, protective, follow-up and reparative measures.

El Salvador (2019)

32. The Committee is concerned about:

- (a) The persistence of violence against persons with disabilities, especially sexual and gender-based violence against women and girls with psychosocial or intellectual disabilities, at home and in institutions, violence against older persons with disabilities, persons of African descent with disabilities, and persons with disabilities living in conditions of hardship in rural or remote areas;
- (b) Insufficient rehabilitation services and ineffective complaint and redress mechanisms for persons with disabilities who are victims of violence, as well as a lack of protection against reprisals against persons with disabilities who are victims of violence and of human and organ trafficking which may arise from filing complaints against the perpetrators;
- (c) Ineffective preventive measures taken against trafficking in persons with disabilities and in organs;
- (d) A lack of data on cases of sexual and gender-based violence against persons with disabilities in psychiatric hospitals, detention facilities and in the home, and on complaints reported and cases decided on trafficking in persons with disabilities and in organs.

33. The Committee recommends that the State party, in accordance with the Committee's general comment No. 3 (2016) on women and girls with disabilities, and taking into account target 16.2 of the Sustainable Development Goals, take measures to:

- (a) Protect persons with disabilities, particularly women and girls with disabilities, in the home and in institutions, older persons with disabilities, persons of African descent with disabilities, persons with psychosocial or intellectual disabilities, and persons with disabilities living in conditions of hardship in rural or remote areas, from all forms of violence, including sexual and gender-based violence;
- (b) Provide rehabilitation services, including emergency shelter and medical and psychological assistance, and effective complaint and redress mechanisms, including protection against reprisals arising from filing complaints against perpetrators, to persons with disabilities who are victims of violence and of human and organ trafficking;
- (c) Prevent trafficking in persons with disabilities and in organs, by, inter alia, providing gender-sensitive training on preventing and identifying trafficking in persons with disabilities and in organs to public officials, including the National Civil Police, the judiciary and health and social workers;
- (d) Collect data, disaggregated by age, sex, form of violence and disability, on victims of violence against persons with disabilities in psychiatric hospitals, detention facilities and in the home, and on the number of complaints reported and cases decided on trafficking in persons with disabilities and in organs.

26. The Committee is concerned that there are insufficient measures to detect, prevent and combat domestic violence against and sexual exploitation of persons with disabilities, particularly women and children with disabilities.

27. The Committee recommends that the State party implement an effective framework to prevent violence, particularly domestic violence and sexual exploitation, against persons with disabilities, especially women and children with disabilities. It also recommends that the State party provide specific training to law enforcement authorities, medical personnel and social workers on methods to detect and address violence against and sexual exploitation of persons with disabilities. The Committee further recommends that the State party develop an action plan to implement the Council of Europe Convention on Preventing and Combating Violence against Women and Domestic Violence, with a special focus on women and children with disabilities.

34. The Committee is concerned about:

(a) All forms of violence against children and adults with disabilities, including gender-based violence against women and girls, particularly physical, sexual and psychological violence, harassment, financial exploitation and abuse, trafficking, kidnapping, neglect and corporal punishment and other forms of violent punishment in all settings;

(b) The lack of measures to identify, prevent and combat all forms of violence against persons with disabilities, including the delay in enforcing legislative provisions to tackle such violence;

(c) The lack of disaggregated statistical data in the National Crime Records Bureau on cases of gender-based violence against women and girls with disabilities, including violence inflicted by intimate partners;

(d) The limited availability of accessible shelters for women with disabilities who are victims of violence, and the lack of effective remedies and redress for persons with disabilities facing violence, including rehabilitation and compensation.

35. The Committee recommends that the State party:

(a) Adopt and implement national and state strategies to identify, prevent, combat and end all forms of violence against persons with disabilities, including against women, girls and boys with disabilities. This process should involve organizations of persons with disabilities, particularly of women with disabilities, in adopting measures to identify instances of gender-based violence against women and girls with disabilities;

(b) Ensure the prompt implementation of the legal remedies to address the situation of women and girls with disabilities facing gender-based violence against women that are included in the Rights of Persons with Disabilities Act, the Juvenile Justice (Care and Protection of Children) Act (2015) and the Protection of Women from Domestic Violence Act (2005);

(c) Ensure that the National Crime Records Bureau collects data disaggregated by gender, age, place of residence, relationship with perpetrator and disability in cases of violence and exploitation, including gender-based violence against women and girls with disabilities and violence inflicted by intimate partners;

(d) Ensure remedies for violence, including sexual violence, accessible complaint mechanisms and access to justice for persons with disabilities, including those who reside in institutions;

(e) Ensure that all facilities and programmes designed to serve persons with disabilities are effectively monitored by independent authorities, in accordance with article 16 (3) of the Convention, and that civil society organizations, including organizations of persons with disabilities, are involved in oversight activities.

Iraq (2019)

31. The Committee is concerned about:

(a) Reports of violence against persons with disabilities, particularly women and children with disabilities, including gender-based violence, and the absence of information on criminal prosecutions and convictions of the perpetrators of such acts and on redress mechanisms for the victims;

(b) The lack of statistical data on monitoring visits undertaken by the High Commission for Human Rights, the Commission for the Care of Persons with Disabilities and Special Needs and special units of the Ministry of Health in line with article 16 (3) of the Convention and on the measures taken to address potential protection gaps identified through such monitoring;

(c) The lack of information on mainstreaming the disability perspective in legislation, policies and programmes to prevent all forms of exploitation, violence and abuse.

32. The Committee recommends that the State party:

(a) Investigate promptly and effectively incidents of violence against persons with disabilities, prosecute suspects, duly sanction perpetrators and provide victims with effective redress, including compensation and rehabilitation;

(b) Strengthen the mechanisms for independently monitoring all facilities and programmes for persons with disabilities, in accordance with article 16 (3) of the Convention, particularly with regard to data collection and the documentation of protection gaps and the ways in which they are being addressed;

(c) Ensure that any legislative and policy measures taken by the State party to prevent violence, exploitation and abuse, such as the operation of a hotline for cases of domestic violence, are accessible to persons with disabilities.

Kuwait (2019)

32. The Committee is concerned about the lack of:

(a) A law specifically prohibiting domestic and sexual violence, including marital rape;

(b) Measures to prevent exploitation, violence and abuse against persons with disabilities, including an independent mechanism for monitoring facilities and programmes for persons with disabilities;

(c) Training on preventing, identifying and addressing violence against persons with disabilities;

(d) Complaints of exploitation, violence and abuse against persons with disabilities, including in private settings, which does not necessarily mean that such phenomena do not occur;

(e) Data on the protection of persons with disabilities, especially women and girls with disabilities, from exploitation, violence and abuse.

33. The Committee recommends that the State party:

(a) Take the legislative measures necessary to prohibit domestic and sexual violence, to criminalize acts of domestic and sexual violence, including marital rape, to prosecute those responsible and to end practices that force victims to marry their perpetrators;

(b) Establish an independent monitoring mechanism, involving persons with disabilities through their representative organizations, to monitor all facilities and programmes designed to serve persons with disabilities, including institutions;

(c) Provide training to persons with disabilities, their families, health personnel and law enforcement officials on recognizing all forms of exploitation, violence and abuse and on seeking redress;

(d) Establish independent, accessible and available complaints mechanisms and hotlines, effectively investigate cases of exploitation, violence and abuse of persons with disabilities, prosecute and punish those responsible and strengthen the collection of data on violence against persons with disabilities;

(e) Ensure the provision, including in institutions, of inclusive victim support services that are sensitive to the age, gender and disability of the victim.

Myanmar (2019)

29. The Committee is concerned about:

(a) Delays to the adoption of the draft law on the prevention of violence against women;

(b) The lack of specific legislation, policies and programmes to protect persons with disabilities, particularly women and children with disabilities and persons with intellectual or psychosocial disabilities, from all forms of exploitation, violence and abuse, including gender-based violence and corporal punishment;

(c) The inadequate services for the physical and psychological recovery and rehabilitation of persons with disabilities, particularly women and children with disabilities, who are survivors of exploitation, violence and abuse;

(d) The absence of effective measures for identifying, investigating and prosecuting cases of exploitation, violence and abuse against persons with disabilities and the lack of disaggregated data on related reports, investigations and prosecutions in line with article 16 (3) of the Convention.

30. The Committee recommends that the State party:

(a) Expedite the adoption of the draft law on the prevention of violence against women and ensure its full compliance with article 16 of the Convention so as to tackle gender-based violence against women and girls with disabilities;

(b) Adopt and implement legislation, policies and programmes to protect all persons with disabilities, particularly women and children with disabilities and persons with intellectual or psychosocial disabilities, from all forms of exploitation, violence and abuse, including gender-based violence and corporal punishment;

(c) Ensure that persons with disabilities who are survivors of exploitation, violence and abuse are provided with effective redress, including compensation and comprehensive protection, recovery, rehabilitation and social reintegration services, and ensure that victims have access to age- and gender- appropriate reporting channels that respect their privacy;

(d) Promptly conduct investigations into cases of exploitation, violence and abuse against persons with disabilities, prosecute suspects, duly sanction perpetrators, and collect disaggregated data on abuse, exploitation and violence against persons with disabilities, and on the outcomes of related complaints.

31. The Committee is concerned that persons with disabilities have become victims of conflict-related violence and that conflict related violence, including sexual and gender-based violence, has led to physical, psychosocial and other disabilities, disproportionately affecting a large number of Rohingya women and girls. The Committee is also concerned about the absence of investigation of the serious rights violations and prosecution of the perpetrators. It is furthermore concerned about the lack of support and services to persons with disabilities who are survivors of conflict related violence.

32. The Committee recommends that the State party promptly investigate and prosecute security personnel, including senior officials, for serious international crimes, crimes against humanity, war crimes and conflict-related violence, taking into consideration the findings of the United Nations fact finding mission on Myanmar (A/HRC/39/64) . The Committee further recommends that the State party cooperate with the governments of countries in the region, UN entities and other international and national partners to provide all necessary specialized, inclusive, accessible and gender- and age- appropriate support and services to persons with disabilities who are survivors of conflict related violence.

31. The Committee is concerned about:

(a) The lack of awareness by the general population and persons with disabilities about measures for the protection of persons with disabilities from exploitation, violence and abuse;

(b) Reports of incidence of reprisals against persons willing to provide information in legal proceedings as witnesses in cases of exploitation, violence and abuse of the rights of persons with disabilities;

(c) The limited information and statistical data available regarding violence against women and girls with disabilities and related complaints submitted by them;

(d) The lack shelters for women and girls who are victims of violence, including women with psychosocial or intellectual disabilities.

32. The Committee recommends that the State party:

(a) Take all necessary steps to prevent exploitation, violence and abuse against persons with disabilities, especially persons with psychosocial disabilities or intellectual disabilities and those who are institutionalized without their consent, and ensure that persons with disabilities have access to independent complaint mechanisms and appropriate remedies to victims of abuse, such as redress and adequate compensation, including rehabilitation;

(b)Ensure protection of any individuals testifying in cases concerning exploitation, violence and abuse against persons with disabilities;

(c)Create a mechanism to gather disaggregated data on the situation of women and girls with disabilities, in consultation with organizations of women with disabilities, particularly with regard to violence against women and girls with disabilities;

(d)Ensure that shelters for victims of violence are established and that the services provided there are accessible to persons with disabilities

27.The Committee is concerned about:

(a)Violence and abuse against persons with disabilities, particularly persons with psychosocial or intellectual disabilities; domestic violence, gender based violence, sexual violence against women, girls and children with disabilities in institutions; and the absence of measures for compensation, and accessible services for their recovery, rehabilitation and social reintegration;

(b)The lack of training of families, caregivers, health personnel and law enforcement officials, regarding exploitation, violence and abuse, against persons with disabilities, particularly women, children and persons with psychosocial or intellectual disabilities;

(c)The lack of disaggregated data on violence and abuse committed in hospitals, particularly psychiatric institutions, and places of detention.

28.The Committee recommends that the State party:

(a)Ensure that persons with disabilities, especially women and girls with disabilities victims of gender based violence and abuse, have access to complaint mechanisms and compensation, and to services and information including hotlines, shelters, victim support services, counselling; and sanction the perpetrators;

(b)Provide training for families, caregivers, health personnel and law enforcement officials regarding exploitation, violence and abuse against persons with disabilities, and communicate and work effectively with the victims;

(c)Set up an independent mechanism to prevent violence and abuse against persons with disabilities, particularly against persons with psychosocial or intellectual disabilities, and monitor facilities and programmes designed to serve persons with disabilities in line with article 16.3 of the Convention.

(a)The absence of training for families, caregivers, health personnel and law enforcement officials on recognising all forms of exploitation, violence and abuse against persons with disabilities;

(b)Cases of violence, including sexual violence, abuse and exploitation against persons with disabilities, particularly women and girls with disabilities, that often go unreported and without reparation and the lack of specific measures to protect women and girls with disabilities, especially those with psychosocial or intellectual disabilities from gender-based violence;

(c)A high number of persons with disabilities who are subjected to bullying, hate speech and hate crimes, which are often neither identified nor investigated as hate crimes.

(a)Provide regular training for families, caregivers, health personnel and law enforcement officers on recognising all forms of exploitation, violence and abuse;

(b)Conduct investigations into all allegations of violence and abuse, including sexual abuse, of persons with disabilities, especially gender-based violence against women and girls with disabilities, particularly those with psychosocial or intellectual disabilities, ensure that perpetrators are brought to justice and impose appropriate sanctions, and that victims have access to services and information, complaint mechanisms and reparation and ensure that victims have access to immediate protection and support services including mainstream services and shelter facilities, without discrimination, including individualized supports to prevent the denial of reasonable accommodation;

(c)Take all measures necessary to prevent persons with disabilities from being subjected to bullying, hate speech and hate crimes and ensure that the law enforcement and judicial system identify, investigate and sanction the hate crimes against persons with disabilities.

29.The Committee is concerned about prevailing violence, abuse and neglect against persons with disabilities, particularly women and children, and those with intellectual or psychosocial disabilities, within health care and corrective institutions. It is also concerned about the lack of effective measures to prevent violence, including sexual and gender-based violence, particularly in homes, institutions, communities and refugee camps where persons with disabilities live, and measures to monitor such prevention measures. It is also concerned about:

(a)The lack of effective protection and support services for persons with disabilities who are victims of exploitation, violence or abuse;

(b)The absence of concrete data on cases of violence and abuse against persons with disabilities;

(c)The lack of dedicated mechanisms for identifying, investigating and prosecuting instances of exploitation, violence and abuse against persons with disabilities;

(d)The lack of a direct ban on corporal punishment of children with disabilities in all settings.

30.The Committee recommends that the State party take all necessary measures to prevent and eliminate all forms of exploitation, violence and abuse against persons with disabilities, particularly women and children. It recommends that the State party ensure that members of the police, judiciary, health and social services receive regular and mandatory training on the prevention of violence and abuse of persons with disabilities. It also recommends that the State party:

(a)Adopt effective measures to ensure that persons with disabilities, who are victims of violence have access to accessible services and information, including hotlines, shelters, victim support services, consultation and counselling;

(b)Collect and publish data, disaggregated by sex and age, on violence and abuse against persons with disabilities in all settings, including the number of prosecutions, convictions and sentences imposed on the perpetrators;

(c)Establish accessible and inclusive complaints mechanisms that have a mandate to, inter alia, provide compensation and impose sanctions against perpetrators, in accordance with article 16 (3) of the Convention;

(d)Enact and enforce legislation which explicitly prohibits all corporal punishment of children, however light, in all settings, including the home and in institutions in accordance to target 16.2 on ending violence against children in the 2030 Sustainable Development Goals.

29.The Committee is concerned at:

(a)The absence of complaints of cases of exploitation, violence and abuse of adults and children with disabilities, which may point to insufficient knowledge among the population, particularly women, children and persons with psychosocial or intellectual disabilities, and those who are living in institutions, about their rights and the available measures to complain about discrimination;

(b)The absence of independent legal aid preventing the effective investigation, prosecution and punishment of instances of exploitation, violence and abuse against persons with disabilities in institutions;

(c)Inadequate services for the physical and psychological recovery and rehabilitation of persons with disabilities, particularly women and girls, survivors of exploitation, violence and abuse.

30. The Committee recommends that the State party implement the recommendations issued by the Saudi Human Rights Commission after visits made to detention centers, and that it:

- (a) Raise awareness on available complaint mechanisms and hotlines among persons and children with disabilities, including those living in institutions, guarantee the accessibility and availability of these mechanisms and effectively investigate, prosecute and punish cases of exploitation, violence and abuse of persons with disabilities, particularly of women, children and persons with psychosocial or intellectual disabilities and those who are living in institutions;
- (b) Guarantee the access of persons with disabilities victims of exploitation, violence and abuse in institutions to independent and accessible legal aid;
- (c) Reinforce efforts to ensure the access of persons with disabilities victims of any form of exploitation, violence or abuse, including in habilitation and residential centers, day-care centers and family homes, to age-, gender- and disability-sensitive physical, cognitive and psychological protection, recovery, rehabilitation and social reintegration services;
- (d) Collect disaggregated data and statistics on abuse, exploitation and violence against persons with disabilities, and on the outcomes of related complaints

Senegal (2019)

29. The Committee is concerned about:

- (a) The lack of specific legislation, policies and programmes to protect persons with disabilities, particularly women and girls with intellectual or psychosocial disabilities, persons with albinism and children with disabilities from all forms of violence, abuse and economic exploitation;
- (b) The lack of accessible information on access to counselling, redress, including compensation and rehabilitation;
- (c) The lack of mechanisms for identifying, investigating and prosecuting instances of exploitation, violence and abuse against persons with disabilities as well as lack of disaggregated data on related reports, investigations and prosecutions in line with article 16, paragraph 3.

30. The Committee recommends that the State party:

- (a) Adopt and implement legislation, policies and programmes to protect all persons with disabilities, particularly women and children with disabilities, persons with psychosocial or intellectual disabilities and persons with albinism from all forms of violence and abuse, including corporal punishment;
- (b) Promptly conduct investigations into incidences of exploitation, violence and abuse against persons with disabilities, prosecute suspects and duly sanction perpetrators and ensure that victims are provided with effective redress, including compensation and rehabilitation, and ensure that child victims have access to age- appropriate reporting channels which respect privacy, physical and psychological rehabilitation and health services, including mental health services;
- (c) Expedite the implementation of article 16, paragraph 3, and Act No. 2005-02 of 25 April 2005 on trafficking in persons.

Spain (2019)

31. The Committee is concerned about:

- (a) Persons with disabilities still living in institutions, and in particular women with intellectual or psychosocial disabilities, are exposed to higher risks of humiliation, abuse and violence including sexual violence;
- (b) The absence of concrete data, disaggregated by sex and age, on cases of violence and abuse committed in hospitals, particularly psychiatric hospitals, and places of detention;
- (c) Women with disabilities who are victims of gender-based violence, are in some cases excluded from support programmes due to the lack of accessibility of shelters and that a diagnosis of “mental impairment” may be considered as a criteria for denial of support services;

(d)The overall lack of a strategy to prevent and detect cases of gender-based violence for mental health services;

(e)The lack of official records and data on the situations of violence and discrimination to which persons with disabilities, particularly women, are exposed to in both the public and private spheres, including in the workplace and in specialized mental health institutions.

32.In light of the State party's efforts to end the institutionalisation of persons with disabilities, the Committee recommends that the State party:

(a)Take all possible measures to ensure that institutions currently operating in the State party ensure safety and dignity for all persons with disabilities;

(b) Strengthen the mechanisms and protocols already in place to prevent violence against and abuse of persons with disabilities, particularly women and girls, and to monitor, in line with article 16 (3) of the Convention, facilities and programmes designed to serve persons with disabilities;

(c)Ensure full access for all women with disabilities to assistance programs, including accessible shelters for victims of gender-based violence, and remove all eligibility criteria that may deny access to support services for women with psychosocial disabilities;

(d)Mainstream a gender perspective in policies related to mental health services and implement strategies aimed at prevention, detection and appropriate interventions in cases of gender-based violence;

(e)Collect data on and monitor the situation of violence and discrimination to which all women with disabilities are exposed, both in the public and private sphere, including in the workplace and in mental health services.

Türkiye (2019)

34. The Committee is concerned about:

(a)The absence of a strategy to identify situations of heightened risk of abuse and to address cases of gender-based violence against women and girls with disabilities, particularly in the family, residential facilities, and schools;

(b)The limited accessibility of shelters in particular the 'violence prevention and monitoring centers' by women with disabilities at risk or victims of different forms of gender-based violence;

(c)The lack of public and available information on the monitoring mechanism of the Ombudsman office (KDK) on institutions and its reports on findings as well as by the monitoring activities conducted by the Provincial Directorates, the Ministry of Family, Labor and Social Services, and the National Human Rights and Equality Institution.

35.The Committee recommends that the State party:

(a)Release regular information about gender-based violence against women and girls with disabilities, promote awareness raising and training from peers and from organizations of women with disabilities about situations of risk and violence, and allow the establishment of community networks that provide women and girls with disabilities with reporting mechanisms of violence that complement the 'Women support mobile application'. The State party should adopt clear legal and administrative safeguards and non-discriminatory measures to address all forms of gender-based violence against women and girls with disabilities, including sexual violence, and domestic violence;

(b)Increase human, technical and financial resources allocated for accessibility of shelters and, in consultation with civil society organizations, including organizations of women with disabilities, improve information available, identify remaining attitudinal, procedural and physical barriers to accessibility of shelters by women and girls with disabilities at risk or victims of different forms of gender-based violence;

(c)Ensure the functional, structural and financial independence of the National Human Rights and Equality Institution of Turkey, and that its duties as the national mechanism for the prevention of torture cover monitoring and prevention of torture in psychiatric hospitals and any other institution where persons with disabilities reside, in line with the provisions of article 16 (3) of the Convention.

28. The Committee is concerned at the incidence of violence and abuse against persons with disabilities, especially women and children, both in the home and in the community. In particular, it is concerned that:

- (a) The Family Protection Act, which is the legislative framework to protect victims of domestic violence, including persons with disabilities, is not aligned with the Convention;
- (b) The abuse and violence against children with disabilities, including corporal punishment;
- (c) Complaints mechanisms are inaccessible;
- (d) There is no mechanism for monitoring cases of violence against persons with disabilities and that the State party's intervention to domestic violence against persons with disabilities largely depends on the Vanuatu Women's Centre;
- (e) Violence and abuse against persons with disabilities are not properly investigated and that the perpetrators are not punished, including the fact that sexual abuse against women with disabilities, especially women with intellectual or psychosocial disabilities is dealt with through reconciliation in their village, which imposes a fine as a sanction against a perpetrator.

29. The Committee recommends that the State party:

- (a) Amend the Family Protection Act (2008) in line with the Convention and improve protection of persons with disabilities from violence and abuse against them;
- (b) Protect children with disabilities from all forms of violence and abuse, including through expediting the enactment of the Child Protection Bill, ensuring it is in line with the Convention to prohibit corporal punishment in all settings;
- (c) Establish accessible mechanisms for persons with disabilities to report violence and abuse against them and ensure that they know where to seek assistance;
- (d) Strengthen the capacity of the Vanuatu Women's Centre, as well as the Authorised Persons and Registered Counsellors under the Family Protection Act (2008) to protect and provide support to persons with disabilities and effectively monitor situations of persons who are victims of violence, particularly women;
- (e) Adopt measures to increase the capacity of the Family Protection Unit in the Police to investigate and prosecute perpetrators of violence against persons with disabilities, in particular against women and girls with psychosocial or intellectual disabilities.

Algeria (2018)

30. The Committee is concerned about the absence of complaints of cases of exploitation, violence and abuse of adults and children with disabilities, which does not necessarily mean that such cases do not occur. It is also concerned that:

- (a) There is no independent mechanism to investigate and monitor cases of exploitation, violence and abuse against persons with disabilities, in particular women and girls with disabilities and persons with psychosocial or intellectual disabilities still living in institutions;
- (b) Persons with disabilities still living in institutions do not have access to independent legal aid and are not offered alternative independent living services in the community;
- (c) Services for the physical and psychological recovery of survivors of exploitation, violence and abuse are not always accessible to persons with disabilities, particularly women and girls.

31. The Committee recommends that the State party increase measures to ensure the accessibility and availability of complaint and mechanisms and raise awareness among persons with disabilities, including children. It also recommends that the State party:

- (a) Establish an independent mechanism to investigate and combat exploitation and violence against persons with disabilities still living in institutions, in particular women and girls and persons with psychosocial and intellectual disabilities;
- (b) Introduce policy measures to allow persons with disabilities still living in institutions to access independent and accessible free legal advice and counseling to assert their rights and adopt measures to ensure the right of all persons with disabilities to independent living, support and inclusion in the community;

- (c) Adopt additional measures to ensure that all services for the physical and psychological recovery of survivors of exploitation, violence and abuse, including temporary shelters, are accessible to persons with disabilities, particularly women and girls;
- (d) Increase efforts to ensure recovery, rehabilitation, reintegration, empowerment and independence of persons with disabilities, survivors of exploitation, violence and abuse.

Bulgaria (2018)

37. The Committee is concerned about:

- (a) The lack of information on measures taken to protect persons with disabilities, especially women, girls and boys with disabilities, and persons still placed in institutions, from all forms of violence and abuse, and lack of disaggregated data;
- (b) The lack of sufficient coverage and accessible shelters and services for rehabilitation of women and girls with disabilities exposed to gender-based violence against women;
- (c) Risks of violence and abuse that persons with disabilities still face, and that some past instances of violence that resulted in death of persons with disabilities have not yet been properly investigated and perpetrators processed.

38. The Committee recommends that the State party:

- (a) Collect disaggregated data on persons with disabilities, especially women, girls and boys with disabilities, and persons still placed in institutions, exposed to violence.
- (b) Allocate human, technical and financial resources to improve accessibility of shelters and provide rehabilitation services for women and girls with disabilities exposed to gender-based violence against women;
- (c) Intensify its efforts to protect all persons with disabilities from exploitation, violence and abuse, including by conducting effective official investigations in all cases of alleged violence and abuse, and establishing working groups to give priority to the prosecution of cases of gender-based violence against women and girls with disabilities, and conviction of perpetrators;
- (d) Strengthen the mechanisms for independent monitoring of all facilities and programmes for persons with disabilities, in line with article 16 (3) of the Convention.

27. The Committee notes with concern that:

- (a) Persons with disabilities, in particular women and girls with disabilities, are subject to violence and abuse, including domestic violence, and that laws in this regard, including the Gender-Based Violence and Domestic Violence Act (Cap. 581), lack a disability perspective and monitoring mechanisms to detect, prevent and combat violence within and outside the home, especially where cases are not reported;
- (b) Shelters for persons exposed to violence are not fully accessible, including a lack of information in accessible formats and care for persons with disabilities, particularly persons with psychosocial and intellectual disabilities, in the shelters.

28. The Committee recommends that the State party:

- (a) Review the Gender-Based Violence and Domestic Violence Act (Cap. 581) to ensure that it has a disability perspective, to enact other relevant legislation, such as the planned Protection of Vulnerable Older Persons and Adult Persons with Disability Bill, and to ensure that the perpetrators of violence and abuse are prosecuted and given penalties commensurate to the gravity of their acts, if found guilty;
- (b) Ensure the availability of accessible and inclusive support services for the psychological and physical recovery of persons with disabilities subjected to violence.

Philippines (2018)

30. The Committee is concerned about:

- (a) The high level of violence against children with disabilities in family and schools, in particular reports of children subject to restraint in their homes, and the information about the cases of deaf girls and boys with disabilities victims of sexual violence, including rape and sexual assault by male teachers or principals in public and private schools, in absence of criminal prosecutions and conviction of perpetrators and redress mechanisms for victims;

- (b)The information about violence, including sexual violence against persons with disabilities who live in the streets;
- (c)The information about risks of trafficking faced by women with disabilities and violence on the Internet.

31.The Committee recommends that the State party:

- (a)Intensify its efforts to address domestic violence and abuse, including sexual exploitation of women and children with disabilities in the private sphere and ensure that persons with disabilities have access to independent complaints mechanisms and appropriate remedies to victims of abuse, such as redress and adequate compensation, including rehabilitation;
- (b)Adopt mechanisms to monitor all facilities and programmes designed to serve persons with disabilities with the aim to prevent violence, especially sexual violence against persons with disabilities, including children with disabilities, in line with article 16 (3) of the Convention;
- (c)Ensure that any strategies for the prevention of trafficking take into account and address the particular risks of women and girls with disabilities to different forms of trafficking and exploitation, and ensure that information and awareness raising concerning trafficking is provided in accessible formats and cover all urban and rural areas of the country.

Poland (2018)

28.The Committee is concerned about:

- (a)Accounts of violence against and abuse of persons with disabilities in care and psychiatric institutions, especially of women with intellectual disabilities;
- (b)Underreporting of violence against persons with disabilities in all settings, and the lack of disaggregated statistics on violence against them;
- (c)The lack of specific protection measures, including legal and psychosocial assistance for women with disabilities at risk of domestic, institutional violence and violence in public spaces and at work.

29.The Committee recommends to:

- (a)Implement legislative and practical measures, including independent human rights-based monitoring, to protect persons with disabilities who remain institutionalized and to eliminate any risk of violence or abuse;
- (b)Develop mechanisms for reporting violence against persons with disabilities in all settings, as well as to ensure disaggregated data collection on this issue;
- (c)Develop legal obligations and specific measures for protection of persons with disabilities victims of violence, including accessible communication hotlines as well as services for their psychological and physical recovery, especially for women with disabilities.

South Africa (2018)

30.The Committee notes with concern:

- (a)The lack of legislation, policies and programmes to protect all persons with disabilities, in particular women and girls with intellectual and/or psychosocial disabilities, and children with disabilities from all forms of violence and abuse, including corporal punishment, and the lack of accessible and age-friendly information on access to counselling, redress, including compensation and rehabilitation;
- (b)The lack of dedicated mechanisms for identifying, investigating and prosecuting instances of exploitation, violence and abuse against persons with disabilities as well as lack of disaggregated data on related reports, investigations and prosecutions in line with article 16, paragraph 3.

31.The Committee recommends that the State party:

- (a)Adopt and implement legislation, policies and programmes to protect all persons with disabilities, in particular women and girls with psychosocial and/or intellectual disabilities, and children with disabilities from all forms of violence and abuse, including corporal punishment, as well as expedite the implementation of article 16, paragraph 3, and the Prevention and Combating of Trafficking in Persons Act (2013);

(b) Investigate promptly and effectively incidents of violence against persons with disabilities, prosecute suspects and duly sanction perpetrators and that victims are provided with effective redress, including compensation and rehabilitation, and ensure that child victims have access to child-friendly reporting channels, physical and psychological rehabilitation and health services, including mental health services;

(c) Raise awareness about the 24-hour Gender-Based Violence Command Centre (GBVC), aimed at providing support and counselling to persons with disabilities and their families exposed to gender-based violence, and ensure its accessibility and the provision of accessible information and victim support services in all parts of the State party, in particular for women and children with disabilities.

North Macedonia (2018)

30. The Committee is concerned that the Law on Prevention and Protection against Domestic Violence is not explicit on the prohibition of exploitation, violence and abuse of persons with disabilities. Furthermore, the shelter centres for victims of family violence, including their services, are not accessible to persons with disabilities.

31. The Committee recommends that the State party take measures to:

(a) Review the existing legislations and policies to incorporate remedies and sanctions that prevent all forms of violence, abuse and ill-treatment, in public and the private spheres against persons with disabilities, in particular women, girls and children with psychosocial disabilities and or children with intellectual disabilities;

(b) Train shelter personnel and workers on the human rights-based approach to disability;

(c) Ensure that shelters centres for victims of violence and their services are accessible to persons with disability;

(d) Conduct investigations into all allegations of violence and abuse of persons with disabilities, especially those with psychosocial disabilities and/or intellectual disabilities, and suspicious causes of deaths of residents in institutions.

Haiti (2018)

30. The Committee notes with concern that persons with disabilities, particularly women and children face intersectional discrimination, abuse, exploitation, trafficking and violence, especially sexual assault and violence in institutions and in post-earthquake camps. It is particularly concerned by:

(a) The absence of laws on protection from violence with a disability perspective and of monitoring mechanisms to detect, prevent and combat violence within and outside the home;

(b) The lack of redress or compensation for victims, the inaccessibility of shelters for victims of domestic violence and insufficiency of health, psychosocial and legal services;

(c) Inadequate training of the staff, carers and families of persons with disabilities, health personnel and law enforcement officials to recognize all forms of exploitation, violence and abuse, particularly with respect to children with disabilities who are orphans and engaged in domestic work;

(d) The absence of concrete data, disaggregated by sex and age, of cases of violence and abuse against persons with disabilities, particularly regarding women and children;

(e) The absence of measures to protect and offer support to victims of gender-based violence against women and girls with disabilities in all contexts.

31. The Committee recommends that the State party adopt and develop a strategy with targeted time frames and adequate funding to provide security, health and safety for women and children with disabilities in post-earthquake camps. In particular, it recommends that the State party:

(a) Enact legislation, including monitoring mechanisms, to detect, prevent and combat violence within and outside the home of persons with disabilities, especially for women and children with disabilities;

(b) Ensure the availability of accessible and inclusive support services to those subjected to violence, including police reporting, independent complaints mechanisms, accessible shelters and other support services, and that all reported cases of abuse or violence are appropriately investigated, victims are legally entitled to and provided with redress and adequate compensation and perpetrators are prosecuted;

(c) Provide continuous training to families of persons with disabilities, their careers, health professionals and law enforcement officers to enable them to recognize all forms of exploitation, violence and abuse, and better communicate and work with persons with disabilities who are victims of violence;

(d) Collect and publish data on intersectional discrimination, abuse, exploitation, trafficking and violence including sexual violence towards women and children with disabilities and follow-up with national anti-violence initiatives, in close collaboration with persons with disabilities and their organizations, in order to design appropriate policy responses;

(e) Implement effective mechanisms to ensure that women and girls with disabilities who are victims of violence and abuse are protected and that they can benefit from medical care, psychological support and legal services to ensure their rehabilitation and their reintegration;

(f) In accordance with its general comment No. 3 (2016) on women and girls with disabilities and target 5.2 of the Sustainable Development Goals, take measures to end all forms of violence against women and girls with disabilities in both public and private spheres, including trafficking and sexual and other exploitation.

27. The Committee is concerned about the absence of any monitoring mechanism to collect disaggregated data on prosecution of cases of violence, abuse and exploitation of persons with disabilities; in particular data on the sexual exploitation and abuse of children and women with disabilities.

28. The Committee recommends that the State party take appropriate measures to protect persons with disabilities from exploitation, violence and abuse both within and outside the home.

31. The Committee is concerned about insufficient measures to prevent abuse and violence against persons with disabilities in the home, institutions, alternative care and day care settings, that corporal punishment of children is widespread in the State party and that there is insufficient awareness about complaint mechanisms and support services for victims.

32. The Committee recommends that the State party:

(a) Adopt and implement legislation, policies and programmes to protect all persons with disabilities, in particular women with intellectual and/or psychosocial disabilities, and children with disabilities from all forms of abuse and violence, including corporal punishment, in particular by stepping-up implementation of the national strategy for protecting children from all types of abuse s, and adopting the draft Regulations to the Child Act on female genital mutilation;

(b) Raise awareness about the telephone hotline to report cases of abuse, neglect and violence, and ensure that the e-service complaint mechanism is accessible and inclusive, raise-awareness about the complaint mechanism to persons with disabilities and their families, and ensure the provision of accessible information and victim support services in all parts of the State party, in particular for women and children with disabilities;

(c) Ensure that all cases in which persons with disabilities are exposed to abuse and violence, in particular children, are reported and fully investigated, that perpetrators are prosecuted and appropriately punished and that victims are provided with effective redress, including compensation and rehabilitation;

(d) Ensure regular training on preventing and addressing violence against persons with disabilities for all relevant authorities and other stakeholders, including law enforcement officials, judges, social workers, health professionals and teachers, as well as promote positive, non-violent and participatory forms of child-rearing and discipline as an alternative to corporal punishment, and expand parenting education programmes and support for families with children with disabilities.

36. The Committee is concerned about the reported physical and psychological violence against persons with disabilities, in particular persons with intellectual and/or psycho-social disabilities, including autistic persons, and children, with the use of physical and chemical restraints of such persons in institutions.

37. The Committee recommends that the State Party collect disaggregated data on persons with disabilities, especially women, boys and girls with disabilities, including those placed in institutions, who are exposed to violence and calls upon the State party to intensify efforts to protect all persons with disabilities from exploitation, violence and abuse. It also recommends that the State party investigate the reports of maltreatment and abuse of persons with disabilities, in particular children in institutions and bring those responsible for such maltreatment and abuse to justice.

27. The Committee is concerned at:

- (a) Allegations of physical, psychological and sexual violence and abuse of persons with disabilities, especially women with disabilities in family and in institutional settings;
- (b) The reported lack of measures of protection and redress to victims of violence, and the absence of sanctions against perpetrators;
- (c) The reported lack of monitoring and investigations in order to determine the causes of death of persons with disabilities in institutions and the absence of information on prosecutions on suspicion of criminal offenses and/or abandonment.

28. The Committee, in line with the commitment made by the State party in the Universal Periodic Review of Slovenia in 2014 (see A/HRC/28/15), and recalling the recommendations made by the Committee on the Elimination of Discrimination against Women (see CEDAW/C/SVN/CO/5-6, paras. 19 and 20) recommends that the State party:

- (a) Adopt a strategy to prevent all forms of violence, abuse and ill-treatment, in public and private spheres against persons with disabilities, in particular women with disabilities. The State party should ensure that such strategy includes information in Easy Read and other accessible formats, and awareness-raising for persons with disabilities and their families;
- (b) Provide persons with disabilities with early warning mechanisms that allow them to identify and report any situation of risk of violence, abuse and neglect. The State party should establish an expedite procedure to respond on allegations of violence by persons with disabilities and adopt preventive measures that are gender-sensitive and age-appropriate;
- (c) Ensure that women and girls with disabilities who are exposed to violence can access the network of shelters and crisis centres as well as legal, medical and psychological assistance, effective remedies and adequate compensation;
- (d) Ensure an investigation of all allegations of violence and abuse of persons with disabilities in institutions, expedite the investigation of suspicious causes of deaths of residents of institutions; providing redress to victims and sanction perpetrators. The State party should collect statistical data on the number of prosecutions and convictions and the sentences imposed on perpetrators.

Slovenia (2018)

27. The Committee is concerned at:

- (a) Allegations of physical, psychological and sexual violence and abuse of persons with disabilities, especially women with disabilities in family and in institutional settings;
- (b) The reported lack of measures of protection and redress to victims of violence, and the absence of sanctions against perpetrators;
- (c) The reported lack of monitoring and investigations in order to determine the causes of death of persons with disabilities in institutions and the absence of information on prosecutions on suspicion of criminal offenses and/or abandonment.

28. The Committee, in line with the commitment made by the State party in the Universal Periodic Review of Slovenia in 2014 (see A/HRC/28/15), and recalling the recommendations made by the Committee on the Elimination of Discrimination against Women (see CEDAW/C/SVN/CO/5-6, paras. 19 and 20) recommends that the State party:

- (a) Adopt a strategy to prevent all forms of violence, abuse and ill-treatment, in public and private spheres against persons with disabilities, in particular women with disabilities. The State party should ensure that such strategy includes information in Easy Read and other accessible formats, and awareness-raising for persons with disabilities and their families;
- (b) Provide persons with disabilities with early warning mechanisms that allow them to identify and report any situation of risk of violence, abuse and neglect. The State party should establish an expedite procedure to respond on allegations of violence by persons with disabilities and adopt preventive measures that are gender-sensitive and age-appropriate;
- (c) Ensure that women and girls with disabilities who are exposed to violence can access the network of shelters and crisis centres as well as legal, medical and psychological assistance, effective remedies and adequate compensation;
- (d) Ensure an investigation of all allegations of violence and abuse of persons with disabilities in institutions, expedite the investigation of suspicious causes of deaths of residents of institutions; providing redress to victims and sanction perpetrators. The State party should collect statistical data on the number of prosecutions and convictions and the sentences imposed on perpetrators.

33. The Committee is concerned about the absence of information on the investigation, prosecution and sanctioning of cases of violence against persons with disabilities.

34. The Committee recommends that the State party duly record, investigate, prosecute and sanction cases of violence against persons with disabilities throughout the criminal and judicial processes.

28. The Committee is concerned by:

- (a) The high number of deaths occurring in residential institutions of adults with intellectual and/or psychosocial disabilities and the lack of, first, information regarding any investigations that have been conducted to establish the cause of death and, second, prosecutions for criminal acts;
- (b) Allegations of violence and abuse, including sexual violence, of persons with disabilities living in institutions;
- (c) The excessive use of neuroleptic medication, poor living conditions, including insufficient nutrition, and limited meaningful activities in institutions.

29. The Committee recommends that the State party:

- (a) Promptly investigate all cases of death occurring in residential institutions for persons with intellectual and/or psychosocial disabilities, including allegations of violence and abuse, ensuring that the perpetrators of criminal acts are prosecuted and sanctioned;
- (b) Provide regular and mandatory training to staff working in institutions on the prevention of violence against, and abuse of, persons with disabilities;
- (c) Ensure independent human rights-based monitoring of all residential institutions in close collaboration with representative organizations of persons with disabilities in accordance with article 16 (3) of the Convention.

Luxembourg (2017)

32. The Committee is concerned that:

- (a) Persons with disabilities, in particular women and girls with disabilities, may be subject to violence and abuse, including domestic violence, and that laws in this regard, including the Domestic Violence Act of 2003, lack a disability perspective and lack monitoring mechanisms to detect, prevent and combat violence within and outside the home;
- (b) In cases of suspected abuse or violence, persons with disabilities receiving inpatient care in hospitals are not guaranteed legal protection through legal representation;
- (c) Statistical data of persons with disabilities victims of violence, sexual abuse or multiple discrimination is lacking.

33. The Committee recommends that the State party:

- (a) Review the Domestic Violence Act 2003 to ensure it has a disability perspective;
- (b) Enact legislation, including monitoring mechanisms, to detect, prevent and combat violence within and outside the home of persons with disabilities, especially for women and children with disabilities. It encourages the State party to expedite the ratification of the Convention on Preventing and Combating Violence against Women and Domestic Violence (Istanbul Convention);
- (c) Collect and publish disaggregated statistics on violence;
- (d) Ensure that all reported cases of abuse or violence are appropriately investigated, and perpetrators are prosecuted, and that all persons with disabilities receiving inpatient care in hospitals are guaranteed legal representation;
- (e) Ensure that members of the police, judiciary, health and social services receive regular and mandatory training on the prevention of violence and abuse of persons with disabilities;
- (f) Ensure the availability of accessible and inclusive support services to those subjected to violence, including police reporting, complaints mechanisms, shelters and other support measures;
- (g) Ensure the effective, independent human rights-based monitoring of all remaining residential institutions.

Montenegro (2017)

32. The Committee notes with concern that violence against persons with disabilities, particularly women and children, is prevalent and that effective measures to prevent violence, including sexual violence, in all settings and to monitor violence prevention, is lacking. It notes with concern that:

- (a) Relevant professional groups, such as social workers, teaching staff, medical staff and members of the judiciary, are insufficiently trained in the prevention of violence against persons with disabilities;
- (b) The State party does not collect and publish any data on violence against persons with disabilities.

33. The Committee recommends that the State party ensure the availability of accessible, effective and independent monitoring of facilities and programmes designed to serve persons with disabilities, and of complaint mechanisms, in accordance with article 16 (3) of the Convention, to enable the authorities to identify, investigate and prosecute all cases of violence against persons with disabilities. It also recommends that the State party:

- (a) Establish accessible and anonymous services for persons with disabilities who are experiencing violence, whether inside or outside the home, such as shelters, victim support services, hotlines and complaint mechanisms, including at the local level, and include therein a gender and a child rights perspective;
- (b) Provide training for all relevant professionals, particularly police officers, justice personnel, prison staff, social workers and health professionals, to ensure protection from and prevention of exploitation and abuse of and violence against persons with disabilities. The training should include effective reporting measures with a view to ensuring that persons who are exposed to violence are taken seriously and that investigation, prosecution and sanctioning of perpetrators are conducted effectively to prevent recurrence;
- (c) Conduct research and set up a system of collection and publication of data and statistics on violence against persons with disabilities, disaggregated by age, sex, type of violence and the setting of the act of violence.

Morocco (2017)

34. The Committee is concerned about:

- (a) Violence against and abuse of persons with disabilities, including the forcible use of children with disabilities in begging, and the rape of women, girls and children with disabilities in institutions, and about the absence of effective measures for compensation for and rehabilitation and social reintegration of victims of violence, particularly women and girls with disabilities;

(b) The absence of training for families, caregivers, health personnel and law enforcement officials on recognizing all forms of exploitation, violence and abuse, especially involving orphans, including in the labour market;

(c) The absence of concrete data, disaggregated by sex and age, on cases of violence and abuse committed in hospitals, particularly psychiatric hospitals, and places of detention, including on budgetary allocations aimed at making those institutions functional.

35. The Committee recommends that the State party:

(a) Adopt concrete and effective measures to ensure that persons with disabilities, especially women and girls with disabilities who are victims of gender-based violence and children with disabilities who are victims of ill-treatment, have access to services and information, including hotlines, shelters, victim support services, consultation and counselling, and to complaint mechanisms that have a mandate to, among other things, provide compensation and impose sanctions against perpetrators;

(b) Provide training for families, caregivers, health personnel and law enforcement officials on recognizing all forms of exploitation, violence and abuse, and communicate and work effectively with persons with disabilities who are victims of violence;

(c) Set up an independent mechanism to prevent violence against and abuse of persons with disabilities; monitor, in line with article 16 (3) of the Convention, facilities and programmes designed to serve persons with disabilities; and provide requisite budgetary allocations to ensure that such facilities and programmes are functional and effective.

38. The Committee is concerned at the incidence of exploitation, violence and abuse against persons with disabilities in the State party, especially women, children, Afrodescendants and indigenous persons. It is also concerned that so-called “safe havens” are used for long periods of time and thus come to resemble institutional settings.

39. The Committee urges the State party to take all necessary steps to prevent exploitation, violence and abuse against persons with disabilities, both inside and outside of the home. In addition, it recommends that the State party adopt measures to prevent so-called “safe havens” from being turned into institutions and becoming yet another barrier to the achievement of independent living by persons with disabilities and to their inclusion in society.

38. The Committee is concerned about abuse, ill-treatment, sexual violence and exploitation of women, children, intersex persons and elderly persons with disabilities, and the insufficient measures to prevent all forms of exploitation, violence and abuse against persons with disabilities. It is also concerned at reports of cases of disability hate crime, in the absence of consistent data collection and differences in legal provisions for sentencing different types of hate crime, particularly in England and Wales.

39. The Committee recommends that the State party, in close collaboration with organizations of persons with disabilities, and in line with target 16.3 of the Sustainable Development Goals:

(a) Establish measures to ensure equal access to justice and to safeguard persons with disabilities, particularly women, children, intersex persons and elderly persons with disabilities from abuse, ill-treatment, sexual violence and exploitation;

(b) Define comprehensively the offence of disability hate crime, and ensure appropriate prosecutions and convictions;

(c) Ensure that all facilities and programmes designed to serve persons with disabilities are effectively monitored by independent authorities, in accordance with article 16 (3) of the Convention.

Armenia (2017)

27. The Committee is concerned about the high incidence of violence and abuse of persons with disabilities in institutions, including reported cases of neglect resulting in the death of children and adults with disabilities. It is further concerned about the labour and sexual exploitation of persons with disabilities.

28. The Committee recommends that the State party take legislative and practical measures to protect persons with disabilities who remain institutionalized and prevent and combat neglect, violence, abuse and exploitation. It also recommends that the State party investigate cases of violence, abuse and exploitation of persons with disabilities, prosecute perpetrators and provide the staff of institutions with regular and mandatory training sessions on the prevention of such violence, abuse and exploitation. It also recommends that the State party ensure effective and independent human rights-based monitoring of all residential and specialized institutions in close collaboration with organizations of persons with disabilities.

30. The Committee is concerned about the lack of data on effective measures to prevent violence against persons with disabilities, especially women with disabilities, and violence against children with disabilities, including sexual violence, in all settings, and about the lack of mechanisms for making complaints against perpetrators and legal remedies.

31. The Committee recommends that the State party revise the monitoring and inspection of social care homes and psychiatric institutions to prevent violence against and abuse of persons with disabilities, and children with disabilities, in particular those still living therein. The Committee also recommends that the State party ensure that persons deprived of liberty have access to independent complaints mechanisms and that it provide appropriate remedies to victims of abuse, such as redress and adequate compensation, including rehabilitation.

33. The Committee is concerned about:

- (a) Different forms of violence against women and girls with disabilities, in particular indigenous women and women with psychosocial and/or intellectual disabilities;
- (b) Violence and abuse, including sexual violence, against children with disabilities, and the lack of mechanisms to access justice, remedies and redress;
- (c) The lack of information about measures to prevent violence against persons with disabilities in family settings and against persons living in institutions.

34. The Committee recommends that the State party:

- (a) Ensure that the federal strategy against gender-based violence includes provisions for medical, legal and social work interventions to address gender-based violence against women with disabilities;
- (b) Strengthen support and services for parents of children with disabilities in order to prevent abuse and violence;
- (c) Set up a mechanism to monitor federal-, provincial- and territorial-level facilities and programmes designed to serve persons with disabilities, in accordance with article 16 (3) of the Convention.

Cyprus (2017)

39. The Committee is concerned about the insufficiency of legal provisions and accessible mechanisms to detect, report, prevent and combat all forms of violence, including sexual violence in private and public spheres against persons with disabilities, including children.

40. The Committee recommends that the State party strengthen and implement legislation and provide for accessible monitoring and reporting mechanisms to detect, prevent and combat all forms of violence, including sexual violence, against persons with disabilities in all settings, including all types of institutions, with a particular focus on women and children with disabilities. It also recommends that the State party ensure capacity-building among employees within the judiciary, police, health and social sectors to ensure accessible and inclusive support services, including confidential complaint mechanisms, as well as shelters and other support measures. The Committee furthermore recommends that the State party, without further delay, ratify and implement the Council of Europe Convention on Preventing and Combating Violence against Women and Domestic Violence (the Istanbul Convention).

41. Al Comité le preocupan los casos de maltrato físico y/o psicológico, violencia sexual y/o explotación y abuso cometidos contra las personas con discapacidad, especialmente mujeres, niños y niñas, afrohondureños e indígenas, incluyendo la explotación a través de la mendicidad, así como la ausencia de medidas para su protección, recuperación y reparación de daños. Le preocupa también que los casos de estas personas no se investiguen debidamente y que, en consecuencia, los autores de tales hechos permanezcan en la impunidad.

42. El Comité recomienda que se adopten todas las medidas necesarias para prevenir y proteger a todas las personas con discapacidad de la explotación, la violencia y el abuso, incluyendo la explotación a través de la mendicidad, así como para asegurar la debida recuperación de las víctimas en entornos adecuados para ellas. Asimismo, recomienda investigar debidamente todos los casos de explotación, violencia y abuso cometidos contra personas con discapacidad, especialmente mujeres, niños y niñas, afrohondureños e indígenas, a fin de garantizar que sean detectados, investigados y, en su caso, juzgados.

34. The Committee is concerned about:

- (a) The lack of information about measures to prevent exploitation, violence and abuse, including gender-based violence against women and children with disabilities;
- (b) The absence of information about prosecutions and convictions in cases of exploitation, violence and abuse against persons with disabilities; and
- (c) The absence of remedies and redress for all persons with disabilities who have faced any form of exploitation, violence and abuse, including psychosocial counselling, reparations, and compensation.

35. The Committee recommends that the State party:

- (a) Adopt a strategy to prevent and combat all forms of exploitation, violence, and abuse against persons with disabilities, including through early identification of instances of exploitation, and specific risks of gender-based violence against women and children with disabilities;
- (b) Strengthen its efforts aimed at ensuring that religious leaders participate in strategies to prevent any form of exploitation, violence and abuse against persons with disabilities;
- (c) Introduce guidelines for private non-governmental organizations about how to file complaints in cases of exploitation, violence and abuse, including gender-based sexual violence against women and girls with disabilities;
- (d) Set-up a comprehensive data collection system on cases of exploitation, violence and abuse, disaggregated by age, sex, gender, ethnic background, and type of impairment; and
- (e) Enforce article 66 of the Criminal Procedure Code and ensure prosecutions and convictions in cases of violence against persons with disabilities. Provide early recovery, legal remedies, counselling and accessible services for victims.

Jordan (2017)

33. The Committee is concerned that articles 8 and 62 of the Criminal Code (Law No. 16 of 1960), which refers to “discipline and what is permitted by law and allowed by customs”, may in practice be used to justify acts of violence against women, girls and boys with disabilities.

34. The Committee recommends that the State party:^[1]_[SEP]

- (a) Repeal articles 8 and 62 of the Criminal Code to fully prohibit corporal punishment;
- (b) Mainstream a disability-rights perspective in the work of the National Taskforce on Protection against Family Violence of 2016 and in the new draft law on protection against family violence.

Republic of Moldova (2017)

32. The Committee is concerned by reported cases of violence and abuse of persons with disabilities in institutions, including cases of neglect resulting in the deaths of children and adults with disabilities and cases of gender-based violence against women with disabilities.

33. The Committee urges the State party to:

(a) Implement legislative and practical measures, which take into account gender and age considerations, to protect persons with disabilities who remain institutionalized and to eliminate any risk of neglect, violence or abuse;

(b) Ensure that all reported cases are effectively investigated and that perpetrators are prosecuted;

(c) Provide regular and mandatory training to staff in institutions on the prevention of violence and abuse of persons with disabilities;

(d) Ensure effective, independent human rights-based monitoring of all residential institutions.

Bolivia (2016)

41. The Committee is concerned that current legislation to combat violence does not recognize the specific forms of violence against persons with disabilities. It is further concerned that:

(a) There is a shortage of information on the situation with regard to violence against women and children with disabilities, and no records of acts of violence against them;

(b) There are no measures in place to prevent exploitation of persons with disabilities through begging, and no programmes for the rescue and compensation of victims;

(c) The lack of accessibility of programmes and institutions intended to provide protection against violence, exploitation and abuse.

42. The Committee recommends that the State party amend its legislation against violence to include the disability, gender and age perspectives. It also recommends that the State party adopt a due diligence framework of social and penal measures to combat exploitation of persons with disabilities through begging, and that it set up and maintain accessible programmes for the rescue, redress and comprehensive rehabilitation of victims; measures should include social protection, access to justice with a gender and age focus, and psychosocial support.

44. The Committee is concerned at the high levels of violence caused by the armed conflict, which have significantly affected women and girls with disabilities, including civilians and former combatants, displaced women with disabilities, and victims of the conflict, for instance, as a result of anti-personnel mines or paramilitary activity, particularly in rural and remote areas. It is particularly concerned that such acts are tried in military courts.

45. The Committee recommends that the State party:

(a) Identify women and girls with disabilities, both civilians and former combatants, who were the victims of sexual violence during the conflict;

(b) Investigate and initiate proceedings in civilian courts to determine the criminal liability of the military and self-defence groups in cases of sexual violence against women and girls with disabilities during the armed conflict and in the period of transition towards peace;

(c) Give priority to programmes for preventing, eliminating and recovering from violence against women and girls with disabilities in conflict areas, as well as the return of displaced populations.

35. The Committee is concerned about ineffective reporting and complaints mechanisms in which the testimony of persons with disabilities who are subjected to violence is not considered reliable and therefore not admissible, and about the lack of implementation of provisions that address violence, exploitation and abuse against persons with disabilities.

36. The Committee urges the State party to strengthen the protection of persons with disabilities against violence, exploitation and abuse, particularly women and girls, by:

- (a) Adopting a due diligence framework to combat impunity in cases of violence;
- (b) Establishing inclusive and accessible victim support services, including accessible hotlines, shelters and reporting and complaints mechanisms that accept their testimonies;
- (c) Introducing awareness-raising and training for, inter alia, police, health professionals and social workers on supporting persons with disabilities who are subjected to violence;
- (d) Collecting information disaggregated by gender, age and disability, among other factors, with the necessary budget allocation.

Guatemala (2016)

45. The Committee is deeply concerned that many persons with disabilities, especially women and children, frequently fall victim to exploitation, violence and abuse and that there are no measures for their protection, rehabilitation or compensation. It is also concerned that instances of exploitation, violence and abuse committed against such persons, especially within the family or in institutions, are not properly investigated and that the perpetrators therefore go unpunished.

46. The Committee recommends that the State party redouble its efforts and adopt a due diligence framework and all the necessary measures in its laws and policies to protect persons with disabilities from exploitation, violence and abuse and to ensure the proper recovery of victims in an appropriate environment. It also recommends the inclusive and accessible provision of support for victims, the implementation of a complaint mechanism and the provision of training for police, the judiciary, social workers and health professionals. In addition, the Committee urges the State party to investigate properly all instances of exploitation, violence and abuse committed against persons with disabilities, particularly against women and children, in order to ensure that they are identified, investigated and, where appropriate, prosecuted. Lastly, the Committee requests the State party to periodically compile data and statistics on the situation of persons with disabilities in respect of violence, exploitation and abuse, including information on trafficking, incest and femicide.

47. The Committee is concerned by the lack of protocols for the registration of orphanages, hospitals, prisons, shelters and other public or private residential centres for persons with disabilities and the monitoring of conditions there.

48. The Committee recommends that the State party set up an independent monitoring mechanism, in line with article 16 (3) of the Convention, to register and oversee conditions in residential institutions for persons with disabilities.

43. The Committee is concerned at the lack of legal provisions and monitoring mechanisms to detect, prevent and combat violence within and outside the home.

44. The Committee recommends that the State party enact legislation, including monitoring mechanisms, to detect, prevent and combat violence within and outside the home of persons with disabilities, especially for women and children with disabilities, and that it produce an action plan to implement the Council of Europe Convention on preventing and combating violence against women and domestic violence (the Istanbul Convention), which specifically address women and girls with disabilities. It also recommends that the State party ensure that members of the police, judiciary, health and social services receive training, and the availability to those subjected to violence of accessible and inclusive support services, including police reporting, complaints mechanisms, shelters and other support measures.

39. El Comité nota con preocupación la insuficiente implementación de las medidas previstas para eliminar la violencia contra las mujeres con discapacidad en las políticas del Estado parte sobre discapacidad. Además, le preocupa que otras personas con discapacidad, especialmente los niños y niñas y las personas que viven en instituciones, no cuenten con los suficientes mecanismos de protección contra la violencia y el abuso.

40. El Comité recomienda al Estado parte que redoble esfuerzos y adopte todas las medidas necesarias en su legislación y en sus políticas para garantizar la prevención y protección a todas las personas con discapacidad de la explotación, la violencia y el abuso, así como para asegurar la debida recuperación de las víctimas en entornos adecuados para ellas. Además, el Comité le insta a investigar debidamente todos los casos de explotación, violencia y abuso cometidos contra personas con discapacidad en el Estado parte, -fundamentalmente contra mujeres, niños y niñas- a fin de garantizar que todos los casos sean detectados, investigados y, en su caso, juzgados. Por último, el Comité solicita al Estado parte la recopilación periódica de datos y estadísticas sobre la situación de las personas con discapacidad ante la violencia, la explotación y el abuso.

41. Al Comité le preocupa la ausencia de protocolos para llevar registro, control y supervisión de las condiciones en que operan las instituciones donde viven personas con discapacidad.

42. El Comité insta al Estado parte a establecer el mecanismo independiente de seguimiento de acuerdo con el artículo 16, párrafo 3 de la Convención, que registre, controle y supervise las condiciones en que opera cualquier centro donde vivan personas con discapacidad.

39. Al Comité le preocupa que la legislación y las políticas de prevención y protección contra la violencia no incluyan a las mujeres y niñas con discapacidad. Particularmente le preocupa la ausencia del enfoque diferencial dados los mayores riesgos a los que se enfrentan por su situación de discapacidad, de violencia sexual, incesto, maltrato físico y verbal, abandono y negligencia. También preocupa al Comité que no se cuente con un mecanismo independiente de protección y supervisión, ni con registros de los casos de violencia.

40. El Comité recomienda al Estado parte que incluya a mujeres, niñas, niños y personas mayores con discapacidad en las políticas de protección contra la violencia, que consideren el enfoque de género, discapacidad y edad. Asimismo, solicita la designación de un mecanismo independiente de supervisión que también registre los casos denunciados y lleve a cabo monitoreo de los prestadores de servicios.

32. The Committee is concerned about reported violence and unwarranted restriction of freedom of movement, including isolation, as a form of punishment in social care and psychiatric institutions.

33. The Committee recommends that the State party:

(a) Improve monitoring and inspection of social care homes and psychiatric institutions to prevent violence against and abuse of residents with disabilities;

(b) Ensure that persons deprived of their liberty have access to independent complaints mechanisms;

(c) Provide adequate remedies to victims of abuse, such as redress and adequate compensation, including rehabilitation.

34. The Committee is concerned by:

(a) The high number of reports of women, boys and girls with intellectual and psychosocial disabilities facing violence and abuse, including sexual abuse, at institutions and at home;

(b) The lack of targeted measures such as the provision of accessible victim support services, including shelters and complaints and reporting mechanisms;

(c) The absence of independent monitoring authorities assigned to comply with article 16 (3) of the Convention;

(d) The lack of statistical data on exploitation, violence, trafficking and abuse in homes, schools, institutions, hospitals and prisons disaggregated by, among others, sex, age and disability.

35. The Committee recommends that the State party strengthen the protection of persons with disabilities, particularly women and girls with disabilities, against violence, exploitation and abuse, as recommended by the Committee on the Elimination of Discrimination against Women (CEDAW/C/LTU/CO/4), by establishing inclusive and accessible victim support services, including accessible hotlines, shelters and complaints and reporting mechanisms. The Committee also recommends that the State party strengthen awareness-raising efforts and the training of police officers, health professionals and social workers, among others, with a view to supporting persons with disabilities who have been affected by violence.

36. The Committee recommends that the State party adopt and allocate sufficient funds to awareness-raising measures, that it collect disaggregated data and that it designate independent authorities to monitor services and facilities.

Portugal (2016)

34. The Committee notes with concern that despite State party legislation and the measures taken to protect persons with disabilities, and especially women and children, from exploitation, violence and abuse, these have not been sufficient.

35. The Committee recommends that the State party, in consultation with organisations of persons with disabilities, explicitly include the disability perspective in its legislation, strategies and programmes to prevent exploitation, violence and abuse, including the Law on domestic violence (Law 112/2009), and step up intensifying measures to protect persons with disabilities, and especially women and children, including the continuation of police training, prosecutors and judges in the implementation of a due diligence framework.

47. The Committee is concerned that measures to protect persons with disabilities from violence both within and outside the home are insufficient.

48. The Committee recommends that the State party ensure that legislation and policies on the protection of persons from violence incorporate specific references to persons with disabilities, including accessible reporting, victim support services and complaints mechanisms, and specialized training for the police, judges and prosecutors. It also recommends that the State party ensure that due diligence is applied in all cases of violence and abuse of persons with disabilities, particularly women, girls, boys and older persons.

33. The Committee is concerned about the situation of persons with disabilities living in poverty, who are often at risk of exploitation and abuse, including begging and human trafficking for labour and sexual exploitation. It is also concerned about violence against and abuse of persons with disabilities, particularly girls and women with disabilities, and regrets the absence of a disability perspective in policies for protection from violence, abuse and exploitation.

34. The Committee recommends that the State party develop a strategy for the protection of persons with disabilities, especially women and girls, from violence, abuse and exploitation, inside and outside the home environment. It also recommends that the State party take the measures necessary to prevent persons with disabilities from exploitation through begging and human trafficking and to strengthen the general perception of the importance of human dignity. It further recommends that the State party guarantee that all persons with disabilities, particularly women and girls, have access to justice when they have been subjected to violence, abuse or exploitation.

30. The Committee is concerned about:

- (a) Cases of violence and abuse against persons with disabilities in particular the higher risk of women, girls and boys with disabilities, including deaf-blind women and children, of facing physical and sexual violence both in family settings and in institutions;
- (b) Abandonment, malnutrition and exploitation through the use of children with disabilities for begging;
- (c) The lack of accessibility of information and services available for women with disabilities, including hotlines, shelters, victim support services and complaints mechanisms;
- (d) The absence of mechanisms for monitoring institutions where persons with disabilities have been placed.

31. The Committee recommends that the State party:

- (a) Adopt measures to ensure that women with disabilities who are victims of gender-based violence have access to both accessible services and information, including hotlines, shelters, victim support services and complaint mechanisms;
- (b) Implement legislation and a due diligence framework to combat impunity concerning violence, exploitation and abuse through the opening of investigations and providing for sanctions for perpetrators as well as redress for victims of violence;
- (c) Provide training to the police, judiciary, health professionals and other interlocutors to communicate and work effectively with persons with disabilities who are victims of violence;
- (d) Set up an independent mechanism to monitor the conditions in all facilities designed to serve persons with disabilities, in accordance with article 16 (3) of the Convention.

Brazil (2015)

32. The Committee is concerned at the lack of dedicated mechanisms for identifying, investigating and prosecuting instances of exploitation, violence and abuse against persons with disabilities. The Committee also regrets the lack of disaggregated data on reports, investigations and prosecutions of abuse, exploitation and violence against women, men, girls and boys with disabilities.

33. The Committee recommends the State party to ensure the availability of accessible, effective and independent monitoring of facilities and programmes designed to serve persons with disabilities, and complaint mechanisms in alignment with article 16(3) to ensure that authorities can identify, investigate and prosecute all cases of violence against persons with disabilities. It also recommends to ensure that the Public Ministry and the attorney offices for persons with disabilities investigate cases related to violence and exploitation of persons with disabilities by allocating the necessary human, technical and financial resources. The Committee recommends that the State party collect disaggregated data and statistics on reports by persons with disabilities of abuse, exploitation and violence, and their outcomes.

44. The Committee is concerned that persons with disabilities, especially women, girls and boys, and older persons with disabilities are subjected to violence, abuse and exploitation, especially in institutional settings.

45. The Committee recommends that the European Union take necessary measures to mainstream disability in all legislation, policies and strategies for combatting violence, abuse and exploitation, and to provide effective protection from violence, abuse and exploitation to all persons with all types of disabilities inside and outside of the home.

38. The Committee is concerned that there is no law on violence against women, and women and girls with disabilities are not included in the process of consultation regarding proposed legislation on the matter and that frequently they are considered not to be credible witnesses by families, communities and the authorities leading to low reporting and investigation rates. The Committee is further concerned about the lack of accessible services for persons with disabilities experiencing violence, the lack of training of interlocutors working with those experiencing violence to raise their awareness about the rights of persons with disabilities, and the reluctance by authorities to open investigations and prosecutions, which lead to impunity of perpetrators.

39. The Committee recommends drafting and adopting new legislation on violence against women in line with (CEDAW/C/GAB/CO/6, para. 11), which specifically addresses women and girls with disabilities, and includes them in the consultation and drafting process. Furthermore, the Committee recommends establishing accessible services for persons with disabilities experiencing violence, such as shelters, victim support services, hotlines and complaint mechanisms including in rural areas. It also recommends the training of police, justice personnel, staff providing custodial care in prison or other places of detention, social workers, health professionals and other interlocutors to ensure protection from and prevention of exploitation, violence and abuse of persons with disabilities including on effective reporting channels with a view to ensuring that all interlocutors take victims seriously and provide support when requested, and that investigations, prosecutions and sanctioning of perpetrators are conducted effectively to prevent recurrence .

31. The Committee is concerned about:

- (a) Cases of violence and abuse against persons with disabilities in particular the higher risk of women, girls and boys with disabilities to face physical and sexual violence both in family settings and in institutions;
- (b) Exploitation of children with disabilities through begging, particularly in urban areas; and
- (c) The limited coverage of Gender Violence Recovery Centers and the lack of information on accessibility of women with disabilities to temporary shelters.

32. The Committee recommends that the State party:

- (a) Design and implement a strategy with adequate funding for the protection of persons with disabilities, particularly women and children with disabilities, from exploitation, violence and abuse. Such strategy must include prevention, early recovery, legal remedies including compensation and reparation, and accessible services and counselling for victims;
- (b) Set up an independent mechanism to monitor the conditions in all facilities designed to serve persons with disabilities, in accordance with article 16 (3) of the Convention;
- (c) Take the necessary measures to prevent children with disabilities from falling into exploitation by begging and create programmes at national, county and municipal levels for their rehabilitation, recovery and inclusion in family and community life; and
- (d) Ensure that Gender Violence Recovery Centers are established throughout the country and that are accessible for women with disabilities, and collect information about women with disabilities who have been benefited from the services at such centers.

Mauritius (2015)

27. The Committee is concerned that limited measures have been taken to prevent and combat violence and abuse against persons with disabilities, especially sexual abuse of children with disability, which takes place, including within the family. The Committee is also concerned about reports indicating abuse and neglect of boys and girls placed in some NGO-run institutions. The Committee is further concerned that persons with disabilities who are subjected of violence and especially boys and girls hardly get any help to escape abusive situations and that the abuse does not lead up to prosecution.

28. The Committee urges the State party to take urgent measures to prevent violence against women, men, girls and boys with disabilities, to protect those who are subjected to violence and to ensure that perpetrators are brought to justice. The State party should in particular:

- (a) Provide fully funded, accessible helplines and shelters for persons with disabilities who experience violence, whether inside or outside the home;
- (b) Provide specific training for all respective personnel to detect and report violence against persons with disabilities;
- (c) Ensure that persons with disabilities, who are subjected to violence, have access to effective remedies and receive all the necessary support for their mental and physical recovery.

Qatar (2015)

31. The Committee is concerned about the lack of:

- (a) A specific law criminalizing domestic violence, which often goes unreported;
- (b) A disability perspective in policies for protection from violence, abuse and exploitation;
- (c) Data on the protection of persons with disabilities, especially women and girls, from exploitation, violence and abuse.

32. The Committee reiterates the recommendations by the Committee on the Elimination of Discrimination against Women (CEDAW/C/QAT/CO/1, para. 24) and recommends that the State party:

- (a) Establish a comprehensive domestic violence protection system, as envisaged in the National Development Strategy 2011-2016 and adopt specific legislation to criminalize all forms of violence against women and girls, mainstreaming the rights and needs of women and girls with disabilities therein, including through consulting with their representative organizations;

(b) Develop policies for protection from violence, abuse and exploitation, mainstream the disability perspective within it and step up measures to protect persons with disabilities, especially women and girls, from exploitation, violence and abuse;

(c) Guarantee the provision of accessible information and victim support services that are sufficient in number and location and accessible, in particular for women and girls with disabilities;

(d) Collect data on violence against persons with disabilities, especially women and conduct research on the issue.

Ukraine (2015)

32. The Committee is concerned about the various forms of abuse, including those that can amount to cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment against persons with disabilities, particularly boys and girls in condition of institutionalization.

33. The Committee recommends that the State Party evaluate the impact and effectiveness of its training programs for the prevention and absolute prohibition of torture and ill-treatment according to the concluding observations of the Committee against Torture (CAT/C/UKR/CO/6-PARA 18 (e)). These training programs should incorporate, explicitly, the prevention of cruel, inhuman or degrading treatment against persons with disabilities.

29. The Committee is concerned that current legislation regarding domestic violence uses derogatory language, and does not ensure women and girls with disabilities are protected on an equal basis with others. It is also concerned that it does not provide accessible helplines or shelters, or training for health professionals, counsellors and police unit personnel to work with women and girls with disabilities.

30. The Committee recommends that the State party:

(a) Provide fully funded, accessible helplines and shelters for women with disabilities who experience violence both inside and outside the home.

(b) Provide specific training to health professionals, counsellors and personnel working in the Police Family Violence Unit to work with women and girls with disabilities victims of violence.

31. The Committee is concerned that current law authorises the use of force against children with disabilities 'by way of correction'.

32. The Committee recommends that the State party replace laws to prohibit all corporal punishment so children with disabilities are legally protected from all punitive assault including in the home.

33. The Committee is concerned about the lack of safeguards to prevent financial and psychological abuse of persons with disabilities by their "caregivers" as well as the lack of resources available to provide support services to persons with disabilities who are victims of violence.

34. The Committee recommends that the State party introduce appropriate caregiver training, safeguards and monitoring to prevent abuse of the Disability Allowance by "caregivers"; as well as the provision of resources for professional and accessible information and services for victims of violence and abuse, especially in remote areas.

25. The Committee is concerned that mainstream services for victims of violence are not generally accessible to persons with disabilities, and that in particular women, girls and boys with disabilities are left unprotected. It is also concerned that, with the exception of the State Commission for the Protection of Persons with Mental Disorders, there is no independent monitoring mechanism in line with article 16 (3) for programmes and facilities serving persons with disabilities.

26. The Committee recommends that the State party mainstream services aimed at the protection of persons with disabilities from violence and that it make such services fully accessible. Furthermore, monitoring mechanisms should be developed in line with article 16 (3) of the Convention.

34. The Committee notes with concern the lack of disability perspective in policies for protection from violence, abuse and exploitation and lack of data on protection of persons with disabilities, especially women and girls with disabilities, from exploitation, violence and abuse.

35. The Committee urges the State party to mainstream disability perspective in the existing policies and to step up measures to protect persons with disabilities, especially women and girls with disabilities, from exploitation, violence and abuse, including the safe and supportive community-based service, by collecting data on violence against persons with disabilities and conducting research on the issue.

Dominican Republic (2015)

32. The Committee is concerned at the lack of information on trafficking in persons with disabilities, particularly children with disabilities, who are victims of exploitation through begging, and at the lack of information concerning incest. It is also concerned at the fact that women and girls with disabilities have little physical access to, or information and communication about, mechanisms for protection against all forms of physical, sexual, economic and other violence, including in shelters. The Committee is likewise concerned at the lack of an independent monitoring mechanism to protect persons with disabilities from exploitation, violence and abuse.

33. The Committee recommends that the State party:

(a) Investigate the situation of persons with disabilities, especially children with disabilities, who are abandoned and/or begging, and take the necessary measures for their rehabilitation, recovery and inclusion in family and community life;

(b) Design and implement mechanisms for the protection of persons with disabilities, particularly women and children with disabilities, from exploitation, violence and abuse, particularly incest, by ensuring that they have access to information and communication, to mechanisms for submitting complaints and recording such violations of their rights, and to shelters and measures for psychosocial recovery and reintegration into the community;

(c) Appoint an independent authority to promote the protection of persons with disabilities from exploitation, violence and abuse, in accordance with article 16, paragraph 3, of the Convention.

35. The Committee is concerned about the lack of: a) The appointment of an independent monitoring authority to investigate violence and abuse of persons with disabilities both in and outside institutions where they face increased risks; b) Independent complaint mechanisms inside institutions; c) permanent State funding to protect women against violence.

36. The Committee recommends that the State party provide a comprehensive and effective strategy with adequate funding to ensure that women and girls with disabilities are effectively protected against violence in all public and private settings. It also recommends that the State party immediately establish or designate an independent body or bodies in accordance with Article 16 para. 3 and ensure independent complaint handling in institutions.

27. The Committee is concerned about information in the State party pointing to the high rates of violence, abuse and exploitation of persons with disabilities, particularly women and girls with disabilities, and the lack of protection mechanisms against these human rights violations.

28. The Committee recommends the State party to:

(a) Make protection mechanisms, including shelters and legal redress, accessible to persons with disabilities, particularly women and girls, who face exploitation, violence and abuse; and

(b) Appoint an independent authority to monitor and protect persons with disabilities from exploitation, violence and abuse, in accordance with article 16.3 of the Convention.

Turkmenistan (2015)

33. The Committee is concerned about the insufficient measures to prevent violence against person with disabilities in all settings, and protect the victims, in particular women and children with disabilities.

34. The Committee recommends that the State party:

(a) Ensure the availability and accessibility of effective independent monitoring and complaint mechanisms in order to help the authorities to investigate and prosecute all cases of violence against persons with disabilities, in particular women and children;

(b) Collect disaggregated data on cases of violence against persons with disabilities, in particular in institutions;

(c) Provide accessible shelters, hotlines and information for victims of violence and abuse, and training for law enforcement officers and the judiciary.

New Zealand (2014)

35. The Committee notes the programmes under the Domestic Violence Act 2013 to assist persons with disabilities who suffer violence – especially women, girls and boys with disabilities. However, the Committee is concerned that it is unclear whether the Act protects persons with disabilities experiencing abuse in home-care/live-in support situations, and whether the definition of a domestic relationship includes relationships between persons with disabilities and other resident service users, their caregivers, and other support staff.

36. The Committee recommends that the State party strengthen these programmes and initiatives to protect persons with disabilities, especially those living in institutions, from violence and harm, and that it ensure that a system is put in place to detect and respond effectively to cases of abuse. It also recommends that the State Party ensure that legislation, policy and practice relating to domestic violence covers persons with disabilities in the domestic situations that they encounter.

40. The Committee is concerned at reports showing the level of abuse, exploitation and violence, including domestic violence, to which various categories of persons with disabilities are being exposed, and at the limited number of shelters accessible to victims of such acts, as well as the lack of training of police and other interlocutors. The Committee is also concerned about the lack of available disaggregated data on the reports of abuse, exploitation and violence by persons with disabilities, and on their outcomes.

41. The Committee recommends that the Governments of Denmark, the Faroe Islands and Greenland ensure that violence and abuse against all persons with disabilities is duly reported and investigated; that the necessary support for victims is available, including accessible hotlines, shelters, services and complaints mechanisms; and that the issue is addressed in national training courses for personnel working in health and medical care, schools, the police force and the judiciary. The Committee also recommends that the Governments collect disaggregated data and statistics on the reports of abuse, exploitation and violence by persons with disabilities, and on their outcomes.

31. The Committee is concerned that persons with disabilities continue to face violence, abuse and exploitation, including forced labour. It is also concerned about the failure of the State party to punish the perpetrators and provide reparation to the victims, and about the absence of shelters for persons with disabilities other than those who are victims of sexual and domestic violence.

32. The Committee urges the State party to investigate all cases of violence, exploitation and abuse experienced by persons with disabilities both inside and outside institutional settings; to ensure that the perpetrators are punished and the victims receive reparation; and to provide accessible shelters for persons with disabilities who are victims. The Committee recommends, in particular, that the State party strengthen its investigations into the incidents of forced labour of persons with disabilities and provide the victims with adequate protection.

30. The Committee is concerned about the lack of protection for women, children and girls with disabilities against violence and abuse. It is also concerned about the absence of protocols to register, monitor and track the conditions in institutions that care for persons with disabilities, particularly those that care for older persons with disabilities.

31. The Committee urges the State party to take measures to prevent and eliminate all forms of domestic or institutional violence against women, children and girls with disabilities. It also calls for the drafting and introduction of protocols to register, monitor and track the conditions in institutions that care for persons with disabilities, particularly those that care for older persons with disabilities.

30. The Committee is concerned about: (a) The high level of pregnancy among adolescents and young people aged between 12 and 19 years, according to the most recent population and housing census of 2010, and the fact that the age at which most women with disabilities reportedly had their first child was between 15 and 19 years old, which is indicative of a high incidence of sexual abuse of women with disabilities, particularly with intellectual disabilities; (b) The absence of appropriate mechanisms to detect situations of violence against persons with disabilities, especially women with intellectual disabilities, both within families and in institutions for persons with disabilities; (c) The fact that specific mechanisms have not yet been established for the effective social inclusion of and prevention of violence against children and adolescents with disabilities living in institutions, where they can remain until the age of 18. Enclosed spaces are likely to give rise to situations of violence towards, and the neglect and abuse of, children and adolescents.

31. The Committee recommends that the State party: (a) Launch a training programme on the sexual and reproductive rights of persons with disabilities, targeted specifically at women with intellectual disabilities, their families and the professionals who provide services in the various State institutions; (b) Carry out institutional reforms and training programmes for professionals in the police and justice sectors so that they are able to detect situations of abuse and violence against persons with disabilities and to conduct investigations with the necessary procedural accommodations to ensure that criminal behaviour is punished; (c) As programmes are being developed to guarantee the right of children with disabilities to live in the community, establish mechanisms for the systematic monitoring, by independent bodies, in accordance with article 16, paragraph 3, of the Convention, of the living conditions of such children in institutions, with the aim of preventing situations of abuse and violence.

33. The Committee notes that women and girls with disabilities, especially those from indigenous communities, are often the victims of violence and abuse and do not have access to effective protection or reparation measures.

34. The Committee urges the State party to implement existing legislative and policy measures to prevent violence against women and girls with disabilities and to provide protection and reparation to those who fall victim to it. The Committee requests the State party to periodically compile data and statistics on the situation of women and girls with disabilities in respect of violence, exploitation and abuse, including femicide.

35. The Committee is concerned at the lack of protection against violence and abuse for children with disabilities. It is further concerned by the absence of protocols for the registration of shelters and other residential centres for children with disabilities and the oversight of conditions there.

36. The Committee urges the State party to:

(a) Take steps to prevent and eliminate all forms of domestic or institutional violence against children with disabilities;

(b)Duly investigate cases of violence and abuse against children with disabilities in order to avoid the impunity of perpetrators;

(c)Set up an independent oversight mechanism, in line with article 16, paragraph 3, of the Convention, to register and oversee conditions in shelters and other residential centres for children with disabilities.

Sweden (2014)

41. The Committee is concerned at reports showing the level of violence to which women with disabilities are being exposed, and at the low percentage of shelters accessible to persons with disabilities.

42. The Committee recommends that the State party ensure that violence and abuse against girls, boys and women with disabilities are identified; that necessary support is available; and that the issue is addressed in national training courses for personnel working in health and medical care, schools, the police force and the judiciary.

35. The Committee is concerned about the lack of measures and protocols to protect women and girls with disabilities from exploitation, violence and abuse.

36. The Committee calls on the State party to ensure that women and children with disabilities are able to access protection mechanisms, such as temporary shelters and therapies to aid recovery from violence, abuse and exploitation, in an autonomous manner, and that these mechanisms are fully accessible. It also calls for the establishment of a system of indicators of violence, abuse and exploitation of persons with disabilities that takes account of gender and age.

Australia (2013)

37. The Committee is concerned at reports of high rates of violence perpetrated against women and girls living in institutions and other segregated settings.

38. The Committee recommends that the State party orders investigation, without delay, into situations of violence, exploitation and abuse experienced by women and girls with disabilities in institutional settings, and to take appropriate measures on the findings.

Austria (2013)

34. The Committee commends the Austrian Ombudsman Board for the work done to investigate allegations of mistreatment in institutional settings. However, the Committee remains concerned at reports of exploitation, violence and abuse of persons with disabilities.

35. The Committee recommends that the State party take further measures to ensure protection of women, men, girls and boys with disabilities from exploitation, violence and abuse.

35. The Committee is concerned at:

(a) The lack of official records of cases of exploitation, violence and abuse of persons with disabilities, especially children and women, and of preventive measures in both institutions and family settings;

(b) The lack of protocols on handling women with disabilities who are victims or witnesses in trials for exploitation, violence or abuse;

(c) The recourse to institutionalization as the main option envisaged by the State party for the restoration of rights in cases of exploitation, violence and abuse;

(d) The lack of an express ban on corporal punishment of children with disabilities;

(e) The exploitation of persons with disabilities, especially children, for the purpose of begging.

36. The Committee urges the State party:

(a) To adopt legislation to prevent, investigate and punish exploitation, violence and abuse involving persons with disabilities, with a particular focus on women and children;

(b) To set up protocols for and training in the investigation of cases of violence against persons with disabilities;

- (c) To follow up on the recommendations of the Committee on the Rights of the Child (CRC/C/SLV/CO/3-4) regarding the express prohibition of all forms of corporal punishment and ensure that the prohibition includes practices in institutions for children with disabilities;
- (d) To follow up on the recommendations made by the Committee on the Elimination of Discrimination against Women to El Salvador following the consideration of its report regarding the need to take a comprehensive approach to violence against women and girls (CEDAW/C/SLV/CO/7, para. 24);
- (e) To adopt measures to prevent the exploitation of children with disabilities for the purpose of begging and establish programmes to promote their integration in society and their right to live in the community.

39. The Committee regrets that offences of exploitation, violence and abuse against persons with disabilities are still not visible because judicial bodies do not keep systematic records of cases.

40. The Committee urges the State party to institute a comprehensive strategy, incorporating the gender perspective and in consultation with disabled persons' organizations, to prevent and punish exploitation, violence and abuse against persons with disabilities, and social rehabilitation and reintegration programmes aiming at the full enjoyment and exercise of their human rights; it also urges judicial bodies to become involved in that strategy. The Committee asks the State party to include in its next periodic report information on complaints and decisions on behalf of persons with disabilities who are victims of offences of this kind.

41. The Committee is concerned that the State party has not provided information on the number of persons with disabilities who are neglected, and whether they are victims of exploitation, human trafficking or abuse.

42. The Committee recommends that the State party look closely at the situation of persons with disabilities who are neglected or the victims of trafficking and take the necessary steps to protect them, including alternative housing for those who have been neglected or are making a living by begging. It also urges the creation of reception centres where victims of trafficking in persons can obtain psychosocial care and legal assistance.

43. The Committee is concerned at reports from various sources — as acknowledged by the authorities of the State party who took part in the interactive dialogue — that criminal gangs in Paraguay are exploiting persons with disabilities by making them beg.

44. The Committee recommends that the State party:

- (a) Set up a special investigation unit within the competent law-enforcement bodies to find out how these gangs operate;
- (b) Take steps to protect the victims and place them in rehabilitation programmes, with the required support and reasonable accommodation, so that they can exercise their labour rights;
- (c) Take criminal proceedings against those responsible for the exploitation and impose the appropriate penalties.

Argentina (2012)

29. The Committee notes with concern that neither Act No. 26.485 on comprehensive protection and the prevention, punishment and elimination of violence against women nor Act No. 26.061 on the comprehensive protection of the rights of children and adolescents takes account of the specific situation of women with disabilities and children with disabilities, respectively. The Committee is also concerned about the lack of protection against violence and abuse for institutionalized persons with disabilities.

30. The Committee urges the State party to guarantee protection for women with disabilities and children with disabilities in, respectively, the revised versions of Act No. 26.485 and Act No. 26.061 and their implementing regulations. It also urges the State party to incorporate a disability perspective into policies and programmes developed on the basis of these acts. In addition, it recommends that the State party draw up appropriate guidelines for the prevention of violence against persons with disabilities who are institutionalized. The Committee also recommends that the State party collect data and information on violence and abuse against persons with disabilities, paying particular attention to women, children and persons who are institutionalized. To that end, the State party should, inter alia, establish institutional mechanisms for the early detection of situations in which violence may occur, diligently investigate allegations of violent acts and make any adjustments in procedures that may be needed so that victims can testify and those responsible can be prosecuted.

29. The Committee is deeply troubled by the reported incidents of abduction and forced labour of thousands of persons with intellectual disabilities, especially children, such as the occurrence of slave labour in Shanxi and Henan.

30. The Committee strongly urges the state party to continue investigating these incidents and prosecute the perpetrators. It also asks the state party to implement comprehensive measures to prevent further abductions of persons with intellectual disabilities and provide remedies to the victims, by including data collection on the prevalence of exploitation, abuse and violence against persons with disabilities.

65. The Committee is concerned about the incidents of women and girls with intellectual disabilities being subjected to sexual violence.

66. The Committee suggests that Hong Kong, China, continue investigating these incidents and prosecute the perpetrators and all those responsible. It also recommends that sex education be taught to children and adolescents with intellectual disabilities and that the law enforcement personnel be trained on handling violence against women and girls with disabilities.

67. In addition, while the Committee does not consider shelter workshops as a good way to implement the CRPD, it also finds the daily allowance for persons with disabilities in Shelter Workshops to be too low and bordering exploitation.

68. The Committee recommends that Hong Kong, China, enact legislation to raise the daily allowance for persons with disabilities in shelter workshops, so as to prevent their exploitation.

Macao

90. The Committee is concerned about the heightened risk of violence against women and girls with disabilities in becoming victims of domestic violence and abuse.

91. The Committee recommends that services as well as information are made accessible to these victims. It specifically encourages the state party to set up a complaint mechanism and conduct mandatory training for the police force regarding this issue.

Hungary (2012)

31. The Committee appreciates that the State party has taken measures to provide some specific disability-related provisions in its legislation and policies for prevention of exploitation, violence and abuse. It, however, is concerned that women, men, girls and boys with disabilities continue to face violence, abuse and exploitation.

32. The Committee recommends the State party to take effective measures to ensure protection of women, men, girls and boys with disabilities from exploitation, violence and abuse, in accordance with the Convention, amongst others, the establishment of protocols for the early detection of violence, above all in institutional settings, procedural accommodation to gather testimonies of victims, and prosecution of those persons responsible, as well as redress for victims. It also recommends the State party to ensure that protection services are age-, gender- and disability-sensitive and accessible.

26. The Committee expresses concern at the situation of violence that women and children with disabilities might face.

27. The Committee encourages the State party to include women and girls with disabilities in the National Strategy for the prevention of violence in the family and society, and to adopt comprehensive measures for them to have access to immediate protection, shelter and legal aid. It requests the State party to conduct awareness campaigns and develop educational programmes on the greater vulnerability of women and girls with disabilities with respect to violence and abuse.

31. The Committee is concerned that:

- (a) According to credible information, women with disabilities are subjected to forced abortions and forced sterilizations;
- (b) Legislation does not prohibit coercive medical practices such as forced treatment, or the use of physical and chemical restraints, nor does it provide adequate safeguards to protect the physical and mental integrity of persons with disabilities.

32. The Committee recommends that the State Party:

- (a) Enact and enforce legal provisions prohibiting forced abortion and forced sterilization, and establish accessible complaints mechanisms for victims;
- (b) Introduce and enforce a legal ban on coercive medical practices such as forced treatment, physical and chemical restraints, and establish independent monitoring, including by organisations of persons with disabilities, to safeguard the physical and mental integrity of persons with disabilities and to prevent such violations.

Finland (2025)

32. The Committee notes with concern:

- (a) That the State Party retains section 2 of Act No. 283/1970 on Sterilisation, as well as laws and policies that allow for abortion and contraception without the free and informed personal consent of women and girls with disabilities;
- (b) That despite Finland's leadership role in the adoption of the Human Rights Council resolution, "Combating Discrimination, Violence, and Harmful Practices against Intersex Persons", there are insufficient measures to protect intersex children from unnecessary and deferable medical interventions.

33. The Committee recommends that the State Party, in close consultation and active involvement of persons with disabilities, including women and girls with disabilities and intersex persons through their representative organisations:

- (a) Repeal section 2 of Act No. 283/1970 on Sterilisation, and take all legislative, policy and administrative measures to prohibit sterilisation, abortion and contraception without the free and informed personal consent of persons with disabilities and to provide effective remedies for victims of forced sterilisation, abortion and contraception;
- (b) Adopt and implement a legislative and policy framework to explicitly prohibit the performance of medically unnecessary and deferable interventions, including surgical, hormonal or other medical procedures on intersex minors, and provide criminal, civil and administrative remedies, healthcare and psychosocial support for intersex persons who have been subjected to intersex genital mutilation.

31. The Committee is concerned about the limited data on the practice of forced sterilisation and contraception within the State Party, including at the family level, and the absence of legal and policy measures to protect against forced sterilisation and forced contraception.

32. The Committee recommends that the State party conduct research, including in the outer islands and at the family level to examine the prevalence of forced sterilisation and contraception and the situations in which it occurs, and take all necessary legislative and policy measures to prohibit such practices.

33. The Committee is concerned:

- (a) About the prevalence of forced treatment of persons with disabilities, in particular persons with intellectual and/or psychosocial disabilities;
- (b) The lack of criminalization of the practice of female genital mutilation;

(c) The absence of an independent mechanism to monitor and prevent cases of coercion, forced treatment, forced sterilization, and forced abortion, nor mechanisms for the submission of complaints, follow-up, the punishment of perpetrators, or redress for victims.

34. The Committee recommends that the State party:

(a) Adopt and implement legislative and policy measures to ensure, in all situations, the protection of the integrity of persons with disabilities, in particular persons with intellectual and/or psychosocial disabilities, to ensure that medical interventions and treatment are carried out with the free and informed consent of persons with disabilities;

(b) Amend the Penal Code to explicitly prohibit forced sterilization and female genital mutilations, in particular women and girls with intellectual and/or psychosocial disabilities, and thoroughly investigate allegations of forced sterilization, female genital mutilations, and forced abortion and ensure that perpetrators are prosecuted and that proper redress is provided to the victims/survivors;

(c) Establish an independent monitoring body to investigate cases of medical coercion, forced treatment, or violation of bodily autonomy, ensuring that persons with disabilities have access to effective remedies and accountability mechanisms.

33. The Committee is concerned about the historical and ongoing practice of forced and coerced sterilization of persons with disabilities, including Indigenous, Black and racialised women and girls with disabilities, intersex children, and institutionalised persons.

34. The Committee recommends that the State Party, in close consultation and active involvement of persons with disabilities through their representative organisations:

(a) Take all legislative, policy and administrative measures to prohibit sterilisation procedures and contraceptive measures performed on persons with disabilities without their free, informed and personal consent;

(b) Urgently implement the recommendations of the Standing Senate Committee on Human Rights to end forced or coerced sterilisation and ensure redress, justice, and support for survivors.

Dominican Republic (2025)

31. The Committee is concerned about reported instances of non-consensual sterilization of women and girls with disabilities upon the request of a family member or at the initiative of health personnel.

32. The Committee recommends that the State party take measures to ensure the enforcement of its laws and guarantee the free and informed consent of persons with disabilities in relation to sterilization and ensure that restorative justice measures are provided for women who have been sterilized without their consent and that the perpetrators of these practices are investigated and duly punished.

44. The Committee is concerned that persons with intellectual and/or psychosocial disabilities, including women and children with disabilities are exposed to harmful, invasive and irreversible forms of treatment, including forced sterilization, abortion and contraception.

45. The Committee recommends that the European Union ensure persons with disabilities, including persons with intellectual and/or psychosocial disabilities, are not subjected to involuntary harmful, invasive and irreversible treatment, such as forced sterilization, abortion and contraception, and that any form of treatment of persons with disabilities is based on their personal, free and fully informed consent.

31. The Committee is concerned about the lack of clarity concerning the scope of legislation to protect persons with disabilities from being subjected to treatment without their free and informed consent, including forced sterilization and abortion.

32. The Committee recommends that the State party:

(a) Adopt and implement legislative and policy measures to ensure, in all situations, the protection of the integrity of persons with disabilities, in particular persons with intellectual and/or psychosocial disabilities, to ensure that medical interventions and treatments are carried out with the free and informed consent of persons with disabilities;

(b) Establish mechanisms to monitor health care facilities in order to protect persons with disabilities, particularly, women and girls with disabilities from forced interventions and ensure that mechanisms providing protection against forced abortion and sterilization are effective and accessible.

Tuvalu (2025)

31. The Committee is concerned about the possibility under the Mental Treatment Act to keep a person with disability until discharged under the directions of the medical officer in charge of for care and treatment without any reference to safeguards.

32. The Committee recommends that the State party:

(a) Adopt and implement legislative and policy measures to ensure, in all situations, the protection of the integrity of persons with disabilities, in particular persons with intellectual and/or psychosocial disabilities, to ensure that medical interventions and treatment are carried out with the free and informed consent of persons with disabilities;

(b) Ensure the collection of data about persons with disabilities under the directions of medical officers for care and treatment, to monitor the situation of persons with disabilities, as well as provide a complaint and redress mechanisms to persons with disabilities.

33. The Committee is concerned that:

(a) Vietnamese law requires consent for medical procedures, but it is unclear how this applies to persons with disabilities, especially those under guardianship, as there is no clear legal framework to ensure that persons with disabilities can make their own medical decisions;

(b) There is no explicit mention of supported decision-making mechanisms in medical settings, leaving persons with disabilities vulnerable to substitute decision-making (guardianship) rather than enabling them to exercise their autonomy;

(c) Women and girls with disabilities remain vulnerable to sexual and reproductive health and rights violations, including forced sterilization and abortion, despite penalties for these practices;

(d) Persons with disabilities, especially those with psychosocial and/or intellectual disabilities, are at risk of involuntary detention or forced medication in psychiatric settings, with unclear safeguards in place to protect their rights and bodily integrity;

(e) While there are penalties for forced sterilization or abortion, these may not be sufficient deterrents, and there is no clear independent oversight mechanism to monitor medical procedures involving persons with disabilities;

(f) There is no independent mechanism for evaluating segregation centres in order to prevent cases of coercion, forced treatment, sterilizations, and abortions without consent, nor mechanisms for the submission of complaints, follow-up, punishment of perpetrators, and restitution for victims.

34. The Committee recommends that the State party:

- (a) Strengthen safeguards to ensure that persons with disabilities, especially those under guardianship, can exercise their right to informed consent for medical treatments, including by providing accessible information and support to make decisions about their healthcare;
- (b) Introduce legal provisions to replace substitute decision-making with supported decision-making frameworks, ensuring that persons with disabilities maintain control over their healthcare decisions and are supported in making informed choices;
- (c) Take comprehensive steps to prevent women with disabilities to undergo forced sterilization and forced abortion, including awareness-raising campaigns, stronger enforcement of laws, and the establishment of effective mechanisms to monitor and report such violations;
- (d) Ensure that persons with disabilities, especially those with psychosocial and/or intellectual disabilities, are not subjected to forced medication in psychiatric facilities, and establish clear legal safeguards to protect their bodily integrity and autonomy in mental health care settings;
- (e) Strengthen legal enforcement against medical professionals or institutions that violate the bodily integrity of persons with disabilities, including by increasing penalties for forced medical procedures and ensuring accountability for violations;
- (f) Establish an independent monitoring body to investigate cases of medical coercion, forced treatments, or violations of bodily autonomy, ensuring that persons with disabilities have access to effective remedies and accountability mechanisms.

Belarus (2024)

33. The Committee is concerned about women and girls with psychosocial disabilities who continue to be non-consensually sterilized under the Law on Psychiatric Assistance Provision. It is also concerned about lack of protection against forced abortion.

34. The Committee recommends that the State party urgently amend the Psychiatric Protection Act, to prohibit forced sterilizations and forced abortion against women and girls with disabilities, including those held in prisons and psychiatric hospitals or asylums.

34. The Committee is concerned:

- (a) At reports that women with disabilities, in particular women and girls with intellectual and/or psychosocial disabilities, residing in collective living centres or placed in facilities and institutions, are often required to undergo sterilisation procedures and forced to use contraception, and that if their consent is obtained, it is often without proper information;
- (b) About the lack of data on the use of forced sterilization and forced contraception on persons with disabilities, including women and girls with disabilities;
- (c) That, despite the adoption of the 'Resolution for recognising the right to bodily integrity of intersex minors' in February 2021, there is, as of yet, no legislative framework in place specifically prohibiting unnecessary medical interventions, particularly 'normalisation' surgery and hormone treatments of intersex persons, particularly minor intersex persons, without their full and informed personal consent.

35. The Committee recommends that the State party, in accordance with the human rights model of disability and the joint statement by the Committee on the Rights of Persons with Disabilities and the Committee on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination against Women as well as the General Comment No. 3 on women and girls with disabilities, and the Istanbul Convention, and in close consultation and active involvement of persons with disabilities, in particular women and girls with disabilities through their representative organisations;

- (a) Take all legislative, policy and administrative measures to ensure that the use of sterilisation and contraception by all women and girls with disabilities, in all settings, is based on their free and informed personal consent, respecting the dignity and autonomy of women and girls with disabilities, and that institutions or facilities do not require undergoing sterilisation or using contraceptives on their residents as a precondition for being accepted in the institution;
- (b) Collect data, disaggregated by race, sex, gender, age, impairment, region and other relevant criteria, to allow an accurate estimation of the number of persons who have undergone sterilization or contraception without their free and informed personal consent, and in particular evaluate whether these practices are increasing or decreasing and where they are occurring;
- (c) Expedite the adoption and implementation of legislative frameworks covering the whole area of the State party that would explicitly prohibit the performance of medically unnecessary and irreversible medical interventions, including surgical, hormonal or other medical procedures on intersex minors, and would provide criminal, civil and administrative remedies, health care and psychosocial support for intersex persons who were subjected to intersex genital mutilation.

33. The Committee is concerned by the lack of information and statistical data on the implementation of the legal protection of the integrity of persons with disabilities. The Committee is also concerned by:

- (a) The use of forced electroconvulsive therapy within the treatment methods for persons with psychosocial disabilities;
- (b) The lack of specific provisions to prohibit forced sterilization of and forced abortions performed on women and girls with disabilities on the basis of third-party consent, in particular women and girls with intellectual and/or psychosocial disabilities.

34. The Committee recommends that the State party:

- (a) Adopt and implement legislative and policy measures to ensure the protection of the integrity of persons with disabilities, in particular persons with intellectual and/or psychosocial disabilities, in all situations, and to ensure that medical interventions and treatment are carried out only with the free and informed consent of persons with disabilities themselves;
- (b) Specifically prohibit forced sterilization of and forced abortions performed on women and girls with disabilities, in particular women and girls with intellectual and/or psychosocial disabilities.

49. The Committee is concerned that legal and policy frameworks across the Kingdom of Denmark allow for sterilisation, contraception and abortion procedures on women and girls with disabilities under guardianship without their personal consent, including under the sections 109 and 110 of the Health Act.

50. The Committee recommends that legal and policy frameworks across the Kingdom of Denmark are amended to prohibit sterilisation, contraception and abortion procedures on all women and girls with disabilities without their informed, free, and personal consent.

51. The Committee is concerned that insufficient support is being provided to women with disabilities, in particular women with disabilities in institutions, to participate in all aspects of the IUD Inquiry in Greenland and to seek redress, and that the inquiry only examines the issue up until 1991.

52. The Committee recommends that reasonable accommodation and disability specific supports are provided to women with disabilities, including women with disabilities in institutions, to participate in all aspects of the IUD Inquiry in Greenland and to seek redress, and that the inquiry is extended until the present day.

34. The Committee is concerned that:

- (a) The mistreatment received as a result of cultural and religious practices which consider persons with disabilities, especially persons with albinism, as a curse, resulting in isolation , desertion and inhumane treatment such as chaining and abuse in prayer camps;
- (b) Existence of harmful practices, such as female genital mutilation, which include women and girls with disabilities.

35. The Committee recommends that the State Party:

- (a) Effectively address female genital mutilation both in law and in practice, including women and girls with disabilities. It also recommends that the State party take into account article 17 of the Convention while implementing target 5.3 of the Sustainable Development Goals;
- (b) Launch public education campaigns to change harmful cultural and religious beliefs about disabilities, particularly targeting the mistreatment of individuals with albinism and psychosocial disabilities and Promote awareness of the rights and dignity of persons with disabilities to prevent their inhumane treatment and protect them from exile, death threats, and abuse in prayer camps.

29. The Committee is concerned of reports that women and girls with disabilities continue to be subjected to forced sterilization and abortion.

30. The Committee recommends that the State party thoroughly investigate allegations of forced sterilization and abortion, and ensure that perpetrators are prosecuted and that proper redress is provided for the victims/survivors.

Netherlands (2024)

39. The Committee is concerned about:

- (a) Information on possible treatment and counselling by medical experts still being based on the medical model of disability, for example concerning intersex children as well as the information provided to pregnant women undergoing prenatal screening;
- (b) The reports of non-consensual, unnecessary and irreversible medical interventions and treatment performed on intersex persons, including during infancy and childhood, including sterilization and castration, hormone treatment and genital surgery often performed under the age of 12;
- (c) Reports of legal provisions and practices that allow for forced contraception of women with disabilities.

40. The Committee recommends that the State party:

- (a) Ensure that counselling and information services in areas relating to disability, namely for intersex parents and their families and for pregnant women undergoing prenatal screening, are based on the human rights model rather than the medical model of disability;
- (b) Adopt clear legislative provisions that explicitly prohibit the performance of unnecessary and irreversible medical interventions, including surgical, hormonal or other medical procedures, on intersex infants and children; provide adequate counselling and support for families of intersex children; and provide health care and psychosocial support to intersex persons who have been subjected to intersex genital mutilation;

(c) Repeal legal provisions and practices, if any, that allow for forced contraception of persons with disabilities, ensuring that any decision related to contraception is based on the free and informed consent of the individuals concerned.

34. The Committee notes the 2017 legal amendments that abolished forced sterilization, including of persons with intellectual and/or psychosocial disabilities. However, it remains concerned about the administration of contraceptives without consent to women with intellectual and/or psychosocial disabilities residents in long-term care facilities, including by coercion and threats.

35. The Committee recommends that the State party implement mechanisms to immediately stop the forced contraception of persons with disabilities and that it opens investigations into these cases, sanctions perpetrators and provides victims with comprehensive reparations.

39. The Committee is concerned about the lack of information concerning measures to address the impact of harmful practices, including child marriage, forced sterilization and forced abortion on persons with disabilities, and in particular on persons with intellectual and/or psychosocial disabilities.

40. The Committee recommends that the State party, in close consultation and with the active involvement of persons with disabilities through their representative organizations:

(a) Ensure the prompt enactment of legislation to prohibit child marriage and include persons with disabilities in awareness raising initiatives including public campaigns to prevent child marriage;

(b) Review with the aim to repeal legislation, including mental health legislation that allows for sterilization of persons with disabilities, in particular of persons with intellectual and/or psychosocial disabilities, on the basis of third-party consent.

34. The Committee is deeply concerned about the lack of information on:

(a) Practices of forced sterilisation and abortion on the basis of disability, especially in residential care institutions, and the measures taken to prevent such practices; (b) Forced treatment and the use of physical and chemical restraints and electric shocks in mental health hospitals.

(b) Forced treatment and the use of physical and chemical restraints and electric shocks in mental health hospitals, especially in light of the legislative vacuum that exists to guarantee the rights of users of mental health services.

35. The Committee recommends that the State party

(a) Collect information and data on cases of forced sterilisation and abortion committed against persons with disabilities and indicate what action has been taken

(b) Explicitly criminalise forced sterilisation and abortion on the basis of disability in national legislation

(c) Prohibit forced treatment and placement in the mental health sector and prohibit the use of physical and chemical restraints and electric shocks.

Costa Rica (2024)

31. El Comité nota con preocupación:

- a) Los casos de mujeres con discapacidad que han sido sometidas a esterilización sin su consentimiento libre e informado y a tratamientos forzados;
- b) El procedimiento judicial ante el Juzgado de Familia con relación a la esterilización de personas con discapacidad “necesaria e indispensable”.

32. El Comité recomienda al Estado parte:

- a) La adopción de medidas para garantizar el consentimiento libre e informado de las personas con discapacidad con relación a tratamientos y eliminar la esterilización, forzada así como la implementación de medidas de justicia restaurativa para las mujeres que hayan sido esterilizadas sin su consentimiento, e que se investigue a los autores de estas prácticas, imponiendo sanciones proporcionadas.;
- b) Eliminar la competencia del Tribunal de Familia para ordenar esterilizaciones sin el consentimiento personal, libre e informado de la persona con discapacidad.

37. The Committee is concerned by reports about the infliction of forced contraception, forced sterilization and forced abortion on persons with disabilities, in particular on persons with intellectual and/or psychosocial disabilities.

38. Recalling the recommendations of the Committee on the Elimination of Discrimination against Women (CEDAW/C/KAZ/CO/5, para. 26), the Committee recommends that the State party abolish legislation and administrative orders allowing or prescribing forced sterilization, forced abortion and forced contraception of persons with disabilities, and that it enact legislation guaranteeing accountability and appropriate reparation, and implement it.

Nicaragua (2024)

32. El Comité nota que el artículo 36 de la Constitución contempla que “toda persona tiene derecho a que se le respete su integridad física, psíquica y moral”, sin embargo, preocupa al Comité:

- a) Las restricciones al acceso a la interrupción voluntaria del embarazo, especialmente para las víctimas de violencia sexual, incluidas las niñas y se desconozca cuantas de estas son personas con discapacidad;
- b) La información recibida sobre mujeres con discapacidad auditiva de la Costa Caribe que fueron sometidas a procedimientos de esterilización sin su consentimiento durante su adolescencia;
- c) La información recibida sobre casos de personas con discapacidad intelectual y/o psicosocial que, a la muerte de sus padres, son despojados de su vivienda por otros familiares, a pesar de haber heredado dicha vivienda.

33. El Comité recomienda al Estado parte que, en consulta estrecha y colaboración activa con las personas con discapacidad y las organizaciones que las representan:

- a) Analice y reforme la legislación para que en los casos de violencia sexual se permita a las mujeres en general y a las mujeres y niñas con discapacidad en particular, tener acceso a la opción de interrumpir su embarazo, por medio de métodos seguros, así como la instauración de programas gubernamentales que las apoyen, evitando su revictimización;
- b) Investigue cuántas mujeres con discapacidad fueron esterilizadas sin su consentimiento, ofrecerles justicia restaurativa y castigar a los responsables de los actos;
- c) Implemente programas sociales para asegurar que las personas con discapacidad intelectual y/o psicosocial que han heredado viviendas no sean despojadas de ellas por parte de otros familiares.

Sweden (2024)

39. The Committee is concerned about the unnecessary, invasive or irreversible medical interventions that modify sex characteristics of intersex children.

40. The Committee recommends that the State party closely consult and actively involve representative organizations of intersex persons to ensure comprehensive protection for intersex children from unnecessary, invasive or irreversible medical interventions that modify sex characteristics.

33. The Committee is concerned:

(a) At the use of forced electroconvulsive therapy (ECT) among the treatment methods for persons with psychosocial disabilities;

(b) The lack of specific provisions to prohibit forced sterilisation and abortion of women and girls with disabilities, women and girls with intellectual disabilities and/or cerebral palsy;

(c) Attacks and violation of the physical integrity of persons with albinism.

34. The Committee recommends that the State party:

(a) Adopt and implement legislative and policy measures to ensure, in all situations, the protection of the integrity of persons with disabilities, in particular persons with intellectual and/or psychosocial disabilities, to ensure that medical interventions and treatment are carried out with the free and informed consent of persons with disabilities;

(b) Put in place measures to specifically prohibit forced sterilisation and abortion of women and girls with disabilities, in particular women and girls with intellectual disabilities and/or cerebral palsy;

(c) Take all necessary measures to protect the integrity of persons with Albinism and adopt the African Union's Regional Action Plan on Albinism.

Andorra (2023)

35. The Committee notes that Act No. 40/2014, article 14, modifies article 116(2) of Act 9/2005 (Criminal Code), sanctioning forced sterilization, and that the discriminatory motive of disability is an aggravating circumstance. It is concerned, however, about the following:

(a) Women and girls with disabilities, in particular, women and girls with intellectual and/or psychosocial disabilities could be subjected to forced sterilization or other forced interventions at the request of third parties, including family members or guardians;

(b) The absence of a monitoring mechanism to prevent cases of forced sterilization and other types of surgery for which consent has not been obtained, in particular, in psychiatric hospitals and institutions.

36. The Committee recommends that the State party:

(a) Adopt legislative and other measures necessary to protect the integrity of persons with disabilities in all settings, ensuring that all medical treatment and interventions are done on the basis of the free and informed consent of the concerned person, as well as prevent and eliminate harmful practices against women and girls with disabilities;

(b) Establish an independent monitoring mechanism to assess the situation of persons with disabilities in institutions to prevent, detect and, where appropriate, punish and provide redress in cases of forced sterilizations, forced abortions, forced contraception or any other forced medical treatment.

Austria (2023)

41. The Committee is concerned about reports stating that:

(a) Sterilizations of women and girls with disabilities without their consent, apparently outside the confines of §§ 253-255 ABGB, have taken place in the State party;

(b) Contraceptives are administered to women and girls with disabilities without their consent or even their knowledge, particularly in institutions.

42. The Committee recommends the State party:

- (a)Strictly enforce the prohibition of sterilization in § 255 ABGB, provide accessible information on sexual self-determination, collect data on performed sterilizations in the State party, disaggregated by sex, gender, age, procedure followed and place of the intervention, and train medical personnel on the requirements of the law;
- (b)Explicitly ban the use of medical measures to inhibit procreation on persons with disabilities without their personal consent, and enforce it.

Germany (2023)

37.The Committee is concerned about:

- (a)The continued occurrence of forced and coerced sterilisation of women and girls with disabilities;
- (b)The practice of forced and coerced contraception and associated harmful side-effects and forced and coerced abortions in institutional facilities.

38.The Committee recommends that the State Party take all necessary legislative, administrative and judicial measures to:

- (a)Prohibit sterilisation of women and girls with disabilities without their free and informed consent, including sterilisation based on substitute consent or court decisions;
- (b)Prohibit all forms of contraception and abortion without the free and informed consent of the individual concerned, including coercive practices.

39.The Committee is concerned that the Act on the Protection of Children with Variations in Sex Development of 2021 does not provide comprehensive protection for all intersex children from invasive or irreversible medical procedures that modify sex characteristics.

40.The Committee recommends that the State Party closely consult and actively involve representative organisations of intersex persons to review and amend the Act on the Protection of Children with Variations in Sex Development 2021 to ensure comprehensive protection for intersex children from invasive or irreversible medical procedures that modify sex characteristics unless necessary to avoid serious, urgent, and irreparable harm.

39.The Committee is concerned about cases of forced sterilization performed on persons with disabilities, and medically unnecessary and irreversible surgery and interventions on intersex children, and the lack of measures to ensure accountability and reparations.

40.The Committee recommends that the State party:

- (a)Prohibit sterilisation without the free and informed personal consent of the person concerned;
- (b)Take measures to prohibit medically unnecessary and irreversible surgery and medical interventions on intersex children until they are able to provide personal consent and adopt measures to provide redress and reparations for the physical and psychological harms inflicted.

Malawi (2023)

35.The Committee observes with concern information about forced abortions and that women and girls with disabilities under guardianship may be subjected to forced sterilization based on consent provided by third parties, including family members or guardians. It is also concerned about the absence of objective discussions and awareness-raising campaigns on sterilization and the lack of sexual and reproductive health education for persons with disabilities.

36.The Committee recommends that the State party:

- (a)Prohibit sterilizations of persons with disabilities without their free and informed personal consent, for example those at the request by third parties, including courts, guardians or family members;
- (b)Adopt protocols applicable across all health care services to promote respect of sexual and reproductive rights of persons with disabilities, notably women and girls with disabilities, including the right to retain their fertility, and the provision of related information and services;

(c) Set up awareness-raising and education campaigns on sexual and reproductive health and rights of persons with disabilities.

Mongolia (2023)

35. The Committee remains concerned at the persistence in law (art. 37 (b) of the Law on Health) and in practice, of measures to “prevent conception in persons with genetic psychosocial or intellectual disorders, or psychosocial or intellectually impaired persons”, without their informed consent. The Committee is also concerned that article 9.2 of the Law on Health authorizes abortions of women with “mental disorder” carried out without the free and informed consent of women and girls with disabilities.

36. The Committee reiterates its previous recommendation (CRPD/C/MNG/CO/1, para. 29) and urges the State party to eliminate legislative provisions of the Law on Health, as well as of bylaws and related regulations, restricting sexual and reproductive rights and allowing the forced sterilization of and abortion for women with disabilities, in particular psychosocial and intellectual disabilities, and women with disabilities living in institutions. It also recommends that the State party establish a mechanism for identifying, investigating, and following up on any cases that, despite an explicit prohibition, continue to arise and for providing full redress in those instances, and take measures to provide protection against forced sterilization.

29. The Committee is concerned about the prevalence of forced medical treatments and the use of drugs and treatment methods on patients with psychosocial and/or intellectual disabilities without their free and informed consent and forced sterilization of women and girls with disabilities.

30. The Committee recommends that the State party prohibit forced medical treatment and interventions, including forced sterilization of persons with disabilities, including in both public and private institutions, and provide training to all health practitioners, including traditional healers, on their rights.

Argentina (2023)

35. El Comité observa con preocupación lo siguiente:

a) La persistencia de esterilizaciones y abortos forzados, que afectan especialmente a las mujeres y niñas con discapacidad intelectual y/o psicosocial;

b) La Ley 27.610 establece que si la sentencia judicial de restricción a la capacidad impide prestar el consentimiento para interrumpir el embarazo, o la persona ha sido declarada incapaz judicialmente, deberá prestar su consentimiento con la asistencia de su representante legal, o a falta de este, una persona allegada.

36. El Comité recomienda al Estado parte:

a) Iniciar procesos de investigación administrativa y penal a las autoridades judiciales y sanitarias y a las instituciones que recomiendan, autorizan o aplican esterilizaciones o abortos forzados a niñas y mujeres con discapacidad, y garantizar el acceso a la justicia y reparaciones para las víctimas;

b) Revisar la legislación, incluyendo la Ley 27.610 (artículo 9), su reglamentación y su Protocolo, para garantizar que todas las mujeres con discapacidad, puedan otorgar de manera autónoma su consentimiento previo e informado para la interrupción voluntaria de un embarazo, en igualdad con otras mujeres.

Georgia (2023)

35. The Committee observes with concern information about forced or involuntary abortion, sterilisation, contraception, and the use of sexuality suppression medication against persons with disabilities.

36. The Committee recommends that the State party explicitly prohibit abortion, sterilisation, contraception and the use of sexuality suppression medication, on the basis of the authorization of a third party, and that it develops public programmes to raise awareness and inform persons with disabilities, targeting young persons with disabilities and women and girls with disabilities, about their sexual and reproductive rights.

34.El Comité observa con preocupación que:

- a) Las mujeres y niñas con discapacidad que han sido esterilizadas sin su consentimiento, incluso en instituciones psiquiátricas y de asistencia social, no han sido incluidas en el Registro de Víctimas de Esterilizaciones Forzadas – REVIESFO, ni en las causas penales para abordar la esterilización forzada de mujeres;
- b) La Norma Técnica de Planificación Familiar Actualizada afirme que el consentimiento para la esterilización femenina no es aplicable a las mujeres con discapacidad psicosocial.

35.El Comité recomienda al Estado parte que:

- a) Desarrolle medidas para garantizar que las mujeres con discapacidad supervivientes de esterilizaciones forzadas reciban medidas de resarcimiento y reparación y que se procese a los autores, incluidos los responsables de instituciones psiquiátricas y de asistencia social;
- b) Incorpore a la Norma Técnica de Planificación Familiar Actualizada las medidas específicas, incluyendo la provisión de ajustes razonables, apoyos y otros medios de verificación, que garanticen el consentimiento informado de las mujeres con discapacidad psicosocial para que puedan tomar sus propias decisiones relacionadas con su cuerpo y sexualidad, así como con su salud reproductiva.

35.The Committee notes that the national legislation prohibits forced sterilization of women with disabilities. However, it is concerned about the lack of monitoring mechanisms of psychiatric hospitals and other segregation centres to prevent possible cases of forced sterilizations and other types of surgeries for which the consent has not been obtained.

36.The Committee recommends the establishment of independent monitoring to assess the situation of women and girls with disabilities in institutions to prevent, detect and, where appropriate, punish and provide redress in cases of forced sterilizations, abortions or any other type of surgery.

29.The Committee is deeply concerned about women with disabilities who are under guardianship and who could allegedly be subjected to forced sterilization at the request of third parties, including trusted persons, family members or guardians without their free will or informed consent. The Committee is further concerned about the lack of public and objective debate on the issue and the absence of awareness campaigns to raise understanding that persons with disabilities should have access to sexual and reproductive health training and make their own decisions.

30.The Committee recommends that the State party:

- (a) Take immediate measures, including legislative measures, to prohibit and eliminate forced sterilizations, especially of women with disabilities;
- (b) Establish awareness campaigns on the rights of persons with disabilities to sexual and reproductive health, directed to medical personnel involved in sexual and reproductive health and to persons with disabilities, particularly women with disabilities.

Bangladesh (2022)

35. The Committee is concerned about:

- (a) Forced abortion and forced sterilisation perpetrated against women with disabilities in institutions, particularly women with intellectual and/or psychosocial disabilities, as well as forced medical and/or psychiatric interventions and involuntary psychiatric admissions;

- (b) Lack of statistical data, disaggregated by sex, age and type of impairment, on persons with disabilities subjected to forced sterilization and forced abortions, as well as forced medical and/or psychiatric interventions and involuntary psychiatric admissions;
- (c) Harmful practices against women and girls with disabilities, particularly forced marriages, remain common.

36. The Committee recommends that the state party:

- (a) Take concrete measures to prohibit forced abortion and forced sterilization against women with disabilities, particularly against women with intellectual and/or psychosocial disabilities, including abolishing forced medical, psychiatric interventions and involuntary psychiatric admissions and establish mechanisms of supported decision-making to enable persons with disabilities to express prior and informed consent in relation to such interventions and treatment;
- (b) Collect statistical data, disaggregated by sex, age and type of impairment, on persons with disabilities subjected to forced sterilization, forced abortions, as well as forced medical and/or psychiatric interventions and involuntary psychiatric admissions;
- (c) Take strong measures to prevent harmful practices such as forced marriages.

38. The Committee is concerned about the legal exceptions to free and informed consent to compulsory hospitalization and medical interventions.

39. The Committee recommends that the State party remove legal exceptions to the requirement of free and informed consent of all persons with disabilities to medical interventions, including hospitalization, and ensure adherence to the requirement of free and informed consent with regard to all persons with disabilities.

Macao

84. The Committee is concerned about the legal exceptions to free and informed consent to compulsory hospitalization and medical interventions.

85. The Committee recommends that Macao SAR, China remove legal exceptions to the requirement of free and informed consent of all persons with disabilities to medical interventions, including hospitalization, and ensure adherence to the requirement of free and informed consent with regard to all persons with disabilities.

Lao People's Democratic Republic (2022)

30. The Committee is concerned about the lack of information on concrete measures taken to protect persons with disabilities, especially persons with intellectual and/or psychosocial disabilities against forced medical procedures and interventions, including sterilization.

31. The Committee recommends that the State party strengthen the legal and policy frameworks to ensure that all medical and psychiatric treatment and interventions are done on the basis of own free and informed consent. It also recommends that the State party take all measures necessary to eliminate the forced sterilization of persons with disabilities, especially persons with psychosocial and/or intellectual disabilities, and those still deprived of their legal capacity.

35. The Committee is seriously concerned about:

- (a) The lack of action by the State party, in response to the Committee's 2014 concluding observations, to address the fact that parents can consent to sterilization of their children with disabilities and to also address laws that allow for the use of sterilization, contraception and abortion procedures with regard to women and girls with disabilities without their personal consent;
- (b) The lack of a prohibition on non-urgent, intrusive and irreversible medical interventions or the imposition of hormones on intersex infants and children before an age at which they can provide informed consent;

(c) The lack of legislative provisions to prohibit Ashley Treatment or growth attenuation treatment for children with disabilities, including to prohibit accessing these procedures outside New Zealand;

(d) The lack of data in relation to sterilization and abortion procedures performed on persons with disabilities without their personal consent, non-urgent medical interventions on intersex children without their consent and growth attenuation treatment.

36. The Committee urges the State party to:

(a) Immediately place a moratorium on sterilization, contraception and abortion procedures performed without personal consent, and take urgent action to adopt uniform legislation prohibiting such procedures on women and girls with disabilities;

(b) Adopt clear legislative provisions that explicitly prohibit the performance of unnecessary, invasive and irreversible medical interventions, including surgical, hormonal or other medical procedures on intersex children before an age at which they can provide informed consent;

(c) Recalling previous recommendations made by the Committee on the Rights of the Child, develop and implement a child rights-based health-care protocol for intersex children, setting the procedures and steps to be followed by health teams, ensuring that no one is subjected to unnecessary medical or surgical treatment during infancy or childhood, guaranteeing the rights of children to bodily integrity, autonomy and self-determination, and provide families with intersex children with adequate counselling and support;

(d) Adopt legislative provisions to prohibit growth attenuation treatment (Ashley Treatment), including a prohibition on procedures sought outside New Zealand;

(e) Adopt legal provisions to provide legal remedies and holistic redress to victims of medical interventions performed without personal consent, including access to support and recovery services and adequate compensation;

(f) Develop measures to ensure reporting and data collection on sterilization, contraception and abortion procedures performed without personal consent, on non-urgent medical interventions performed on intersex children and on growth attenuation treatment.

Singapore (2022)

35. The Committee is concerned that the Voluntary Sterilization Act allows for the sterilization of persons with disabilities based on a court order declaring that it is necessary and in the best interest of the person concerned.

36. The Committee recommends that the State party repeal the Voluntary Sterilization Act and expressly and effectively protect women and girls with disabilities from sterilization without their free and informed personal consent.

35. The Committee observes with concern that women and girls with disabilities, especially those placed under substitute decision-making regimes and those still in institutions can be subject to sterilization and abortion without their consent. The Committee is particularly concerned that women and girls with intellectual and psychosocial disabilities and autistic women and girls are subjected to contraception without their consent in residential institutions, including in group homes, and face discriminatory legal restrictions on their right to have a child.

36. The Committee recommends that the State party abolish all legal provisions, including the provisions of the Health Act (187/B) that allows for women and girls with disabilities to be sterilized and abortions carried out on them on the basis of third-party requests, including from guardians. The Committee also recommends that the State party adopt protocols on respect for the sexual and reproductive health rights of women and girls with disabilities, in particular women and girls with intellectual disabilities, and include the duty to provide them with accessible information and services concerning their sexual and reproductive health rights. The Committee further recommends that the State party ensure that the use of contraception by all women and girls with disabilities in all settings is based on free and informed consent, respecting the dignity and autonomy of women and girls with disabilities.

45. The Committee is concerned about continuing practices of forced sterilization, contraception and abortion, particularly affecting women and girls with intellectual or psychosocial disabilities both inside and outside of institutions and indigenous women and girls. The Committee has received very disturbing reports of forced sterilization in Casa Hogar Esperanza.

46. The Committee reiterates the recommendations made in paragraph 38 of its previous concluding observations urging the State party to launch administrative and criminal investigations into the judicial and health authorities and institutions that recommend, authorize or perform forced sterilizations, contraception and abortion on girls, adolescents and women with disabilities and to guarantee access to justice and reparation for victims.

47. The Committee further recommends that the State party implement training programmes for professionals in the public and private health sectors on sexual and reproductive health rights of women and girls with disabilities that include training on respect for their preferences and on dismantling prevalent stereotypes of the sexuality of women and girls with disabilities.

Switzerland (2022)

35. The Committee notes with concern:

(a) That persons over 16 years of age deemed “incapable of discernment” can be sterilized under legal provisions that authorize sterilisation procedures; and the lack of data on and redress for such procedures;

(b) The lack of uniform cantonal protection against the practice of “packing” that is applied to autistic children, whereby the child is wrapped in cold, wet sheets;

(c) That intersex persons can be subjected to unnecessary and irreversible medical and/or surgical interventions, including during infancy or childhood; and that there is a lack of ongoing health care, psychosocial support and social reintegration for intersex persons who have been subjected to intersex genital mutilation and a lack of access to redress.

36. The Committee recommends that the State party:

(a) Prohibit the sterilization of persons with disabilities without their consent, repeal legal provisions that allow substituted consent by third parties for sterilization procedures, collect disaggregated data on sterilization procedures, and take measures to provide redress and support to persons with disabilities who are victims of forced sterilization;

(b) Prohibit in all cantons the practice of “packing” children, and take measures ensure the recovery of and redress for children who have been subjected to such treatment;

(c) Adopt clear legislative provisions that explicitly prohibit the performance of unnecessary and irreversible medical interventions, including surgical, hormonal or other medical procedures, on intersex infants and children; provide adequate counselling and support for families of intersex children; extend the statute of limitations to enable criminal and civil remedies; and provide health care and psychosocial support to intersex persons who have been subjected to intersex genital mutilation.

Venezuela (2022)

32. The Committee is concerned about the persistence of involuntary confinement and treatment and non-consensual medical practices in respect of persons with disabilities, including the forced sterilization of women and girls with psychosocial or intellectual disabilities.

33. The Committee recommends that the State party repeal all legal provisions that permit involuntary treatment, and prohibit involuntary treatment and restraint and the forced sterilization of persons with disabilities.

29. The Committee is concerned about the lack of effective frameworks and policies to protect the integrity of persons with disabilities, especially persons with psychosocial or intellectual disabilities, particularly in mental health institutions, including forced medical treatment and the use of drugs and treatment methods without free and informed consent.

30. The Committee recommends that the State party adopt and implement legislative and policies measures to establish safeguards to ensure the protection of the integrity of persons with disabilities, especially persons with psychosocial or intellectual disabilities in all situations and to move towards mental health services in the community and to ensure the respect of the free and informed consent of persons with disabilities regarding medical treatment and interventions.

36. The Committee observes with concern that:

- (a) Women with disabilities subject to guardianship can be subjected to abortion or sterilization under The Public Health Code art. L2123-2 without their consent, or with consent provided by third parties, including trusted persons, family members or guardians;
- (b) Autistic children are subjected to treatments with objective "render them non-autistic", disrespecting their identity, and the practices of packing, despite public declarations prohibiting this practice;
- (c) Non-consensual medical interventions of intersex persons.

37. The Committee recommends that the State party:

- (a) Prohibit involuntary sterilization and abortion of women with disabilities, including by request of family members, guardians and trusted persons or with the consent of third parties;
- (b) Eliminate normalising treatments on autistic children, and adopt measures to redress the rights of children and adults with disabilities who have been subjected to these treatments, including through reparations and compensations for the impact of these treatments on their physical and mental integrity;
- (c) Prohibit the practice of non-consensual medical interventions on intersex persons.

Estonia (2021)

34. The Committee observes with concern that women with disabilities under guardianship can be subjected to sterilization or abortion without their consent.

35. The Committee recommends that the State party:

- (a) Prohibit the forced sterilization and the termination of pregnancies of women with disabilities based on third-party requests, including from guardians or tutors, and raise awareness about the legal prohibition;
- (b) Adopt protocols promoting respect for the sexual and reproductive rights of persons with disabilities, particularly women and girls with disabilities, and include in such protocols the duty to provide persons with disabilities with accessible information and services concerning their right to retain their fertility.

Australia (2019)

33. The Committee is seriously concerned about:

- (a) The ongoing practice of forced sterilization, forced abortion and forced contraception among persons with disabilities, particularly women and girls, which remains legal;
- (b) The unregulated use of involuntary surgery on infants and children born with variations in sex characteristics and of other intrusive and irreversible medical interventions without the free and informed consent of those undergoing such interventions or without evidence of the need to carry them out.

34. The Committee urges the State party to:

- (a) Review and amend laws, including the section of the Family Law Rules 2004 relating to applications for medical procedures, in line with the Convention and adopt uniform legislation prohibiting, in the absence of free and informed consent, the sterilization of adults and children, the administration of contraception and the imposition of abortion procedures on women and girls with disabilities;
- (b) Adopt clear legislative provisions that explicitly prohibit the performance of unnecessary, invasive and irreversible medical interventions, including surgical, hormonal or other medical procedures on intersex children before they reach the legal age of consent; also provide adequate counselling and support for the families of intersex children and redress to intersex persons having undergone such medical procedures;

(c) Prohibit the use of non-consensual electroconvulsive therapy on the basis of any form of impairment.

Ecuador (2019)

33. The Committee is concerned at:

(a) The fact that the Organic Act on the Health System is not in line with the Convention since it is not based on the human rights model of disability;

(b) That no explicit provision is made for the rights of persons with psychosocial and intellectual disabilities to request or reject treatments of any type on their own volition, including those dealing with sexual and reproductive health, on the basis of their informed consent and supported decision-making in the exercise of their legal capacity;

(c) The fact that forced sterilization is not expressly prohibited.

34. The Committee recommends that the State party amend the Organic Act on the Health System to incorporate a human rights approach to disability and to expressly prohibit forced sterilization and the non-consensual interruption of pregnancies. The Committee also recommends that the State party guarantee the integrity and autonomy of persons with disabilities based on free and informed consent and supported decision-making in requesting or rejecting treatments relating to all relevant procedures. It also recommends that a mechanism be established for identifying, investigating and following up on any cases that, despite an explicit prohibition, continue to arise and for providing full redress in those instances.

El Salvador (2019)

34. The Committee is concerned that women and girls with disabilities continue to be subjected to forced sterilization and abortion, without their consent, and that the Counsel-General's Office issues opinions to hospitals on medical treatment including forced sterilization without the consent of the person concerned but with the consent of a third party. It is also concerned that no cases of forced sterilization were reported by hospitals.

35. The Committee urges the State party to:

(a) Repeal article 147 (3) of the Criminal Code and abolish the practice of forced sterilization of women and girls with disabilities, and ensure that decisions regarding medical procedures are taken with the free and informed consent of the person with disability and not as per the opinions issued by the Counsel-General's Office;

(b) Establish an independent mechanism to monitor, register and investigate cases of forced sterilization in hospitals and private clinics.

India (2019)

36. The Committee is concerned about:

(a) Continuing lawful practices of forced sterilization, forced contraception and forced abortion, particularly affecting women with intellectual or psychosocial disabilities in institutions;

(b) Harmful practices against women with disabilities, particularly forced marriages, dowry payments from families, and national schemes to promote financial incentives for marriage with a woman with disabilities or to prompt marriage among persons with disabilities;

(c) Sex-assignment or "sex-normalizing" surgery on intersex children, stigmatization and bullying against intersex children and their restricted access to community services.

37. The Committee recommends that the State party:

(a) Repeal section 92 (f) of the Rights of Persons with Disabilities Act on the exception to the requirement of consent to abortion in women with "severe" disabilities and legislation authorizing medical treatment on the basis of third-party consent, and provide all persons with disabilities with supported decision-making mechanisms for expressing prior and informed consent to medical treatment;

(b) Redouble its efforts to enforce the legal prohibition of harmful practices such as dowry payments and forced marriages, in relation to women and girls with disabilities, and end harmful practices. The State party should ensure actual implementation of the recommendations issued by the Special Rapporteur on violence against women, its causes and consequences (A/HRC/26/38/Add.1, para. 80 (b)) on designing and launching targeted awareness-raising campaigns at the community level on harmful practices;

(c) Adopt measures to prevent sex-assignment or “sex-normalizing” surgery, stigmatization and bullying against intersex children and ensure their right to respect for their physical and mental integrity.

34. The Committee is concerned about the lack of information on whether certain medical interventions, including the sterilization of persons with disabilities, especially women and girls with psychosocial or intellectual disabilities, are being carried out without the free and informed consent of the person concerned.

35. The Committee recommends that the State party protect persons with disabilities, especially women and girls with psychosocial or intellectual disabilities, from forced sterilization, in law and in practice, and that it ensure that the right to free and informed consent prior to all interventions and treatments is upheld and that supported decision-making mechanisms and strengthened safeguards are provided.

33. The Committee is concerned about the lack of information on concrete measures taken to protect persons with disabilities, especially persons with intellectual or psychosocial disabilities against forced medical procedures and interventions, including sterilisation and castration.

34. The Committee recommends that the State party strengthen the legal and policy provisions to ensure that all medical and psychiatric treatment and interventions are done on the basis of their own free and informed consent. It also recommends that the State party take all measures necessary to eliminate practices of forced sterilisation and castration on persons with disabilities, especially persons with psychosocial or intellectual disabilities, and those still deprived of their legal capacity.

33. The Committee is concerned about the risks posed by article 18 of the Public Health Act, which exempts ‘disabled persons’ from the requirement of prior consent with regard to medical interventions. The Committee is therefore concerned that a legal guardian may authorise medical interventions with regard to persons with disabilities, including forced institutionalisation and sterilization.

34. The Committee recommends that the State party adopt effective measures to ensure respect for the right of persons with disabilities to provide free and informed consent prior to medical treatment, institutionalization and sterilization, and provide efficient support mechanisms for decision-making in the State party.

Niger (2019)

29. The Committee is concerned about:

- (a) Sterilization of persons with disabilities without their free and informed consent especially women and girls with disabilities, and persons with psychosocial or intellectual disabilities, in health centres and hospitals, and through traditional healers;
- (b) The lack of protection of persons with disabilities, especially those with psychosocial or intellectual disabilities, against forced medical treatments; and the use of drugs and treatment methods on patients with psychosocial or intellectual disabilities without their free and informed consent.

30. The Committee recommends that the State party:

- (a) Strengthen legal and policy provisions protecting persons with disabilities from forced sterilization, especially women and girls with disabilities, persons with psychosocial or intellectual disabilities, and those deprived of their legal capacity; prosecute and sanction the perpetrators, and provide remedies to victims;

(b) Adopt necessary legislative and policy measures to ensure all medical treatment and interventions are done on the basis of the free and informed consent of persons with disabilities;
(c) Provide training to all health practitioners, including traditional healers, on the rights of persons with disabilities.

Norway (2019)

29. The Committee is concerned that persons with disabilities, including women and children, reportedly continue to be subjected to involuntary medical treatment, including forced abortion and sterilization.

30. The Committee recommends that the State party adopt effective measures to ensure respect for the right of persons with disabilities, particularly women and children, to provide informed and prior consent to medical treatment, including abortion and sterilization, regardless of the severity and type of impairment and to provide efficient support mechanisms for decision-making.

31. The Committee notes with concern the lack of prevention and protection measures to fully ensure the integrity of persons with disabilities, in particular against forced treatment and forced sterilization of persons with disabilities, particularly those with psychosocial disabilities and women and girls with disabilities.

31. The Committee is concerned at the forced sterilization of persons with disabilities, especially women and girls with psychosocial or intellectual disabilities.

32. The Committee urges the State party to protect persons with disabilities, especially women and girls and those with psychosocial or intellectual disabilities, from forced sterilization, in law and in practice, and ensure that perpetrators are prosecuted and sanctioned, and that remedies are available for persons subjected to forced sterilization.

33. The Committee is deeply concerned that women and girls with disabilities continue to be subjected to forced sterilization and abortion. The Committee is further concerned that medical treatments without the free and informed consent by the person are practiced in the State party.

34. The Committee reiterates its previous recommendation (CRPD/C/ESP/CO/1, para. 8) and further urges the State party to repeal article 156 of the Organic Law 10/1995 to fully abolish the administration of sterilization, medical treatment and research on all persons with disabilities, without the full and informed consent of the person.

36. The Committee is concerned about reports of forced sterilization and forced abortion performed on women and girls with intellectual or psychosocial disabilities. It is also concerned about the lack of information about procedures to safeguard the physical and mental integrity of persons with disabilities, in cases where guardians or other third parties request or authorise medical interventions without their consent.

37. The Committee recommends that the State party:

(a) Revise current legislation and prohibit the practice of medical interventions based on third party's consent acting as guardians or tutors of persons with disabilities deprived of their legal capacity, and that it develop supported decision-making mechanisms for persons with disabilities that respect will and preferences of the person and protect their dignity and individual autonomy;

(b) Adopt measures to ensure the prohibition of forced abortions and forced sterilizations and raise awareness of forced medical interventions as harmful practices and ensure that the prior and informed consent of persons with disabilities is given for any medical and surgical treatment;

(c) Ensure patient rights' brochures, social media posts and guidebooks are in accessible formats such as Easy Read and plain language and known by persons with disabilities, doctors and health personnel in all health care facilities;

(d) Provide sufficient remedies, including compensation, reparation and rehabilitation to persons with disabilities who have been subjected to any forced medical intervention, ensuring that information retrieved by the Human Rights and Equality Institution is expeditiously processed and that victims are assisted.

30. The Committee is concerned that persons with disabilities, especially women with psychosocial or intellectual disabilities, are subjected to forced sterilization without their consent.

31. The Committee recommends that the State party prevent and prohibit all forms of coercive medical treatment, including forced sterilization, on persons with disabilities without their free and informed consent and ensure that no women or girls with psychosocial or intellectual disabilities are subject to forced sterilization.

30. The Committee is concerned about the reported forced sterilization of women and girls with disabilities, deprived of their legal capacity, placed under guardianship and living in institutions. It is also concerned by reports of so called "conversion therapy" being performed on LGBT+ persons without consent, by public and private health entities, and based upon the presumed or actual psychosocial disability of a person.

31. The Committee recommends ensuring that women and girls with disabilities have access to support to make important life decisions for themselves and are not subjected to sterilization without their full, free and informed consent. It also urges to put an end to the use of conversion therapy and offer support for persons with psychosocial disability which respects the gender identity and sexual orientation of a person.

32. The Committee is concerned about the reported incidents of forced sterilization of women with intellectual disabilities.

33. The Committee recommends that the State party takes measures to protect women with intellectual disabilities from involuntary sterilization, and ensure that force sterilization will not happen in practice in the future.

South Africa (2018)

32. The Committee notes with concern:

(a) That forced sterilisation and forced abortion of persons with disabilities, especially women with disabilities, and in particular those with psychosocial and/or intellectual disabilities, occur unabated;

(b) The lack of protection of persons with disabilities, especially those with psychosocial and/or intellectual disabilities, against the use of menstrual suppression drugs, including the use of experimental or new drugs and treatment without free and informed consent, which is also a condition of admission into some special education schools.

33. The Committee recommends that the State Party:

(a) Revise the South African Sterilisation Act No. 44, 1998, and Choice on Termination of Pregnancy Act No. 92, 1996, and remove provisions allowing for sterilisation and termination of pregnancy under substitute decision-making regime, and bring them in line with general comment No. 1 (2014) on supported decision-making;

(b) Adopt legislative and policy measures to prevent and prohibit forced sterilization and non-consensual abortions, ensuring, without exception, that persons with disabilities, especially women and girls with disabilities, and in particular persons with psychosocial and/or intellectual disabilities, including those deprived of their legal capacity, enjoy their right to free and informed consent;

(c) Abolish the use of menstrual suppression drugs, including the use of experimental or new drugs and treatment as a condition of admission into special education schools, notably schools for learners with intellectual disabilities and autism.

North Macedonia (2018)

32. The Committee is concerned that a legal guardian can authorize medical interventions, including abortion and sterilization, without free and informed consent of the person with disabilities.

33. The Committee urges the State party to adopt effective measures to ensure respect for the right to provide free, informed and prior consent of the person with disabilities to medical treatment, including sterilization and abortion, and to provide efficient support mechanisms for decision-making in the State party.

32. The Committee is concerned that persons with disabilities, particularly women with intellectual disabilities are subject to contraceptive methods without their consent, but with the consent of third persons. The Committee is concerned that there is no structure of control or oversight of the implementation of the prohibition of medical or scientific experiments without the actual consent of the person as foreseen in the Act on the Inclusion of Persons with Disabilities (2012).

33. The Committee recommends that the State party take the necessary measures to ensure that all medical procedures and treatments concerning persons with disabilities are contingent on their free and informed consent. It also recommends that the State party monitor the respect of laws prohibiting forced and medical or scientific experiments without the actual consent of the person.

33. The Committee is concerned about:

(a) The forced sterilization of persons with disabilities, especially women and girls, and in particular those with psychosocial and/or intellectual disabilities;

(b) Insufficient protection of persons with disabilities, especially those with psychosocial and/or intellectual disabilities, against medical and scientific experimentation, including the use of experimental or new drugs and treatment methods related to the care of patients with psychosocial and/or intellectual disabilities without their free and informed consent.

34. The Committee urges the State party to:

(a) Ensure that both in law and in practice that persons with disabilities are not subjected to forced sterilization, especially women and girls, and in particular persons with psychosocial and/or intellectual disabilities, including those deprived of their legal capacity; and that perpetrators are prosecuted and sanctioned, as necessary, and provide remedies to persons subjected to forced sterilization;

(b) Undertake all necessary measures, both in law and in practice, to protect all persons with disabilities, in particular those with psychosocial and/or intellectual disabilities, against medical and scientific experimentation, including the use of experimental or new drugs and treatment methods, without their free and informed consent.

Russian Federation (2018)

38. The Committee is concerned about the reported instances of forced sterilization of persons with disabilities, especially women and girls with intellectual and/or psycho-social disabilities and autistic persons, including when consent is given by the guardian of the person subjected to sterilization.

39. The Committee recommends that the State party take appropriate measures to prevent any forced sterilization of persons with disabilities, including women and girls with intellectual and/or psycho-social disabilities without that individual's free and informed consent with effective safeguards available for the concerned persons.

Sudan (2018)

35. The Committee is concerned that sterilization without the free and informed consent of women and girls with disabilities is not explicitly prohibited.

36. The Committee recommends that the State party explicitly prohibit the forced sterilization of persons with disabilities, in particular women and girls, and criminalize such practice.

Luxembourg (2017)

34. The Committee is concerned about reports of the forced administration of contraceptives to women with disabilities of reproductive age, particularly of women and girls with disabilities with intellectual disabilities still living in State-funded institutions. It is also concerned that persons with disabilities are still subject to medical treatments without their free and informed consent, particularly persons still under guardianship.

35. The Committee recommends that the State party adopt all legislative and other measures necessary to prevent and stop non-consensual contraception measures or medical treatment, including when consent is given by a third party.

34. The Committee notes with concern that, pursuant to article 24 of the Protection and Exercise of the Rights of the Mentally Ill Act, biomedical research may under certain circumstances be carried out on persons with intellectual and/or psychosocial disabilities without their prior, informed and fully voluntarily given consent.

35. The Committee urges the State party to expedite all necessary legal amendments to ensure that any form of medical or other scientific research may not be carried out on persons with disabilities without their prior, informed and fully voluntarily given consent. The Committee reminds the State party that such consent cannot be given via substituted decision-making.

36. The Committee notes with concern that persons with disabilities in the State party, particularly intersex persons with disabilities, are subjected to corrective surgeries and to the practice of forced sterilization, including forced chemical castration.

37. The Committee recommends that the State party prohibit and criminalize the practice of corrective surgeries on intersex persons with disabilities, in the absence of prior and informed consent, and the practice of forced sterilization, including forced chemical castration. It also recommends that the State party raise awareness of such practices as harmful and strengthen mechanisms aimed at ensuring that the informed consent of persons with disabilities is given for any medical and surgical treatment.

40. The Committee is concerned by the regulations being adopted regarding mental health care. It is also concerned at the lack of information on forced sterilization and forced abortion.

41. The Committee urges the State party to prevent and prohibit forced sterilization and non-consensual abortions, ensuring, without exception, that persons with disabilities, including those whose legal capacity has been revoked, enjoy their right to free and informed consent. In addition, the Committee requests the State party to compile and publish clear statistics on the number of persons with disabilities subjected to forced sterilization or non-consensual abortion.

40. The Committee is concerned that persons with disabilities, including women, intersex persons, girls and boys, reportedly continue to be subjected to involuntary medical treatment, including forced sterilization and conversion surgeries.

41. The Committee recommends that the State party repeal all types of legislation, regulations and practices allowing any form of forced intervention or surgery, and ensure that the right to free, prior and informed consent to treatment is upheld and that supported decision-making mechanisms and strengthened safeguards are provided, paying particular attention to women, intersex persons, girls and boys.

32. The Committee is concerned that a legal guardian may authorize medical interventions, without the free and informed consent of the person with disabilities.

33. The Committee urges the State party to adopt effective measures to ensure respect for the right of free, informed and prior consent by persons with disabilities for medical treatment, and to provide efficient support mechanisms for decision-making in the State party.

35. The Committee notes with concern that although forced or compulsory sterilization is illegal in Canada, people with disabilities, particularly people with intellectual and/or psychosocial disabilities, still experience involuntary sterilization through the manipulation of their consent.

36. The Committee recommends that the State party work with provinces and territories to ensure that health-care and substitute decision-making practices prevent involuntary sterilization, including in situations where persons with disabilities are deemed to lack legal capacity to consent. The State party should ensure the development of human rights education and training programmes for health-care providers to prevent non-consensual sterilization and/or manipulated consent of people with disabilities.

41. The Committee is concerned that, according to relevant legislation, persons with disabilities may be subjected to intrusive therapy and other medical treatments without their free and informed consent, including free and informed consent based on supported decision-making. It is also concerned about the insufficiency of safeguards to ensure full access to and respect of persons with disabilities' sexual and reproductive health and rights, in particular those of women and girls, including by enabling them to retain their fertility under all circumstances.

42. The Committee recommends that the State party take immediate steps to abolish all forms of guardianship and ensure, including through supported decision-making and adequate counselling, that any subjection to intrusive medical or surgical treatment without the individual, prior and fully free and informed consent, is prevented, and that personal integrity, autonomy and self-determination of persons with disabilities is guaranteed in accordance with general comment No. 1 (2014), with a particular focus on women and girls with disabilities. It furthermore recommends that the State party adopt appropriate safeguards in order to ensure that persons with disabilities enjoy full autonomy with respect to their sexual and reproductive rights, on an equal basis with others, including by enabling them to retain their fertility, and that awareness of that issue be promoted among health professionals and the general public.

43. Al Comité le preocupa que las personas con discapacidad, especialmente mujeres y niñas, sean objeto de esterilizaciones forzadas y otras formas de tratamientos anticonceptivos no consentidos.

44. El Comité recomienda que se adopten todas las medidas necesarias para asegurar la abolición de todas las prácticas de esterilizaciones forzadas y abortos coercitivos de mujeres y niñas con discapacidad, así como que se garantice el consentimiento libre e informado de todas las personas con discapacidad para cualquier intervención o tratamiento médico.

36. The Committee notes with concern that persons with psychosocial and/or intellectual disabilities could be subjected to forced sterilization at the request of third parties, including guardians.

37. The Committee recommends that the State party repeal legislation that allows for sterilization of persons with intellectual and/or psychosocial disabilities upon request of guardians and establish a mechanism of supported decision-making about sexual and reproductive health and rights. It also recommends that the State party ensure that free and informed consent is provided prior to any form of medical treatment.

35. The Committee is deeply concerned about the practice of subjecting persons with disabilities, especially women and girls with intellectual and psychosocial disabilities, to sterilization, despite its prohibition in the fatwa issued in Decision No. 194-02 of 2014.

36. The Committee urges the State party to:

(a) Cease the practice of sterilization in the absence of the individual's free and informed consent;

(b) Adopt the proposed amendments to the Criminal Code, prohibiting forced sterilization, ensure that perpetrators are prosecuted and sanctioned, as necessary, and provide remedies to persons subjected to forced sterilization, including adequate compensation and rehabilitation.

34. The Committee is concerned about discriminatory Ministry of Health regulations that specify "mental disability" as a criterion for sterilization. It is also concerned about reports of forced contraceptive measures, including forced sterilization and abortion, particularly involving women with psychosocial and/or intellectual disabilities, especially those still in residential institutions.

35. The Committee urges the State party to repeal and amend any legislation and regulations permitting the forced or involuntary sterilization of persons with disabilities, and to prevent and stop the use of non-consensual contraceptive measures, including cases where consent is given by a third party.

43. The Committee is concerned that sterilization and other surgical procedures are performed without the free and informed consent of persons with disabilities, and with no other authorization than that of the guardian or legal representative, or by court order.

44. The Committee urges the State party to abolish the practice of sterilization of persons with disabilities without their free and informed consent and/or by decision of a third party, and recommends the adoption of protocols to regulate such consent in all surgical, psychiatric and other invasive procedures.

45. The Committee deplores the acts of violence committed against the physical and psychosocial integrity of persons with disabilities as they exercised their legitimate right to demonstrate in public. It is also concerned at reports of excessive use of force, intimidation and physical and verbal violence by police officers, resulting in physical injury to demonstrators, including women and children with disabilities.

46. The Committee urges the State party to launch an impartial and independent investigation to determine responsibility for the acts of repression and the use of violence during demonstrations by persons with disabilities, with the aim of bringing the perpetrators to justice and providing physical and psychosocial redress for those concerned.

46. The Committee is concerned that the sterilization of persons with disabilities without their consent, and with the authorization of a judge, is a legal practice, and has been confirmed by decisions of the Constitutional Court (C-182 of 13 April 2016 and T-303 of 2016), including the ordering of exceptions to Act No. 1412 of 2010 to authorize the sterilization of children with cognitive and psychosocial disabilities (C-131 of 2014).

47. The Committee urges the State party to take the necessary steps to abolish the sterilization of persons with disabilities without their free and informed consent, including the repeal of article 6 of Act No. 1412 of 2010. It recommends immediately reviewing the decisions of the Constitutional Court, with a view to maintaining the prohibition, without exception, of sterilization of persons with disabilities, particularly children, without their free and informed consent, and taking measures, including the training of judges and prosecutors, with the involvement of organizations of persons with disabilities, on the rights of persons with disabilities and the international obligations of the State party, mainly those relating to non-discrimination on grounds of disability and the personal integrity of children with disabilities.

37. The Committee is concerned that forced treatment on the basis of impairment still exist, especially based on third-party consent. It is also concerned that medical personnel working with persons with disabilities are not adequately trained on the rights of persons with disabilities, especially the right to free, prior and informed consent.

38. The Committee recommends that the State party ensure that forced treatment on the grounds of disability is fully prohibited. It also recommends that the State party train medical personnel working with persons with disabilities on the Convention, particularly on the right to free, prior and informed consent, in line with the Committee's general comment No. 1.

39. The Committee is concerned at the existence of harmful practices, such as female genital mutilation, which include women and girls with disabilities.

40. The Committee recommends that the State party effectively address female genital mutilation both in law and in practice, including women and girls with disabilities. It also recommends that the State party take into account article 17 of the Convention while implementing target 5.3 of the Sustainable Development Goals.

Guatemala (2016)

49. The Committee is concerned that persons with disabilities, especially women and girls who have been sexually abused, deprived of their legal capacity and/or institutionalized, are subject to sterilization, abortion and other contraceptive treatments without their consent.

50. The Committee recommends that the State party adopt all possible measures to ensure that no women or girls with disabilities are subject to forced sterilization or abortion and that all medical procedures and treatments concerning persons with disabilities are contingent on their free and informed consent.

45. The Committee is concerned that children are subjected to irreversible surgery for intersex variation and other medical treatments without their free and informed consent.

46. The Committee recommends that the State party ensure that no one is subjected to scientific undocumented medical or surgical treatment during infancy or childhood; that it guarantee bodily integrity, autonomy and self-determination to the children concerned; and that it provide families with intersex children with adequate counselling and support.

United Arab Emirates (2016)

33. The Committee is concerned that the national legislation, including article 13 of Federal Act No. 10 of 2008, permits the involuntary or forced sterilization of persons with disabilities, and allows sterilization when consent is given by a third party.

34. The Committee recommends that the State party repeal article 13 of Federal Act No. 10 of 2008 and review its legislation to explicitly prohibit involuntary or forced sterilization of persons with disabilities, including sterilization when consent is given by a third party.

43. Preocupa al Comité que en el Estado parte se siga aplicando la Ley 9581, de 1936, sobre atención de enfermos psiquiátricos y las reglamentaciones que en materia de atención a la salud mental dicte el Ministerio de Salud Pública.

44. El Comité recomienda al Estado parte que revise la Ley 9581 de 1936 y las reglamentaciones que en materia de atención a la salud mental dicte el Ministerio de Salud, garantizando sin excepción el consentimiento libre e informado de personas con discapacidad, incluyendo a aquéllas declaradas interdictas, como requisito indispensable para toda intervención quirúrgica o tratamiento médico, particularmente los de carácter invasivo y aquéllos con efectos irreversibles tales como la esterilización y las cirujías a niños y niñas intersex.

41. Preocupa al Comité que en el Estado parte se sigan practicando esterilizaciones sin consentimiento libre e informado a personas con discapacidad, en su mayoría mujeres y niñas, con tan solo una solicitud de familiar o tutor, así como las evidencias de que esta es una práctica frecuente entre personas con discapacidad psicosocial ingresadas en los centros psiquiátricos.

42. El Comité solicita al Estado Parte que revise la Ley núm. 20584 y el Decreto 570, garantizando sin excepción el consentimiento libre e informado de personas con discapacidad, incluyendo de aquellas declaradas interdictas, como requisito indispensable para toda intervención quirúrgica o tratamiento médico, particularmente los de carácter invasivo y aquéllos con efectos irreversibles tales como la esterilización y las cirugías a niños y niñas intersex.

37. The Committee is concerned about the provision of the Civil Code of 2000 that makes it possible for persons with disabilities who have been deprived of legal capacity to undergo, without their consent, surgical operations, including castrations, sterilizations, abortions and operations for the removal of organs, upon authorization by a court. It is also concerned at the lack of investigation of and data on the forced sterilization of persons with disabilities.

38. The Committee recommends that the State party:

(a) Abolish all practices of forced treatment, including non-consensual castrations, sterilizations and abortions, and eliminate the possibility for third parties such as guardians, doctors and the courts to approve such practices, in accordance with article 12 and the Committee's general comment No. 1;

(b) Provide training for judges and health-care workers on recognition of the legal capacity of persons with disabilities and the mechanisms of supported decision-making;

(c) Collect disaggregated, reliable data on the forced sterilization of persons with disabilities.

Portugal (2016)

36. The Committee is concerned that persons with disabilities, and especially those who have been declared legally incapacitated, continue to be subjected against their will to termination of pregnancy, sterilisation, scientific research, electroconvulsive therapy, and psychosurgical intervention.

37. The Committee recommends that the State party adopt all possible measures to ensure respect for the right to provide free, informed and prior consent to medical treatment and to provide support mechanisms for decision making in the State party.

33. The Committee is concerned that a legal guardian can authorise medical interventions, including sterilization, without the free and informed consent of a person with disability.

34. The Committee recommends the State Party prohibit medical interventions without the prior consent of persons with disabilities and provide sufficient remedies and compensation to those subjected to such procedures.

35. The Committee is deeply concerned at reports indicating regular use of physical restraint, isolation, and excessive antipsychotic therapy, including for children.

36. The Committee recommends the State party investigate all cases of forced interventions without the free and informed consent of the person, provide protection and redress mechanisms and apply sanctions already available.

37. The Committee is concerned that persons with disabilities, especially those who have been declared legally incapacitated, are still subject against their will to contraceptive treatments, abortion, sterilization, scientific research, electroconvulsive therapy or psychosurgical interventions.

38. The Committee recommends that the State party take all necessary measures to ensure that the right to free, prior and informed consent for any kind of treatment that may affect a person with a disability, regardless of her/his legal capacity. It also recommends that support for decision making regimes for persons with disabilities are provided when necessary.

49. The Committee is concerned that persons with disabilities are subjected to involuntary commitment and treatment procedures without their free and informed consent.

50. The Committee recommends that the State party amend legislation and policies to ensure that all persons with disabilities provide their free and informed consent to admission procedures and all forms of treatment.

51. The Committee is concerned that the Health Care Act authorizes guardians to make decisions for women, whose legal capacity has been restricted, on their sterilization and use of contraception. The Committee is also concerned about the lack of investigations and provisions of redress for cases of forced sterilization.

52. The Committee recommends that the State party abolish all forms of guardianship and replace them with supported decision-making regimes, as well as investigate and provide redress for historical cases of forced sterilization, including for Roma women with disabilities.

35. The Committee is concerned that persons with disabilities, including women, girls and boys with disabilities, continue to be subjected to involuntary medical treatment, including forced sterilization and abortion.

36. The Committee recommends that the State party take efficient measures to protect persons with disabilities, including women, girls and boys, from forced interventions, especially sterilization and abortion, and ensure that the individual's right to free, prior and informed consent to treatment is upheld and supported decision-making mechanisms are provided.

Uganda (2016)

32. The Committee observes with concern that harmful practices and sexual abuse of women with disabilities are based on harmful stereotypes that consider women with disabilities asexual and pure and that suggest that having sexual intercourse with them might cure HIV/AIDS.

33. The Committee calls upon the State party to:

(a) Adopt measures including a clear public statement and campaigns to end harmful practices against women with disabilities, and prosecute perpetrators;

(b) Adopt a strategy that includes community associations and organizations of women with disabilities to raise awareness about their rights and dignity and inform victims about available protection mechanisms.

34. The Committee is concerned about laws that allow forced medical treatment for persons with disabilities and suchlike practices. Furthermore, the Committee is concerned about the prevalence of female genital mutilation.

35. The Committee recommends that the State party repeal all laws and practices allowing or perpetuating forced treatment of persons with disabilities. It recommends that the State party develop alternative modes of medical treatment that respect the dignity, will and preferences of persons with disabilities in consultation with organizations of persons with disabilities. It also recommends that the State party criminalize the practice of female genital mutilation.

Brazil (2015)

34. The Committee is deeply concerned that children and adults with disabilities whose legal capacity is restricted through interdiction can be sterilized without their free and informed consent, pursuant to Law No. 9263/1996. It is also concerned that the Statute of Persons with Disabilities (Lei Brasileira de Inclusão da Pessoa com Deficiência), authorizes surgical treatment on persons with disabilities under curatela, in absence of free, prior and informed consent on an unequal basis with others.

35. The Committee recommends the State party take measures to:

- (a) immediately revise Law No. 9263/1996 and explicitly and unconditionally prohibit the sterilization of persons with disabilities in the absence of their individual prior, fully informed and free consent;
- (b) ensure that persons with disabilities are provided with support to make informed choices and decisions regarding medical procedures and interventions; and
- (c) conduct campaigns to raise awareness among families, guardians, medical professionals and managers of institutions of the rights of persons with disabilities, particularly women and girls with disabilities, under article 17 of the Convention.

European Union (2015)

46. The Committee is concerned that persons with disabilities are exposed to involuntary treatment in European Union Member States, including forced sterilisation and abortion.

47. The Committee recommends that the European Union take possible measures to ensure the individual right to free and informed consent to treatment is upheld and supporting decision-making mechanisms are provided in EU Member States.

40. The Committee is concerned that, according to information provided by the State party delegation, the practice of female genital mutilation "only affects women and girls with disabilities who are foreigners", considering this a "cultural issue".

41. The Committee recommends that the State party adopt all appropriate legal and administrative measures to eradicate female genital mutilation, for all women and girls, including women and girls with disabilities, whatever their country of origin, in accordance to the Committee on the Elimination of Discrimination against Women's General Recommendation No. 14 (1990).

33. The Committee observes with concern that women with disabilities have been victims of forced sterilization and that genital mutilation affects women and girls with disabilities, although is a practice prohibited by law.

34. The Committee calls the State party to:

- (a) Establish mechanisms to monitor health care facilities and adopt measures to prohibit forced sterilization and ensure that adequate information is provided in accessible formats for all women and girls with disabilities concerning their sexual and reproductive rights; and
- (b) Implement the recommendations issued by the Committee on the Elimination of Discrimination against Women in 2011 (CEDAW/C/KEN/CO/7) relevant to female genital mutilation, and ensure that the action plan of the Anti-FGM Board includes compilation of information on women and girls subjected to such a practice and mechanisms for their reparation and redress.

Mauritius (2015)

29. The Committee is concerned about the absence of safeguards to prevent forced treatment of persons with disabilities in hospitals and institutions, especially women and girls with disabilities from forced sterilization.

30. The Committee recommends that the State party unambiguously prohibit forced treatment of persons with disabilities, as well as the forced sterilization women and girls with disabilities, in the absence of the individual's free and informed consent.

33. The Committee is concerned about the lack of information indicating whether or not persons with disabilities, particularly persons with intellectual and/or psychosocial disabilities, can be subjected to medical interventions, notably to involuntary or coerced sterilization against their will.

34. The Committee recommends that the State party ensure that no medical treatment, in particular involuntary and coerced sterilization, is administered without the full and informed consent of the person concerned and requests that information in this regard is included in the next periodic report.

34. The Committee notes with concern that under article 281 of the Civil Code the guardian of a person recognized as legally incapable is authorized to give consent to the sterilization of the person concerned, thus subjecting that person to forced sterilization without his/ her free and informed consent.

35. The Committee urges the State party to abolish the practice of sterilization without free and informed consent of the person with disability, and to abolish article 281 of the Civil Code accordingly. The Committee also calls upon the State party to provide remedies to the victims of forced sterilization.

Cook Islands (2015)

35. The Committee is concerned that current legislation does not protect women and girls with disabilities from forced sexual and reproductive health procedures nor does it provide sexual and reproductive health education.

36. The Committee recommends that the State party:

(a) Revise the Criminal Code and any other relevant laws to protect women and girls with disabilities from coerced sterilization, contraception and other forced medication without the individual's free and informed consent;

(b) Introduce accessible sexual and reproductive health education programmes in schools and the community that are inclusive of young persons with disabilities, including women and girls.

Croatia (2015)

27. The Committee is deeply concerned that children and adults with disabilities can be sterilized without their free and informed consent pursuant to the Health Act, in cases where their parents or guardians have so requested. It is further concerned about frequent use of forced medical treatment of persons with disabilities.

28. The Committee recommends that:

(a) the Health Act be urgently amended to unconditionally prohibit the sterilization of boys and girls with disabilities, and of adults with disabilities in the absence of their individual prior, fully informed and free consent;

(b) persons with disabilities are provided with support to make informed choices and decisions regarding medical procedures and interventions, and

(c) medical professionals are trained in accessible and alternative communication techniques in order to communicate with persons with intellectual, psycho-social and sensory impairments.

Czech Republic (2015)

36. The Committee notes with concern that under the Civil Code and the Health Care Act the guardian of person with disability is authorized to give consent to the sterilization of the person concerned, thus subjecting that person to forced sterilization without his/ her free and informed consent.

37. The Committee urges the State party to abolish the practice of sterilization without free and informed consent of the person with disability, and to amend the Civil Code and the Health Care Act accordingly. The Committee also calls upon the State party to provide remedies to the victims of forced sterilization in accordance with the recommendations made by the Human Rights Committee (CCPR/C/CZE/CO/3) and the Committee on the Elimination of Discrimination against Women (CEDAW/C/CZE/CO/5).

34. The Committee is concerned about the practice of the forced sterilization of women and girls with disabilities, who are declared “legally incompetent”.

35. The Committee recommends that the State party prohibit the forced sterilization of women and girls with disabilities and that it have cases of sterilization reviewed by an independent authority, that it conduct investigations and punish perpetrators, and that it adopt measures for the compensation and reparation of victims. It also recommends that a mechanism be established to oversee cases of sterilization to ensure that persons with disabilities can give free and informed consent.

Germany (2015)

37. The Committee is concerned about: a) the lack of available data of involuntary placement and treatment; b) the practice of forced sterilisation and coercive abortions by substituted consent of adults with disabilities; c) the lack of implementation of the 2011 recommendations CAT/C/DEU/CO/5, para. 20, regarding upholding bodily integrity of intersex children.

38. The Committee recommends that the State party take the necessary measures, including of a legislative nature to:

(a) Repeal section 1905 of the German Civil Code and explicitly prohibit in law sterilisation without the full and informed consent of the individual concerned, eliminating all exceptions including by substituted consent or upon court approval;

(b) Ensure that all psychiatric treatments and services are always delivered with the free and informed consent of the individual concerned;

(c) Investigate human rights violations in psychiatric and older persons care settings in all Länder;

(d) Implement all the recommendations of CAT/C/DEU/CO/5, para. 20 relevant to intersex children.

Mongolia (2015)

29. The Committee is concerned with the measures taken by the State party “to prevent conception in persons with genetically psychosocial or intellectual disorders, or psychosocial or intellectually impaired persons” without informed consent as specified in Article 37(b) of the Law on Health.

30. The Committee urges the State party to eliminate the legislative provisions from the Law on Health, bylaws and related regulations restricting sexual and reproductive rights, and that allow forced sterilisation, and abortion for women with disabilities, in particular psychosocial and intellectual disabilities.

35. The Committee is concerned that termination of pregnancy and sterilization as a method of contraception may be performed based on “medical necessity” only, without the person with disability’s individual free and informed consent.

36. The Committee recommends that the State party review its legislation in order to introduce safeguards and ensure that termination of pregnancy and sterilization are only carried out with the prior, free and informed consent of the person concerned with safeguards.

37. The Committee is concerned that parents may give consent for the sterilization of their disabled children, and that courts may order that adults undergo sterilization without the individual's consent.

38. The Committee recommends that the State party enact legislation prohibiting the use of sterilization on boys and girls with disabilities, and on adults with disabilities, in the absence of their prior, fully informed and free consent.

33. The Committee is concerned about cases of forced sterilization of women with disabilities despite legal provisions prohibiting the practice. It is also concerned about the absence of information on investigations undertaken by the State party on this matter.

34. The Committee urges the State party to take measures to eradicate the practice of forced sterilization, including by raising awareness of the rights of women and girls with disabilities among their families, in communities and within institutions, and by ensuring that mechanisms providing protection against forced sterilization are effective and accessible. The Committee recommends that the State party carry out investigations into recent and current cases of forced sterilization.

37. The Committee is concerned that persons with disabilities are being sterilized without their free and informed consent in institutions such as Casa Hogar Esperanza, where, according to reports received by the Committee, forced or coerced sterilization is recommended to, authorized or performed on girls, adolescents and women with disabilities.

38. The Committee urges the State party to launch administrative and criminal investigations into the judicial and health authorities and institutions that recommend, authorize or perform forced sterilizations on girls, adolescents and women with disabilities and to guarantee access to justice and reparation for victims.

37. The Committee is deeply concerned at the practice of forcing women and girls with disabilities to undergo sterilization.

38. The Committee urges the State party to take steps to eradicate the practice of forced sterilization, to raise awareness of the rights of women and girls with disabilities within their families and among managers of the institutions in which they are interned, and to guarantee full respect for their personal, physical and mental integrity by ensuring that mechanisms providing protection against forced sterilization are effective and accessible.

Australia (2013)

39. The Committee is deeply concerned that the Senate Inquiry Report into the Involuntary or Coerced Sterilisation of Persons with Disabilities, released in July 2013, presents recommendations, which would allow this practice to continue. The Committee further regrets the failure of Australia to implement the recommendations from the Committee on the Rights of the Child (CRC/C/15/Add.268; CRC/C/AUS/CO/4), the Human Rights Council (A/HRC/17/10), and the Report of the UN Special Rapporteur on Torture (A/HRC/22/53), which addresses concerns regarding sterilisation of children and adults with disabilities.

40. The Committee urges the State party to adopt national uniform legislation prohibiting the use of sterilisation of boys and girls with disabilities, and of adults with disability in the absence of their prior, fully informed and free consent.

37. The Committee is concerned at the fact that the law permits the forced sterilization of women with disabilities and the abortion of pregnancies often resulting from sexual abuse, as well as the paucity of information about how the use of physical and pharmaceutical restraint and similar treatments in psychiatric facilities undermines the integrity of the person and about cases brought before the Office of the Human Rights Advocate.

38. The Committee recommends that the State party repeal provisions permitting the forced sterilization of women with disabilities and that it prevent and investigate the practice of aborting pregnancies resulting from sexual abuse. It also recommends that the State party ensure that the administrative authorities provide the information needed to monitor the situation of persons with disabilities in psychiatric hospitals.

Argentina (2012)

31. The Committee regrets that, in cases where a woman with disabilities is under guardianship, her legal representative may give consent for a legal abortion on her behalf. It is likewise concerned that persons with disabilities are being sterilized without their free and informed consent.

32. The Committee recommends that the State party amend article 86 of its Criminal Code and article 3 of Contraceptive Surgery Act No. 26.130 so that they will be in accordance with the Convention and take steps to provide the necessary support to women under guardianship or trusteeship to ensure that the women themselves are the ones who give their informed consent for a legal abortion or for sterilization.

37. The Committee is concerned that persons with disabilities whose legal capacity is not recognized may be subjected to sterilization without their free and informed consent.

38. The Committee urges the State party to abolish the administration of medical treatment, in particular sterilization, without the full and informed consent of the patient; and ensure that national law especially respects women's rights under articles 23 and 25 of the Convention.

Tunisia (2010)

28. The Committee is concerned about the lack of clarity concerning the scope of legislation to protect persons with disabilities from being subjected to treatment without their free and informed consent, including forced treatment in mental health services.

29. The Committee recommends that the State party incorporate into the law the abolition of surgery and treatment without the full and informed consent of the patient, and ensure that national law especially respects women's rights under article 23 and 25 of the Convention.

*Article 18 CRPD
(Liberty of movement and nationality)*

September 2025

Article 18 - Liberty of movement and nationality

1. States Parties shall recognize the rights of persons with disabilities to liberty of movement, to freedom to choose their residence and to a nationality, on an equal basis with others, including by ensuring that persons with disabilities:

- a) Have the right to acquire and change a nationality and are not deprived of their nationality arbitrarily or on the basis of disability;*
- b) Are not deprived, on the basis of disability, of their ability to obtain, possess and utilize documentation of their nationality or other documentation of identification, or to utilize relevant processes such as immigration proceedings, that may be needed to facilitate exercise of the right to liberty of movement;*
- c) Are free to leave any country, including their own;*
- d) Are not deprived, arbitrarily or on the basis of disability, of the right to enter their own country.*

2. Children with disabilities shall be registered immediately after birth and shall have the right from birth to a name, the right to acquire a nationality and, as far as possible, the right to know and be cared for by their parents.

33. The Committee is concerned about:

- (a) The lack of a mechanism to ensure that all children with disabilities are registered at birth;
- (b) Restrictions on freedom of movement through the requirement of advance travel clearance and checkpoints, which disproportionately affects persons with disabilities who may face additional barriers to mobility, including in accessing services for persons with disabilities;
- (c) The lack of information regarding practices limiting the freedom of residence of persons with disabilities, particularly persons of short stature.

34. The Committee recommends that the State Party:

- (a) Establish a mechanism to ensure that all children with disabilities are registered at birth;
- (b) Ensure that persons with disabilities can travel without restrictions throughout the State Party on an equal basis with others;
- (c) Take all necessary measures to ensure that persons with disabilities made to live in specific areas are allowed to reside elsewhere, inform them of this right and facilitate any such moves according to their wishes and preferences, on an equal basis with others.

34. The Committee notes with concern the State Party's plans to restrict health care access for irregular or undocumented migrants, including those with disabilities, to urgent healthcare, limiting access to assistive devices, rehabilitation and disability-related support.

35. The Committee recommends that the State Party withdraw and reconsider proposals before Parliament to restrict health care access for irregular or undocumented migrants with disabilities to urgent health care, and ensure access to non-urgent health care, including assistive devices, rehabilitation and disability-related support.

Kiribati (2025)

33. The Committee notes with concern:

- (a) That persons with disabilities face barriers in obtaining birth certificates, identity documents, and passports, particularly for those living on outer islands;
- (b) That there is a lack of reasonable accommodation in administrative procedures and the limited decentralization of civil registration services.

34. The Committee recommends that the State party take effective measures to guarantee the full enjoyment of the rights to liberty of movement and nationality for persons with disabilities, and in particular:

- (a) Ensure universal and accessible birth registration of all children with disabilities, including on outer islands, through mobile and digital civil registration services;
- (b) Accelerate the establishment of a National Identification System and ensure it is accessible to persons with disabilities, with reasonable accommodation provided in all administrative processes;
- (c) Decentralize access to passports and identity documents, including through mobile outreach and digital platforms, to ensure equal access for persons with disabilities on outer islands.

Maldives (2025)

35. The Committee is concerned:

- (a) That despite the existing legal provisions on birth registration for all, persons with disabilities face barriers to obtain civil documentation, which leads to lack of access to services;
- (b) At the lack of information about the situation of migrants with disabilities with regard to their access to support services and reasonable accommodation.

36. The Committee recommends that the State party:

(a) Remove barriers for persons with disabilities, including those living on the outer islands, in relation to their enjoyment of the right to nationality and citizenship, to enable them to exercise all the rights enshrined in the Convention;

(b) Adopt all necessary measures to ensure that migrants with disabilities, in particular women and girls with disabilities, are granted adequate support services, including gender-sensitive and age-appropriate accommodation, and that immigration regulations, both for foreign residents in the Maldives and for nationals traveling to third countries, are available in accessible formats, including sign language and interpretation systems.

35. The Committee is concerned that asylum-seekers and refugees with disabilities, in particular those with intellectual and/or psychosocial disabilities are more likely to be in immigration detention, can be detained in correctional facilities and subjected to solitary confinement if they express suicidal ideation or based on psychosocial disabilities, and are subjected to onerous release conditions in the community, such as requirements to enrol in residential treatment facilities where treatment and confinement is non-consensual.

36. The Committee recommends that the State Party end the use of immigration detention by increasing community-based, independent alternatives that provide access to holistic supports, such as housing, healthcare, mental health services, legal representation, disability-related supports, and children's services.

37. The Committee is concerned that section 38(1)(c) of the Immigration and Refugee Protection Act can preclude persons with disabilities, including persons living with HIV from obtaining permanent or temporary residency status.

38. The Committee recommends that the State Party repeal section 38(1)(c) of the Immigration and Refugee Protection Act.

33. The Committee is concerned about:

(a) The lack of data about the situation of persons with disabilities among persons of Haitian descent and migrants, particularly with the lack of comprehensive legal framework against racial discrimination;

(b) The limited access to rehabilitation services for migrants and refugees with disabilities and that most of these services are unaffordable because they are provided by the private sector.

34. The Committee recommends that the State party:

(a) Establish a data-collection mechanism to inform the development of targeted policies and programmes and to monitor the effectiveness of measures taken to support the rights of migrants, refugees and asylum-seekers with disabilities;

(b) Ensure free access for migrants, refugees and asylum-seekers with disabilities to quality rehabilitation services.

46. The Committee is concerned that:

(a) The European Disability Card and Parking Card do not encompass social security or social protection benefits essential for long-term relocation, and that Member States retain wide discretion in their definition of eligibility criteria and disability status;

(b) Persons with disabilities, including autistic persons and persons with intellectual and/or psychosocial disabilities, face particular obstacles in accessing assessment procedures to obtain disability recognition when moving between Member States;

(c) The New Pact on Migration and Asylum (2024) does not sufficiently address the situation of persons with disabilities, and that migration and asylum procedures subject persons with disabilities to purely medical-based assessments and do not contain clear procedures for conducting assessments;

(d) The limited protection of persons with disabilities in migration situations against detention, denial of access to territory and pushbacks.

47. The Committee recalls its previous Concluding Observations and Recommendations (para. 49) and recommends that the European Union:

(a) Extend the scope of the European Disability Card to long-term relocation and render social security or social protection benefits portable by, inter alia, outlining the shared responsibilities of Member States to provide disability support for EU citizens moving for long stays or permanently from one Member State to another, and ensuring mutual recognition of disability status;

(b) Ensure that disability assessment procedures are accessible to all persons with disabilities, including autistic persons, align assessment procedures with the human rights model of disability and the right to freedom of movement;

(c) Provide guidance and standards for procedural and reasonable accommodation and for assessment procedures for persons with disabilities in migration situations;

(d) Ensure that the implementation of the New Pact on Migration and Asylum respects the rights of persons with disabilities, and align policy and standards among Member States to prevent detention, pushbacks and denial of access to territory of persons with disabilities in migrant situations;

(e) Develop reception modalities for migrants with disabilities that do not entail their detention, and seek technical cooperation of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees to prevent detention in the context of migration.

33. The Committee notes that the State party's Constitution ensures freedom of movement, nationality, and rights protection, including for persons with disabilities, and that the "Seventy-Two (72) Hour Detention and Evaluation Act" provides judicial protection measures for persons with intellectual and/or psychosocial disabilities in detention. However, it is concerned:

(a) At the lack of mechanisms to operationalize these protections in practice, particularly for vulnerable populations such as migrants with disabilities, to ensure they have access to adequate support, services, and procedural accommodation during legal or therapeutic interventions;

(b) The limitation for stateless children, including children with disabilities, to obtain citizenship or an identification card, which exacerbates their vulnerability, preventing them from accessing resources to improve their quality of life and inclusion in society;

(c) Discrimination of stateless persons with disabilities, who were abandoned by migrant families and later adopted by Palauan families, who are unable to access citizenship as the Constitution stipulates that at least one of the parents must be Palauan.

34. The Committee recommends that the State party:

(a) Strengthen the mechanisms for legal safeguards for persons with disabilities, in particular persons with intellectual and/or psychosocial disabilities, and migrants with disabilities, ensuring that migrants with disabilities are provided with reasonable and procedural accommodations, as well as other necessary assistance under the 'Seventy-Two (72) Hour Detention and Evaluation Act' and related safeguards;

(b) Take legal and other measures to ensure that stateless children, particularly children with disabilities, are registered and granted citizenship, thereby enabling them to access necessary social services on an equal basis with others;

(c) Establish a legal procedure to grant citizenship to stateless persons with disabilities, especially those who have been raised in Palau and integrated into Palauan society, and have demonstrable long-term residency and cultural integration.

33. The Committee notes that the Constitution recognises the rights to freedom of movement and nationality. However, it is concerned about reports about persons with disabilities being removed by the police from streets, airport and other public spaces without their consent, and lack of information about practical measures to ensure and support persons with disabilities to enjoy those rights on equal basis with others.

34. The Committee recommends that the State party elaborate policy measures to guarantee the right to freedom of movement of persons with disabilities.

Viet Nam (2025)

35. The Committee is concerned that:

(a) Persons with disabilities, particularly those in rural or institutionalized settings, face difficulties obtaining essential documents such as birth certificates and national identification cards, which impacts their access to rights;

(b) Immigration procedures remain inaccessible, restricting the freedom of movement for persons with disabilities;

(c) Persons with intellectual and/or psychosocial disabilities may encounter restrictions on international travel due to outdated classifications or guardianship.

36. The Committee recommends that the State party:

(a) Ensure all persons with disabilities have equal access to birth registration and official documentation, especially in remote areas or for those in institutionalized care;

(b) Implement disability-inclusive immigration procedures, including accessible visa processing and passport applications;

(c) Remove restrictions on international travel for persons with disabilities, particularly those with intellectual and/or psychosocial disabilities, ensuring full autonomy over their movement and decisions.

Belarus (2024)

35. The Committee is concerned about:

(a) The direct or indirect restrictions on the freedoms of activists with disabilities, and other human rights defenders with disabilities, on grounds of their civic activism or political expression;

(b) The reported violence by the border management officials against asylum seekers, including those with disabilities.

36. The Committee recommends that the State party:

(a) Remove all restrictions on the freedoms of the activists with disabilities, and ensure their full enjoyment of and exercise their liberty to reside in their country or to leave for elsewhere upon their free and individual choice;

(b) Ensure safety and respect of dignity of refugees and asylum seekers with disabilities eliminating forms of violence at the borders, as well as safeguard their freedom of movement and access to necessary services, including medical and humanitarian support.

Belgium (2024)

36. The Committee is concerned about:

(a) The negative impact on refugees and asylum seekers with disabilities and persons with disabilities in refugee-like situations caused by the delay in reception processes, including "vulnerability screening" to identify impairments, and the provision of housing, essential services, and disability assistance;

(b) Undocumented migrant families with children having no option but to be accommodated in community structures, even when shared accommodation is not appropriate for the child with disabilities or another family member with disabilities, and that, as a result, family members with disabilities are often prevented from accessing adapted accommodation structures.

37. The Committee recommends that the State party coordinate various levels of federal government to remedy the exceedingly long duration of reception processes and provide services to all persons with disabilities requesting international protection, including by ensuring speedy assessments of impairment and the requisite support requirements, provision of procedural accommodation and reasonable accommodation, essential services and disability-related support, accessible housing and accommodation, including for undocumented migrant families with children or family members with disabilities.

Benin (2024)

35. The Committee notes with concern that some children with disabilities particularly in rural areas are still not registered at birth. It is also concerned that persons with disabilities, including migrant persons with disabilities face barriers in obtaining birth certificates, nationality certificates and identity cards owing to the lack of accessibility of services and the lack of awareness among the population about the need to register.

36. The Committee recommends that the State party:

(a) Increase its efforts to raise awareness among parents and the general public of the importance of birth registration for their children, including children with disabilities, and organize regular campaigns to issue birth certificates and identity documents, in close consultation with and with the active involvement of persons with disabilities, through their representative organizations;

(b) Take appropriate measures to eliminate all obstacles that prevent persons with disabilities, including those living in remote and rural areas, from enjoying their rights to a nationality, birth registration and civil status documents, in order to enable them to exercise all the rights enshrined in the Convention;

(c) Put in place in national programmes measures to take account of the situation of migrant persons with disabilities, and persons with disabilities who are refugees and in refugee-like situations and to provide them with the documents necessary to enable them to enjoy freedom of movement.

Burkina Faso (2024)

34. The Committee is concerned that civil registration is not systematic, which will have the effect of depriving persons with disabilities of the enjoyment of education, health and other aspects of social and political life.

35. The Committee recommends that the State Party:

(a) Strengthen its efforts to establish a national system of free and mandatory birth registration which should be available and sustainable, including in the most remote areas, through the provision of decentralized registration offices with the necessary human, material and financial resources;

(b) Strengthen its awareness-raising activities about birth registration;

(c) Ensure that children with disabilities in refugee-like situations are provided with a birth certificate and that unregistered children with disabilities are not deprived of access to social services, and to provide specific support to families and persons with disabilities in the issuance of identification documents.

Denmark (2024)

53. The Committee is concerned about:

(a) The lack of support for refugees and asylum seekers with intellectual and/or psychosocial disabilities, and of persons with disabilities in refugee-like situations, in exercising their legal capacity during the asylum process;

(b) The marked decrease in the percentage of applicants with disabilities being granted exemptions from the stringent requirements for Danish citizenship, including knowledge and language tests.

54. The Committee recommends that the Kingdom of Denmark:

(a) Provide reasonable accommodation, procedural accommodation and support to persons with disabilities during the whole duration of the procedure;

(b) Effectively support refugees and asylum seekers with disabilities and persons with disabilities in refugee-like situations in exercising their legal capacity, including by providing legal assistance throughout their asylum application procedure;

(c) Amend the rules on exemptions from requirements for citizenship for persons with disabilities who cannot, due to their impairment, fulfil them, provide persons with disabilities with the requisite procedural accommodations in the citizenship application procedure, and implement these provisions.

Netherlands (2024)

41. The Committee is concerned about:

(a) The lack of information about accessibility of information and training and monitoring of people working with asylum seekers and refugee persons with disabilities;

(b) The omission to systematically collect disaggregated data on asylum seekers and refugees with disabilities.

42. The Committee recommends that the State party:

(a) Provide training for people working with asylum seekers, refugees and persons in refugee-like situations on the rights and requirements of persons with disabilities, ensuring the establishment of disability- and gender-responsive protocols;

(b) Establish a data collection mechanism to inform the development of targeted policies and programs and to monitor the effectiveness of measures taken to support the rights of refugees and asylum seekers with disabilities and of persons with disabilities in refugee-like situations.

Ukraine (2024)

36. The Committee is concerned about:

(a) The lack of comprehensive and reliable disaggregated data on internally displaced persons with disabilities, as well as the lack of information on their access to social and other entitlements;

(b) The lack of information on whether the number of border crossings have been expanded, including accessible crossings for persons with disabilities;

(c) Persistent difficulties in the provision of assistance to persons with disabilities who remain in occupied territories.

37. The Committee recommends that the State party:

(a) Collect information and statistical data on internally displaced persons with disabilities disaggregated by age, sex, gender, ethnic origin and other sociodemographic relevant characteristics, including information on where they are currently living, their living conditions and the support provided to them;

(b) Implement actions to provide information on border crossings by persons with disabilities and whether those crossings are accessible and as far as possible, ensure additional crosswalks accessible for them;

(c) Continue to increase actions to provide humanitarian aid to persons with disabilities in occupied territories.

Azerbaijan (2024)

41. The Committee is concerned about:

- (a) Gaps in the legislation governing asylum procedures, particularly due to the absence of procedural accommodation for persons with disabilities, including women and girls with disabilities and children with disabilities, throughout the status determination processes;
- (b) The lack of measures to ensure that migrant, refugee, asylum seekers and persons with disabilities in refugee-like situations have access to services in the community;
- (c) The lack of measures to examine asylum requests by persons with disabilities on the grounds of armed conflict, generalized violence or internal disturbances and when their expulsion could lead to violation of their rights to life, freedom from torture and security of the person;
- (d) The absence of a legal framework to prevent and address risk of statelessness among persons with disabilities.

42. The Committee recommends that the State party:

- (a) Mainstream the rights of persons with disabilities into refugee legislation, ensuring gender-sensitive and age-appropriate procedural accommodations, information about asylum procedures in accessible formats, and housing and accommodation throughout status determination processes;
- (b) Develop a comprehensive policy that is inclusive of migrants, asylum-seekers, refugee persons with disabilities, and those in refugee-like situations, aimed at ensuring access to support required to live independently and in the community, inclusive education, health, and work and employment;
- (c) Recognize in its legislation situations of armed conflict, generalized violence or internal disturbances and when their expulsion could lead to violation of their rights to life, freedom from torture and security of the person as additional grounds for requests and provision of refugee status and protection by persons with disabilities;
- (d) Adopt legal measures in line with international applicable standards to prevent statelessness of persons with disabilities.

36. Recalling the concluding observation of the Committee on the Elimination of Discrimination against Women (CEDAW/C/BHR/CO/4, para. 34), the Committee is concerned about:

- (a) The discriminatory provisions of the Nationality Law of 1963, which prevents Bahraini women from transmitting their nationality to their children if they are married to a foreign man, putting children with disabilities of a Bahraini mother and a foreign father at risk of remaining stateless.
- (b) Persons with disabilities with non-Bahraini parents are prevented from enjoying the rights and accessing the services provided for in Law No. 74 of 2006 on the Care, Rehabilitation and Employment of Persons with Disabilities; and
- (b) Discrimination against persons with psychosocial disabilities and persons with intellectual disabilities in the Nationality Law of 1963, which states in its article (6) that nationality is granted to a person with full capacity, and the same law defines full capacity in its article (2) as "not a minor and not of unsound mind".

37. Recalling the recommendation of the Committee on the Elimination of Discrimination against Women (CEDAW/C/BHR/CO/4, para. 35), the Committee recommends that the State party:

- (a) Amend the 1963 Nationality Law to grant Bahraini women, in particular women with disabilities, including when married to a foreign man, the right to transmit their nationality to their children, including children with disabilities.
- (b) Repeal the provision in Law No. 74 of 2006 on the Care, Rehabilitation and Employment of Persons with Disabilities that deprives persons with disabilities with non-Bahraini parents from enjoying the rights and accessing the services prescribed therein; (c) Repeal the provision in Law No. 74 of 2006 on the Care, Rehabilitation and Employment of Persons with Disabilities.

(c) Repeal the provision in the Nationality Law of 1963 that prevents persons from acquiring nationality on the basis of their mental disability.

Kazakhstan (2024)

39. The Committee is concerned about:

(a) Limited access of migrant persons with disabilities, including refugees and asylum-seekers with disabilities and persons with disabilities in refugee-like situations, to social security, disability-related allowances, inclusive education, specialized health care, health insurance, social housing and employment;

(b) The lack of residency and naturalization processes for refugees with disabilities;

(c) The risk of statelessness of migrant persons with disabilities due to legislation requiring foreign persons applying for citizenship of the State party to renounce their existing citizenship before they receive a binding decision on whether their application is granted;

(d) The vulnerability of stateless persons with disabilities due to the long duration of the processes for the determination of statelessness;

(e) Reports of lacunae in migration legislation and practice leading to insufficient protection of the principle of non-refoulement, and about barriers, including attitudinal and physical barriers in asylum procedures, restricting persons with disabilities, including persons with intellectual and/or psychosocial disabilities and persons with disabilities with HIV/AIDS, tuberculosis or other diseases, to apply for asylum.

40. The Committee recommends that the State party:

(a) Adopt legislation to ensure to migrant children and adults with disabilities, including refugees and asylum-seekers with disabilities and persons with disabilities in refugee-like situations who lack permanent resident status, legal recognition of their disability, access to social protection, including disability allowances, health insurance, equipment and mobility devices, housing, and inclusive education;

(b) Ensure that refugees with disabilities have effective access to residency and naturalization processes;

(c) Amend citizenship legislation to ensure that persons with disabilities applying for citizenship are not obliged to renounce their existing citizenship before they receive a binding decision on their application with the State party;

(d) Ratify the 1954 Convention relating to the Status of Stateless Persons and the 1961 Convention on the Reduction of Statelessness and ensure that procedures for the determination of statelessness are conducted with all deliberate speed, and guarantee access to identification, documents and registration;

(e) Ensure that migration legislation and practice protect the principle of non-refoulement without exception, and that persons with disabilities, including persons with intellectual and/or psychosocial disabilities, have full access to immigration and asylum procedures, including by providing procedural accommodation.

34. El Comité nota que la Ley de los Derechos de las Personas con Discapacidad (Ley N° 763), indica que todas las personas con discapacidad tienen derecho a estar inscritos en el Registro Público de Personas, sin embargo, preocupa al Comité la información recabada en el censo del Programa “Todos con Voz” del Ministerio de Salud y otros estudios reflejan que existe una brecha significativa entre las personas con discapacidad que no se encuentran registradas civilmente versus el resto de la población, especialmente en el área rural donde se ha detectado carencia de documentos legales para diversos trámites, incluyendo la cédula de identidad ciudadana y certificado de nacimiento, lo que dificulta aún más el registro de las personas con discapacidad.

35. El Comité recomienda al Estado parte que intensifique las acciones establecidas en el artículo 22 de la Ley de los Derechos de las Personas con Discapacidad (Ley No. 763), incluyendo en las zonas rurales y remotas, y que obtenga estadísticas confiables del subregistro actual de nacimientos, específicamente de personas con discapacidad.

36. Al Comité le preocupa también que:

- a) El Estado parte sea un país de origen, tránsito y destino de la trata de personas, en particular mujeres y niñas, ignorándose cuántas mujeres y niñas con discapacidad son víctimas de este delito;
- b) Se cuente con información de que se le ha negado el regreso al Estado parte a varios nacionales nicaragüenses, entre los cuales podría haber personas con discapacidad;
- c) Que la Ley General de Migración y Extranjería (Ley no. 761) carece de medidas específicas que impidan la detención de migrantes con discapacidad;
- d) La persistencia del uso de la fuerza por miembros de los cuerpos de seguridad militares y de la policía al tratar con migrantes, incluidos aquellos con discapacidad.

37. En consonancia con la meta 10.7 de los Objetivos de Desarrollo Sostenible, el Comité recomienda al Estado parte que:

- a) Revise urgentemente las razones por las que está siendo un país de origen, tránsito y destino de la trata de personas, en particular mujeres y niñas, investigando cuántas mujeres y niñas con discapacidad son víctimas de este delito;
- b) Evitar la denegación de la entrada o salida de connacionales al Estado parte e investigue cuantos de los señalados son personas con discapacidad;
- c) Modifique la Ley General de Migración y Extranjería (Ley núm. 761) para que contemple en su reglamento medidas claras para eliminar la detención de migrantes con discapacidad;
- d) Prohíba y sancione el uso de la fuerza por miembros de los cuerpos de seguridad militares y de la policía al tratar con migrantes, particularmente aquellos con discapacidad.

Sweden (2024)

41. The Committee is concerned about:

- (a) The negative impact of the Tidö-agreement on migrants with disabilities and their access to all forms of welfare including healthcare, personal assistance and housing, and proposals to limit access to citizenship to those who can support themselves for 8 years;
- (b) The lack of uniform application of legislation on provision of support services in different regions and municipalities, resulting in loss of some support services when moving from one municipality to another.

42. The Committee recommends that the State party take all legislative, administrative and other measures to:

- (a) Ensure access to all forms of welfare and essential supports, including disability-specific supports, for migrants with disabilities is available without discrimination;
- (b) Develop a national framework, in close consultation and active involvement of organisations of persons with disabilities, for ensuring mobility of support services across municipalities.

Zambia (2024)

35. The Committee notes with concern that some children with disabilities are still not registered at birth. It is also concerned that persons with disabilities, including migrants with disabilities still face barriers in obtaining birth certificates, nationality certificates and identity cards due to lack of accessibility to services and lack of awareness among the population about the need to register.

36. The Committee recommends that the State party:

- (a) Increase its efforts to sensitize parents and the community on the importance of birth registration for their children, including children with disabilities, and organize regular campaigns to issue birth certificates and identity documents in close consultation and active involvement of persons with disabilities through their representative organizations;

(b) Take appropriate measures to eliminate all obstacles which prevent persons with disabilities, including those living in remote and rural areas, from enjoying their rights to a nationality, birth registration and civil status documents, in order to enable them to exercise all the rights enshrined in the Convention;

(c) Put in place measures to take account of the situation of migrants with disabilities in national programmes and to provide them with necessary documents to enable them enjoy freedom of movement.

37. The Committee is concerned about the insufficient provision of support measures and reasonable accommodation for asylum-seekers with disabilities, refugees, and migrants with disabilities.

38. The Committee recommends that the State party redouble efforts to provide appropriate support and reasonable accommodation for asylum-seekers with disabilities, refugees and migrants with disabilities, including protocols to recognize persons with disabilities in these situations in the social security schemes and ensure that such persons have access to disability-related benefits.

Austria (2023)

43. The Committee is concerned about:

(a) Insufficient provision of qualified interpretation, sign language interpretation, information in Easy Read format, Plain German, Braille, and other measures to ensure the accessibility of health services for refugees with disabilities, stateless persons with disabilities, and of persons with disabilities in refugee-like situations;

(b) Insufficient accessible information about the admissions process, the content of decisions taken therein, and about appropriate service providers, for refugees with disabilities, stateless persons with disabilities, and for persons with disabilities in refugee-like situations, about deficiencies in their referral to the appropriate services providers, and about insufficient access to crucial disability support schemes;

(c) Reports that refugees and stateless persons with disabilities and persons with disabilities in refugee-like situations, including unaccompanied children with disabilities, are frequently accommodated in facilities that are not accessible or not designed for these purposes, and are not provided the support measures necessary;

(d) Insufficient targeted and regular training on the standards for the treatment and the rights of persons with disabilities under the Convention for the employees of all entities participating in the admissions process.

44. The Committee recommends that the State party:

(a) Provide qualified interpretation, sign language interpretation, information in Easy Read format, Plain German, Braille and other measures to ensure the accessibility of medical examinations of refugees and stateless persons with disabilities and persons with disabilities in refugee-like situations;

(b) Provide accessible information about the admissions process, the content of decisions taken therein, and service providers for refugees and stateless persons with disabilities and persons with disabilities in refugee-like situations, and guarantee access to crucial support schemes to persons with disabilities in refugee-like situations and persons with disabilities under temporary protection;

(c) Ensure that refugees and stateless persons with disabilities and persons with disabilities in refugee-like situations, including unaccompanied children with disabilities, are accommodated in facilities that are accessible and designed for these purposes;

(d) Intensify advanced training on the standards for the treatment of persons with disabilities and their rights under the Convention to all entities and their employees participating in the admissions process, as envisaged by the "Nationaler Aktionsplan Behinderung 2022 – 2030

41. The Committee is concerned about:

- (a) Access to essential supports, including disability specific supports for refugees and asylum seekers with disabilities being dependent on country of origin;
- (b) The lack of uniform and adequate procedures across all Länder for the identification of refugees and asylum seekers with disabilities, resulting in inconsistent and inadequate implementation of human rights law and the EU Directive 2013/33/EU;
- (c) The impact of the draft law to amend the Nationality Act, which would preclude persons with disabilities in receipt of benefits from obtaining citizenship.

42. The Committee recommends that the State party take all legislative, administrative, and other measures to:

- (a) Ensure access to essential supports, including disability specific supports, for all refugees and asylum seekers with disabilities is available without discrimination on the basis of country of origin;
- (b) Implement uniform and adequate procedures across all Länder to ensure the identification of refugees and asylum seekers with disabilities and the provision of appropriate disability related supports as required by human rights law and the EU Directive 2013/33/EU;
- (c) Ensure the draft law to amend the Nationality Act does not preclude persons with disabilities in receipt of benefits from obtaining citizenship.

Israel (2023)

41. The Committee is concerned about:

- (a) Reports of discrimination against persons with disabilities in insurance contracts, in particular that refugees and asylum-seekers with disabilities are not eligible for national insurance services, subsidized health insurance, social security benefits, including disability allowances;
- (b) The lack of a consistent registration and identification system for all refugees and asylum-seekers with disabilities;
- (c) Restrictions on freedom of movement in the occupied territories and the routine denial of exit permits, including for medical care or only granting permits on the basis of interrogation by Israeli security forces, preventing persons with disabilities to move freely between the West Bank, including East Jerusalem and Gaza and from accessing essential medical care, rehabilitation, employment and education.

42. The Committee recommends that the State party:

- (a) Review the national insurance scheme with the aim to expand its coverage to refugees and asylum-seekers with disabilities and persons with disabilities in refugee-like situations, and require financial services, in particular insurance companies to remove discriminatory provisions from insurance services and contracts;
- (b) Establish a uniform registration and identification system for all refugees and asylum seeker adults and children with disabilities to ensure access to adequate humanitarian services and aid and access to essential services and disability supports;
- (c) Remove restrictions on freedom of movement within and outside the occupied territories, restrict interrogation by the Israeli Security Forces to instances of legitimate security concern, in accordance with applicable international law, expedite the issuance of exit permits for persons with disabilities, including those requiring medical treatment, assistive devices and medicines, and ensure that persons with disabilities have liberty of movement, including for accessing education, medical care, including sexual and reproductive health services, rehabilitation or work and employment.

37. The Committee is concerned about:

(a) Information indicating that refugees with disabilities and persons with disabilities in refugee-like situations particularly children with disabilities hosted in the Dzaleka camp, have had their freedom of movement restricted across the territory of the State party and the criminalization of persons who have left refugee camps;

(b) The impossibility of refugee persons with disabilities to seek for livelihood opportunities and to access school due to the restrictions of freedom in movement in refugee camps;

(c) The lack of measures to ensure inclusion of migrant, asylum seeking and refugee persons with disabilities in the education system, which impacts particularly children and young persons with disabilities.

38. The Committee recommends that the State party:

(a) Ensure that refugees with disabilities and persons with disabilities in refugee-like situations can exercise their right to freedom of movement and seek and choose a place to live and consider lifting the current restrictions in the Dzaleka camp;

(b) Speed-up the enforcement of the State party's commitments towards the Comprehensive Refugee Response Framework ensuring that refugee and asylum-seekers persons with disabilities benefit from national development agenda plans, including their access to support, health, water and sanitation, settlement opportunities, work and employment;

(c) Adopt measures to ensure that migrants, refugees and asylum seekers with disabilities access to mainstream education in the community, by addressing prevailing barriers, such as lack of transport, limited facilities, inadequate food, unavailability of assistive devices.

Mauritania (2023)

31. The Committee notes with concern:

(a) That despite the existing legal provisions on birth registration for all, and the establishment of offices of the National Agency for the Population Registry and Secure Identity documents in the regions, the Committee is concerned that some children with disabilities, are still not registered at birth, which hinder the enjoyment of their rights and access to services, including the disability card;

(b) The limited access of migrants, asylum seekers and refugees with disabilities, in particular women and girls with disabilities, to support services and individualized accommodation.

32. The Committee recommends that the State party:

(a) Increase its efforts on raising awareness among parents and the community of the importance of registering births of their children, including children with disabilities, and regularly organize mobile campaigns to issue birth certificates and identity documents, with the effective involvement of persons with disabilities;

(b) Remove all barriers for persons with disabilities, including those living in remote and rural areas, to the enjoyment of their rights to a nationality, birth registration and civil documentation, to enable them to exercise all the rights enshrined in the Convention;

(c) Adopt all measures necessary to ensure that migrants, asylum seekers and refugees with disabilities, in particular women and girls with disabilities, are granted adequate support services, including gender-sensitive and age-appropriate accommodation.

Mongolia (2023)

37. The Committee is concerned that despite the provisions of the Law on Citizenship which guarantees the liberty of movement, the Law on travel and immigration limits travelling and immigration of persons with psychosocial disabilities and persons with intellectual disabilities.

38. The Committee recommends that the State party amend the Law on travel and immigration and the Law on Legal Status of Foreign Nationals, in order to harmonize its provisions with the Convention and article 9.1.1 of the Law on Citizenship.

33. Al Comité le preocupa que existe un subregistro del 30% en los nacimientos en general y no se informa cuantos de ellos son de personas con discapacidad.

34. El Comité recomienda al Estado parte que intensifique las acciones del Programa Derecho a la Identidad, incluyendo las zonas rurales y remotas, que obtenga estadísticas confiables del subregistro actual de nacimientos y específicamente de personas con discapacidad.

Georgia (2023)

37. The Committee is concerned about:

(a) The lack of appropriate support measures and reasonable accommodation for asylum seekers with disabilities, particularly the scarcity of qualified sign language interpreters in immigration procedures and the limited accessibility for wheelchair users and other persons with disabilities to premises such as the Ministry of Internal Affairs' Migrant Accommodation Centre and the Integration Centre of the Internally Displaced Persons, Eco-Migrants and Livelihood Agency of the Ministry of Health;

(b) Information indicating insufficient healthcare services for migrant persons with disabilities, particularly in the Adjara district;

(c) Information indicating that disability benefits are not available for refugee persons with disabilities.

38. The Committee recommends that the State party:

(a) Provide appropriate support measures and reasonable accommodation for asylum seekers with disabilities, establish procedural accommodation for persons with disabilities in asylum proceedings, and provide these mechanisms with sufficient financial means and personnel, particularly qualified sign language interpreters;

(b) Ensure that building premises dedicated to migrant and asylum-seeking procedures are accessible for asylum seekers and refugee persons with disabilities regardless type of impairment;

(c) Ensure that health care is provided to asylum seekers and refugee persons with disabilities, including accessible psychosocial support services in the community;

(d) Adopt measures, including protocols, to recognise persons with disabilities in refugee like situations in the social security schemes in the State party, and to ensure the possibility to have access to disability-related benefits.

36. Al Comité le preocupa:

a) La poca accesibilidad de la información, los procedimientos y los centros de atención para los migrantes, los refugiados, los solicitantes de asilo, y los desplazados internos con discapacidad y que no haya una identificación completa y sistemática de las personas migrantes y desplazadas internas con discapacidad, de sus necesidades, dificultades para acceder a opciones laborales, servicios públicos, transporte y documentación incluidos el certificado de discapacidad y el carnet de discapacidad;

b) La Política Nacional Migratoria 2017-2025 no establece medidas específicas para la atención de las personas refugiadas y migrantes con discapacidad. Además, para obtener un certificado oficial de discapacidad, estas deben estar en situación migratoria regular, lo que supone un obstáculo para que las personas con discapacidad en situación de migración irregular puedan acceder a servicios y prestaciones.

37. El Comité recomienda al Estado parte que:

a) Lleve a cabo una identificación completa y sistemática de los migrantes, refugiados, solicitantes de asilo y desplazados internos con discapacidad y sus necesidades, así como la tramitación de sus solicitudes de regularización migratoria, a fin de garantizar su acceso a la obtención de certificados de discapacidad para recibir prestaciones y servicios de manera oportuna y garantice la accesibilidad física, a la información y la comunicación de los centros de migración;

b)Asegure que todas las normas y políticas migratorias, incluyendo la Política Nacional Migratoria 2017-2025, tengan un enfoque de discapacidad, a fin de asegurar que los derechos de este grupo sean respetados en su proceso de tránsito y al establecerse en el Estado parte como país de destino.

37. The Committee notes that since January 2022 the birth registration is free of charge if it is declared within 45 days from the birth. However, it is concerned that some children with disabilities, are still not registered at birth. It is also concerned that persons with disabilities still face barriers in obtaining birth certificates, nationality certificates and identity cards due to lack of accessibility to services and lack of awareness among the population about the need to register.

38. The Committee recommends that the State party:

- (a) Increase its efforts on raising awareness among parents and the community of the importance of registering births of their children, including children with disabilities, extend the free registration of birth beyond 45 days, and regularly organize mobile campaigns to issue birth certificates, nationality certificates and identity cards, with the effective involvement of persons with disabilities through their representative organizations;
- (b) Remove all barriers for persons with disabilities, including those living in remote and rural areas, to the enjoyment of their rights to a nationality, birth registration and civil documentation, to enable them to exercise all the rights enshrined in the Convention.

31. The Committee is concerned that some persons with disabilities and in particular persons with psychosocial disabilities are excluded from some services provided to other persons with disabilities by the State party such as reduced fares on public transport due to difficulties in obtaining identity cards.

32. The Committee recommends that the State party:

- (a) Review the Decree No. 1477 of 2006 to simplify and facilitate the procedures related to the enjoyment by travellers with disabilities of reduced fares for international transportation;
- (b) Recognise persons with psychosocial disability in the law under drafting for tax exemption of persons with disabilities to enhance freedom of movement.

Bangladesh (2022)

37. The Committee is concerned about:

- (a) The absence of civil documentation, such as official birth, marriage and death certificates of children with disabilities, particularly refugee children with disabilities belonging to the Rohingya community, and children with disabilities in remote and rural areas, leading to lack of access to services;
- (b) The lack of freedom of movement of persons with disabilities, particularly refugees with disabilities belonging to the Rohingya community and impeding their access to seek medical rehabilitation outside their camps or abroad;
- (c) The State party not having ratified the 1951 Convention relating to the Status of Refugees and the 1967 Protocol as well as the 1954 Convention relating to the Status of Stateless persons and the 1961 Convention on the Reduction of Statelessness.

38. The Committee recommends that the State party:

- (a) Adopt concrete measures to ensure the availability of civil documentation for all children with disabilities, particularly refugee children with disabilities belonging to the Rohingya community, and children with disabilities in remote and rural areas to enable them have access to all services;
- (b) Take effective measures to ensure freedom of movement of persons with disabilities, particularly refugees with disabilities belonging to the Rohingya community and enable them to have access to seek medical rehabilitation outside their camps or abroad;
- (c) Take necessary measures to ratify the 1951 Convention relating to the Status of Refugees and the 1967 Protocol as well as the 1954 Convention relating to the Status of Stateless persons and the 1961 Convention on the Reduction of Statelessness, and repeal the 1946 Foreigners Act that is targeted mainly against Rohingya Muslims.

China (2022)

37. The Committee is concerned about:

- (a) The absence of civil documentation, such as official birth, marriage and death certificates of children with disabilities, particularly refugee children with disabilities belonging to the Rohingya community, and children with disabilities in remote and rural areas, leading to lack of access to services;
- (b) The lack of freedom of movement of persons with disabilities, particularly refugees with disabilities belonging to the Rohingya community and impeding their access to seek medical rehabilitation outside their camps or abroad;
- (c) The State party not having ratified the 1951 Convention relating to the Status of Refugees and the 1967 Protocol as well as the 1954 Convention relating to the Status of Stateless persons and the 1961 Convention on the Reduction of Statelessness.

38. The Committee recommends that the State party:

- (a) Adopt concrete measures to ensure the availability of civil documentation for all children with disabilities, particularly refugee children with disabilities belonging to the Rohingya community, and children with disabilities in remote and rural areas to enable them have access to all services;
- (b) Take effective measures to ensure freedom of movement of persons with disabilities, particularly refugees with disabilities belonging to the Rohingya community and enable them to have access to seek medical rehabilitation outside their camps or abroad;
- (c) Take necessary measures to ratify the 1951 Convention relating to the Status of Refugees and the 1967 Protocol as well as the 1954 Convention relating to the Status of Stateless persons and the 1961 Convention on the Reduction of Statelessness, and repeal the 1946 Foreigners Act that is targeted mainly against Rohingya Muslims.

Indonesia (2022)

39. The Committee remains concerned at the lack of efforts made to repeal provisions of article 11 of the Immigration Control Act which deprives persons with disabilities, particularly persons with psychosocial disabilities, the right to enter the Republic of Korea based on their disability and of article 32 of the Act on Welfare of Persons with Disabilities, which restricts access to basic disability services for migrants with disabilities.

40. The Committee recommends that the State party takes urgent steps to repeal discriminatory provisions in order to ensure that persons with disabilities are not deprived of the right to enter the Republic of Korea on the basis of disability and to allow migrants with disabilities access to basic disability services.

39. The Committee is concerned about:

- (a) The article 5 of the Immigration Control and Refugee Recognition Act that allows denial of entry to the State party to persons with intellectual or psychosocial disability;
- (b) Insufficient provision of reasonable accommodation and accessibility of information at the Immigration Services Agency, including enough number of qualified interpreters.

40. The Committee recommends that the State Party:

- (a) Revise Article 5, Paragraph 2 of the Immigration Control and Refugee Recognition Act, which allows denial of entry to persons with psychosocial or intellectual disabilities;
- (b) Ensure the provision of reasonable accommodation when required and accessibility of information at the Immigration Services Agency, including enough number of qualified interpreters.

Lao People's Democratic Republic (2022)

32. The Committee notes with concern barriers in gaining access to administrative facilities and proceedings for birth registration and civil documentation, including the inaccessibility of buildings, and communication barriers for persons with disabilities, particularly those from ethnic groups and living in remote and rural areas.

33. The Committee recommends that the State party take effective measures to remove all barriers for persons with disabilities, including those from ethnic groups and living in remote and rural areas, to the enjoyment of their rights to a nationality, birth registration and civil documentation, to enable them to exercise all the rights enshrined in the Convention.

New Zealand (2022)

37. The Committee is concerned about:

- (a) The acceptable standard of health requirements applied under the immigration rules of New Zealand, which allow for discrimination in practice against persons with disabilities in immigration and some asylum procedures;
- (b) The ineligibility under the acceptable standard of health medical waiver policy of persons with disabilities whose impairment requires full-time care, including care in the community;
- (c) Provisions of the Immigration Act of 2009, which prevent people from lodging complaints related to immigration decisions with the New Zealand Human Rights Commission.

38. The Committee recommends that the State party:

- (a) Review and amend its immigration and asylum legislation and administrative rules, in close consultation with and with the active involvement of organizations of persons with disabilities and migrants and refugees, to ensure that persons with disabilities do not face discrimination in any of the formalities and procedures relating to immigration and asylum, in particular as a result of the application of the acceptable standard of health requirements;
- (b) Reverse the ineligibility under the acceptable standard of health medical waiver policy of persons with disabilities whose impairment requires full-time care;
- (c) Repeal section 392, paragraphs (2) and (3), of the Immigration Act of 2009, which prohibits the lodging of immigration-related complaints to the Human Rights Commission.

Republic of Korea (2022)

37. The Committee is concerned about:

- (a) The Acceptable Standard of Health (ASH) requirements applied under New Zealand's immigration rules, which allows for discrimination in practice against persons with disabilities in immigration and some asylum procedures;
- (b) The ineligibility under the ASH medical waiver policy of persons with disabilities whose impairment requires full time care, including care in the community;
- (c) Provisions of the Immigration Act 2009 which prevent people from lodging complaints related to immigration decisions with the New Zealand Human Rights Commission.

38. The Committee recommends that the State party:

- (a) Review and amend its immigration and asylum legislation and administrative rules, in close consultation with and active involvement of organisations of persons with disabilities and migrants and refugees, to ensure that persons with disabilities do not face discrimination in any of the formalities and procedures relating to immigration and asylum, in particular as a result of the application of the Acceptable Standard of Health (ASH) requirements;
- (b) Reverse the ineligibility under the ASH medical waiver policy of persons with disabilities whose impairment requires full time care;
- (c) Repeal Section 392 paras. (2) and (3) of the Immigration Act 2009, which prohibits the lodging of immigration-related complaints to the Human Rights Commission

Hungary (2022)

37. The Committee notes with concern the lack of:

- (a) Procedural safeguards, accessibility and reasonable accommodation for asylum seekers and refugees with disabilities at border crossings and in reception and accommodation facilities;
- (b) Accessible and understandable modes of information and communication for asylum-seeking or refugee children with disabilities;

- (c) Measures to end the detention of asylum seekers in closed border transit zone facilities and accommodate asylum seekers in open reception facilities;
- (d) Efforts to remove restrictions on non-governmental organizations providing support to asylum seekers, including restrictions on funding from the European Union Asylum, Migration and Integration Fund;
- (e) Data on asylum seekers and refugees with disabilities, disaggregated by sex, age and type of impairment.

38. The Committee recommends that the State party, in close cooperation with organizations of persons with disabilities:

- (a) Assess the current status of asylum seekers and refugees with disabilities at border crossings and in reception and accommodation facilities, and ensure accessibility, reasonable accommodations and support measures for them;
- (b) Ensure accessible and understandable modes of information and communication for asylum-seeking or refugee children with disabilities;
- (c) End the detention of asylum seekers in closed border transit zone facilities and accommodate asylum seekers in open reception facilities;
- (d) Remove restrictions on non-governmental organizations providing support to asylum seekers, including restrictions on funding from the European Union Asylum, Migration and Integration Fund;
- (e) Collect data, disaggregated by sex and age, on asylum seekers and refugee persons with disabilities.

39. In the light of the growing humanitarian crisis in Ukraine, which has already pushed a large number of people into the neighbouring countries, the Committee recommends that the State party take appropriate measures to provide persons with disabilities, in particular children with disabilities, in need of international protection with all the necessary support and services, including their accommodation in foster care families.

Mexico (2022)

62. The Committee is concerned about the high poverty level of persons with disabilities, and about a lack of measures specifically designed for persons with disabilities in the special programme for indigenous and Afro-Mexican people for 2020–2024.

63. The Committee recommends that the State party create a national plan specifically addressing the high level of poverty among persons with disabilities, including its financing and a time schedule for its implementation; implement it; and monitor its implementation.

Switzerland (2022)

37. The Committee notes with concern:

- (a) The lack of access to specialized medical care, infrastructure and facilities, communications, reasonable accommodation and qualified personnel to provide support for asylum seekers with disabilities in federal asylum centres, and the disproportionate use of force by security personnel;
- (b) The lack of accessible information and procedural accommodation during asylum procedures;
- (c) The requirements for financial independence under federal migration law that affects the ability of persons with disabilities to obtain and maintain residence permits or seek family reunification.

38. The Committee recommends that the State party:

- (a) Establish, as a matter of priority and in consultation with organizations of persons with disabilities, the proposed single point of contact for asylum seekers with disabilities in federal asylum centres; ensure that asylum seekers with disabilities have access to specialized medical care, infrastructure and facilities, accessible communications, reasonable accommodation and qualified support personnel; and prevent the use of force by security personnel in federal asylum centres;

- (b) Finalize the guidelines for persons with “special needs” and ensure that these guidelines are based on the standards and principles of the Convention, including in the areas of access to information and the provision of procedural accommodation;
- (c) Review the impact of the requirements for financial independence under federal migration law on persons with disabilities, including how disability is understood and recognized by the courts, with the aim of removing or amending this requirement.

Venezuela (2022)

34. The Committee notes with concern the lack of information on displaced or migrant persons with disabilities.

35. The Committee recommends that the State party:

- (a) Ensure that migrant persons with disabilities are able to exercise their rights on an equal footing with others;
- (b) Establish monitoring and assessment mechanisms at its borders for the identification, processing and protection of migrant persons with disabilities that use information and adapted procedures in accessible formats, individual adaptations such as the facilitation of physical access and trained personnel.

Djibouti (2021)

31. The Committee is concerned about barriers for persons with disabilities to obtain official documentation as refugees, asylum seekers and persons in refugee-like situations, which hinder their enjoyment of the right to liberty of movement. It is also concerned that some children, including children with disabilities, are still not registered at birth.

32. The Committee recommends that the State party:

- (a) Adopt measures, with budget allocations, to strengthen the National Asylum Eligibility Commission so that refugees, asylum seekers, and persons in refugee-like situations with disabilities in all areas of the country have access to official documentation, on an equal basis with others;
- (b) Enforce the registration of all new-born children with disabilities at birth and undertake a nationwide campaign to raise awareness among parents and the community of the importance of registering the births of their children, including those with disabilities.

38. The Committee notes with concern that travelers and Roma, French citizens as well as non-citizens with disabilities often face severe hardship in their living arrangements. It is also concerned that data on their situation is scarce and about the absence of policies to address these risks and protect their rights.

39. The Committee recommends that the State party systematically collect data on the living conditions of traveller and Roma persons with disabilities, citizens and non-citizens, and the fulfilment of their rights under the Convention, and ensure necessary accommodations for travellers and Roma persons with disabilities, also in asylum-seeking and refugee situations, particularly children with disabilities.

36. The Committee notes with concern information on the lack of accessibility, reasonable accommodations and support measures for asylum seekers and refugees with disabilities at border crossings, in reception and accommodation facilities and within the needs-identification procedures for persons with disabilities.

37. The Committee recommends that the State party make assessments of the current status of and ensure accessibility, reasonable accommodations and support measures for asylum seekers and refugees with disabilities at border crossings, in reception and accommodation facilities and within the needs-identification procedures for all persons with disabilities.

Australia (2019)

35. The Committee is concerned about:

- (a) Migration and asylum legislation, such as the Migration Act 1958 and the health requirement in the Migration Regulations 1994, which allows for discrimination against persons with disabilities in asylum and migration procedures;
- (b) The Disability Discrimination Act 1992 providing an exemption to certain provisions within the Migration Act 1958, which results in the exclusion of persons with disabilities;
- (c) The 10-year qualifying period for migrants with a non-permanent visa to access the Age Support Pension and the Disability Support Pension;
- (d) The transfer of refugees and asylum seekers with disabilities to Nauru, Papua New Guinea and other “regional processing countries”.

36. The Committee recommends that the State party:

- (a) Review and amend its migration laws and policies to ensure that persons with disabilities do not face discrimination in any of the formalities and procedures relating to migration and asylum and, especially, remove the exemption in the Disability Discrimination Act 1992 to certain provisions of the Migration Act 1958;
- (b) Remove the 10-year qualifying period for migrants to access the Age Support Pension and the Disability Support Pension;
- (c) Cease the transfer of refugees and asylum seekers, particularly persons with disabilities, to Nauru, Papua New Guinea and other “regional processing countries”, as requested by the Office of the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees in a factsheet on the protection of so-called “legacy caseload” asylum seekers, and establish a minimum standard of health care and support for persons with disabilities held in immigration detention.

Ecuador (2019)

35. The Committee notes with concern the adoption of restrictions on entry into the country by persons with disabilities, particularly persons with disabilities who are seeking international protection. The Committee is also concerned at the lack of accessible shelters for migrants with disabilities that are staffed with personnel trained to provide information and to follow up on their applications and petitions.

36. The Committee recommends that the State party:

- (a) Ensure that migrants with disabilities, particularly those who are seeking international protection, are able to exercise their rights on an equal footing with others;
- (b) Establish monitoring and assessment mechanisms at its borders for the identification, processing and protection of migrants with disabilities that use information and adapted procedures in accessible formats, individual adaptations such as the facilitation of physical access and trained personnel;
- (c) Ensure that conditions at reception centres are such that they afford adequate living standards for migrants and refugees with disabilities and safeguard their physical and mental health on an equal footing with others in accordance with the Convention.

El Salvador (2019)

36. The Committee is concerned that the new Migration Law and the Passport Issuance and Revalidation Law enforce legal impediments to leaving the country for persons with hearing impairments and persons with intellectual or psychosocial disabilities. The Committee is also concerned at cases of some persons with disabilities still not having access to identity documents.

37. The Committee recommends that the State party review and reform its legislation on migration to eliminate discriminatory restrictions and ensure that all persons with disabilities who wish to leave or enter the country have access to procedures on an equal basis with others. The Committee also recommends that the State party take measures to ensure that all persons with disabilities have a birth certificate or identity document.

38. The Committee is concerned about:

- (a) The lack of registration at birth of children with disabilities, particularly deafblind children, children requiring high levels of support and intersex children at a heightened risk of neglect, the absence of disaggregated data and the insufficiency of measures to ensure the early registration of and access to unique disability identification cards by children with disabilities in remote and rural areas, those internally displaced and those in refugee camps, resulting in their lack of access to community services;

(b) The situation of persons with disabilities, including Muslim persons with disabilities, rendered stateless as a result of the registry process undertaken in the State of Assam and currently in detention camps.

39. The Committee recommends that the State party:

(a) Adopt a programme to ensure the registry of children with disabilities immediately after birth and the disaggregation of data of the birth registry, and to facilitate the recognition of unique disability identification cards for all children with disabilities and their access to appropriate early intervention and community services;

(b) Ensure respect for and the protection of all human rights of persons with disabilities rendered stateless, including those in detention camps, urgently adopting measures to allow the reacquisition of nationality, and ratify or accede to the Convention relating to the Status of Stateless Persons (1954) and the Convention on the Reduction of Statelessness (1961).

33. The Committee is concerned that not all children with disabilities are registered at birth and are thus at risk of being stateless, particularly children born in the State party to foreign nationals, children born to unknown parents and children born in regions that have been affected by armed conflict.

34. The Committee recommends that the State party allocate the human, technical and financial resources necessary to continue its efforts to register all children with disabilities and to prevent their statelessness.

Kuwait (2019)

36. The Committee is concerned about:

(a) The lack of information on the appropriate support and individualized accommodations available to migrants, refugees and asylum seekers with disabilities in immigration proceedings;

(b) The lack of information on the nationality status of Bidoons with disabilities, on the registration of the births of Bidoon children with disabilities and on the extent to which such children are able to enjoy their rights and access services.

37. The Committee recommends that the State party:

(a) Strengthen the support and individualized accommodations available to migrants, refugees and asylum seekers with disabilities in immigration proceedings;

(b) Ensure that all Bidoons with disabilities, including children, enjoy the right to acquire a nationality and that they are registered immediately after birth, have access to services and are able to exercise the rights under the Convention.

Myanmar (2019)

35. The Committee is concerned that the Child Rights Law of 2019 does not guarantee the right to a nationality to children belonging to ethnic minority groups and those who are internally displaced, including children with disabilities, which hinders their access to education, health care and other public services. The Committee is also concerned about barriers to access administrative facilities and proceedings for birth registration, civil documentation and citizenship, including inaccessibility of buildings, official and unofficial fees, and communication barriers for persons with disabilities from ethnic minority groups.

36. The Committee recommends that the State party take the legal and other measures necessary to guarantee the right to a nationality without discrimination, and take effective policy measures to remove all barriers for persons with disabilities, including those from ethnic minority groups, to the enjoyment of their rights to a nationality, birth registration and civil documentation, to be able to exercise all the rights enshrined in the Convention.

33. The Committee is concerned about barriers for persons with disabilities to obtain official documentation as refugees, which hinder their enjoyment of the right to liberty of movement. It is also concerned that some children, including children with disabilities are still not registered at birth.

34. The Committee recommends that the State party:

(a) Strengthen the registration programme to implement Law No. 13 ter/2014 Relating to Refugees and ensure that refugees with disabilities in all areas of the country have access to official documentation on an equal basis with others;

(b) Enforce the registration of all new born children with disabilities at birth and conduct a countrywide campaign to sensitize parents and the community on the importance of registering the birth of their children including those with disabilities.

Saudi Arabia (2019)

33. The Committee is concerned about:

(a) Discriminatory provisions, including in the Nationality Act, limiting the rights of women with disabilities to pass on their nationality to their spouses and children;

(b) The fact that women with disabilities are obliged to request the permission of a guardian to travel, including when travelling abroad;

(c) Persons with disabilities belonging to ethnic minorities, including bedouins, facing obstacles in the access to citizenship and social services;

(d) The limited access of migrants, asylum seekers, and refugee persons with disabilities to support services and individualized accommodation.

34. The Committee recommends that the State party:

(a) Repeal all discriminatory provisions, including in the Nationality Act, limiting the rights of women with disabilities to pass on their nationality to their spouses and children;

(b) Take all necessary measures, in law and in practice, to ensure that women with disabilities may exercise their right to liberty of movement independently of the permission of a guardian;

(c) Ensure that persons with disabilities belonging to ethnic, linguistic and/or religious minorities and living in rural and remote areas, including bedouins, have access to identity documents, Saudi citizenship and social services, and guarantee that their rights under the Convention are protected;

(d) Adopt all necessary measures to ensure that migrants, asylum seekers and refugee persons with disabilities are granted with adequate support services, including gender-sensitive and age-appropriate accommodation.

Senegal (2019)

31. The Committee is concerned about children with disabilities not being registered after birth and therefore lacking birth certificates without which the social equality card or other social programmes remain inaccessible to them.

32. The Committee recommends that the State party ensure the registration of children with disabilities after birth and grant them the legal documents necessary for enjoyment of their rights.

35. The Committee is concerned about the precarious situation of refugees and asylum-seeking persons with disabilities in the State party and also notes with concern that refugee status determination procedures are not accessible. The Committee is also concerned about the lack of a gender perspective in policies and measures for refugees and asylum-seeking persons with disabilities and general lack of knowledge by professionals working in the reception centres of their rights.

36. The Committee recommends that the State party ensure that all refugee status determination procedures and social protection programs, including disability support schemes, are accessible and do not discriminate in law and in practice, for all non-nationals with disabilities residing in the State party. The Committee further recommends that the State party elaborate specific gender sensitive policies and ensure full accessibility in reception centres. It further recommends that it provide training for professionals and civil servants working in the reception centres on the rights of persons with disabilities.

Türkiye (2019)

38. The Committee is concerned about the limited information relating to:

- (a) The proportion and situation of migrant workers, asylum seekers and refugees with disabilities in the State party;
- (b) Procedural accommodation and support available to persons with disabilities throughout immigration or asylum seeking procedures, including prior to resettlement, and training provided to personnel in charge of migration and determination of refugee status;
- (c) Public policies and programmes addressing the rights of migrant workers, asylum seekers and refugees with disabilities, and on the involvement of civil society organizations, including organizations of persons with disabilities, in identifying support requirements by refugees with disabilities.

39. The Committee recommends that the State party:

- (a) Carry out research and data collection to assess the situation of persons with disabilities on the move in the State party, including migrant workers, asylum seekers and refugees with disabilities disaggregated by, inter alia, gender, age and ethnic background and establish a multi-stakeholder mechanism, including organizations of persons with disabilities, aimed at informing public policies and programmes.
- (b) Adopt a protocol on the provision of procedural accommodation and support during immigration, refugee status determination procedures and resettlement, and provide persons with disabilities with information on accommodations and support available, in accessible formats, Easy Read and in native languages of the main migrant, asylum-seeking and refugee communities, and ensure training of officials working at protection desks on the rights of persons with disabilities under the Convention;
- (c) Ensure that public policies and programmes recognise migrant workers, asylum seekers, and refugees with disabilities, and allocate the human, financial, and technical resources to ensure the accessibility, reasonable accommodation and support they may require, in particular refugee women with disabilities.

40. The Committee is concerned about information indicating that persons with physical disabilities require medical reports as a pre-condition for air travel, and that persons with intellectual or psychosocial disabilities require approval from their guardians to travel abroad.

41. The Committee recommends that the State party abolish the discriminatory requirements of medical reports and third party authorization preventing the freedom of movement of persons with disabilities within and outside the territory of the State party.

34. The Committee is concerned that the registration of the births of all new-borns with disabilities is not widespread throughout the territory. It is also concerned by the difficulties experienced by persons with disabilities to obtain identification documents, especially in rural and remote areas, and given the price of the national identity card. It notes that campaigns to register the population are inaccessible to persons with disabilities.

35. The Committee recommends that the State party strengthen the birth registration system so that all new-borns with disabilities in the State party are registered immediately after birth at no cost. It also recommends that the State party increase the accessibility of campaigns to obtain identity documents, especially in remote and rural areas and to ensure that all persons with disabilities possess at least one identity document. The Committee recommends that the State party consider the issuance of free national identification cards for persons with disabilities.

TOP DOC / TOP ART.18

29. The Committee is concerned about the lack of appropriate social and health care services for migrant, asylum seeking and refugee persons with disabilities, in particular children with disabilities.

30. The Committee recommends that the State party mainstream the rights of persons with disabilities in its migration, asylum seeking and refugee policies and programs and take measures to provide health and other support services to persons with disabilities who are applicants for international refugee protection.

Slovenia (2018)

29. The Committee is concerned about the lack of appropriate social and health care services for migrant, asylum seeking and refugee persons with disabilities, in particular children with disabilities.

30. The Committee recommends that the State party mainstream the rights of persons with disabilities in its migration, asylum seeking and refugee policies and programs and take measures to provide health and other support services to persons with disabilities who are applicants for international refugee protection.

Sudan (2018)

37. The Committee is concerned about restrictions imposed on persons with disabilities limiting their freedom of movement, whereby persons with physical disabilities require medical reports as a pre-condition for travelling by air and persons with psychosocial and/or intellectual disabilities require approval from their guardians if they wish to travel.

38. The Committee recommends that the State party abolishes the requirements that impede the freedom of movement of persons with disabilities within and outside its territory.

United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland (2017)

42. The Committee is concerned that the State party maintains its reservation to article 18 of the Convention.

43. The Committee recommends that the State party withdraw its reservation to article 18 of the Convention.

Armenia (2017)

29. The Committee is concerned about structural barriers preventing persons with disabilities from obtaining passports and identity cards on an equal basis with others.

30. The Committee recommends that the State party take all measures necessary to ensure that persons with disabilities can obtain passports and identity cards on an equal basis with others, including by providing reasonable accommodation to facilitate access to public offices and passport delivery procedures.

38. The Committee notes with concern the absence of information about how persons with disabilities belonging to ethnic minorities access services and receive protection of their rights under the Convention. It is further concerned about the absence of measures to guarantee that migrants, asylum seekers, and refugee persons with disabilities are provided with appropriate support and reasonable accommodation in immigration proceedings.

39. The Committee recommends that the State party ensure that persons with disabilities belonging to ethnic, linguistic and/or religious minorities, including those living in rural and remote areas, have access to identity documents and can access to services and protection of their rights under the Convention.

47. The Committee is concerned that universal registration of all persons with disabilities is not guaranteed and that newborns with disabilities are less likely to receive identity documents, which impedes their access to basic services. It is also concerned that not enough information is provided to families in this regard.

48. The Committee urges the State party to guarantee all persons with disabilities the right to be registered, and to train the staff of official institutions to register all persons with disabilities, particularly in indigenous communities and in remote and rural areas.

41. The Committee is concerned that the process of birth registration of all newborn children with disabilities across all territories, including refugee camps, is not carried out to its fullest extent.

42. The Committee recommends that the State party strengthen the birth registration system to ensure that every newborn child with disabilities in all areas of the country, in particular those living in remote and rural areas and those living in refugee camps, are registered immediately upon birth.

Guatemala (2016)

51. The Committee notes that the steps taken by the State party to promote the civil registration of children have not led to the universal registration of children with disabilities and that many such children have no name.

52. The Committee urges the State party to ensure that all children with disabilities are immediately registered after birth, that an identity document is provided and that the National Registry Office properly registers all children with disabilities.

United Arab Emirates (2016)

35. The Committee is concerned about the lack of information on:

(a) The conditions in deportation and detention centres, including on accessibility and reasonable accommodation in those centres for migrant workers with disabilities;

(b) Applications made by persons with disabilities for naturalization and whether the naturalization procedure is accessible to them on an equal basis with others and without restrictions;

(c) The nationality status of Bidouns with disabilities and birth registration of Bidoun children with disabilities and the extent to which they are able to enjoy their rights and gain access to services.

36. The Committee recommends that the State party ensure that:

(a) Detention and deportation centres are accessible to migrant workers with disabilities and that migrant workers with disabilities are provided with reasonable accommodation;

(b) Naturalization procedures are fully accessible to persons with disabilities and that any person with a disability can choose to apply for nationality of the United Arab Emirates on an equal basis with others;

(c) All Bidouns with disabilities enjoy the right to a nationality and have access to services and that all Bidoun children with disabilities have a birth certificate and are able to exercise all the rights enshrined in the Convention.

Slovakia (2016)

53. The Committee notes with deep concern the precarious situation of persons with disabilities in the current migrant crisis on the national borders of the State party. The Committee is concerned that the migration decision-making procedures are not accessible for all persons with disabilities and that information and communication are not provided in accessible formats.

54. The Committee recommends that the State party mainstream disability in all its migration policies. It also recommends that persons with disabilities are permitted free movement across the State party borders on an equal basis with others.

Thailand (2016)

37. The Committee is concerned that the rules governing section 19 of the Persons with Disabilities Empowerment Act limit the application for disability identity cards to persons with disabilities who hold Thai citizenship only. It is concerned that this excludes non-Thai persons with disabilities and those who are not registered in the civil registry from benefiting from services and entitlements. It is also concerned about the fact that many children and adults with disabilities are not registered due to the widespread stigma of being identified as a person with disability.

38. The Committee recommends that the rules governing section 19 of the Persons with Disabilities Empowerment Act be amended to ensure that all persons with disabilities, regardless of nationality, including persons from different ethnic and indigenous backgrounds, migrants, refugees and asylum seekers, can benefit from available services and entitlements. It also recommends that concrete steps be taken to provide information and conduct awareness-raising on registration to gain access to services.

Uganda (2016)

36. The Committee expresses concern about the legislation on immigration that denies persons with psychosocial and/or intellectual disabilities acquisition of dual citizenship. It is also concerned about the low level of registration of children with disabilities at birth.

37. The Committee recommends that the State party:

(a) Repeal provisions in the Uganda Citizenship and Immigration Control Act (2009) and the Immigration Act (1970) that restrict the right to movement and liberty and acquisition of citizenship of persons with disabilities, particularly persons with psychosocial and intellectual disabilities;

(b) Ensure registration of all children with disabilities at birth.

European Union (2015)

48. The Committee is concerned at the barriers faced by persons with disabilities and workers with family members who have disabilities when moving to live or work in another European Union Member State, irrespective of the length of the stay.

49. The Committee recommends that the European Union take immediate action to ensure that all persons with disabilities and their families can enjoy their right to freedom of movement on an equal basis with others, including the portability of social security benefits in a coordinated manner across its Member States.

42. The Committee is concerned by the absence of data on the number of children with disabilities whose birth is not registered and may not have identity documents, in particular girls.

43. The Committee strongly recommends that the State party establish records to ensure that the birth of all children with disabilities is recorded and that it promptly initiate programmes to provide identity documents to all persons with disabilities.

Kenya (2015)

35. The Committee express concern about the lack of registration of children with disabilities upon their birth, in particular children in situation of internal displacement and those living in refugee camps.

36. The Committee recommends that the State party strengthen the registration programme with necessary budget and personal resources to ensure that persons with disabilities in all areas of the country, including persons in refugee camps access to identification documents.

Qatar (2015)

35. The Committee is concerned by the conditions in deportation and detention centres and the lack of accessibility and reasonable accommodation in those centres for migrant workers with disabilities.

36. The Committee strongly recommends that the State party improve conditions in detention and deportation centres and ensure that they are accessible to migrant workers with disabilities and that migrant workers with disabilities are provided reasonable accommodation.

Cook Islands (2015)

37. The Committee is concerned about persons with disabilities being denied entry into the State party on the basis of disability.

38. The Committee recommends the State party to amend the law to allow all persons with disabilities entry to the State party on an equal basis with others.

Dominican Republic (2015)

36. The Committee is deeply concerned at the restrictions on access to community inclusion services for persons with disabilities of Haitian descent, as a consequence of the legislation restricting their rights to nationality.

37. The Committee recommends that the State party speed up the restoration of all the rights of persons with disabilities of Haitian origin or descent, so as to enable them to use all services and programmes for persons with disabilities on an equal basis with others.

35. The Committee is concerned about the provisions of article 11 of the Immigration Control Act pursuant to which entry to the State party is denied to persons with psychosocial disabilities “who lack reason and are not accompanied by an assistant for their sojourn”, and of article 32 of the Welfare of Persons with Disabilities Act, which restrict basic disability services for migrants with disabilities.

36. The Committee recommends that the State party repeal article 11 of the Immigration Control Act and article 32 of the Welfare of Persons with Disabilities Act in order to ensure that persons with disabilities are not deprived of the right to enter the Republic of Korea on the basis of disability and to free migrants with disabilities from restrictions on basic disability services.

32. The Committee is concerned that article 7 of the Naturalization Act still provides that Ecuadorian nationality may not be granted to persons with a “chronic illness”. Given the close link between so-called “chronic illnesses” and disabilities, this article is overtly discriminatory and contrary to article 18 of the Convention.

33. The Committee recommends that the State party repeal article 7 of the Naturalization Act so that any person with disabilities can choose to apply for Ecuadorian nationality on an equal basis with others.

Mexico (2014)

39. The Committee is concerned that migrants with intellectual or psychosocial disabilities are detained in migrant holding centres, that the authorities set stricter requirements for entry into the country for persons with disabilities and that persons injured as a result of falling from the train known as “La Bestia” (“The Beast”) receive inadequate care.

40. The Committee urges the State party to:

- (a) Designate appropriate and accessible areas and appoint trained staff to assist persons with disabilities in migrant holding centres;
- (b) Review and harmonize the operational guidelines under the Migration Act to ensure that persons with disabilities are treated equally in the issuance of visas and entry permits;
- (c) Review and harmonize care protocols for migrants who are injured while in transit in Mexico, so that they are provided with not only emergency medical care but also sufficient recovery time and basic rehabilitation.

41. The Committee notes that the steps taken to promote the registration of children with the civil registry have not led to the universal registration of children with disabilities.

42. The Committee urges the State party to ensure that all children with disabilities are immediately registered at birth and are provided with an identity document.

El Salvador (2013)

39. The Committee is concerned that children, adolescents and adults with disabilities living in rural areas remain unregistered and therefore do not have identity documents.

40. The Committee calls on the State party to ensure that children with disabilities are entered in the civil registry at birth.

Paraguay (2013)

45. The Committee is concerned that children with disabilities are not registered in the State party and that there are as yet no concrete measures to encourage the registration of children with disabilities, particularly in rural areas.

46. The Committee urges the State party to set up a programme on the civil registration of children with disabilities at birth, on an equal footing with other children, and decentralize registry procedures and ensure that they can be carried out simply, quickly and free of charge.

(Living independently and being included in the community)*

September 2025

Article 19 - Living independently and being included in the community

States Parties to this Convention recognize the equal right of all persons with disabilities to live in the community, with choices equal to others, and shall take effective and appropriate measures to facilitate full enjoyment by persons with disabilities of this right and their full inclusion and participation in the community, including by ensuring that:

(a) Persons with disabilities have the opportunity to choose their place of residence and where and with whom they live on an equal basis with others and are not obliged to live in a particular living arrangement;

(b) Persons with disabilities have access to a range of in-, residential and other community support services, including personal assistance necessary to support living and inclusion in the community, and to prevent isolation or segregation from the community;

(c) Community services and facilities for the general population are available on an equal basis to persons with disabilities and are responsive to their needs.

Democratic People's Republic of Korea (2025)

35. The Committee is concerned that:

(a) Persons with disabilities have limited freedom to choose their living arrangements, with credible reports of institutionalisation, including the placement of persons of short stature and other groups in isolated settlements where movement is restricted and participation in mainstream education or employment is denied;

(b) The lack of information provided by the State Party on measures taken in respect of children with disabilities who have been abandoned and to transition from residential care institutions to family- and community-based forms of childcare.

36. Recalling its general comment No. 5 (2017) on living independently and being included in the community, its Guidelines on Deinstitutionalization, including in Emergencies, and the report of the Special Rapporteur on the rights of persons with disabilities on the transformation of services for persons with disabilities, the Committee recommends that the State party, in close consultation and with active involvement of persons with disabilities:

(a) Prohibit institutionalization and segregation of persons with disabilities, remove restrictions on their freedom to choose where and with whom they live, and ensure full deinstitutionalization by adopting a clear strategy to transition from institutional care to community-based services, that includes specific goals, benchmarks and time frames;

(b) Establish support mechanisms for families of children with disabilities to prevent abandonment, and substitute measures for segregation with measures to promote their adoption or placement in foster care and ensure that foster families receive the requisite support for their care.

36. The Committee notes with concern:

(a) Insufficient measures to prevent institutionalisation of persons with disabilities, including children and older persons with disabilities, due to inaccessible housing in the community, restrictions on personal assistance, inequity across welfare services counties and between the Disability Services Act and the Social Welfare Act;

(b) The lack of Swedish language social services and accessible housing options for people with disabilities from the Åland islands resulting in relocation to services in Sweden and unclear jurisdictional responsibilities for financing, care, social insurance and oversight and monitoring.

37. Recalling its general comment No. 5 (2017) on living independently and being included in the community, its guidelines on deinstitutionalization, including in emergencies, the report of the Special Rapporteur on the rights of persons with disabilities on the transformation of services for persons with disabilities, the Committee recommends that the State Party, in close consultation and active involvement of persons with disabilities through their representative organisations:

(a) Implement a coordinated deinstitutionalisation strategy across all its territories, with timelines and financial resources, and applicable across all institutional settings, such as nursing homes, group homes, residential facilities and psychiatric institutions;

(b) Develop a nationally consistent, rights-based legislative and policy framework for the provision of community-based supports and services, including accessible housing, home support and personal assistance that respects self-direction and individual control and does not impose age limitations, service fees or waitlists, and ensures equity across welfare services counties and between the Disability Services Act and the Social Welfare Act;

(c) Urgently invest in Swedish language social services and accessible housing options to foster the cultural and linguistic identity of Åland persons with disabilities, to end the need to seek services in mainland Finland or to be relocated to services in Sweden, and resolve the jurisdictional responsibilities for financing, care, social insurance, oversight and monitoring.

Kiribati (2025)

35. The Committee is concerned about the limited possibilities for persons with disabilities to choose their place of residence and where and with whom they live, mainly due to the absence of in-home support, personal assistance, community services and accessible housing.

36. The Committee recalls its general comment No. 5 (2017) on living independently and being included in the community and recommends that the State party in close consultation and active involvement of persons with disabilities through their representative organizations:

(a) Develop national strategies and guidelines on community based inclusive development and work with donors and development partners, faith-based organisations and community leaders to implement community based inclusive programs across all islands;

(b) Strengthen the social protection schemes, such as the Disability Support Allowance to better cover costs associated with in-home support, personal assistance and community services;

(c) Support families with members with disabilities, including financially, to undertake housing modifications and gain access to assistive devices and technologies.

Maldives (2025)

36. The Committee is concerned about the limited possibilities for persons with disabilities to choose their place of residency and where and with whom they live, in particular due to the lack of in-home residential and other community support services including personal assistance, in particular in the outer islands, what leaves persons with disabilities dependant of their families and their care and without the possibility to enjoy their right to independent living.

38. The Committee recalls its general comment No. 5 (2017) on living independently and being included in the community and the Committee's Guidelines on Deinstitutionalization, including in emergencies (2022) and recommends that the State party:

(a) In close consultation and active involvement of persons with disabilities through their representative organizations, develop national strategies and guidelines on community based inclusive development, across all islands, with an established timeframe and allocation of sufficient resources and ensure the community-based services are available aimed to enable persons to live independently and participate in the community;

(b) Raise awareness to promote understanding of the right of choice and self-determination of persons with disabilities concerning their living arrangements, the right not to be obliged to live in a particular living arrangement, and the value of inclusion in, as opposed to segregation from, the community;

(c) Transform mainstream services in the community including education, employment, health, leisure, cultural and social activities to be disability inclusive and accessible and provide personal assistants;

(d) Support families with members with disabilities, including financially, to adapt the houses, improve their accessibility and get access to assistive technologies.

39. The Committee is concerned that:

(a) Deinstitutionalisation efforts are inconsistent and slow with many persons with disabilities forced to live in institutions, such as nursing homes, group homes, specialised long term care facilities and other institutions because they are unable to obtain support;

(b) Many Indigenous children and adults with disabilities must leave their communities and cultural connections to obtain accessible housing and appropriate support;

(c) Funding and programs for support for community living have long wait lists, require co-payments and are not portable throughout Canada.

40. Recalling its General Comment No. 5 (2017) on living independently and being included in the community and its Guidelines on deinstitutionalisation, including in emergencies (2022), the Committee recommends that the State Party, in close consultation and active involvement of persons with disabilities through their representative organisations:

(a) Implement a coordinated deinstitutionalisation strategy across federal, provincial, and territorial governments with timelines and targets, and applicable across all institutional settings, such as nursing homes, group homes, specialised long-term care facilities and psychiatric institutions;

(b) Establish comprehensive distinctions-based Indigenous policies and plans to urgently address the lack of accessible housing and community supports within Indigenous communities and for non-status and off-reserve Indigenous persons with disabilities;

(c) Develop a nationally consistent, rights-based legislative and policy framework for the provision of community-based supports and services at the federal, provincial, and territorial levels, including accessible housing, home support and personal assistance that respects self-direction and individual control, and that removes wait lists and co-payments for self-managed funding programs and allow for portability throughout the State Party.

Dominican Republic (2025)

35. The Committee is concerned that:

(a) Article 76 of Law No. 5-13 on equal rights of persons with disability allows for the establishment of shelters and institutions for “persons with severe disabilities” in direct violation of the Convention;

(b) There is no clear strategy for the deinstitutionalization of persons with disabilities, including children with disabilities, who are segregated in the Angeles homes;

(c) There is a number of people with disabilities wandering the streets, others reported as abandoned and others reported as victims of family negligence;

(d) Despite the approval of municipal ordinances on local inclusion of persons with disabilities, these are not being implemented effectively due to the lack of attached financial resources.

36. Recalling its general comment No. 5 (2017), its guidelines on deinstitutionalization, including in emergencies, and the report of the Special Rapporteur on the rights of persons with disabilities on the transformation of services for persons with disabilities, the Committee recommends that the State party, in close consultation with and with the active involvement of persons with disabilities, through their representative organizations:

(a) Abolish article 76 of Law No. 5-13 on equal rights of persons with disabilities and adopt legal provisions to prohibit all forms of institutionalization for persons with disabilities;

(b) Develop a deinstitutionalization national strategy and clear action plans with adequate allocated budget and defined timelines;

(c) Take immediate measures to release children with disabilities living in the Angeles homes and place them into foster care services and inclusive settings;

(d) Take concrete measures to ensure the effective implementation of municipal ordinances on the local inclusion of persons with disabilities, including by allocating adequate financial resources to support their execution and establishing clear mechanisms for coordination between municipal and central government authorities.

48. The Committee is concerned that:

(a) The EU's interpretation of the Convention on the permissibility of small group homes seems to deviate from the Committee's interpretation and that Guidance to Member States does not include redress for institutionalization;

(b) EU funds have been and are being used for the construction and maintenance of institutional facilities, including small group homes, in Member States;

- (c) Persons with disabilities are moved between different congregate settings in the implementation of projects operating under EU law and/or financed by the EU funds;
- (d) The current monitoring systems of the use of EU funds by Member States do not effectively ensure compliance with the obligations under the Convention, and that access to judicial oversight processes by organizations of persons with disabilities is severely curtailed;
- (e) Policies and investments are insufficiently targeted at the development of support measures in the community.

49. Recalling its general comment No. 5 (2017) on living independently and being included in the community, its guidelines on deinstitutionalization, including in emergencies, and the report of the Special Rapporteur on the rights of persons with disabilities on the transformation of services for persons with disabilities, the Committee recommends that the European Union, in close consultation and active involvement of persons with disabilities:

- (a) Ensure that EU legislation, policies, programmes and guidelines on independent living are in full compliance with the requirements of the Convention, as set out in the Committee's General Comment No. 5 (2017), and repeal the European Commission's Legal Service note of 29 June 2018 (A res [2018] 2249997);
- (b) Ensure that no EU funding, including the Recovery and Resilience Facility and the Neighbourhood, Development and International Cooperation Instrument, is used for the construction or maintenance of institutional facilities, including small group homes, and shape the Multiannual Financial Framework accordingly;
- (c) Ensure that the post 2027 Cohesion Policy Legislation explicitly bans the use of EU funds for the construction and maintenance of institutional facilities, including small group homes, that the Disability Strategy 2021-2030 and its action plans for the period 2025-2030 comply with the obligations set out in the Committee's General comment No.5, and that the European Union conduct and publish an impact analysis of previous funding, in close consultation and active involvement of persons with disabilities through their representative organizations;
- (d) Amend the Commission Notice on Guidance on independent living in the context of EU funding to clarify that small group homes do not comply with the Convention and to provide redress and reparation to persons with disabilities who were or are living in institutions;
- (e) Recognize institutionalization as a form of discrimination against persons with disabilities;
- (f) Strengthen monitoring and complaint mechanisms of the allocation of EU funds, by enhancing independence of monitoring committees at the national level, ensuring monitoring by national human rights institutions, persons with disabilities and their representative organizations, in the allocation of EU funds for disability-specific purposes, ensure effective access to justice for persons with disabilities and their representative organizations against the allocation of EU funds by Member States in violation of the Convention, and use its powers, such as infringement procedures, against Member States failing to implement these measures;
- (g) Adopt unambiguous definitions of community-based services, including personal assistance, to improve targeting of investments, and collect and publish disaggregated data on the services provided and persons with disabilities utilizing them; prioritize investments for the development of accessible and affordable housing for persons with disabilities, personal assistance, centers for independent living, peer support and other types of individualized support respecting the will and preference of persons with disabilities.

35. The Committee notes with concern:

- (a) The fact that there are persons with disabilities living in institutions including mental health hospitals, the building of new institutions and the absence of a national plan for the transition from institutional settings to live in the community;

(b) The lack of support arrangements for persons with disabilities to live independently in the community, including a lack of in-home services, personal assistance, and access to community services, which limits opportunities for persons with disabilities to choose their place of residence and decide where and with whom they wish to live;

(c) The requirement of working status and history to be able to access accommodation within the local community, which excludes persons with disabilities.

36. Recalling its general comment No. 5 (2017) on living independently and being included in the community and the Committee's Guidelines on Deinstitutionalization, including in emergencies (2022), and the Report of the Special Rapporteur on the rights of persons with disabilities on the transformation of services for persons with disabilities, the Committee recommends that the State party:

(a) Adopt a strategy for the deinstitutionalization of persons with disabilities with time-bound benchmarks, and human, technical and financial resources;

(b) In close consultation and active involvement of persons with disabilities, through their representative organisations, adopt a national strategy for independent living to ensure that support services in the community, such as personal assistance, are available, and enable persons with disabilities to exercise choice and control over their lives and to make decisions concerning where and with whom to live;

(c) Take measures to ensure that persons with disabilities can access affordable and accessible accommodation within their local community, regardless of their working status and history to support their independent living.

Tuvalu (2025)

35. The Committee is concerned about the limited possibilities for persons with disabilities to choose their place of residency and where and with whom they live, in particular due to the lack of in-home residential and other community support services including personal assistance, what leaves persons with disabilities dependant of their families and their care and without the possibility to enjoy their right to independent living.

36. The Committee recalls its general comment No. 5 (2017) on living independently and being included in the community and the Committee's Guidelines on Deinstitutionalization, including in emergencies (2022) and recommends that the State party:

(a) In close consultation and active involvement of persons with disabilities through their representative organizations, develop national strategies and guidelines on community based inclusive development, across all islands, with an established timeframe and allocation of sufficient resources and ensure the community-based services are available aimed to enable persons to live independently and participate in the community;

(b) Raise awareness to promote understanding of the right of choice and self-determination of persons with disabilities concerning their living arrangements, the right not to be obliged to live in a particular living arrangement, and the value of inclusion in, as opposed to segregation from, the community;

(c) Transform mainstream services in the community including education, employment, health, leisure, cultural and social activities to be disability inclusive and accessible and provide personal assistants;

(d) Support families with members with disabilities, including financially, to adapt the houses, improve their accessibility and get access to assistive technologies

Viet Nam (2025)

37. The Committee is concerned about:

(a) The insufficient awareness among society and public authorities about the right of persons with disabilities to live independently, choose their living arrangements, and be included in the community;

(b) The continued institutionalization of persons with disabilities, including those in social protection centres;

- (c) The limited scope of the Independent Living Programme, currently piloted in only a few provinces, the restricted access of persons with psychosocial and/or intellectual disabilities to independent living arrangements, and insufficient funding for personal assistance services;
- (d) The inadequacy of financial assistance provided to persons with disabilities, which does not align with the actual costs of independent living, leaving individuals unable to fully exercise their right to independent living;
- (e) The shortage of trained social workers specialized in disability support and case management, particularly in rural areas, hindering the effective provision of community-based services.
- (f) The lack of implementation of a deinstitutionalization process.

38. Recalling its general comment No. 5 (2017) on living independently and being included in the community, its guidelines on deinstitutionalization, including in emergencies, and the report of the Special Rapporteur on the rights of persons with disabilities on the transformation of services for persons with disabilities, the Committee recommends that the State party, in close consultation and with active involvement of persons with disabilities:

- (a) Conduct regular awareness-raising to enhance societal and public authority awareness regarding the rights of persons with disabilities to live independently, make their own living arrangements, and be fully included in the community;
- (b) Ensure full deinstitutionalization by adopting a clear strategy to transition from institutional care to community-based services, including specific goals, benchmarks, and time frames;
- (c) Expand the Independent Living Programme nationwide, ensure access to independent living arrangements for persons with psychosocial and/or intellectual disabilities, including supported housing and community-based mental health services, and provide sustainable funding for personal assistance services;
- (d) Increase monthly social allowance amounts for persons with disabilities to align with the actual costs of independent living, and implement a system for regularly adjusting these allowances to account for inflation;
- (e) Expand the number of trained social workers specializing in disability support and case management, particularly in rural areas, to ensure adequate support for persons with disabilities to live independently in the community;
- (f) Promote in-home and community-based care services as alternatives to institutionalization, and ensure that the new Law on Social Work guarantees the right to personal assistance tailored to the needs of persons with disabilities.

Belarus (2024)

37. The Committee is concerned about:

- (a) The continuous institutionalization of persons with disabilities, and the lack of a clear strategy, policy on de-institutionalization or efforts to include persons with disabilities in the community and to provide the necessary support services, including personal assistance services;
- (b) The increasing number of children with disabilities in their status of enrolment in institutions, including boarding schools for children with disabilities;
- (c) The lack of awareness in society and among public authorities of the right of persons with disabilities to live independently and be included in the community, the right to choose where and with whom to live and the right not to be obliged to live in a particular living arrangement.

38. Recalling its general comment No. 5 (2017) and the Guidelines on deinstitutionalization including emergency situations (2022), the Committee recommends that in close consultation with and with active involvement of persons with disabilities and their representative organizations, the State party:

- (a) Establish a moratorium on the admission of persons with disabilities to existing facilities;

- (b) Increase and expand provisions on additional services as required for children with disabilities and their families, to ensure full support for children with disabilities in the community;
- (c) Ensure the right of persons with disabilities to live independently and their freedom to choose where and with whom to live, preventing any type of congregated living arrangements, including “family-like environments”, which reproduce isolation and institutionalization, and redirect resources from institutions, including small-sized institutions, towards support for living in the community;
- (d) Develop and implement a deinstitutionalization strategy, with clear time frames and budgetary allocations, extending to all persons with disabilities, regardless of age, gender or type of impairment, containing measures to develop independent living skills and to facilitate the transition between institutional settings and life in the community;
- (e) Strengthen measures to develop community-based services and individualized forms of support, ensuring peer support groups, cash transfers or personal budgets, including in rural areas;
- (f) Redirect resources that were used for segregation institutions to community or family support, provision of personal assistant and accessibility of existing services in the community.

Belgium (2024)

38. The Committee notes with concern:

- (a) That there is no sustained effort to promote the right of persons with disabilities to independent living and being included in the community, and that none of the Walloon, the Common Community Commission of Brussels or German-speaking authorities have implemented any deinstitutionalization plans;
- (b) That whilst the Flemish and Walloon regions have introduced personal assistance for adult persons with disabilities, the lack of sufficient funding has resulted in applicants being put on inordinately long waiting lists that effectively pre-empt the enjoyment of the right to independent living and being included in the community;
- (c) That due to a lack of accessible services to live independently in the community, most parents of children with disabilities opt for non-inclusive and segregated services in relation to school, leisure, accommodation, among others;
- (d) The placement of persons with disabilities, including children with disabilities residing in France in psychiatric hospitals and other institutions in the State party.

39. The Committee recalls its general comment No. 5 (2017) on living independently and being included in the community, its guidelines on deinstitutionalization, including in emergencies (2022) , and the report of the Special Rapporteur on the rights of persons with disabilities on the transformation of services for persons with disabilities , and recommends that the State party, in close consultation and the active involvement of persons with disabilities through their representative organizations:

- (a) Devise and enact an effective deinstitutionalization strategy, with time frames, goals, funding and monitoring, providing various forms of housing to provide persons with disabilities with a real choice about how and where to live, and ensure that community-based services are available and persons with disabilities, including persons with intellectual and/or psychosocial disabilities, can effectively exercise their right to live independently and be included in the community;
- (b) Ensure sufficient administrative and financial resources for personal assistance for independent living and being included in society to abolish waiting lists, in all regions, and provide information in accessible formats on how to access personal assistance;
- (c) Provide the support to children with disabilities and their caretakers necessary to allow them to access non-segregated services, in school, leisure, accommodation, and others, on an equal basis with other children;

(d) Cease the practice of actively promoting housing of persons with disabilities residing in France in institutions, such as psychiatric hospitals and other institutions, in the State party.

Benin (2024)

37. The Committee notes with concern the lack of information on the persons with disabilities who have benefited from the Support Fund for the Rehabilitation and Integration of Persons with Disabilities.

38. Recalling its general comment No. 5 (2017) on living independently and being included in the community and its guidelines on deinstitutionalization, including in emergencies, The Committee recommends that the State party, in close consultation with and with the active involvement of persons with disabilities, through their representative organizations :

(a) Ensure that the National Solidarity Support Fund include budget lines to promote understanding of the right to to choose where to live, with whom and how to live and support to live in the community;

(b) Start without delay a deinstitutionalization strategy for persons with disabilities and develop individualized support to live in the community;

(c) Ensure equal access by persons with disabilities to community-based services on an equal basis with others.

Burkina Faso (2024)

36. The Committee is concerned about the many obstacles for the rights of persons with disabilities to exercise their autonomy, freedom of choice and their full and effective participation in society, including:

(a) The lack of a comprehensive, national, multisectoral deinstitutionalization strategy for persons with disabilities;

(b) The lack of financial resources, accessible physical infrastructure and adequate support services, to choose where and with whom they want to live.

37. Recalling its general comment No. 5 (2017) on living independently and being included in the community, its guidelines on deinstitutionalization, including in emergencies , and the report of the Special Rapporteur on the rights of persons with disabilities on the transformation of services for persons with disabilities , the Committee recommends that the State party, in close consultation and with active involvement of persons with disabilities:

(a) Include in its legislation the rights of persons with disabilities to live independently and be included in the community and adopt mechanisms to guarantee freedom of choice concerning place of residence and where and with whom to live, including by removing guardianship and enabling housing in the community;

(b) Ensure sufficient budgetary allocations to the Operational Action Plan for the acquisition of personal assistance and assistive devices, to ensure that community support services are available, accessible and affordable, including in remote and rural areas, so that all persons with disabilities can exercise their right to live independently and be included in the community.

55. The Committee is concerned about the lack of a comprehensive, multisectoral deinstitutionalization strategy in the Kingdom of Denmark, and measures aiming towards increased institutionalization of persons with disabilities, particularly measures on expanding the circumstances under which persons with disabilities with high support requirements can be moved to different residential facilities without their consent. It is also concerned about the uneven scope of choice for persons with disabilities concerning the place of residence across municipalities, the limited access to and/or withdrawal of personal assistant schemes mainly affecting young persons with disabilities, deafblind persons and persons with complex support requirements.

56. Recalling its general comment No. 5 (2017) on living independently and being included in the community, its guidelines on deinstitutionalization, including in emergencies , the report of the Special Rapporteur on the rights of persons with disabilities on the transformation of services for persons with disabilities , and its previous recommendation , the Committee recommends that the Kingdom of Denmark, in close consultation with and with the active involvement of persons with disabilities through their representative organizations:

(a) Adopt multisectoral deinstitutionalization strategies for all persons with disabilities, including women and children with disabilities and persons with intellectual and/or psychosocial disabilities, with specific time frames and the requisite financial resources, ensuring that persons with disabilities have access to housing alternatives in their communities that are in keeping with their will and preference;

(b) Take measures to close existing institution-like residences, including group homes, and to prevent the relocation of persons with disabilities without their free and informed personal consent;

(c) Ensure that municipalities guarantee the right of all persons with disabilities to choose their place of residence regardless of the type of impairment or the complexity of support required; and provide the support required by persons with disabilities to participate in education, employment, cultural activities or to take part on social life and by avoiding reassessments.

57. The Committee is concerned that:

(a) A large number of persons with disabilities in Greenland either have to choose to move to Denmark to seek adequate psychosocial and other supports, or are referred to Danish residential facilities by authorities, due to the lack of specialized support and qualified staff in Greenland, with the risk of being increasingly disconnected from their family, language and culture.

(b) Persons with disabilities in Greenland, in particular persons with intellectual and/or psychosocial disabilities, who are sentenced to detention in a psychiatric institution are often sent to an institution in Denmark, rendering visits by friends and family a near impossibility.

58. The Committee recommends that Greenland:

(a) Further improve its efforts to provide quality support to persons with intellectual and/or psychosocial disabilities in Greenland, rendering relocations of persons with disabilities to Denmark obsolete, and ensure that the measures taken are culturally appropriate, considering that the vast majority of the population in Greenland is Inuit;

(b) Provide community-based housing and appropriate supports and ensure access to justice on an equal basis with others.

Ghana (2024)

36. The Committee is concerned that:

(a) There is high prevalence of institutionalization reported by the Ghana Statistical Service and the fact that many individuals still live in segregated environments, limiting their ability to live in the community in the absence of a national plan for the transition from institutional settings to live in the community;

(b) There are limited community-based support services to ensure persons with disabilities can live independently and be included in the community;

(c) Persons with disabilities frequently face significant economic barriers, including unemployment and underemployment, which undermine their ability to live independently. Social stigmatization and discrimination further hinder their participation in community life, affecting their overall quality of life and independence;

(d) The lack of accessible and affordable housing, support services, and social inclusion opportunities that has hindered efforts to promote community-based living for persons with disabilities leaving them with no choice other than to live in institutions;

- (e) Community-based services including healthcare, education, employment services, and social support networks to support persons with disabilities are limited;
- (f) The referral systems within communities are often underdeveloped, leading to inadequate coordination and follow-up for individuals who need comprehensive support services.

37. The Committee recommends that the State Party:

- (a) Establish a national policy framework for the closure of institutions and residential care facilities, providing clear pathways and support for persons with disabilities to transition into the community;
- (b) Develop and implement comprehensive community-based support services to ensure persons with disabilities live independently and be included in the community;
- (c) Implement policies to combat unemployment and underemployment among persons with disabilities, addressing social stigmatization and discrimination to enhance their economic independence and participation in community life;
- (d) Invest in accessible housing and robust support services to facilitate community-based living, ensuring persons with disabilities have access to inclusive education, employment opportunities, and social inclusion initiatives;
- (e) Develop and expand community-based support services and inclusion initiatives such as house, school and health facilities to ensure inclusion of persons with disabilities in the community;
- (f) Enhance referral systems and coordination among healthcare, education, employment, and social support networks to provide comprehensive community-based services for persons with disabilities.

Mauritius (2024)

31. The Committee is concerned that:

- (a) The Protection and Promotion of the Rights of Persons with Disabilities Act 2024 and relevant action plans fail to sufficiently recognize the right of persons with disabilities to autonomy and full social inclusion and fail to promote deinstitutionalization for persons with disabilities and inclusion in the community;
- (b) Insufficient measures have been taken to achieve deinstitutionalization for persons with disabilities and to provide individualized support for independent living and accessible services in the community, including the “carer’s allowance” of 3,500 rupees per month that is considerably insufficient to hire support persons;
- (c) There is insufficient availability of housing that is appropriate, affordable and accessible for persons with disabilities to live independently and be included in the community.

32. Recalling its general comment No. 5 (2017) on living independently and being included in the community, its Guidelines on deinstitutionalization, including in emergencies, the report of the Special Rapporteur on the rights of persons with disabilities on the transformation of services for persons with disabilities and its previous recommendations, the Committee recommends that the State party, in close consultation and with active involvement of persons with disabilities:

- (a) Explicitly recognize in its legislation the rights of persons with disabilities to freedom of choice, autonomy and full social inclusion; conduct awareness-raising campaigns to this end; and improve the action plans with time-bound benchmarks and human, technical and financial resources aimed at the effective transition of persons with disabilities from institutions into independent living in the community on an equal basis with others;
- (b) Redirect its budget allocations and take measures to achieve deinstitutionalization for persons with disabilities living in institutions of any kind; to phase out institutions and residential homes; to increase the amount of the “carer’s allowance”; and to develop individualized support such as in-home and community personal support as well as services in the community that are accessible for all persons with disabilities on an equal basis with others, including healthcare, education, employment and accessible transportation;

(c) Increase the range, affordability and accessibility of public housing for persons with disabilities, including by increasing rental subsidies and increasing the 4% allotment of housing units currently reserved for persons with disabilities in the housing project launched in 2023.

Netherlands (2024)

43. The Committee is concerned about:

- (a) The continued institutionalization of adults and children with disabilities, in particular with intellectual and/or psychosocial disabilities, along with reports of violence and abuse in these institutions and the lack of a clear, actionable plan and timeframe for deinstitutionalization;
- (b) Lack of fully accessible community-based services, including mental health services and personal assistance;
- (c) Reports of a persistent shortage of affordable and accessible housing for persons with disabilities;
- (d) The lack of attention paid to the realization of inclusive housing and living arrangements, as well as the obstacles faced by persons with disabilities regarding housing and living arrangements when moving within or between municipalities, leading to challenges in maintaining independent living, as well as the barriers faced by persons with disabilities, especially persons facing complex barriers, when applying for support services in municipalities, due to the bureaucratic, difficult to understand and lengthy application process.

44. Recalling its general comment No. 5 (2017) on living independently and being included in the community, its guidelines on deinstitutionalization, including in emergencies , and the report of the Special Rapporteur on the rights of persons with disabilities on the transformation of services for persons with disabilities , the Committee recommends that the State party, in close consultation and with active involvement of organizations of persons with disabilities:

- (a) Develop and implement a clear strategy and a comprehensive action plan to end, as a matter of priority, the institutionalization of all persons with disabilities, including in small residential homes, and to support the transition of adults and children with disabilities to community-based and domestic settings, with specific time frames, sufficient human, technical and financial resources, and clear responsibilities for implementation and independent monitoring;
- (b) Develop plans and implement existing programs to provide and strengthen community-based services, including developing mental health services and personal assistance in the community, and make existing services accessible to all persons with disabilities living in the community;
- (c) Increase efforts, at all levels of the State party, to end the shortage of affordable and accessible housing for persons with disabilities;
- (d) Enhance knowledge and awareness of inclusive housing and living arrangements and the right of persons with disabilities to live independently; harmonize regulations and procedures across municipalities and reduce obstacles to ensure that persons with disabilities face minimal disruptions when moving within or between municipalities; render the application process for support services in municipalities fully accessible and ensure that persons with disabilities get timely access to the support necessary to live independently;
- (e) Re-examine the allocation of funds, including the regional funds obtained from the European Union dedicated to the provision of support services for persons with disabilities, to ensure the full implementation of the right to independent living.

38. The Committee notes that the State party is in the process of developing the “National Strategy of reforming the system of institutional care and upbringing of children for 2017–

2026 and the Action Plan for the implementation of its first stage”, as well as the “Strategy for Reforming Psychoneurological, Other Residential Institutions and De-institutionalisation of Care for Persons with Disabilities and Older Persons”, both to be adopted the last quarter of 2024. However, it notes with concern that the State party:

- (a) Has not implemented “The National Strategy to Reform of the Institutional Child Care System in Ukraine and Action Plan for the Implementation of Stage I the deinstitutionalization of children within the period 2017-2026;
- (b) Continue to operate small groups for children with disabilities called “family-type orphanages”, which are still institutions and go against the Convention;
- (c) Is not applying a moratorium for new admissions into institutions;
- (d) Continue to allocate private and international recovery and cooperation funds for the construction of new psychiatric institutions, for instance, in the Zakarpattia region, by rebuilding the Mukachevo institution for girls within the last three months, which included a UNDP plaque “on some equipment in the newly reconstructed building”;
- (e) Has failed to ensure that persons with disabilities forced to flee to third countries are not institutionalized;
- (f) Is not providing accessible housing to internally displaced persons with disabilities.

39. Recalling its General Comment No. 5 (2017) on living independently and being included in the community and its Guidelines on deinstitutionalization, including in emergencies (2022), the Committee recommends that the State party:

- (a) Ensure the implementation of national plans, and policies on deinstitutionalization for children and adults with disabilities. This, prior consultation and active involvement of persons with disabilities, through their representative organizations;
- (b) Apply a moratorium to the admission of persons with disabilities into all institutions, including those of children with disabilities, meanwhile the implementation of deinstitutionalization programs take place;
- (c) Avoid the transfer of persons segregated in large centres to group homes, as those that are still institutions;
- (d) End all forms of institutionalization based on impairment, including for the purpose of providing rehabilitation;
- (e) Adopt a comprehensive strategy and action plan to transition from institutions to the development of individualized support for living in community, including personal assistance and community-based supports and networks. The State party should expressly include boarding schools for children with disabilities in deinstitutionalization reforms.
- (f) Suspend any interstate agreements that perpetuate institutionalization of persons with disabilities forced to flee Ukraine;
- (g) Establish a national policy ensuring accessible housing for internally displaced persons with disabilities in community-based environments.

Azerbaijan (2024)

43. The Committee notes with concern:

- (a) Provisions in the Law on the Rights of the Child providing for institutionalization based on impairment, including of children with psychosocial and/or intellectual disabilities, and the prevalence of segregated settings, such as orphanages, boarding schools, and community-based rehabilitation centres (CRPD/C/AZE/2-3, para. 73);
- (b) The lack of a range of support for persons with disabilities, including in-home support services;
- (c) The uneven access of persons with disabilities to services in the community, in particular affecting persons with disabilities living in rural areas.

44. Recalling its general comment No. 5 (2017) on living independently and being included in the community, and its guidelines on deinstitutionalization, including in emergency situations, the Committee recommends that the State party, in close consultation with and with the active involvement of persons with disabilities, through their representative organizations:

- (a) Recognize in its legislation the rights of persons with disabilities to live independently and be included in the community and adopt mechanisms to guarantee freedom of choice concerning place of residence, where and with whom to live, including by removing guardianship and enabling housing in the community;
- (b) End all forms of institutionalization of persons with disabilities, devise and implement a deinstitutionalization strategy for all persons with disabilities that includes information for persons with disabilities in accessible formats, including Braille, Easy Read and sign language, support for living outside congregated settings, redress for survivors of institutionalization, including individual and collective redress, reparations and guarantees of non-repetition;
- (c) Promote social inclusion of children and adults with disabilities, including by providing appropriate individualized support, such as personal assistance, peer support networks and personalized budgets;
- (d) Secure barrier-free access to public facilities and services in the community on an equal basis with others, including to education, healthcare, public transportation, and other cultural, sport and leisure amenities for children with disabilities, vocational training and employment opportunities.

38. The Committee is deeply concerned at:

- (a) The continued granting of licenses to establish residential institutions and sheltered workshops for persons with disabilities, including children, under article 4 of Law No. 74 of 2006 on the Care, Rehabilitation and Employment of Persons with Disabilities, as well as the continued placement of persons with disabilities in residential institutions outside the State party's territory.
- (b) The lack of measures to ensure that persons with disabilities are free to choose their place of residence and have access to the support services necessary to live independently, including personal facilities.

39. Recalling its general comment No. 5 (2017) and its guidelines on deinstitutionalization, including in emergency situations, the Committee recommends that the State party, through close consultation and the active participation of persons with disabilities and their organizations, in particular persons with intellectual disabilities, take immediate steps to

- (a) Prohibit all forms of institutionalization and launch a national strategy and action plan to replace residential services with an inclusive community-based service system.
- (b) Provide services to promote independent living for persons with disabilities and grant allowances for additional expenses incurred by persons with disabilities to carry out their activities of daily living.

Costa Rica (2024)

33. El Comité nota con preocupación:

- a) La ausencia de una estrategia de desinstitutionalización para las personas con discapacidad, especialmente las mujeres y niños con discapacidad segregados en instituciones, y la falta de programas de apoyos comunitarios y servicios accesibles en la comunidad, incluyendo vivienda accesible y trabajo digno, cuando se incluyan en la comunidad;

¹ When compiling the recommendations, the Concluding Observations were only available in Arabic. This document includes an automated translation to English by DeepL.

- b) La falta de leyes y políticas relativas a la prohibición del internamiento involuntario en instituciones y el tratamiento forzoso de personas con discapacidad, en particular en el caso de personas con discapacidad intelectual y/o psicosocial;
- c) La persistente institucionalización de niños y niñas con discapacidad y la falta de apoyos a sus familias para que vivan en comunidad;
- d) La falta de medidas para garantizar que todas las personas con discapacidad mantengan su autonomía y libre determinación a la hora de elegir su lugar de residencia y dónde y con quién vivir; y que han tomado sus propias decisiones con respecto a su inclusión en la comunidad.

34. Remitiéndose a su observación general núm. 5 (2017), sobre el derecho a vivir de forma independiente y a ser incluido en la comunidad, y a sus Directrices sobre la desinstitucionalización, incluso en situaciones de emergencia (2022), el Comité urge al Estado parte a, mediante consultas estrechas y la colaboración activa con las personas con discapacidad, a través de las organizaciones que las representan:

- a) Elaborar una estrategia nacional sobre la desinstitucionalización de las personas con discapacidad, , y asegurar de que esté en consonancia con la Convención e incluya suficientes medidas presupuestarias y de otro tipo, así como actividades de toma de conciencia para promover la comprensión del derecho de las personas con discapacidad a elegir y determinar de forma autónoma su sistema de vida, el derecho a no ser obligadas a aceptar un determinado sistema de vida y el valor de la inclusión en la comunidad, en contraposición a la segregación;
- b) Adoptar legislación que proporcione las bases jurídicas necesarias para poner fin a la institucionalización de las personas con discapacidad y proporcionar viviendas accesibles adecuadas y servicios de apoyo para que las personas con discapacidad vivan de forma independiente en la comunidad, e implementarlo rápidamente;
- c) Establezca un programa de desinstitucionalización incluidos presupuestos y recurso humano dirigido a niños y niñas con discapacidad, con plazos definidos y con apoyos específicos para que vivan en comunidad;
- d) Adoptar medidas para garantizar que las personas con discapacidad, independientemente de su lugar de residencia, tengan acceso a una gama de servicios de atención domiciliaria, residenciales y otros servicios de apoyo comunitario, incluidos asistentes personales, que sean controlados y gestionados por los beneficiarios.

Kazakhstan (2024)

41. The Committee notes with concern:

- (a) Institutionalization of children with disabilities and adults with disabilities in residential and half-residential care facilities, including babies houses, where they lack interaction with the community, including with members of their families, and pilot programmes;
- (b) Plans to transfer persons with disabilities from former medical-social institutions into specialized social service centres and small capacity homes, thereby perpetuating discriminatory congregated living arrangements for persons with disabilities on the basis of impairment;
- (c) Insufficient in-home and community-based support services for persons with disabilities, and the insufficient availability of personal assistance, including for persons with intellectual and/or psychosocial disabilities and persons with high support needs, and insufficient availability of accessible housing, education facilities, commercial premises, leisure and sports infrastructure, and cultural institutions.

42. Recalling its general comment No. 5 (2017) on living independently and being included in the community, and its guidelines on deinstitutionalization, including in emergency situations, the Committee recommends that the State party, in close consultation with and with the active involvement of persons with disabilities, through their representative organizations:

- (a) End all forms of institutionalization of persons with disabilities, ensure, in law and in practice, that all persons with disabilities, including persons with intellectual and/or psychosocial disabilities and persons with disabilities with high support needs, can in fact exercise their right to choose their place of residence and decide where and with whom they live. To this end, devise and implement a deinstitutionalization strategy for all persons with disabilities, including, inter alia, a range of different forms of individualized support services for living in the community, including personal assistance and community-based support and peer support, support and information in accessible formats for persons with disabilities in institutions to participate in deinstitutionalization processes, and mechanisms of accountability and monitoring;
- (b) Cease investment in the construction and renovation of institutions for persons with disabilities, including in institutions of small size, and divert the funds to the implementation of the deinstitutionalization strategy;
- (c) Develop safe, accessible and affordable housing in the community, include requirements of persons with disabilities in the eligibility criteria for public housing and for rental subsidies, and ensure that persons with disabilities, including persons with intellectual and/or psychosocial disabilities and persons with disabilities with high support needs, can in law and in fact enter into legally binding rental or ownership contracts.

Nicaragua (2024)

38. El Comité observa con preocupación:

- a) La ausencia de una estrategia de desinstitucionalización para las personas con discapacidad, especialmente las mujeres y niños con discapacidad segregados en instituciones y la falta de programas de apoyos comunitarios y servicios accesibles en la comunidad, incluyendo vivienda accesible y trabajo digno, cuando se incluyan en la comunidad;
- b) La ausencia de partidas presupuestales significativas en el Ministerio de la Familia, Adolescencia y Niñez (Mifan) para financiar la vida independiente de las personas con discapacidad y su inclusión en la comunidad;
- c) La existencia de instituciones como el Centro Infantil “Pajarito Azul” y el Hospital Nacional Psicosocial, y la falta de información sobre cuantas personas, niños y niñas con discapacidad se encuentran institucionalizados.

39. El Comité recuerda su observación general núm. 5 (2017) sobre el derecho a vivir de forma independiente y a ser incluido en la comunidad, y sus directrices sobre la desinstitucionalización, incluidas las situaciones de emergencia, e insta al Estado parte a:

- a) Adoptar una estrategia nacional y multisectorial de desinstitucionalización de las personas con discapacidad, en particular de las niñas y los niños, de las mujeres y de las personas con discapacidad intelectual y/o psicosocial, en estrecha consulta con las organizaciones de personas con discapacidad y con la participación activa de estas, que incluya plazos específicos y recursos financieros necesarios, asegurando que las personas con discapacidad tengan acceso a alternativas de vivienda en la comunidad que promuevan su voluntad y preferencias, así como a redes y servicios de apoyo, incluido el apoyo entre pares, y atención integral a sus necesidades básicas;
- b) Asignar el presupuesto suficiente al Ministerio de la Familia, Adolescencia y Niñez (Mifan), incluyendo recursos humanos y financieros adecuados para impulsar la vida independiente de las personas con discapacidad;
- c) Poner fin a la institucionalización de las personas con discapacidad, en particular de los niños y las niñas con discapacidad, y a las hospitalizaciones prolongadas e indefinidas.

Sweden (2024)

43. The Committee is concerned about:

- (a) Increased restrictions to personal assistance, the loss of personal assistance for 1500 persons with disabilities between 2015 and 2022, the lack of opportunity to apply for personal assistance for persons over 66 and the variation of personal assistance between municipalities;

(b) The increased rates of institutionalisation for children and adults with disabilities;

(c) Persons with disabilities being denied the right to choose their place of residence and where and with whom they live on an equal basis with others.

44. Recalling its general comment No. 5 (2017), its guidelines on deinstitutionalization, including in emergencies, and the report of the Special Rapporteur on the rights of persons with disabilities on the transformation of services for persons with disabilities, the Committee recommends that the State party, in close consultation and active involvement of persons with disabilities take immediate action to develop and implement a national deinstitutionalisation strategy that includes:

(a) Legislative, administrative, policy and other measures to ensure nationally consistent access to individualised personal assistance and support to all persons with disabilities, including the 1500 persons with disabilities who lost personal assistance between 2015 and 2022, and to persons with disabilities over the age of 66;

(b) Independent monitoring of institutions until they are closed;

(c) Relevant policies to close existing institutions and to prevent reinstitutionalisation of persons with disabilities;

(d) Strengthen the support system for children with disabilities to live with their families or grow up in family environments instead of institutions;

(e) Measures to remove barriers for persons with disabilities to choose where and with whom they live, including an increase in the supply of safe, affordable and accessible community-based housing.

Zambia (2024)

37. The Committee notes with appreciation the information provided by the State party's delegation that the elaboration of national guidelines on community based inclusive development is at its final stage. However, it observes with concern:

(a) The continued institutionalization of persons with disabilities, in particular persons with intellectual and/or psychosocial disabilities in psychiatric institutions, and that persons with disabilities, in particular persons with intellectual and/or psychosocial disability face stigma, negative attitudes, insults, threats and physical assault, exploitation and ill-treatment in the community, including by family members, the police and traditional healers, which undermines their right to live in the community;

(b) The lack of efforts, including budgetary and other measures, made towards the inclusion of persons with disabilities in the community and the provision of all necessary support services, including personal assistance services, as well as the lack of awareness in society and among public authorities of the right of persons with disabilities to live independently and be included in the community, the right to choose where and with whom to live and the right not to be obliged to live in a particular living arrangement;

(c) The absence of a deinstitutionalization strategy for persons with psychosocial disabilities who are in psychiatric institutions;

(d) That persons with disabilities who participated in resettlement programmes under the Department of Resettlement, have been entitled to land in remote areas far from their place of living, with limited access to infrastructure such as water, electricity, roads, schools and health services.

38. The Committee recalls its general comment No. 5 (2017) on living independently and being included in the community and the Committee's Guidelines on Deinstitutionalization, including in emergencies (2022) and recommends that the State party:

(a) Finalize and adopt, as a matter of priority, the national guidelines on community based inclusive development, and allocate sufficient resources to roll out the State programme on community based inclusive development at the national and local levels, including in rural and remote areas;

- (b) Raise awareness in the communities and in the society in general about the rights of persons with disabilities, take measures to combat stigma and negative attitudes in the communities and punish perpetrators, and commence the deinstitutionalization of persons with disabilities who are still in residential settings and increase the availability of community-based services;
- (c) Review the national legislation and policies, including the Persons with Disabilities Act No.6 (2012) and the National Disability Policy (2015), in close consultation and active involvement of persons with disabilities, through their representative organizations, to bring them in full conformity with the Convention and ensure that it includes sufficient budgetary and other measures, as well as awareness-raising activities to promote understanding of the right of choice and self-determination of persons with disabilities concerning their living arrangements, the right not to be obliged to live in a particular living arrangement, and the value of inclusion in, as opposed to segregation from, the community;
- (d) Develop a strategy and an action plan in close consultation and active involvement of persons with disabilities through their representative organizations for the process of deinstitutionalization of persons with psychosocial disabilities in psychiatric institutions and ensure the community-based services are available aimed to enable persons to live independently and participate in the community;
- (e) Ensure that land plots provided to persons with disabilities under the resettlement programmes, are accessible to persons with disabilities, and have necessary infrastructure to enable persons with disabilities to live independently and participate in the community.

Andorra (2023)

39. The Committee notes the approval of the Comprehensive Plan for Mental Health and Addictions, PISMA (2022). However, it is concerned about:

- (a) The absence of a deinstitutionalization strategy for persons with disabilities, including children with disabilities, and the lack of information on the participation of persons with disabilities in these efforts;
- (b) The requirements to access the programme on independent living, including minimum skills and resources, and the limited impact of the programmes on independent living and personal assistance that benefit only twenty and two persons with disabilities, respectively;
- (c) The collaboration agreement signed by the State party with the Our Lady of Meritxell Private Foundation (FPNSM) for the provision of residential care service for persons with disabilities (l'Albó residence), and the public funding used to maintain institutions;
- (d) The limited information on the number of persons with disabilities living in institutions.

40. The Committee, recalling its general comment No. 5 (2017) on living independently and being included in the community and the Committee's guidelines on deinstitutionalization, including in emergencies (2022), recommends that the State party:

- (a) Develop and implement a strategy on deinstitutionalization, in close consultation with and the active involvement of persons with disabilities, through their representative organizations, with clear time frames and budgetary allocations, extending to all persons with disabilities, regardless of age, gender or type of impairment, and provide community-based services aimed at enabling persons to live independently and to participate in the community;
- (b) Strengthen support arrangements for persons with disabilities to live independently in the community, including accessible and affordable housing outside any type of congregated premises, personal assistance, user-led budget, peer support groups, and access to services in the community, as well as review the requirements to access the programme on independent living and reinforce the dissemination of the programmes on independent living and personal assistance;
- (c) Review the collaboration agreement signed by the State party with the Our Lady of Meritxell Private Foundation (FPNSM) for the provision of residential care service for persons with disabilities (l'Albó residence), and redirect public funding from institutions towards support for living in the community;

(d) Collect disaggregated data on the number of persons with disabilities living in institutions.

Austria (2023)

45. The Committee is concerned about:

- (a) The lack of a comprehensive and unified strategy to forcefully promote, coordinate and design the deinstitutionalization process, encompassing the Federal government and the Länder;
- (b) Persons with disabilities being unable and not having the right to choose their place of residence, with choice equal to others, due to a lack of adequate residential accommodation in the community and of the requisite support services, including budget allocations, for personal assistants, and of a corresponding enforceable legal right;
- (c) The lack of harmonized regulations regarding the different personal assistance services and offers and their being assessed based on a medical model of disability;
- (d) Investments, partly with funding by the European Union Structural Funds, in the renovation and construction of segregated institutions for persons with disabilities.

46. Recalling general comment No. 5 (2017) on living independently and being included in the community and Committee's Guidelines on deinstitutionalization, including in emergencies (2022), the Committee recommends:

- (a) Establish a comprehensive, nationwide deinstitutionalization strategy, with benchmarks, timeframes, and funding, encompassing the competencies of the Federal government, the Länder and the municipalities, and ensure close consultation with and the active involvement of organizations of persons with disabilities in all deinstitutionalization processes;
- (b) Enact legislation on the level of the Federal Government, the Länder and – if appropriate – on the municipal level, providing the requisite legal bases to end institutionalization of persons with disabilities and to provide adequate accessible residential accommodation and support services for persons with disabilities to live independently in the community, and implement them expeditiously;
- (c) Guarantee an enforceable legal right to adequate financial, technical and personal support to live independently in the community;
- (d) Urge the participation of all Länder in the pilot project 'Nationwide unified regulations for personal assistance in leisure time and work';
- (e) Refrain from any further investment in existing or new institutions for persons with disabilities and allocate appropriate financial, technical and educational resources to foster the right to independent living of all persons with disabilities.

Germany (2023)

43. The Committee is concerned about:

- (a) The extensive segregation of persons with disabilities in institutional settings and the lack of measures to progress deinstitutionalisation;
- (b) The range of barriers to enable persons with disabilities to exercise choice and preference regarding place of residence and support services, such as the additional cost proviso, the forcible pooling of inclusion benefits and services, the complexity of utilising personal budgets and benefit allowances based on shared accommodation rather than individual requirements.

44. Recalling its general comment No. 5 (2017) on living independently and being included in the community, its Guidelines on deinstitutionalization, including in emergencies (2022) and the report of the Special Rapporteur on the Rights of Persons with Disabilities, 'Transformation of services for persons with disabilities' (2023), the Committee recommends that the State party, in close consultation with and active involvement of persons with disabilities:

- (a) Develop a comprehensive deinstitutionalisation strategy to end, as a matter of priority, the institutionalisation of persons with disabilities, including in small residential homes, with measures to prevent trans-institutionalisation and to support the transition from institutions to life in the community, with specific timeframes, human, technical and financial resources, and clear responsibilities for implementation and monitoring;
- (b) Develop measures to remove barriers for persons with disabilities to choose where and with whom they live, including by committing to increase the supply of affordable and accessible housing, by establishing personal assistance supports and services, by removing additional cost requirements and the forced pooling of inclusion benefits and services, reducing the complexity in utilising personal budgets and by basing benefit allowances on individual requirement rather than shared accommodation.

43. The Committee observes with concern:

- (a) Institutionalization of persons with disabilities on the basis of impairment in psychiatric facilities, residential facilities, full care facilities, home facility apartments and in the context of the implementation of the 'ecological-rehabilitation model' and the denial of legal capacity to make choices concerning living arrangements;
- (b) The continued development of congregate housing and the transfer of persons with disabilities from large residential facilities into small institutions such as 'home facilities' or apartments for up to 6 persons and barriers to access to accessible housing, including for renting;
- (c) Insufficient and/or denial of in-home and community-based support affecting in particular persons with complex support needs, older persons with disabilities and persons with disabilities in Arab communities, migrants with disabilities, refugees and asylum seekers with disabilities and persons with disabilities in refugee-like situations;
- (d) The lack of accessible community services and reports of persons with disabilities who are excluded from services provided in the community.

44. Recalling its general comment No. 5 (2017) on living independently and being included in the community, and its guidelines on deinstitutionalization, including in emergencies² (2022), the Committee recommends that the State party:

- (a) End all forms of institutionalization based on impairment, including for the purpose of providing rehabilitation and adopt a comprehensive strategy and action plan to transition from institutions, redirecting efforts to the development of a range of individualized support to live in the community, including personal assistance, and community-based supports and networks, in close consultation and active involvement of organizations of persons with disabilities;
- (b) Develop safe, accessible and affordable housing in the community, including through reviewing eligibility criteria for public housing, increasing rental subsidies and measures to address in-home accessibility arrangements, providing in-home and community-based support, increasing the allowance for independent living, including for those who leave institutions, and enabling persons with disabilities to enter into legally binding rental or ownership agreements;
- (c) Implement measures to ensure equal access by persons with disabilities in Arab communities, older persons with disabilities, persons with disabilities who have complex support needs, migrants and refugees with disabilities and persons with disabilities in refugee-like situations to the range of in-home and individualized support to live in the community, including personal assistance and access to mainstream services in the community, including health care and education;

(d)Implement measures to remove access barriers to mainstream services in the community based on migrant, refugee or asylum seeker status or persons with disabilities in refugee-like situations.

Malawi (2023)

39.The Committee is concerned about:

- (a)The lack of measures to recognise and realise the right of persons with disabilities to live in the community and have choices equal to others and that persons with disabilities, in particular persons with psychosocial disabilities and persons with intellectual disabilities, often become dependant on their families, and face isolation and confinement at home or in institutions;
- (b)The overreliance of persons with disabilities on “well-wishers”, in absence of individualised support, in particular personal assistance to facilitate their participation in the community;
- (c)That lack of income, employment and social protection prevent persons with disabilities from achieving an autonomous life and an adequate standard of life to participate in the community;
- (d)The lack of accessibility of community services and facilities that limit participation of persons with disabilities in society.

40.The Committee recommends that the State party, in line with its general comment No. 5 (2017) on living independently and being included in the community, and with the support of the guidelines on deinstitutionalization, including in emergencies,³ issued in 2022:

- (a)Ensure the recognition of the right of persons with disabilities, irrespective of age, gender and impairment, to live in the community and to choose where they live and with whom they wish to live. The State party should address stigma and stereotypes that lead to isolation and confinement at home;
- (b)Put in place legal and policy measures for the deinstitutionalization of persons with disabilities and their effective inclusion in the community, in close consultation with and involvement of persons with disabilities through their representative organizations;
- (c)Strengthen community rehabilitation programmes and adopt measures to ensure the economic and social autonomy of persons with disabilities and their families;
- (d)Ensure that services for the general population in the community take an inclusive approach throughout the State party, including by strengthening the role of organizations of persons with disabilities in supporting people with disabilities in accessing the labour market, transport, housing, education, health, recreation and other publicly accessible facilities and services.

Mauritania (2023)

33.The Committee is concerned about:

- (a)The continued institutionalization of persons with disabilities and lack of efforts, including budgetary and other measures, made towards the inclusion of persons with disabilities in the community and the provision of all necessary support services, including personal assistance services, as well as the lack of awareness in society and among public authorities of the right of persons with disabilities to live independently and be included in the community, the right to choose where and with whom to live and the right not to be obliged to live in a particular living arrangement;
- (b)The absence of a deinstitutionalization strategy for persons with disabilities, including women and children with disabilities placed in existing residential institutions, the lack of programmes for resettling of persons with disabilities, in particular persons with intellectual and/or psychosocial disabilities who cannot afford housing.

34. The Committee recalls its general comment No. 5 (2017) on living independently and being included in the community and the Committee's Guidelines on Deinstitutionalization, including in emergencies (2022) and recommends that the State party:

(a) Ensure the deinstitutionalization of all persons with disabilities in institutions of any kind, provide community-based services facilitating the full enjoyment by all persons with disabilities of their right to live in the community and to be fully included and participate in the community;

(b) Develop a strategy and an action plan in close consultation with and active involvement of persons with disabilities through their representative organizations for the process of deinstitutionalization of those adults and children with disabilities who are still in a residential setting and render the community-based services available aimed at enabling persons to live independently and participate in the community.

39. The Committee observes with concern:

(a) The continuous institutionalization of persons with disabilities and lack of efforts, including budgetary and other measures, made towards the inclusion of persons with disabilities in the community and the provision of all necessary support services, including personal assistance services, as well as the lack of awareness in society and among public authorities of the right of persons with disabilities to live independently and be included in the community, the right to choose where and with whom to live and the right not to be obliged to live in a particular living arrangement;

(b) The absence of a deinstitutionalization strategy for persons with disabilities, including women and children with disabilities placed in existing residential institutions, the lack of programmes for resettling of persons with disabilities, in particular persons with intellectual and/or psychosocial disabilities who cannot afford housing;

(c) That despite some progress made under the "Universal Progress" programme of the Independent Living Center for Persons with Disabilities to train personal assistants, and the slight increase of wages for personal assistants, the current wages for personal assistants remains low and there is a lack of individualized support and personal assistance for living independently in the community.

40. The Committee recalls its general comment No. 5 (2017) on living independently and being included in the community and the Committee's Guidelines on Deinstitutionalization, including in emergencies (2022) and recommends that the State party:

(a) Develop a national strategy on deinstitutionalization of persons with disabilities, in close consultation and active involvement of persons with disabilities through their representative organizations, ensure that it is in line with the Convention and includes sufficient budgetary and other measures, as well as awareness-raising activities to promote understanding of the right of choice and self-determination of persons with disabilities concerning their living arrangements, the right not to be obliged to live in a particular living arrangement, and the value of inclusion in, as opposed to segregation from, the community;

(b) Increase the availability of community-based services aimed at enabling persons to live independently and participate in the community;

(c) Strengthen personal assistance trainings and support and services for persons with disabilities for living independently in the community, and increase the wages for personal assistants.

Paraguay (2023)

35. El Comité observa con preocupación:

a) La ausencia de una estrategia nacional, multisectorial y global para la desinstitucionalización;

b)La falta de apoyos a las secretarías municipales de discapacidad, creadas por la Ley N.º 6808/2022, que tiene por objeto promover la atención a las personas con discapacidad, en cada gobernación y municipio;

c)El establecimiento de hogares sustitutos que no garantizan adecuadamente el derecho de las personas con discapacidad a vivir de forma independiente y a ser incluidas en la comunidad;

d)La ausencia de partidas presupuestales significativas para financiar la vida independiente de las personas con discapacidad a pesar de estar contemplado en la Política Nacional de Protección Especial para niñas y niños separados de sus familias (PONAPROE) en su eje estratégico 3;

e)La falta de información sobre viviendas accesibles proporcionadas a personas con discapacidad.

36.El Comité recuerda su observación general núm. 5 (2017), sobre el derecho a vivir de forma independiente y a ser incluido en la comunidad, y sus Directrices sobre la desinstitucionalización, incluso en situaciones de emergencia (2022), e insta al Estado parte a:

a)Adoptar una estrategia nacional y multisectorial de desinstitucionalización de las personas con discapacidad, en particular de la niñez, de las mujeres y de las personas con discapacidad psicosocial, en estrecha consulta y con participación activa de las organizaciones de personas con discapacidad, que incluya plazos específicos, recursos financieros necesarios, asegurando que las personas con discapacidad tengan acceso a alternativas de vivienda en la comunidad que promuevan su voluntad y preferencias, a redes y servicios de apoyo, incluyendo apoyo entre pares, y atención integral a sus necesidades básicas;

b)Fortalecer, con el presupuesto suficiente a las Secretarías Municipales de discapacidad, creadas por la Ley N° 6808/2022;

c)Eliminar los “hogares sustitutos” ya que no cumplen con las Directrices y no garantizan el derecho de las personas con discapacidad a vivir de forma independiente y a ser incluidas en la comunidad;

d)Asignar el presupuesto suficiente a la estrategia 3 de la Política Nacional de Protección Especial para niñas y niños separados de sus familias (PONAPROE) para impulsar la vida independiente de las personas con discapacidad;

e)Implementar un programa que proporcione créditos asequibles para la obtención de viviendas accesibles en la comunidad para personas con discapacidad desinstitucionalizadas;

31. The Committee observes with concern that:

(a) Notwithstanding the Integrated Social Support Centres, there is still a lack of awareness in society and amongst public authorities of the right of persons with disabilities to live independently and be included in the community, the right to choose where and with whom to live and the right not to be obliged to live in a particular living arrangement;

(b) The absence of a deinstitutionalization strategy for persons with disabilities placed in existing residential institutions, and the lack of programmes for resettling of those persons, in particular persons with psychosocial and/or intellectual disabilities who cannot afford housing.

32. The Committee recalls its general comment No. 5 (2017) on living independently and being included in the community and its Guidelines on deinstitutionalization, including in emergencies (2022) and recommends that the State party:

(a) Adopt a strategy that includes awareness-raising activities to promote understanding of the right of persons with disabilities to choose with respect to their living arrangements, the right not to be obliged to live in a particular living arrangement and the value of inclusion in, as opposed to segregation from, the community;

(b) Commence the deinstitutionalization of those persons with disabilities who are still in a residential setting and increase the availability of community-based services aimed at enabling persons to live and participate in their communities.

Argentina (2023)

37. El Comité observa con preocupación:

- a) La institucionalización de las personas con discapacidad, en particular las personas con discapacidad intelectual y/o psicosocial, y su internamiento prolongado en hospitales psiquiátricos o en otro tipo de instituciones;
- b) Pese a los avances de la Provincia de Buenos Aires, el incumplimiento del cierre definitivo de los hospitales monovalentes públicos y privados y la creación de un sistema de atención en comunidad para el año 2020, conforme a la Ley Nacional de Salud Mental;
- c) Los pocos avances en la implementación de la Estrategia Federal de Abordaje Integral de la Salud Mental y en la desinstitucionalización de las personas con discapacidad que residen en instituciones y hospitales psiquiátricos;
- d) La falta de reglamentación de la Ley 26.480 que incorporó los asistentes domiciliarios a la Ley 24.901; y la regulación de los apoyos para la vida independiente enmarcada en el modelo médico que no reconoce el derecho de la persona con discapacidad usuaria a designarlos y gestionarlos;
- e) Algunas de las casas asistidas para personas con discapacidad psicosocial externadas siguen el modelo médico, son dirigidas por el personal de salud y no se respeta la autonomía de las personas con discapacidad;
- f) La ausencia de partidas presupuestales significativas para financiar la vida independiente de las personas con discapacidad pese a la existencia del Programa Servicio y Apoyo a la Vida Autónoma; y el gran porcentaje de presupuesto asignado a los hospitales psiquiátricos;
- g) El limitado cumplimiento del cupo del 5% para las personas con discapacidad en los planes de adjudicación o mejoramiento de viviendas del Fondo Nacional de Vivienda;
- h) La poca participación de las personas con discapacidad psicosocial en la elaboración e implementación de planes nacionales de salud mental y de desinstitucionalización.

- a) Poner fin a la institucionalización de las personas con discapacidad, en particular de los niños y las niñas con discapacidad, y a las hospitalizaciones indefinidas;
- b) Avanzar en los procesos de externación de las personas institucionalizadas, cerrar los hospitales psiquiátricos, e implementar redes de atención en salud mental integrada al primer nivel de atención, incluyendo un enfoque interinstitucional coordinado, previsiones presupuestarias y cambios de actitud en todos los niveles, incluidas las autoridades locales, que garanticen el derecho a vivir de forma independiente y ser incluido en la comunidad;
- c) Implementar un Plan Integral para la Desinstitucionalización y la Estrategia Federal de Abordaje Integral de la Salud Mental, y asegurar que cuenten con plazos específicos, medidas de evaluación y los recursos humanos, técnicos y financieros necesarios para la transición efectiva de las personas con discapacidad de las instituciones a la vida independiente en la comunidad, con el reconocimiento de su derecho a la autonomía y a la plena inclusión social;
- d) Reglamentar la Ley 26.480 del asistente domiciliario y garantizar la disponibilidad de apoyos para la vida independiente para las personas con discapacidad en el marco de la Convención, incluyendo viviendas accesibles y asequibles, la asistencia personal, servicios a domicilio y el acceso a los servicios en la comunidad;
- e) Revisar el funcionamiento de las casas asistidas para que puedan ser gestionadas de forma autónoma por personas con discapacidad;

- f) Aumentar el presupuesto para salud mental conforme a la pauta del 10% del presupuesto de salud, establecida por la Ley 26.657, y redireccionar los presupuestos destinados al mantenimiento y construcción de hospitales psiquiátricos al financiamiento para programas de vida independiente en la comunidad;
- g) Garantizar el cumplimiento de la Ley 26.182 que establece un cupo preferente del 5% destinado a personas con discapacidad en los planes de adjudicación o mejoramiento de viviendas que se ejecuten en el Fondo Nacional de Vivienda;
- h) Asegurar la participación activa y efectiva de las personas con discapacidad psicosocial en el diseño, monitoreo, evaluación y seguimiento de planes de salud mental, incluyendo usuarias de estos servicios.

Georgia (2023)

39. The Committee observes with concern:

- (a) That sub-programs of “community organizations” and “small family-type homes” referred to by the State party in its initial report (CRPD/C/GEO/1, para. 126) reproduce institutionalization, discrimination and marginalization of persons with disabilities;
- (b) That the deinstitutionalization programme is implemented in a fragmented manner, leaving some large institutions operating, and the absence of measures to support persons with disabilities in developing their skills to live independently and in the community;
- (c) The insufficient range of support measures to live in the community, including home care services and personal assistance;
- (d) The lack of measures to develop accessible and affordable housing in the community, providing persons with disabilities with a choice of where and with whom they live, on an equal basis with others.

40. The Committee recommends that the State party, in line with its General comment No. 5 (2017) on living independently and being included in the community, and with the support of the Guidelines on Deinstitutionalization, including in emergencies issued in 2022:

- (a) Ensure the right of persons with disabilities to live independently, and their freedom to choose where and with whom to live, preventing any type of congregated living arrangements, including “family-like environments”, which reproduce isolation and institutionalisation, and that it redirect resources from institutions, including small size institutions, towards support for living in the community;
- (b) Develop and implement a deinstitutionalization strategy, with the active involvement of organizations of persons with disabilities, with clear time frames and budgetary allocation, extending to all persons with disabilities regardless of age, gender or type of impairment, containing measures to develop independent living skills and to facilitate the transition between institutional settings and life in the community;
- (c) Strengthen measures to develop community-based services and individualized forms of support, ensuring even geographical coverage of all support measures, such as peer support groups or cash transfers/personal budgets;
- (d) Establish an accessible and affordable housing strategy for living in the community, including the allocation of resources for the adaptation of housing infrastructure in rural and urban areas that allows adults with disabilities to choose where and with whom they live, on an equal basis with others and avoiding small-congregated settings. Adopt a monitoring strategy with benchmarks to assess the achievements of housing programs;
- (e) Ensure availability, accessibility, affordability and adaptability of services in the community, including education, health care, participation in political and public life, rehabilitation, and remove segregated services.

Peru (2023)

38. El Comité está especialmente alarmado por:

- a) El hecho de que se planeen construir nuevos Centros de Acogida Residencial (CAR), que funcionan como instituciones cerradas con altos niveles de hacinamiento para niños y adultos con discapacidad;
- b) La ausencia de una estrategia nacional, multisectorial y global para la desinstitucionalización, incluyendo con la creación de "hogares protegidos" y que estos no aseguren la participación de las organizaciones de personas con discapacidad y no garanticen adecuadamente el derecho de las personas con discapacidad a vivir de forma independiente y a ser incluidas en la comunidad;
- c) Los proyectos de ley acumulados 00648/2021-CR, 01125/2021-CR, 01264/2021-CR y 02266/2021-CR sobre el derecho a la asistencia personal de las personas con discapacidad carece de un enfoque que promueva y garantice la voluntad y preferencias de los usuarios, incluido el reconocimiento explícito de un derecho a la asistencia personal con obligaciones claras para el Estado de garantizar estos servicios, y no contempla el financiamiento necesario para hacerlo operativo.

- a) Adopte una estrategia nacional y multisectorial de desinstitucionalización de las personas con discapacidad, en particular de la niñez, con la participación de las organizaciones de personas con discapacidad, que incluya plazos específicos, recursos financieros necesarios, asegurando que las personas con discapacidad tengan acceso a alternativas de vivienda en la comunidad que promuevan su voluntad y preferencias, a redes y servicios de apoyo, incluyendo apoyo entre pares, y atención integral a sus necesidades básicas;
- b) Cree una comisión multisectorial de investigación, con la participación de la Defensoría del Pueblo y las organizaciones de personas con discapacidad, para documentar todas las formas de institucionalización y otras violaciones de derechos humanos relacionadas, que realice campañas de sensibilización, recomiende reformas y proponga programas integrales de reparación;
- c) Que se modifiquen los proyectos de ley acumulados 00648/2021-CR, 01125/2021-CR, 01264/2021-CR y 02266/2021-CR para lograr el reconocimiento legal del derecho a la asistencia personal de las personas con discapacidad, a fin de que el Estado garantice y financie estos servicios desde un enfoque que promueva la autonomía, independencia y control de los usuarios, los servicios de asistencia personal deben permitir a las personas con discapacidad elegir su modo de vida y lugar de residencia y expresar su voluntad y preferencias, con un enfoque que tenga en cuenta el género, la edad y la cultura.

39. The Committee observes with concern:

- (a) The continued institutionalization of persons with disabilities and lack of efforts, including budgetary and other measures, made towards the inclusion of persons with disabilities in the community and the provision of all necessary support services, including personal assistance services, as well as the lack of awareness in society and among public authorities of the right of persons with disabilities to live independently and be included in the community, the right to choose where and with whom to live and the right not to be obliged to live in a particular living arrangement;
- (b) The absence of a deinstitutionalization strategy for persons with disabilities, including women and children with disabilities placed in existing residential institutions, the lack of programmes for resettling of persons with disabilities, in particular persons with intellectual and/or psychosocial disabilities who cannot afford housing.

40. The Committee recalls its general comment No. 5 (2017) on living independently and being included in the community and the Committee's Guidelines on Deinstitutionalization, including in emergencies (2022) and recommends that the State party:

- (a) Review the Law on Social Protection of persons with disabilities to bring its full conformity with the Convention and ensure that it includes sufficient budgetary and other measures, as well as awareness-raising activities to promote understanding of the right of choice and self-determination of persons with disabilities concerning their living arrangements, the right not to be obliged to live in a particular living arrangement, and the value of inclusion in, as opposed to segregation from, the community;
- (b) Develop a strategy and an action plan in close consultation with and active involvement of persons with disabilities for the process of deinstitutionalization of those adults and children with disabilities who are still in a residential setting and render the community-based services available aimed at enabling persons to live independently and participate in the community.

Tunisia (2023)

33. The Committee is concerned that the State party continues to apply the Orientation Law 83-2005 which provides for the placement of persons with disabilities in specialised accommodation and care facilities, thus institutionalising them without their consent for these living arrangements and where they may be admitted either through judicial authorisation or by decision of their guardian and where they may remain for an indefinite period. It is further concerned about community services targeted at the general population which still fail to be inclusive and without available personal assistants' services.

34. The Committee, in accordance with its General Comment No. 5 (2017) on Living independently and being included in the community recommends the State party to:

- (a) Put in place legal and policy measures for the deinstitutionalization of persons with disabilities and their effective inclusion in the community in accordance with the guide on deinstitutionalization developed by the Committee on the Rights of Persons with Disabilities;
- (b) Take appropriate measures to recognize the right of persons with disabilities, irrespective of age, gender and impairment, to choose their place of residence and with whom they want to live and the right to have access to social support including personal assistants and security based on their individual requirements;
- (c) Ensure that services aimed at the general population in the community adopt an inclusive approach throughout the State party;
- (d) Consult with persons with disabilities through their representative organisations to ensure the inclusiveness of services and to identify the adequate support services to be provided.

Bangladesh (2022)

39. The Committee observes with concern:

- (a) Insufficient community-based services, recurrent discrimination and segregation of persons with disabilities from the community, as a result of stigma and attitudinal barriers, in particular, against women and children with disabilities, persons affected by leprosy and persons with intellectual and/or psychosocial disabilities to enable them to live independently and be included in the community, particularly in rural and remote areas;
- (b) The lack of financial resources, accessible physical infrastructure, and inadequate support services including provision of personal assistance and assistive devices to promote independent living, to enable persons with disabilities, particularly women, and children with disabilities, persons affected by leprosy and persons with intellectual and/or psychosocial disabilities, to choose where and with whom they want to live.

40. The Committee recalls its general comment No. 5 (2017) on living independently and being included in the community and its Guidelines on deinstitutionalization of persons with disabilities, including in emergency situations (2022), and recommends that the State party:

- (a) In close consultation with representative organisations of persons with disabilities, develop a national strategy to ensure access by persons with disabilities to mainstream community services, eliminating all barriers that hinder the enjoyment and participation of persons with disabilities, particularly women and children with disabilities, persons affected by leprosy and persons with psychosocial and/or intellectual disabilities, and provide sufficient human, financial and material resources for the realisation of the strategy, including particularly in rural and remote areas;

(b) Ensure sufficient budgetary allocations for the acquisition of personal assistance and assistive devices to ensure that community support services are available, accessible, affordable, including in remote and rural areas, so that all persons with disabilities can exercise their right to live independently and be included in the community.

China (2022)

40. The Committee is concerned about:

(a) The institutionalization of adults and children with disabilities, including persons with intellectual and/or psychosocial disabilities and autistic persons;

(b) The absence of a strategy to recognize the right of persons with disabilities to live independently in the community, including the development of community support services for persons with disabilities, and technical and financial resources allocated to persons with disabilities who require high levels of support.

41. Recalling its general comment No. 5 (2017), the Committee recommends that the State party, in close consultation with organizations of persons with disabilities, including women with disabilities, develop an action plan to end, as a matter of priority, the institutionalization of all persons with disabilities, including in leprosy colonies or villages, with measures to prevent trans-institutionalisation, with specific timeframes, human, technical and financial resources, and clear responsibilities for implementation and independent monitoring.

71. The Committee is concerned about the insufficient community support services for persons with disabilities, including personal assistance, and the human, technical and financial resources allocated to persons with disabilities who require high levels of support.

72. Recalling its general comment No. 5 (2017), the Committee recommends that Hong Kong SAR, China, in close consultation with organizations of persons with disabilities, including women with disabilities develop an action plan to end, as a matter of priority, the institutionalization of all persons with disabilities and to support the transition from institutions to life in the community, with specific timeframes, human, technical and financial resources, and clear responsibilities for implementation and independent monitoring.

44. The Committee observes with concern:

(a) The absence of a deinstitutionalization strategy for persons with disabilities, including children with disabilities placed in residential institutions, social care institutions, hospitals, half-way homes and rehabilitation centres;

(b) The lack of gender and age-appropriate community-based support services to implement independent living for persons with disabilities, including persons with psychosocial or intellectual disabilities.

45. The Committee recalls its general comment No. 5 (2017) on living independently and being included in the community and recommends that the State party:

(a) Adopt a strategy for the process of deinstitutionalization of adults and children with disabilities who reside in residential and social care institutions, hospitals, half-way homes and rehabilitation centres;

(b) Establish a community-based support system for independent living with allocated budget that includes social protection, employment, housing, health, education, and any other support needed for persons with disabilities, to choose where and with whom they live and to live independently and participate in the community.

41. The Committee observes with concern:

- (a) Perpetuation of institutionalization of persons with intellectual disabilities, persons with psychosocial disabilities, elderly persons with disabilities, persons with physical disabilities and those who require more intense support, in particular living arrangements outside community, and of children with disabilities, particularly, children with intellectual, psychosocial or sensory disabilities and those who require more intense support, through the Child Welfare Act, in various types of facilities, depriving them family and community life;
- (b) Promotion of institutionalization of persons with psychosocial disabilities and persons with dementia in psychiatric hospitals, both public and private, particularly, the continuance of indefinite hospitalisations of persons with psychosocial disabilities in them;
- (c) Limited opportunities for persons with disabilities to choose their place of residence and where and with whom to live, including for those, dependent on parents and living in their homes, and those, placed in particular arrangements such as group homes under the Act on the Comprehensive Support for the Daily and Social Life of Persons with Disabilities;
- (d) Lack of a national strategy and legal framework for the deinstitutionalization of persons with disabilities residing in residential institutions and psychiatric hospitals, and their independent living in the community on an equal basis with others, including the recognition of their right to autonomy and full social inclusion;
- (e) Insufficient support arrangements for persons with disabilities for living independently in the community, including accessible and affordable housing, in-home service, personal assistance and access to services in the community;
- (f) Assessment schemes for granting support and services in the community that are based on medical model of disability.

42. With reference to its General comment No. 5 (2017) on living independently and being included in the community and its Guidelines on Deinstitutionalisation (2022), the Committee urges that the State party:

- (a) Takes expedited measures to end the institutionalisation of persons with disabilities, including children with disabilities, by redirecting its budgets allocations from the placement of persons with disabilities in residential institutions towards arrangements and supports for persons with disabilities for living independently in the community on an equal bases with others;
- (b) Review all cases of persons with disabilities hospitalized in psychiatric hospitals to cease any indefinite hospitalization, ensure their informed consent and foster their independent living along with the required mental health support in the community;
- (c) Ensure that persons with disabilities have opportunity to choose their place of residence and where and with whom they live in the community and are not obliged to live in a particular living arrangement, including group homes, and enable persons with disabilities to exercise choice and control over their lives;
- (d) Launch, in consultation with organisations of persons with disabilities, a legal framework and national strategy with time-bound benchmarks, human, technical and financial resources, aiming at the effective transition of persons with disabilities from institutions into independent living in the community on an equal basis with others, including the recognition of their right to autonomy and full social inclusion, and obligations for prefectures to ensure its implementation;
- (e) Strengthen support arrangements for persons with disabilities for their living independently in the community, including the independent, accessible and affordable housing outside any type of congregated premises, personal assistance, user-led budget, and access to services in the community;
- (f) Revise existing schemes of assessment for granting support and services in the community for ensuring that they are based on human right model of disability, including the assessments of barriers in society for persons with disabilities and their required support for their social participation and inclusion.

Lao People's Democratic Republic (2022)

34. The Committee observes with concern:

- (a) The segregation or exclusion of persons with disabilities from the community into particular living arrangements, including owing to stigmatization and attitudinal barriers, in particular against persons affected by leprosy, children with disabilities, and persons with intellectual and/or psychosocial disabilities;
- (b) The lack of information about community support services, support of independent living and inclusion in the community, including personal assistance, especially in remote and rural areas;
- (c) The lack of disaggregated data on the number of persons with disabilities, including children with disabilities and persons affected by leprosy living in institutions, special villages, rehabilitation centres other than community-based, group homes, or other settings with defining elements of an institution.

35. With reference to its General Comment No. 5 (2017) and its Guidelines on deinstitutionalization, including in emergencies (2022), the Committee recommends that the State party:

- (a) Promote the rights of persons with disabilities, particularly persons affected by leprosy, children with disabilities, and persons with intellectual and/or psychosocial disabilities, to live independently and be included in the community, including by raising awareness among the general public to tackle stigmatization and attitudinal barriers;
- (b) Ensure that support services in the community, such as personal assistance, are available, accessible, affordable and of quality across the State party, including in remote and rural areas, and enable persons with disabilities to exercise choice and control over their lives and to make decisions concerning where and with whom to live;
- (c) Collect disaggregated data on the number of persons with disabilities, including children with disabilities and persons affected by leprosy, still living in institutions, special villages, or other settings with defining elements of an institution.

New Zealand (2022)

39. The Committee is concerned about:

- (a) The protracted rollout of initiatives under the Enabling Good Lives programme and the exclusion of particular impairment types, such as people with foetal alcohol syndrome disorder, from the programme;
- (b) The lack of a comprehensive deinstitutionalization strategy to close all residential institutions, including group homes and residential specialist schools, and to enable community supports for persons with disabilities to live independently in the community;
- (c) Barriers for persons with disabilities to choose where and with whom they live, such as the lack of affordable and accessible housing and the Disability Community Residential Support Services Strategy that provides congregate living arrangements linked with shared support;
- (d) The continued investment of public resources in residential specialist schools for children with disabilities.

40. The Committee recalls its general comment No. 5 (2017) on living independently and being included in the community, and its guidelines on deinstitutionalization, including in emergencies, and recommends that the State party:

- (a) Expedite the national rollout of the Enabling Good Lives programme and ensure that all persons with disabilities, including people with foetal alcohol syndrome disorder, are eligible;
- (b) Develop a comprehensive deinstitutionalization strategy, with specific time frames and adequate budgets, to close all residential institutions, including group homes and residential specialist schools, to provide community supports for persons with disabilities to live independently in the community;

(c) Develop measures to remove barriers for persons with disabilities to choose where and with whom they live, including by committing to increase the supply of affordable and accessible housing and by reforming programmes, such as the Disability Community Residential Support Services Strategy to prevent congregate living arrangements linked with shared support;

(d) Take measures to cease investment in residential specialist schools for children with disabilities and establish a deinstitutionalization process that ensures adequate support is provided for children with disabilities to return to their families and exercise their right to an inclusive education.

41. The Committee observes with concern:

(a) The continuous institutionalization of persons with disabilities and lack of efforts, including budgetary and other measures, made towards the inclusion of persons with disabilities in the community and the provision of all necessary support services, including personal assistance services, as well as the lack of awareness in society and among public authorities of the right of persons with disabilities to live independently and be included in the community, the right to choose where and with whom to live and the right not to be obliged to live in a particular living arrangement;

(b) The weak implementation of the deinstitutionalization strategy for persons with disabilities, including women and children with disabilities placed in existing residential institutions, the lack of programmes for resettling of persons with disabilities, in particular persons with intellectual and/or psychosocial disabilities who cannot afford housing.

42. The Committee recalls its general comment No. 5 (2017) on living independently and being included in the community and the Committee's Guidelines on Deinstitutionalization, including in emergencies (2022) and recommends that the State party:

(a) Review the Roadmap to Support Independent Living of Deinstitutionalized Persons with Disabilities in consultation with organizations of persons with disabilities, and bring it in line with the Convention and ensure that it includes sufficient budgetary and other measures, as well as awareness-raising activities to promote understanding of the right of choice and self-determination of persons with disabilities concerning their living arrangements, the right not to be obliged to live in a particular living arrangement, and the value of inclusion in, as opposed to segregation from, the community;

(b) Strengthen the implementation of the Deinstitutionalization strategy for the process of deinstitutionalization of those adults and children with disabilities who are still in a residential setting and increase the availability of community-based services aimed at enabling persons to live independently and participate in the community.

Singapore (2022)

37. The Committee is concerned about:

(a) The lack of awareness in society and among public authorities of the right of persons with disabilities to live independently and be included in the community, the right to choose where and with whom to live and the right not to be obliged to live in a particular living arrangement;

(b) Widespread institutionalization of persons on the basis of their impairment and the construction of new institutions, groups homes, adult disability hostels and homes, which results in a high number of persons with disabilities, including autistic persons, persons with intellectual disabilities and persons with psychosocial disabilities who are deprived of their right to live independently and being included in the community.

38. The Committee recalls its general comment No. 5 (2017) on living independently and being included in the community and its Guidelines on deinstitutionalization, including in emergencies and recommends that the State party:

(a) Ensure deinstitutionalization of all persons with disabilities in institutions of any kind, provide community-based services facilitating the full enjoyment by all persons with disabilities of their right to live in the community and their full inclusion and participation in the community, and adopt a strategy to this end with clear goals, benchmarks and time frames;

(b) Adopt awareness-raising programmes to broadly promote an understanding of the right of choice and self-determination of persons with disabilities concerning their living arrangements, the right not to be obliged to live in a particular living arrangement, and the crucial significance of inclusion in, as opposed to segregation from, the community for the effective guarantee of all rights of persons with disabilities.

Hungary (2022)

40. The Committee is concerned about:

(a) The perpetuation of institutionalization of children with disabilities by the refurbishing and building of new institutionalized settings and by placing children with disabilities who require higher levels of support in institutions for adult persons with disabilities;

(b) The lack of an independent monitoring mechanism for the deinstitutionalization of children;

(c) The lack of recognition of the right of persons with disabilities to live independently and be included in the community, in line with the provisions of the Convention. The Committee is also concerned about the transinstitutionalization of persons with disabilities moving from large institutions into small-scale institutions, including supported houses, and the refurbishment of existing institutions, including with the use of structural funds from the European Union, perpetuating institutionalization and exclusion on the basis of disability;

(d) The mistaken interpretation of the substitute decision-making regime, depriving persons with disabilities of the opportunity to exercise their right to choose their place of residence and live independently on an equal basis with others in the community;

(e) The continuing admissions of persons with disabilities into residential institutions under the Act on Social Administration and Social Benefits and government decree No. 1295/2019 (V.27), due to the lack of community-based services and individualized support for persons with disabilities to live independently;

(f) Insufficient measures to promote and ensure access by persons with disabilities on an equal basis with others to community services and facilities.

41. Recalling its general comment No. 5 (2017), the Committee reiterates the recommendations set out in its report on the inquiry concerning Hungary under article 6 of the Optional Protocol to the Convention, urging the State party to:

(a) Discontinue the institutionalization of children with disabilities and ensure their right to a family life by redirecting investments from institutions into support measures for families and the provision of inclusive community services, such as inclusive early intervention, across the State party;

(b) Ensure independent monitoring of the deinstitutionalization of children with disabilities and independent methodological support for that process, with the close involvement of disability rights organizations;

(c) Revise its deinstitutionalization strategy with the aim of redefining its objectives;

(d) Redesign its measures and redirect its efforts and budgets into community-based support services, including personal assistance, with the aim of providing for persons with disabilities to live independently in the community equally with others, regardless of their type of impairment, guarantee that community services and facilities for the general population are available for persons with disabilities and ensure that persons with disabilities have the opportunity and right to choose their place of residence on an equal basis with others in the community.

Jamaica (2022)

34. The Committee observes with concern:

- (a) The lack of awareness in society and among public authorities of the right of persons with disabilities to live independently and be included in the community, the right to choose where and with whom to live and the right not to be obliged to live in a particular living arrangement;
- (b) The absence of a deinstitutionalization strategy for persons with disabilities, including women and children with disabilities placed in existing residential institutions, and the lack of programmes for resettling of persons with disabilities, in particular persons with intellectual disabilities who cannot afford housing.

35. The Committee recalls its general comment No. 5 (2017) on living independently and being included in the community and recommends that the State party:

- (a) Adopt a strategy that includes awareness-raising activities to promote understanding of the right of choice and self-determination of adults and children with disabilities concerning their living arrangements, the right not to be obliged to live in a particular living arrangement, and the value of inclusion in, as opposed to segregation from, the community;
- (b) Adopt a strategy for the process of deinstitutionalization of those adults and children with disabilities who are still in a residential setting and increase the availability of community-based services aimed at enabling persons to live independently and participate in the community.

50. The Committee is concerned about the lack of a federal and state strategy for the inclusion of persons with disabilities in society and their ability to live independently, and about the absence of a specific and effective strategy for the deinstitutionalization of persons with disabilities.

51. The Committee recalls its general comment No. 5 (2017) on living independently and being included in the community, and recommends that the State party:

- (a) Amend or adopt laws, policies, financial and other measures, including time frames for their implementation, to ensure that persons with disabilities can live independently in the community. These measures should include personal assistance services, be culturally appropriate, enable beneficiaries to choose their lifestyle and place of residence, express their will and preferences and contain a gender and age perspective;
- (b) Take expedited measures to end the institutionalization of persons with disabilities by, inter alia, developing and implementing a strategy for the deinstitutionalization of persons with disabilities, in particular children with disabilities, including specific time frames, assessment measures and an adequate budget.

Switzerland (2022)

39. The Committee notes with concern:

- (a) The institutionalization of adults and children with disabilities, including persons with intellectual or psychosocial disabilities and autistic persons, and reports of violence and abuse in these institutions;
- (b) The lack of a comprehensive system to provide individualized support and personal assistance for living independently in the community, and the shortage of affordable and accessible housing in the community for persons with disabilities.

40. Recalling its general comment No. 5 (2017), the Committee recommends that the State party, in close consultation with organizations of persons with disabilities, including women with disabilities:

- (a) Develop a strategy and action plan to end, as a matter of priority, the institutionalization of all persons with disabilities, including in small residential homes, with measures to prevent transinstitutionalization and to support the transition from institutions to life in the community, with specific time frames, sufficient human, technical and financial resources, and clear responsibilities for implementation and independent monitoring;

(b) Strengthen personal assistance support and services for persons with disabilities for living independently in the community, and ensure access for persons with disabilities to affordable and accessible housing in the community on the basis of individual choice.

Venezuela (2022)

36. The Committee notes with concern that:

- (a) Persons with disabilities are largely unaware of the implementation of support programmes for independent living;
- (b) The departure from the country of trained health, education and other professionals is limiting the opportunities for persons with disabilities to live independently in the community;
- (c) Projects related to persons with disabilities are the responsibility of the Ministry of People's Power for Public Health, thus reinforcing the medical approach to disability, which is at odds with the Convention.

37. The Committee recommends that the State party:

- (a) Raise awareness, in consultation with organizations of persons with disabilities, of the programmes in place to support persons with disabilities in the community;
- (b) Ensure that support services for independent living in the community have interdisciplinary staff;
- (c) Take measures to promote independent living in the community, including personal assistance, sign language interpreters and other forms of individual support for persons with disabilities with a human-rights based approach, through the ministries for the economy, education, labour, culture and others.

Djibouti (2021)

33. The Committee observes with concern:

- (a) The lack of accessible independent living support services, such as in-home, residential and other community support services, including personal assistance necessary to support living and inclusion in the community, particularly in rural areas and for refugees with disabilities;
- (b) The limited accessibility for persons with disabilities of mainstream services and facilities for the public, including employment, education and health.

34. The Committee recalls its general comment No. 5 (2017) and recommends that the State party:

- (a) Adopt legal and policy measures to promote the rights of persons with disabilities to live independently and be included in the community and provide information in accessible formats to persons with disabilities and their families, including refugees with disabilities and persons with disabilities in rural areas, on how to access independent living support services and assistance;
- (b) Provide budgetary allocations to ensure that all persons with disabilities can decide where, how and with whom they wish to live, and provide the necessary accompanying community support services, including personal assistance;
- (c) Adopt measures to ensure the accessibility of mainstream services for the public by persons with disabilities, on an equal basis with others.

France (2021)

40. The Committee observes with concern:

- (a) Regulations, structures and budgets that promote placement of children and adults with disabilities in segregated settings, including 'medico-social institutions' and specialized services, including in small-size residential care institutions so-called "l'habitat inclusive" or "l'habitat partagé", particularly impacting persons requiring higher levels of support;
- (b) Placement of children with disabilities in psychiatric hospitals and other institutions, including in third States parties, mainly Belgium;

(c) The lack of awareness of public authorities, professionals and social servants about the negative impacts of institutionalization on persons with disabilities, and the absence of strategies and action plans to end institutionalization;

(d) The lack of arrangements for living independently and in the community, including the lack of independent accessible and affordable housing, individualized support, and lack of equal access to services in the community.

41. The Committee recalls its General comment No. 5 (2017) on living independently and being included in the community, and recommends that the State party, in consultation with organisations of persons with disabilities:

(a) Ensure the availability of support to live independently and in the community, such as user-led budgeted and personalised support, and enable persons with disabilities to exercise choice and control over their lives and to make decisions concerning where and with whom to live, as outlined in General comment No. 5 (2017);

(b) Adopt measures to ensure access of persons with disabilities to affordable and accessible housing on the basis of individual choice and outside any type of congregated premises;

(c) Set up a time frame and benchmarks for achieving full accessibility for persons with disabilities to mainstream community services, such as education, health, work and employment.

Estonia (2021)

38. The Committee observes with concern:

(a) The lack of awareness in society and among public authorities of the right of persons with disabilities to live independently and be included in the community, the right to choose where and with whom to live and the right not to be obliged to live in a particular living arrangement;

(a) That institutionalization on the basis of disability persists in the form of alternative care homes and new small-scale “family type” or “special care villages” and that such forms of institutionalization affect particularly persons with intellectual disabilities, persons with psychosocial disabilities and persons with autism;

(b) The absence of a system to provide individualized support and personal assistance for living independently and in the community;

(c) The limited accessibility for persons with disabilities of mainstream services and facilities for the general population, including education and health.

39. The Committee recalls its general comment No. 5 (2017) and recommends that the State party:

(a) Adopt a strategy that includes awareness-raising activities to promote understanding of the right to choose and self-determination of persons with disabilities concerning their living arrangements, the right not to be obliged to live in a particular living arrangement and the value of inclusion in, as opposed to segregation from, the community;

(b) Enact a moratorium on the institutionalization of persons with disabilities, revise its deinstitutionalization strategy, redirect the use of public funds, including the European regional development funds, to the development of individualized support for living independently and ensure that programmes based on congregated settings, such as “home-like institutions”, “family type houses” and “special care villages”, are amended so as to prioritize inclusion in the community;

(c) Develop a system for self-managed personal assistance that includes person-directed tools for supporting living independently in the community in accordance with an individual’s requirements and preferences;

(d) Set up a time frame and benchmarks for achieving the accessibility of mainstream services for the general population by persons with disabilities, on an equal basis with others.

Albania (2019)

33. The Committee is concerned about the insufficiency of:

- (a) Effective measures taken to urgently advance the deinstitutionalization process of persons with disabilities;
- (b) Progress made in implementing independent living arrangements and the lack of programmes and in-home, residential and individualized support in the community, including personal assistance for persons with disabilities who require it and benefits for housing, so that they may exercise their right to independent living and to be included in their community;
- (c) Disaggregated data on the number of persons with disabilities still living in institutional settings;
- (d) Information on legal, administrative and financial measures taken to ensure the right of persons with disabilities to choose their place of residence and where and with whom to live.

34. In line with its general comment No. 5 (2017) on the right to independent living and to be included in the community and recalling the report of the Commissioner for Human Rights of the Council of Europe following her visit to Albania (para. 83), the Committee recommends that the State party to:

- (a) Develop and implement an effective deinstitutionalization plan, with a clear time frame and benchmarks and allocate sufficient funds for its implementation, particularly at the local level;
- (b) Promote independent living schemes and roll out programmes and services, including personal assistance for persons with disabilities who require it, so that they may exercise their right to live independently and be included in their community;
- (c) Collect disaggregated data on the number of persons with disabilities still living in institutions;
- (d) Take all necessary measures to develop community support services for persons with disabilities to ensure that they have the right to choose their place of residence and where and with whom they live, including in rural areas, on an equal basis with others;
- (e) Ensure the involvement of organizations of persons with disabilities in the development of independent living strategies and schemes that provide for accessible community services, supports and facilities, especially at the local level, including accessible and affordable housing.

Australia (2019)

37. The Committee is concerned about:

- (a) The fact that the Specialist Disability Accommodation framework facilitates and encourages the establishment of residential institutions and will result in persons with disabilities having to live in particular living arrangements in order to access National Disability Insurance Scheme support;
- (b) The lack of appropriate, affordable and accessible social housing, which severely limits the capacity of persons with disabilities to choose their place of residence;
- (c) The fact that the Younger People in Residential Aged Care action plan only outlines ways to reduce the number of persons under 65 years of age, including persons with disabilities, living in aged care facilities, but does not end the practice.

38. The Committee recommends that the State party:

- (a) Develop a national framework aimed at closing all disability-specific residential institutions and preventing transinstitutionalization, including by addressing how persons with disabilities not eligible for the National Disability Insurance Scheme can be supported to transition from living in an institution to living independently in the community;
- (b) Increase the range, affordability and accessibility of public and social housing for persons with disabilities, including by implementing a quota for accessible social housing and by developing regulations and standards to guarantee the progressive application of universal design principles in accessible housing;

(c) Revise the Younger People in Residential Aged Care action plan to ensure that by 2025 no person under 65 years of age enters or lives in residential aged care.

Ecuador (2019)

37. The Committee notes with concern that public policies and programmes directed towards persons with disabilities, including the “Las Manuelas” Mission, disability pensions and the “Neighbourhood Doctor” Strategy are not primarily focused on measures that will help persons with disabilities to live independently and be included in the community. The Committee is also concerned at:

(a) The fact that the State party’s laws, in particular the Organic Act on Disabilities, do not provide for the right to live independently and be included in the community;

(b) The institutionalization of persons with disabilities and the lack of deinstitutionalization plans and community service programmes that involve organizations of persons with disabilities.

38. The Committee recommends that the State party:

(a) Revise the measures provided for in public policies and programmes directed towards persons with disabilities, including the “Las Manuelas” Mission, disability pensions and the “Neighbourhood Doctor” Strategy, so as to protect the right of persons with disabilities to live independently and be included in their communities;

(b) Review and amend its laws, including, in particular, the Organic Act on Disabilities, to incorporate the right of persons with disabilities to live independently and be included in their communities;

(c) Establish, without delay and in coordination with the organizations representing persons with disabilities, a strategic deinstitutionalization plan that includes community strategies and programmes, family and social support networks, and personal and in-home assistance.

El Salvador (2019)

38. The Committee is concerned about:

(a) The lack of a strategy for the deinstitutionalization of persons with disabilities currently in reception centres or psychiatric hospitals, principally, and the lack of involvement of organizations of persons with disabilities in that regard;

(b) Insufficient foster care programmes to ensure the right to family life of children with disabilities;

(c) Insufficient housing loans granted to persons with disabilities, and the lack of accessibility in individual homes that are part of social housing programmes.

39. In accordance with its general comment No. 5 (2017) on living independently and being included in the community, the Committee recommends that the State party adopt and implement, in close consultation with and with the active involvement of organizations of persons with disabilities, a comprehensive national strategy with clear time-bound measures, benchmarks and the allocation of sufficient funds for effective deinstitutionalization at all levels, which should include community programmes, family and social support networks in the community and personal and domiciliary assistance.

Greece (2019)

28. The Committee is concerned about:

(a) The lack of information provided to the Committee about in-home, residential and other community support services, including personal assistance, and effective measures for the deinstitutionalization of persons with disabilities, including for the support of independent living and inclusion in the community, in particular under the supported living scheme. It is also concerned about the lack of disaggregated data on the number of persons with disabilities, particularly children with disabilities, still living in institutions;

(b) The lack of information on legal, administrative and financial measures to ensure the equal right of persons with disabilities to choose their place of residence and where and with whom they live.

29. The Committee recommends that, in line with its general comment No. 5 (2017) on living independently and being included in the community, the State party:

(a) Adopt a comprehensive national strategy with clear time-bound measures and sufficient funds for effective deinstitutionalization at all levels;

(b) Ensure the active involvement of persons with disabilities through their representative organizations in the development of independent living strategies and schemes that provide accessible community-based services, especially at the local level.

India (2019)

40. The Committee is concerned about:

(a) The institutionalization of persons with disabilities, including children with disabilities, in large and small congregated settings, and the absence of measures to ensure independent living and inclusion in the community;

(b) The lack of measures to establish individualized support to live in the community, and the reliance of persons with disabilities on kinship support to undertake daily activities;

(c) The lack of progress in improving access to community services by all persons with disabilities, particularly women and girls with intellectual or psychosocial disabilities, including access to affordable and accessible urban housing.

41. The Committee recommends that the State party, guided by the Committee's general comment No. 5 (2017) on living independently and being included in the community:

(a) End all forms of institutionalization based on disability, repeal legislation providing for the establishment of institutions for persons with "severe disability", and adopt a deinstitutionalization strategy, with an appropriate time frame and financial, human and technical resources, in consultation with organizations of persons with disabilities, prioritizing the deinstitutionalization of children from all types of institutions;

(b) Provide personal assistance and strengthen individualized support, and community support networks that facilitate the inclusion of persons with disabilities in the community;

(c) Adopt a strategy and indicators of progress concerning access by persons with disabilities to mainstream community services, and remove the barriers to access to public services, such as housing, inclusive education and work and employment, in particular for women with intellectual or psychosocial disabilities.

Iraq (2019)

35. The Committee is concerned about:

(a) The absence in Law No. 38 (2013) of an explicit recognition of the right to live independently and be included in the community as an individual right;

(b) The lack of community-based social and support services, which prevents persons with disabilities from enjoying their rights under article 19 of the Convention, and the absence of statistical data on the number of persons with disabilities who live in shelters, according to paragraph 10 of the law on rehabilitation;

(c) The use of the medical model of disability to determine the beneficiaries of full-time assistance under article 19 of Law No. 38 (2013), the reportedly lengthy process of such an assessment and the absence of information on a monitoring mechanism to ensure that the service remains controlled by persons with disabilities, in particular in cases involving persons with intellectual or psychosocial disabilities, where the full-time assistant is chosen by a guardian.

36. The Committee, in accordance with its general comment No. 5 (2017) on living independently and being included in the community, recommends that the State party:

(a) Enact legislation recognizing the right of persons with disabilities to be included in the community and to choose their place of residence and with whom to live, ensuring that all persons with disabilities, including persons with disabilities currently living in camps for internally displaced persons, have equal recognition before the law to exercise their freedom of choice concerning living arrangements;

(b) Increase community-based services, including the provision of appropriate housing units, established through the Commission for Persons with Disabilities and Special Needs and ensure systematic, up-to-date and appropriately disaggregated data collection;

(c) Establish a mechanism to determine, in an efficient manner, the beneficiaries of full-time assistance in line with the human rights model of disabilities and ensure that any services provided under article 19 of Law No. 38 (2013) remain controlled by the persons with disabilities benefiting from those services.

38. The Committee is concerned about the existence of segregated institutions for persons with disabilities, particularly children with disabilities, and the lack of:

(a) A strategy to promote the rights of persons with disabilities to live independently, choose their place of residence and be included in the community, including with personal assistance;

(b) Access to community-based services and facilities, including housing, for Kuwaiti women who are married to non-Kuwaitis with disabilities or who have children with disabilities.

39. Recalling its general comment No. 5 (2017) on living independently and being included in the community, the Committee recommends that the State party:

(a) In close consultation with and with the active involvement of organizations of persons with disabilities, adopt and implement a time-bound and adequately resourced deinstitutionalization strategy and action plan for all children and adults with disabilities in favour of non-residential services, community-based supported living arrangements, including personal assistance, and a ban on new admissions in segregated institutions;

(b) Ensure equal access to mainstream community-based services and facilities, including housing, for persons with disabilities, including women with disabilities, regardless of their marital status, origin and nationality.

Myanmar (2019)

37. The Committee is concerned about:

(a) The persistence of institutionalization of persons with disabilities and the emphasis on the so-called "institution-based rehabilitation";

(b) Segregation or exclusion of persons with disabilities from the community, including owing to stigmatization and attitudinal barriers, in particular against persons affected by leprosy and persons with intellectual or psychosocial disabilities;

(c) The inadequate services and provision of personal assistance to promote independent living of persons with disabilities, especially in remote and rural areas, to enable their inclusion and full participation in the community.

38. The Committee recalls its general comment No. 5 (2017) on living independently and being included in the community and recommends that the State party:

(a) Introduce and implement a strategy, with a clear time frame, to ensure the transition from institutions to full independent living and being included in the community for all persons with disabilities, in close consultation with representative organizations of persons with disabilities, and ensure the allocation of the resources necessary for the implementation of that strategy;

(b) Promote the rights of persons with disabilities, particularly persons affected by leprosy and persons with intellectual or psychosocial disabilities, to live independently and be included in the community, including by raising awareness among the general public to tackle stigmatization and attitudinal barriers;

(c) Allocate sufficient resources for the provision of personal assistance and to ensure that support services in the community are available, accessible, affordable and of high quality

Cuba (2019)

35. The Committee is concerned about:

- (a) The lack of measures taken to ensure respect for the right of persons with disabilities to independent living and to be included in the community and the lack of programmes and services, including personal assistance for persons with disabilities who require it;
- (b) Continuing investment of public funds in residential institutions for persons with disabilities, which may increase the use of institutionalization practices;
- (c) That not all persons with disabilities might have access to information on the services available.

36. In line with the Committee's general comment No. 5 (2017) on the right to independent living and to be included in the community, the Committee recommends that the State party:

- (a) Expedite the measures taken to ensure that all persons with disabilities living in any form of institution, including those in psychiatric hospital units, have the right to live independently and to be included in the community with choices equal to those of other persons;
- (b) Discontinue the investment of public resources for residential institutions for persons with disabilities and invest more in independent living arrangements in the community, as well as in all general services to make them inclusive, guaranteeing their accessibility and availability for all persons with disabilities, to enable their inclusion and participation in all spheres of life;
- (c) Enact and enforce laws, standards and other measures with the purpose of making local communities and the environment, as well as information and communication, accessible to all persons with disabilities, including through information on and provision of community-based services.

31. The Committee is concerned about the lack of information on availability of accessible independent living support services in the community and ways to claim such assistance; the inaccessibility of such services in rural areas, and to migrant and refugees with disabilities; and the absence of home and community-based care for children with disabilities, especially in rural areas.

32. The Committee recommends that the State party, in light of the Committee's general comment No. 5 (2017) on article 19 of the Convention:

- (a) Adopt measures to promote the rights of persons with disabilities to live independently and be included in the community; and systematically provide information in accessible formats to persons with disabilities and their families, including refugees and migrants with disabilities, on how to access support services and assistance, in particular in rural areas;
- (b) Ensure accessibility to community services and facilities by all persons with disabilities in all areas of life, as well as home and community-based care for children with disabilities, particularly in rural areas.

Norway (2019)

31. The Committee is concerned about:

- (a) The lack of an action plan for the deinstitutionalization of persons with disabilities with clear timelines and budget, and the emphasis on the resettlement of persons with disabilities in shared housing instead of full independent living arrangements;
- (b) The insufficient efforts to provide resources for the development of support services, particularly user-controlled personal assistance services, in municipalities;
- (c) The existing regulative framework permitting for coercive health care and drug rehabilitation;
- (d) The fact that persons who are deaf or hard of hearing do not receive interpreting services outside of office hours.

32. With reference to the Committee's general comment No. 5 (2017) on living independently and being included in the community, the Committee recommends that the State party:

(a) Develop, implement and provide adequate human, financial and technical resources for an effective deinstitutionalization plan, particularly for implementing the transformation to independent living arrangements, with a clear timeframe and benchmarks, involving persons with disabilities through their representative organizations at all stages;

(b) Adopt the necessary measures to ensure that persons with disabilities have a legal entitlement to a sufficient personal budget for independent living, which takes into account the additional costs related to disability and, at the same time, redirect resources from institutionalization to community-based services, while increasing the availability of personal assistance;

(c) Adopt legal and practical measures to end coercive measures in health and care services, which should guide the assessment of the State party's public multidisciplinary committee due in June 2019;

(d) Provide adequate human and financial resources to provide deaf and hard of hearing persons interpreting services when needed, including outside of office hours.

Rwanda (2019)

35. The Committee is concerned that there are persons with disabilities living in social isolation and segregated from their families and the community. It is also concerned that inaccessible infrastructure and services make it difficult for persons with disabilities to participate in the activities of daily life independently, in particular in rural or remote areas.

Saudi Arabia (2019)

35. The Committee is concerned that:

(a) Persons with disabilities, and particularly those with psychosocial or intellectual disabilities, are forced to live in habilitation and residential centers;

(b) Persons with disabilities have limited access to and low level of awareness of available independent-living support services and ways in which such assistance may be claimed within their local community;

(c) Data disaggregated by sex, age and disability on persons with disabilities residing in habilitation and other centers is not available.

36. The Committee recommends that the State party, in line with its general comment No. 5 (2017) on the right to independent living and being included in the community:

(a) Adopt a strategy to deinstitutionalize all persons with disabilities, including those with psychosocial or intellectual disabilities, and ensure the allocation of the necessary resources for the implementation of this strategy;

(b) Promote the provision of individualized and community support services for the independent living and inclusion of persons with disabilities in the community, and systematically raise their awareness on the availability of such services and assistance, as well as on how to access these services;

(c) Provide, in its next periodic report, data disaggregated by sex, age and disability on persons with disabilities residing in habilitation and other centers.

Senegal (2019)

33. The Committee is concerned about the persisting marginalisation of persons with disabilities, especially persons affected by leprosy and persons with psychosocial or intellectual disabilities, from participation in daily life activities. It is also concerned about the lack of:

- (a) A well-defined and legislative framework on de-institutionalisation and the absence of independent living community support services that provide for inclusion of persons with disabilities;
- (b) Awareness, among persons with disabilities, of available independent-living support services, including personal assistance services, the inaccessibility of such services to persons affected by leprosy and those with physical disabilities, persons with disabilities in rural areas and to migrant workers;
- (c) Home-based and community-based care for children with disabilities, especially in rural areas.

34. The Committee, in line with its General Comment No. 5 (2017) on the right to independent living and being included in the community, recommends that the State party:

- (a) Adopt concrete measures to promote the rights of persons with disabilities to live independently and be included in the family and community;
- (b) Provide systematically information to all persons with disabilities, including persons affected by leprosy, migrant workers and their families on how to access support services and assistance that would enable them to live independently in accordance with their choice, particularly in rural areas;
- (c) Undertake all necessary measures to ensure accessibility of community services and facilities for all persons with disabilities in all areas of life, as well as ensure home and community-based care for children with disabilities, including in rural areas.
- (d) Provide budgetary allocations to ensure that all persons with disabilities, including persons affected by leprosy, can decide where, how and with whom they wish to live, with accompanying necessary community support services, including personal assistance.

Spain (2019)

37. The Committee is concerned about the:

- (a) Limited access to personal assistance, despite positive developments in some Autonomous Communities, due to non-personalized eligibility criteria and lack of a human rights-based approach of individualized support;
- (b) Continuing investment of public funds in the construction of new residential institutions for persons with disabilities;
- (c) Lack of a deinstitutionalization strategy and action plan to promote independent living for all persons with disabilities within their community.

38. With reference to the Committee's general comment No. 5 (2017) on living independently and being included in the community, the Committee recommends that the State party, in consultation with organizations of persons with disabilities:

- (a) Recognize the right to personal assistance under the law ensuring that all persons with disabilities are entitled to personal assistance responding to personalized criteria for their independent living in the community, referring to a wide range of person-directed / user-led support and self-management of service delivery;
- (b) Discontinue the use of public funds for building residential institutions for persons with disabilities and invest in independent living arrangements in the community as well as in all general services to make them inclusive, guaranteeing their accessibility and availability for all persons with disabilities, to enable their inclusion and participation in all spheres of life;
- (c) Design, adopt and implement a comprehensive de-institutionalization strategy and implement safeguards to ensure the right to living independently and being included in the community across all regions, by redirecting resources from institutionalization to community-based services and increasing budget support for persons with disabilities to enhance their equal access to services, including personal assistance.

Türkiye (2019)

42. The Committee is concerned about:

- (a) The absence of a legislative framework recognizing the right of persons with disabilities to live independently and choose their place of residence;
- (b) The prevalent institutionalization of persons with disabilities on the basis of impairment in facilities such as 'Hope homes', including children with disabilities, who remain in nursery residential schools and orphanages;
- (c) The medical approach to support, which is linked to institutions or for 'screening', 'diagnostic', 'intervention' and 'rehabilitation' purposes, particularly affecting autistic persons, and the low level of awareness among persons with disabilities of available forms of support, and mechanisms to access them;
- (d) The absence of measures to obtain personal assistance and that the minimum wage of in-home support is provided to relatives or guardians rather than to persons with disabilities themselves;

(e) The absence of a holistic approach to accessible community services for facilitating inclusion, in particular the lack of measures to ensure access to housing in the community.

43. With reference to the Committee's general comment No. 5 (2017) on living independently and being included in the community, the Committee recommends that the State party:

- (a) Revise the Law on Social Services no. 2828 to comply and adhere to the Convention, recognizing the right of persons with disabilities to live independently as an individual right, and establishing measures to facilitate the exercise by persons with disabilities of their autonomy in choosing where, and with whom to live;
- (b) In consultation with organizations of persons with disabilities, adopt, implement and monitor a strategy at the national and provincial levels, with a concrete timeframe and benchmarks to deinstitutionalize persons with disabilities, including children with disabilities and replace all institutionalized settings, with support for independent living;
- (c) Allocate greater resources for developing individualized support for persons with disabilities, regardless of impairment or age, and ensure that human rights-based mental health is available for all persons with disabilities in all provinces;
- (d) Systematically provide information in accessible formats to persons with disabilities and their families on how to access support to enable them to live independently and be included in the community;
- (e) Enact policies and legislation and allocate financial resources for increasing accessibility in the community, including affordable housing, the built environment, public spaces and transport.

Vanuatu (2019)

32. The Committee is concerned at, despite the adoption of the Community-based rehabilitation Action Plan (2014-2024), the lack of sufficient support, including provision of personal assistants, for persons with disabilities to live independently in the community.

33. In line with its general comment No. 5 (2017) on living independently and being included in the community, the Committee recommends that the State party:

- (a) Allocate adequate resources to provide support, including personal assistants and social protection, for persons with disabilities and their families to enable them to live independently in the community and to choose where and who they live with;
- (b) Establish mechanisms for monitoring, evaluation and impact analysis of the Community-based rehabilitation Action Plan (2014-2024) in providing health and rehabilitative services to persons with disabilities in the home and in the community.

32. The Committee is concerned that the State party has not initiated a process of deinstitutionalization of persons with disabilities and notes with concern the lack of measures taken to ensure respect for the right of persons with disabilities to independent living and inclusion in the community.

33. The Committee recommends that the State party introduce and implement policy measures to initiate the process of deinstitutionalization of persons with disabilities in close consultation with representative organizations of persons with disabilities taking into account its General Comment No. 5 (2017) on article 19.

Bulgaria (2018)

39. The Committee notes with grave concern that according to the Action plan for the implementation of the National Long-term Care Strategy, the transition process from “institutional care to care in the community” would not be completed before 2034. It is also deeply concerned that the strategy envisages transfer of residents from large institutions to small group homes, contrary to the provisions of article 19, as elaborated in the Committee’s general comment No. 5 (2017). It is further concerned that persons with psychosocial disabilities are hospitalised in psychiatric hospital wards due to lack of recovery oriented rehabilitation, adequate individualized services and accommodation within the community.

40. In line with its’ General comment No. 5 (2017) on living independently and being included in the community, the Committee recommends that the State party:

(a) Significantly expedite the transition process ensuring all persons with disabilities living in any form of institution, including psychiatric hospital units, and small community-based group homes, the right to and possibility of living independently within the community, paying particular attention to persons with psychosocial disabilities, intellectual disabilities, children with disabilities, and elderly persons with disabilities;

(b) Increase resources for developing individualized support services for persons with disabilities regardless of type of impairment and age. These services should include peer support and personal assistance;

(c) Adopt legislation concerning individualized and self-managed personal assistance and social and support services, recognising the right to living independently and being included in the community as a subjective right for all persons with disabilities regardless of impairment and required level of support;

(d) Implement a procedure to meaningfully and disability-sensitively consult with organizations of persons with disabilities on all aspects of the implementation of article 19, including deinstitutionalization strategies and processes;

(e) Use financial national and international resources from the European Union to advance inclusion of persons with disabilities in society, and introduce efficient remedies and guidelines to avoid spending national and international funds on establishing infrastructure, housing and/or services which are not accessible and affordable for all persons with disabilities.

Malta (2018)

29. The Committee is concerned that the State party continues to institutionalize persons with disabilities and has not yet adopted a national legislation incorporating the legal provisions of article 19 of the Convention, so that they become directly justiciable, and provided tools for their enforcement. The Committee is also concerned at the limited, financial support to persons with disabilities to employ personal assistance that would allow them to live independently and the lack of skills training personnel to support persons with disabilities in the community.

30. The Committee recommends that the State party take into account its general comment No. 5 (2017) on living independently and being included in the community, and:

- (a) Ensure that existing residential institutions that contribute to the seclusion of persons with disabilities are closed and that the provision of appropriate community-based services is strengthened;
- (b) Ensure that all projects supported by public funds are carried out in a community setting, do not contribute to seclusion of persons with disabilities, are monitored by organizations of persons with disabilities, and are provided with sustainable continuous funding;
- (c) Adopt the legal and other necessary measures, such as the planned Personal Autonomy Bill and the UN CRPD Bill, that will make article 19 of the Convention justiciable;
- (d) Ensure that the financial and other measures are in place that allow persons with disabilities to be provided with personal assistance and that personnel supporting persons with disabilities in the community are appropriately trained, if necessary.

Philippines (2018)

34. The Committee is concerned about:

- (a) The lack of recognition of the right to living independently and being included in the community as a subjective right;
- (b) The absence of a strategy to ensure the transition from institutions to full independent living for all persons with disabilities within the community, including personal assistance;
- (c) The lack of support services to enable persons with disabilities to be included and participate fully in the community, which contributes to perpetuation of the institutionalization model.

35. The Committee recommends that the State party take into account the Committee's general comment No. 5 (2017) on living independently and being included in the community, and:

- (a) Enact legislation aimed at recognising the right of persons with disabilities to live included in the community and to choose their place of residence, and where and with whom they live. The State party should ensure that all persons with disabilities have legal capacity to exercise their freedom of choice concerning living arrangements;
- (b) Ensure the involvement of persons with disabilities and their representative organizations at all stages of the development of independent living strategies and schemes.
- (c) Adopt the measures necessary to ensure that persons with disabilities have a legal entitlement to a sufficient personal budget for independent living, which takes into account the additional costs related to disability and, at the same time, redirect resources from institutionalization to community-based services, while increasing the availability of personal assistance;
- (d) Implement community support services, with qualified human resources and adequate budgets, to enable persons with disabilities to make independent decisions on where to live and to be included in the community.

Poland (2018)

32. The Committee is concerned about:

- (a) Critical stagnation and absence of determination in the process of deinstitutionalisation of persons with disabilities and their transition to independent living in community ensuring the right to choose where, with whom and how to live outside institutions and group homes, including the absence of a strategy and action plan and targeted funding for the deinstitutionalisation process after the termination of the European Union funds allocated for this purpose;
- (b) Lack of access to community-based services, especially in villages, and the continuation of sheltered housing programmes, including the establishment of group homes, that are inconsistent with article 19 of the Convention as elaborated in Committee's General Comment No.5;
- (c) Personal assistance services that are project-based, non-systemic and limited in budget, duration and territorial availability;

- (d) Spending of the European Union funds allocated for deinstitutionalisation on measures that are not consistent with the Convention as elaborated in Committee's General Comment no.5, and the lack of monitoring of how these funds were used;
- (e) Incorrect translation of the term "community" by "society" in the Polish version of the Convention.

33. With reference to the Committee's general comment No. 5 (2017) on living independently and being included in the community, the Committee recommends that the State party:

- (a) Design and adopt concrete action plans for deinstitutionalisation and a time bounded transition to independent living schemes for persons with disabilities within the community, and ensure that adequate funding is allocated to this process after termination of European Union funds allocated specifically for this purpose;
- (b) Adopt legal frameworks and allocate sustainable budget aimed at providing personal assistance within individualized and inclusive support arrangements to persons with disabilities;
- (c) Ensure spending of the European Union funds allocated for deinstitutionalisation on measures that is consistent with the Convention; as well as monitoring of spending of the European Union funds allocated for deinstitutionalisation, with the effective participation of persons with disabilities and/or their representative organisations, to ensure that spending is in line with requirements of persons with disabilities themselves.
- (d) Ensure the correct translation of the term "community" in the Polish version of the Convention

South Africa (2018)

34. The Committee is concerned about the lack of a well-defined national strategic and legislative framework on de-institutionalisation and the absence of independent living community support services that provide for inclusion of persons with disabilities, particularly for persons with psychosocial and/or intellectual disabilities. Furthermore, the Committee is deeply concerned that the Gauteng tragedy may discourage the continuation of the process of de-institutionalisation process in the State party.

35. The Committee, in line with its general comment No. 5 (2017) on the right to independent living and to be included in the community, recommends that the State party:

- (a) Develop and adopt a national strategic and legislative framework on de-institutionalisation of persons with disabilities, including all necessary independent living community support services and ensure that persons with disabilities are effectively included, through their representative organisations, at all stages of the deinstitutionalization process;
- (b) Step up the efforts for de-institutionalisation;
- (c) Adopt an action plan at the national, regional and local level to develop community support services in urban and rural areas, including providing personal assistance, grants and support to families of children with disabilities and parents with disabilities, covering support for assistive devices, guides and sign language interpreters.

North Macedonia (2018)

34. The Committee notes with concern:

- (a) The weakness of the deinstitutionalization process and the emphasis given to the resettlement of persons with disabilities in small group homes instead of independent living arrangements;
- (b) The absence of services and provision of personal assistance to promote independent living of persons with disabilities in the State Party;
- (c) That the State Party still spends more funds on institutions as compared to community based services;
- (d) The age discriminatory nature of the personal assistance pilot program.

35. With reference to the Committee's general comment No. 5 (2017) on living independently and being included in the community, the Committee recommends that the State party:

(a) Provide adequate human, financial and technical resources for the full implementation of deinstitutionalization particularly for implementing the transition to independent living conditions;

(b) Allocates sufficient resources to ensure the provision of personal assistance and that services in the community are available, accessible, affordable, accommodating and of quality in order to enable persons with disabilities exercise their right to live independently and be included in the community;

(c) Adopt the measures necessary to ensure that persons with disabilities have a legal entitlement to a sufficient personal budget for independent living, which takes into account the additional costs related to disability and, redirect resources from institutionalization to community-based services;

(d) Adopt measures to ensure the provision of personal assistance for persons with disabilities regardless of age limitations.

36. The Committee is concerned that the legislation of the State party fails to recognize living independently and being included in the community as a human right that enshrines individual autonomy, control and choice as intrinsic aspects of that right. The Committee is also concerned at the lack of policies, priorities and measures that affect the ability to live independently in the community.

37. The Committee recommends, in line with the Committee's general comment No. 5 (2017) on living independently and being included in the community, that the State party recognize the right to living independently and being included in the community as a subjective right, including the enforceability of all its elements, and adopt rights-based policies, regulations and guidelines to ensure implementation. The Committee further recommends that the State party set up a comprehensive plan, developed in close collaboration with organizations of persons with disabilities, with adequate and sufficient dedicated funding to allow persons with disabilities to live independently and be included in the community in rural as well as urban areas and ensure the deinstitutionalization of persons with disabilities.

29. The Committee is concerned that persons with disabilities are not provided with adequate means to enable them to exercise choice and control over their lives and make all decisions concerning their lives, particularly to live independently and in communities. The Committee is further concerned that the State party has not adopted any policy measures to protect persons with disabilities against forced institutionalization.

30. In line with General Comment No. 5 (2017) on the right to independent living, the Committee recommends that the State party adopt a strategy to implement independent living schemes and ensure access to disability specific and community services. The Committee also recommends that the State party ensure that persons with disabilities who live with or are dependent on their families receive appropriate support to enable them to live independently in the community.

35. The Committee is concerned about the low level of awareness among persons with disabilities of available independent-living support services and ways in which to claim such assistance within their local community, the inaccessibility of such services to persons with mobility impairments, persons with disabilities in rural areas and to migrant workers. The Committee is also concerned about the lack of home-based and community-based care for children with disabilities, especially in rural areas.

36. The Committee recommends that the State party strengthen measures to promote the rights of persons with disabilities to live independently and be included in the family and community, and to systematically provide information to all persons with disabilities, including migrant workers and their families on how to access support services and assistance that would enable them to live independently in accordance with their own choice, in particular in rural areas. The Committee also recommends that the State party undertake all necessary measures to ensure accessibility to community services and facilities by all persons with disabilities in all areas of life, as well as ensure home and community-based care for children with disabilities, including in rural areas.

40. The Committee is deeply concerned about the large number of persons with disabilities living in institutions and about the limited opportunities for persons with disabilities, especially those with intellectual and/or psychosocial disabilities, to access services and participate in local communities. It also notes with concern the lack of de-institutionalization strategy and that not all persons with disabilities are aware of the available support services and ways in which to claim assistance in local community.

41. In line with its General comment No. 5, the Committee recommends that the State party adopt a strategy to promote the rights of persons with disabilities to live independently and be included in the community, to develop accessible support services for persons with disabilities of all types and ages in local communities, and to systematically provide information to persons with disabilities and their families on how to claim support services and assistance that would enable them to live independently in accordance with their own choice and as part of the community.

Seychelles (2018)

33. The Committee is concerned about:

- (a) The absence of legal measures in the State party to ensure that persons with disabilities can live independently;
- (b) The limited support that persons with disabilities and their families receive to enable them to exercise their right to independent living and inclusion in the community, which has resulted in cases of abandonment of persons with disabilities and their being placed in the care of the State in a residential institution;
- (c) The absence of a deinstitutionalization strategy for those persons with disabilities placed in existing residential institutions.

34. The Committee recommends that the State party:

- (a) Expressly recognize in its legislation the right of persons with disabilities to choose with whom and where they wish to live;
- (b) Provide sufficient support to persons with disabilities and their families to enable them to exercise their rights to independent living and to be included in the community;
- (c) Urgently start the process of deinstitutionalization of those persons with disabilities still in a residential setting and increase the availability of community-based services aimed at enabling persons with disabilities to live and participate in the community.

Slovenia (2018)

31. The Committee is concerned at the large number of persons with disabilities still residing in institutions because of the lack of an explicit policy, national and municipal capacity and measures for deinstitutionalization of persons with disabilities, and the insufficient provision of independent living services in the community. It is also concerned about the practice of transferring persons with disabilities from larger to smaller institutions and about plans to build new institutions.

32. With reference to the Committee ' s general comment No. 5 (2017) on living independently and being included in the community, the Committee recommends that the State party:

- (a) Adopt and implement a strategy and action plan, within a time frame, aimed at deinstitutionalization;
- (b) Prevent any form of reinstitutionalization and provide sufficient funding for developing community-based independent living schemes;
- (c) Allocate sufficient resources to ensure that services in the community are available, accessible, affordable, acceptable and accommodating of persons with disabilities, so that such persons may exercise their right to live independently and be included in their communities, in both urban and rural areas;
- (d) Strengthen the national and municipal capacity to implement deinstitutionalization, in close cooperation with organizations of persons with disabilities.

Sudan (2018)

39. The Committee notes with concern the absence of a strategy to promote and ensure the transition to full independent living for all persons with disabilities within the community, including with support of personal assistance programs; and that persons with psychosocial disabilities are still forced to live in reformatories without their consent under the guise of ensuring close supervision and access to better health care and treatment.

40. In the light of its general comment No. 5 (2017), the Committee recommends that the State party:

- (a) Adopt the legal and political measures necessary to ensuring the right of all persons with disabilities to independent living and inclusion in the community, including by providing for personal assistance and assistive aids;
- (b) Adopt the measures necessary to ensure that persons with disabilities have a legal entitlement to a sufficient personal budget for independent living, which takes into account the additional costs related to disability and, redirect resources from institutionalization to community-based services.

Latvia (2017)

30. The Committee is concerned about the:

- (a) (a) Slow process of deinstitutionalizing persons with disabilities and allegations that residents are being transferred between institutions under the guise of deinstitutionalization;
- (b) Absence of a strategy to ensure the continuity of deinstitutionalization after the termination of support from European structural funds;
- (c) (c) Lack of commitment shown by municipalities to the deinstitutionalization process as a result, in part, of the limited knowledge of independent living;
- (d) Excessive administration and limited provision of personal assistance for persons with disabilities.

31. The Committee urges the State party to:

- (a) (a) Expedite the complete deinstitutionalization of all persons with disabilities within a set time frame in order to close all remaining institutions, both those run by the State and the municipalities, ensuring that residents are not subject to transinstitutionalization;
- (b) (b) Reinforce the engagement of municipalities in implementing the deinstitutionalization strategy, including through raising awareness about independent community-based living for persons with disabilities and ensuring sustainable provision of services to promote independent living following termination of European structural funds;
- (c) (c) Ensure the provision of quality personal assistance that takes into account the individual needs of persons with disabilities and ensures their social inclusion and participation.

Luxembourg (2017)

36. The Committee is concerned about:

- (a) Laws in place, including the reform to Act 7014 of 8 July 2016, that continue to curtail the right to independent living by setting limits and controls on persons with disabilities;
- (b) The lack of an action plan for the deinstitutionalization of persons with disabilities with a specific timeline and appropriate funding;
- (c) The absence of a clear strategy to promote and ensure the transition to full independent living for all persons with disabilities within the community, including with support of a personal assistant, and that future plans and construction projects still contain elements that limit the rights of persons with disabilities under article 19.

37. The Committee recommends that the State party take into account its general comment No. 5 (2017) on living independently and being included in the community, and:

- (a) Adopt the legal and other measures necessary, including repealing Reform Act 7014 and relevant disability insurance systems, replacing them by legislation promoting the right to independent living and being included in the community, providing for, among others, personal assistance and clarifying the responsibilities and resource allocations of central and local authorities;
- (b) Develop and implement an effective deinstitutionalization plan, with a clear time frame and benchmarks, involving persons with disabilities through their representative organizations in all stages;
- (c) Adopt the measures necessary to ensure that persons with disabilities have a legal entitlement to a sufficient personal budget for independent living, which takes into account the additional costs related to disability and, at the same time, redirect resources from institutionalization to community-based services, while increasing the availability of personal assistance.

Montenegro (2017)

36. The Committee is concerned about the continuation of institutional care and the lack of any comprehensive strategy of deinstitutionalization. It is also concerned about:

- (a) The high number of persons with disabilities who are institutionalized, and the fact that the efforts made by the State party to develop individual support services remain insufficient;
- (b) The fact that persons who are institutionalized are transferred to other institutions as a form of “holiday”;
- (c) The allocation of resources to the creation of smaller, albeit still segregated settings, which constitute de facto institutions, instead of increasing resource allocation to community-based care.

37. The Committee urges the State party to adopt a comprehensive strategy with clear time-bound goals for effective deinstitutionalization and to allocate adequate resources to its implementation. It recommends that the State party:

- (a) Commit to not building new institutions or other forms of segregated settings, and instead develop a wide range of community-based services, including at the local level, that respond to the needs of persons with disabilities and respect their autonomy, choices, dignity and privacy and that include peer support and other alternatives to the medical model of mental health;
- (b) Discontinue the concept of holidays in a different institution and ensure that persons with disabilities can spend holidays in a community care environment;
- (c) Ensure the involvement of persons with disabilities and their representative organizations at all stages of the development of independent living strategies and schemes.

Morocco (2017)

38. The Committee notes with concern:

- (a) The high number of persons with disabilities, including children, living in institutions;

- (b) The absence of community support services that provide for inclusion of persons with disabilities in the community;
- (c) The marginalization of persons with disabilities, especially persons with psychosocial and/or intellectual disabilities, from participation in the activities of daily life owing to a lack of accessible essential services;
- (d) The absence of a policy on deinstitutionalization and independent living.

39. The Committee recommends that the State party:

- (a) Recognize in its legislation the subjective right of persons with disabilities to live independently and be included in the community;
- (b) Set up a strategy for the deinstitutionalization of persons with disabilities that includes provisions for collecting data, particularly of abandoned children with disabilities in institutions, a clear time frame and indicators;
- (c) Adopt a plan at the national and regional levels to develop community support services in urban and rural areas, including personal assistance, grants and support for families of children with disabilities and parents with disabilities, including support for the provision of assistive devices, guides and sign language interpreters;
- (d) Adopt measures at the national and local levels to ensure the accessibility of community services and facilities for all persons with disabilities in all areas of life.

Panama (2017)

42. The Committee is concerned at the limited progress made in implementing an independent living model and the lack of programmes and services, including personal assistance for persons with disabilities who require it, so that they may exercise their right to independent living and to be included in their community.

43. In line with its general comment No. 5 (2017) on the right to independent living and to be included in the community, the Committee recommends that the State party promote independent living schemes and roll out programmes and services, including personal assistance for persons with disabilities who require it, so that they may exercise their right to live independently and be included in their community. It also recommends that the State party introduce a budget line to guarantee fair wages for individuals who provide personal assistance to persons with disabilities.

United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland (2017)

44. The Committee is concerned about:

- (a) The fact that the State party's legislation fails to recognize living independently and being included in the community as a human right that enshrines individual autonomy, control and choice as intrinsic aspects of that right;
- (b) Policies and measures that affect the ability to live independently in the community, such as the reduction in social protection schemes related to housing, household income and budgets for independent living, as well as the closure of the Independent Living Fund;
- (c) The fact that responsibility for supporting independent living has been transferred to the devolved administrations and local authorities without providing appropriate and earmarked budget allocation;
- (d) The fact that many persons with disabilities are still institutionalized and deprived of the right to live independently and be included within the community, when: (i) they lack the financial resources to afford personal assistance; (ii) local authorities are of the opinion that they can provide assistance within care homes; and (iii) the cost rationale constitutes the main parameter of an assessment;
- (e) The lack of support services and accessible public facilities, including personal assistance, for persons with disabilities, regardless of sex, gender, age and other status, to live independently and be included in the community.

45. The Committee recommends that the State party, in line with the Committee's general comment No. 5 (2017) on living independently and being included in the community and the Committee's report on its inquiry concerning the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland carried out under article 6 of the Optional Protocol to the Convention:

- (a) Recognize the right to living independently and being included in the community as a subjective right, recognize the enforceability of all its elements, and adopt rights-based policies, regulations and guidelines to ensure implementation;
- (b) Conduct periodic assessments in close consultation with organizations of persons with disabilities to address and prevent the negative effects of policy reforms through sufficiently funded and appropriate strategies in the area of social support and living independently;
- (c) Provide adequate, sufficient earmarked funding to local authorities and administrations, including the devolved governments, to be able to continuously allocate adequate resources allowing persons with disabilities to live independently and be included in the community and to exercise their right to choose their place of residence and where and with whom to live;
- (d) Set up a comprehensive plan, developed in close collaboration with organizations of persons with disabilities, aimed at the deinstitutionalization of persons with disabilities, and develop community-based independent living schemes through a holistic and cross-cutting approach, including education, childcare, transport, housing, employment and social security;
- (e) Allocate sufficient resources to ensure that support services are available, accessible, affordable, acceptable, adaptable and are sensitive to different living conditions for all persons with disabilities in urban and rural areas.

31. The Committee is concerned about the slow progress of the deinstitutionalization process and the large number of children and adults with disabilities still living in residential institutions. It is also concerned about the very limited support to enable them to live independently within the community.

32. The Committee recommends that the State party expedite the process of deinstitutionalization and implement, without delay, its action plan for deinstitutionalization, including timelines for closing all remaining institutions. It also recommends that the State party adopt legal measures and allocate sufficient resources for the development of support services, including personal assistance, that would facilitate the independent living of all persons with disabilities in the community. The Committee further recommends that persons with disabilities, through their representative organizations, be involved in all stages of the deinstitutionalization process (planning, implementation, evaluation and monitoring).

34. The Committee is concerned that:

- (a) Institutional care is still prevalent and there is no comprehensive strategy of deinstitutionalization in the State party;
- (b) The number of institutionalized persons with disabilities remains high, and insufficient efforts have been made to provide resources for the development of support services, in particular personal assistance, in local communities for those leaving institutions;
- (c) Resources are still invested in renovating or extending institutions, while initiatives of – and opportunities provided for – organizations of persons with disabilities for developing services within the community that enable independent living are not sufficiently supported.

35. The Committee urges the State party to:

- (a) Adopt a comprehensive strategy with clear time-bound measures and the allocation of sufficient funds for effective deinstitutionalization;
- (b) Legally ensure that no further investment will be made in new institutions and that the staff of current institutions will be provided with adequate training on the Convention, and update the current curricula of social worker students accordingly;

(c) Facilitate the involvement of organizations of persons with disabilities in the development of independent living strategies and schemes that provide for accessible community-based services, especially at the local level.

Canada (2017)

37. The Committee commends the steps taken by different provinces in the State party towards deinstitutionalization, and welcomes in particular the information that Ontario closed its last residential institution for persons with “developmental” disabilities in 2009. However, the Committee is concerned that persons with disabilities continue to be placed in institutions in many provinces, such as Alberta, British Columbia, Manitoba, Nova Scotia, Prince Edward Island and Quebec, and in the territories. It is also concerned about the lack of adequate services and support available to persons with disabilities within the over 600 First Nation communities in the State party.

38. The Committee recommends that the State party:

(a) Adopt national guidelines on, and provide on a continuous basis advice to provincial and territorial jurisdictions towards, the recognition of the right to live independently and be included in the community as a subjective and enforceable right for persons with disabilities, reaffirming the principle of respect for the individual autonomy of persons with disabilities and their freedom to make choices about where and with whom to live;

(b) Adopt a human rights-based approach to disability in all housing plans and policies at all levels. To that end, the State party should increase the availability of affordable and accessible housing units for persons with psychosocial and intellectual disabilities, as well as support services;

(c) Ensure that provincial and territorial jurisdictions set up strategies with time frames to close institutions and replace them with a comprehensive system of support for independent living, including home support and personal assistance for persons with disabilities;

(d) Ensure that accessibility legislation, plans and programmes include the accessibility of services and facilities with the aim of facilitating the inclusion of persons with disabilities in the community and preventing their isolation and institutionalization;

(e) Ensure appropriate service provision within First Nation communities (on reserves) to individuals with intellectual and/or psychosocial disabilities.

Cyprus (2017)

43. The Committee is deeply concerned about the significant number of persons with disabilities who are currently still institutionalized.

44. The Committee recommends that the State party, in close collaboration with representative organizations of persons with disabilities, and in line with article 4 (3) of the Convention:

(a) Develop and implement safeguards securing the right to independent living;

(b) Adopt and immediately implement an adequately funded deinstitutionalization strategy;

(c) Redirect resources allocated to institutionalization and earmark and allocate them to community-based services and increase the budget enabling persons with disabilities to live independently across the State party with access to individually assessed and adequate services, including personal assistance, within the community.

Honduras (2017)

46. El Comité alienta al Estado parte en sus esfuerzos de no aceptar ninguna nueva institucionalización y le recomienda que impulse un plan con plazos concretos y un presupuesto suficiente para la desinstitucionalización de personas con discapacidad, particularmente personas con discapacidad intelectual o psicosocial, que garantice a las personas con discapacidad el acceso a los servicios y apoyos necesarios, incluyendo la asistencia personal, con el objetivo de una vida independiente en la comunidad, todo esto en consultas con las organizaciones de personas con discapacidad.

Iran (Islamic Republic of) (2017)

40. The Committee is concerned about isolation and institutionalization of persons with disabilities, in particular persons with intellectual and/or psychosocial disabilities who depend on 'care' provided by their families or in institutions. It is further concerned about the absence of support services, including personal assistance aimed at ensuring inclusion of persons with disability in the community.

41. The Committee recommends that the State party:

(a) Adopt a strategy for the de-institutionalization of persons with disabilities, within a time frame, budget and measurable indicators, and withdraw the program community mental health center run by the Ministry of Health and Medical Education; and

(b) Redirect resources from institutionalization to community-based services and increase budgets to enable persons with disabilities to live independently with access to services, including personal assistance.

(c) Raise awareness about the right to autonomy and self-determination of persons with disabilities, including concerning decisions of where and with whom to live.

Jordan (2017)

37. The Committee is concerned about the low level of awareness among persons with disabilities of available independent-living support services and ways in which to claim such assistance within their local community.

38. The Committee recommends that the State party adopt the deinstitutionalization strategy, ensure the allocation of the resources necessary for it to realize its objective of promoting the rights of persons with disabilities to live independently and be included in the family and community, and systematically provide information to persons with disabilities and their families on how to access support services and assistance that would enable them to live independently in accordance with their own choice and as part of the community and the family.

36. The Committee is concerned about the slow pace of the deinstitutionalization process. It is concerned that, despite the executive moratorium on new admissions, persons with disabilities continue to be institutionalized. It is also concerned that the State party lacks the legal measures to ensure that persons with disabilities who have been deinstitutionalized can live independently, and that there is a lack of clarity as to the responsibilities of central and local authorities regarding the provision of community-based services.

37. The Committee recommends that the State party expedite the process of deinstitutionalization and ensure the application of the moratorium. It recommends that the State party:

(a) Execute, without delay, the action plan for the implementation of reforms relating to deinstitutionalization, which should include a deadline and timelines for closing all remaining institutions;

(b) Adopt legal measures providing for independent living, including personal assistance, and clarify the responsibilities and resource allocations of central and local authorities;

(c) Involve persons with disabilities, through their representative organizations, in all stages of the deinstitutionalization process (planning, implementation, evaluation and monitoring).

Bolivia (2016)

49. The Committee is concerned about the non-existence of support services to enable persons with disabilities to be included and participate fully in the community, which contributes to perpetuation of the institutionalization model.

50. The Committee urges the State party to implement community support services, with qualified human resources and adequate budgets, to enable persons with disabilities to make independent decisions on where to live and to be included in the community.

Colombia (2016)

48. The Committee is concerned that the transition of persons with disabilities from institutions to living in the community has not begun, and that there is a lack of support services for independent living.

49. The Committee recommends that the State party:

(a) Implement a plan for the deinstitutionalization of persons with disabilities, in close consultation with organizations of persons with disabilities, with specific timelines and sufficient resources for its implementation;

(b) Ensure that community services are available to persons with disabilities and are inclusive of persons with disabilities, and develop and make available at all levels, including municipalities and communities, the support services required by persons with disabilities, including personal assistance, to enable them to choose their place of residence and to live independently.

43. The Committee is concerned at the absence of community support services that provide for the inclusion of persons with disability in society. It is also concerned at the lack of availability and accessibility of personal assistance services for persons with disabilities.

44. The Committee recommends that the State party enhance the availability, accessibility and inclusiveness of existing public services and develop further community-based services for persons with disabilities to ensure that they have the opportunity to choose their place of residence and where and with whom they live, including in rural areas. It also recommends that the State party ensure the availability and accessibility of personal assistance services for persons with disabilities.

53. The Committee is concerned by the high number of children and adults with disabilities being held in institutions. The Committee is particularly concerned by the situation of persons at the Federico Mora National Mental Health Hospital, who are isolated indefinitely. It is also concerned by the large number of children, including many with disabilities, who are currently in institutions. The Committee notes with concern the lack of local community services designed to meet the needs of persons with disabilities to enable them to live independently. In addition, it is concerned by the lack of support for the families of children with disabilities to ensure that such children are able to remain in the family environment.

54. The Committee recommends that the State party:

(a) Urgently draw up a strategy for the deinstitutionalization of persons with disabilities, with time frames, adequate resources and specific assessment measures;

(b) Allocate sufficient resources to the development of local community support services, including personal assistance, to enable all persons with disabilities, regardless of disability, gender or age, to choose freely with whom, where and in what living arrangement they wish to live;

(c) Provide support to families of children with disabilities to prevent family breakdown and institutionalization of the children;

(d) Abolish the institutionalization of children of any age.

Italy (2016)

47. The Committee is deeply concerned about the trend to re-institutionalize persons with disabilities and that funds are not being reallocated from institutions to promoting and ensuring independent living for all persons with disabilities within their community. Furthermore, it notes with concern the gendered consequences of the current policies where women are “forced” to remain within the family as caregivers of their peers with disabilities instead of being employed in the labour market.

48. The Committee recommends that the State party implement safeguards to retain the right to autonomous independent living across all regions, and redirect resources from institutionalization to community-based services and increase budget support to enable persons with disabilities to live independently across the country and have equal access to services, including personal assistance.

United Arab Emirates (2016)

37. The Committee is concerned that a number of cultural, social and environmental challenges prevent persons with disabilities from enjoying their rights to live independently and be included in the community, including the absence of a strategy to develop inclusive community-based services and provide personal assistance.

38. The Committee recommends that the State party adopt a strategy to promote the rights of persons with disabilities, including Bidouns, to live independently and be included in the community, which includes developing community-based services, providing personal assistance and rendering existing services inclusive, regardless of place of residence, and to systematically provide information to persons with disabilities and their families on how to claim the kind of support services and assistance that would enable them to live independently in accordance with their own choices and as part of the community.

45. Al Comité le preocupa la inexistencia de iniciativas concretas para la desinstitucionalización de las personas con discapacidad y los apoyos en la comunidad para la vida independiente. También le preocupa las inconsistencias entre el Programa de asistencia personal y la persistencia del enfoque médico en la aplicación de la ley de cuidadores.

46. El Comité alienta al Estado parte en sus esfuerzos de no aceptar ninguna nueva institucionalización y le recomienda que impulse un plan con plazos concretos y un presupuesto suficiente para la desinstitucionalización de personas con discapacidad, incluyendo a las personas con discapacidad intelectual o psicosocial, que garantice a las personas con discapacidad el acceso los servicios y apoyos necesarios, incluyendo la asistencia personal, con el objetivo de una vida independiente en la comunidad, todo esto en consulta con las organizaciones de personas con discapacidad.

43. Al Comité le preocupan los pocos avances en la implementación de la Ley núm. 20422 en lo relativo a las disposiciones para apoyar a personas con discapacidad a vivir independientemente pues estas personas carecen de sistemas de apoyos en la comunidad, lo cual las obliga a ingresar en instituciones o vivir en condiciones de indigencia. Asimismo, le preocupa la ausencia de un plan para la desinstitucionalización de personas con discapacidad y su transición hacia una vida de inclusión comunitaria.

44. El Comité recomienda al Estado parte que impulse un plan para la desinstitucionalización de personas con discapacidad, particularmente personas con discapacidad intelectual o psicosocial, que incluya su transición hacia una vida independiente en la comunidad contando con los servicios y apoyos necesarios, con plazos concretos y un presupuesto suficiente.

Lithuania (2016)

39. The Committee is deeply concerned at the lack of sufficient choice and range of adequate support mechanisms, including independent living schemes, to ensure that persons with disabilities can access accommodation within their local community, regardless of their sex, age or impairment. In particular:

- (a) Many children under 3 years of age with disabilities are still placed in residential institutions;
- (b) There are no guarantees that all younger persons with disabilities have realistic options of choosing not to live in residential facilities for the elderly;
- (c) There is no programme for individualized personal and financial assistance allowing persons with disabilities to live independently in the community, and a lack of range of community-based services.

40. The Committee recommends that the State party, in close collaboration with organizations of persons with disabilities:

- (a) Adopt an adequately funded strategy for deinstitutionalization ensuring a range of community-based services for the social inclusion of persons with disabilities, including for children with intellectual and/or psychosocial impairments, including their right to live independently in the community, with the possibility of individualized personal assistance support services in their home;
- (b) Effectively implement the action plan for the implementation of the national programme for the social integration of persons with disabilities for the period 2013-2019 at all levels of the State;
- (c) Adopt a moratorium on new admissions of children into institutionalized care;
- (d) Eliminate excessive waiting time for receiving support services by investing in developing new services and rendering existing services accessible and inclusive and ensure that persons with disabilities have access to sufficient financial resources for independent living and improved access to accessible services in the community.

41. The Committee is concerned that the national budget and European Union structural funds have been used in renovating existing institutional facilities and in constructing new ones.

42. The Committee recommends that the State party further prioritize investing in a social service system for independent living in the community, and immediately refrain from using national and structural funds of the European Union to renovate, maintain or construct residential institutions for persons with disabilities.

Portugal (2016)

38. The Committee is concerned about the lack of a national policy for independent living in the State party, the lack of regulations governing personal assistance, and the fact that the amount currently paid for 'Third person assistance allowance' is very low, resulting in some persons in the State party being forced to live in institutions for persons with disabilities or in homes for older people, in which the State Party invest more than in support for living independently. It is also concerned that the National Mental Health Plan 2007-2016, which aims to extend the National Network for Integrated Continuous Care, has yet to put in place community-based services.

39. The Committee recommends that the State party, in close consultation with representative organisations of persons with disabilities, adopt a national strategy for independent living, including increased investment in living independently in the community rather than in institutions, regulate in the field of personal assistance, and offer wider access to sign language interpreters and deafblind sign language interpretation in its public services. Furthermore, the Committee urges the State party to establish community-based support services for persons with intellectual and psychosocial disabilities.

39. The Committee is concerned about the lack of comprehensive strategy of deinstitutionalisation in the State party, further concerned that the number of institutionalised persons with disabilities remain high, and that insufficient efforts have been made to provide resources for the development of support services, personal assistance services in particular, in local communities for those leaving institutions. The Committee is further concerned that resources are still invested in renovating or extending institutions while a lot of barriers for initiatives by organisations of persons with disabilities (DPOs) including overcomplicated licencing process, still persist.

40. The Committee urges the State party to adopt a comprehensive strategy and measures for an effective deinstitutionalisation. It further recommends to ensure no investment will be made for new institutions and to allocate resources to enable all persons with disabilities to live independently and to have support in the community based on their own choice and preference. It further recommends removing barriers for a greater participation of organisations of persons with disabilities (DPOs) in the development of community based services, especially at the level of municipalities.

55. The Committee is deeply concerned by the high number of institutionalized persons with disabilities, in particular women with disabilities; that progress on the deinstitutionalization process is too slow and partial; about the ongoing investments from government budgets in institutions; and the lack of provision of full support for persons with disabilities to live independently in their communities.

56. The Committee recommends that the State party provide and implement a timetable to ensure that the implementation of the deinstitutionalization process is expedited, including by putting in place specific additional measures to ensure that community-based services are strengthened for all persons with disabilities, in particular women with disabilities and older persons with disabilities. Furthermore, the State party should ensure that the use of European structural and investment funds complies with article 19 and that new follow-up national action plans on the transition from institutional settings to community-based support are initiated with the comprehensive involvement of organizations of persons with disabilities and civil society organizations, including in the area of monitoring. The Committee also recommends that the State party no longer allocate resources from the national budget to institutions and that it reallocate resources into community-based services in accordance with the investment priorities of the European Regional Development Fund (art. 5.9 (a) of European Union regulation No. 1303/2013).

57. The Committee is concerned at the geographic variation and unequal financial support of community-based social services and home-care services for persons with disabilities, including older persons, and at the slow rate of the remuneration process on behalf of the State party.

58. The Committee recommends that the State party ensure the equal distribution of resources for social care, with an emphasis on community-based services. The Committee also recommends that the State party ensure that community-based social services and home-care services are available in all geographic regions and rural areas, and that funds are allocated to persons with disabilities who require them, especially those who are unemployed or in low-wage employment.

39. The Committee is concerned about the institutionalization of persons with disabilities, including girls and boys, in residential institutions, hospitals, half-way homes and rehabilitation centres, and the insufficiency of community-based support services to implement independent living. The Committee is also concerned that many initiatives for facilitating the enjoyment of the right to independent living remain isolated examples and face challenges in terms of sustainability.

40. The Committee recommends that the State party, in active dialogue with organizations of persons with disabilities:

- (a) Adopt a concrete time frame for the deinstitutionalization of persons with disabilities;
- (b) Make available a range of supports in the community to ensure that persons with disabilities can exercise choice and control regarding where and with whom they live;
- (c) Continue and strengthen initiatives for independent living to ensure long-term sustainability.

Uganda (2016)

38. The Committee is concerned about the prevalence of institutionalization of persons with disabilities and the absence of community support services that provide for inclusion of persons with disability in society. It is also concerned about the marginalization of persons with disabilities, in particular persons with psychosocial and/or intellectual disabilities, from everyday life due to lack of provision of essential services.

39. The Committee recommends that the State party:

- (a) Adopt a strategy for the deinstitutionalization of persons with
- (b) disabilities, within a time frame and with indicators;
- (c) Provide essential community-based services, including accessibility to education, health care, employment and accommodation, and personal assistance to guarantee independent living for persons with disabilities, including those living in rural areas;
- (d) Provide grants to persons with disabilities to facilitate independent living in the community covering support for assistive devices, guides, sign language interpreters and affordable skin-care protection for persons with albinism.

36. The Committee is concerned at the lack of access to support services and allowances, especially personal assistance services, aimed at enabling persons with disabilities to live independently and be included in the community. The Committee is also concerned that the State party does not have a comprehensive strategy to replace institutionalization with community-based living for persons with disabilities.

37. The Committee recommends the State party to establish a framework providing for legal entitlement to personal assistance services to enable persons with disabilities to live independently in the community. The Committee also recommends that, in consultation with organizations of persons with disabilities, the State party develop and implement an effective de-institutionalization and community-based living strategy with clear time frames and benchmarks.

50. The Committee is concerned that across the European Union persons with disabilities, especially persons with intellectual and/or psychosocial disabilities still live in institutions rather than in local communities. It further notes that in spite of changes in regulations, in different Member States the ESI Funds continue being used for maintenance of residential institutions rather than for development of support services for persons with disabilities in local communities.

51. The Committee recommends that the European Union develop an approach to guide and foster deinstitutionalisation, to strengthen the monitoring of the use of ESI Funds - to ensure they are being used strictly for the development of support services for persons with disabilities in local communities and not the re-development or expansion of institutions. It further recommends that the European Union suspend, withdraw and recover payments if the obligation to respect fundamental rights is breached.

44. The Committee is concerned that community-based services aimed at enabling persons with disabilities to live and participate in the community with choices equal to others have yet to be developed. It is also concerned about the lack of measures aimed at persons with disabilities who are abandoned by their families, especially in and around the capital in so-called 'cités'.

45. The Committee recommends that the State party comprehensively develop community-based services for persons with disabilities in close cooperation with them and their representative organisations including, in particular, the service of personal assistance. It also recommends that it adopt the necessary measures to prevent isolation or segregation of persons with disabilities from the community hidden in the family, in segregated institutions, and in the so-called 'cités'.

37. The Committee is concerned about the institutionalization of persons with disabilities and the absence of community support services that provide for inclusion of persons with disability in society.

38. The Committee recommends that the State party:

(a) Adopt a strategy for the de-institutionalization of persons with disabilities, within a timeframe and measurable indicators. This strategy must involve the participation of organizations of persons with disabilities;

(b) Launch a comprehensive strategy with timeframe and human rights-based indicators to provide for community-based services available for persons with disabilities; and

(c) Take steps to introduce specific budgetary allocations, for the promotion of independent living, including cash transfer schemes for personal assistance services.

Mauritius (2015)

31. The Committee is concerned that families who are often the sole base of support for persons and children with disabilities, especially those with psycho-social and intellectual disabilities, receive limited assistance from the State. The Committee is also concerned that children are removed from family settings and placed in residential institutions where they lack care and psychological support and are sometimes subjected to cruel, inhuman and degrading treatment. The Committee is further concerned that private Day Care Centers where children with disabilities are placed are not regulated nor monitored by the State and that children with disabilities continue to be placed in "Centres de Sauvegarde" ("Abris des Enfants en Détresse").

32. The Committee recommends that the State party urgently remove children with disabilities from the "Centres de Sauvegarde" ("Abris des Enfants en Détresse") and develop family and community-based alternatives for those deprived of a family environment. The State party should initiate without delay a transition from private unregulated Day Care Centers to inclusive early childhood education and education settings and in the interim, regulate and closely monitor these Centers. The State party should adopt urgent measures directed to the deinstitutionalisation of persons with disabilities and to develop mechanisms at the community level to promote choices, autonomy and inclusion, for persons with disabilities. The Committee also recommends that the State party develop effective quality support services for parents caring for children with disabilities and for persons with disabilities to live independently in the community as well as effective protection systems.

37. The Committee is concerned by the absence of a strategy to promote the rights of persons with disabilities to live independently and be included in the community and the lack of a systematic provision of information by the State party to persons with disabilities and their families on how to claim support services and assistance they are entitled to.

38. The Committee recommends that the State party adopt a strategy to promote the rights of persons with disabilities to live independently and be included in the community, and to systematically provide information to persons with disabilities and their families on how to claim support services and assistance that would enable them to live independently in accordance with their own choice and as part of the community.

36. The Committee notes with concern that the State party continues to practice institutionalization of persons with disabilities and provides very limited support, especially to persons with intellectual and psychosocial disabilities, to live independently in their respective communities.

37. The Committee urges the State party to adopt measures for deinstitutionalization and to allocate sufficient resources for development of support services in local communities that would enable all persons with disabilities, to choose freely with whom, where and under which living arrangements they will live.

39. The Committee is concerned that there are no registered personal assistants services in the State party and that families are the sole base of support for persons with disabilities.

40. The Committee recommends the State party develop support services for persons with disabilities to live independently in the community, including setting a concrete time frame and allocating budget for the establishment of professional personal assistance services, with the active participation of organisations of persons with disabilities.

Croatia (2015)

29. The Committee is, concerned, that not all residential institutions, such as smaller private institutions, wards for long-term care in psychiatric institutions and foster homes for adults, are covered by the deinstitutionalization plan. It is further concerned that a legal framework providing for personal assistant services allowing independent living in the community is lacking and that such services are only available to a limited number of persons with disabilities.

30. The Committee recommends that the process of deinstitutionalization include all residential institutions for all persons with disabilities and foster homes for adult persons with disabilities. It recommends to adopt a legal framework providing for entitlement to personal assistance services in the community and to initiate a process of making local communities and mainstream services accessible to persons with disabilities.

38. The Committee notes with concern that the State party continues to invest more resources in institutional settings than in support services that would enable persons with disabilities to live independently in their respective local communities. It further notes with concern the lack of plans to provide support services in local communities for older persons with disabilities

39. The Committee urges the State party to step up the process of deinstitutionalization and to allocate sufficient resources for development of support services in local communities that would enable all persons with disabilities, regardless of their impairments, gender or age, to choose freely with whom, where and under which living arrangements they will live, in line with the provisions of article 19 of the Convention.

The Committee recommends the State party to take all necessary measures to ensure that policy processes for deinstitutionalization, including the development of the National Plan on Promoting Equal Opportunities for Persons with Disabilities 2015-2020, have a clear timeline and concrete benchmarks for implementation which are effectively monitored at regular intervals. In particular, the Committee urges the State party to abolish the placement of children under three years old in institutionalized care as soon as possible.

38. The Committee is deeply concerned at the fact that there is no strategy to de-institutionalize persons with disabilities, particularly children with “severe” disabilities in the Angeles homes and that no community and support services have been created to enable persons with disabilities to live independently and be included in the community.

39. The Committee recommends that the State party adopt a programme for the de-institutionalization of persons with disabilities, particularly children with disabilities, in the Angeles homes. It also recommends setting up programmes and support networks to enable persons with disabilities to be included in the community and to live independently, in housing arrangements that meet their wishes, needs and preferences.

Germany (2015)

41. The Committee is concerned about the high levels of institutionalisation and the lack of alternative living arrangements or appropriate infrastructure, which comprise additional financial barriers for persons with disabilities. Furthermore, it is concerned that access to benefits and support services impede the right to live in the community with an adequate standard of living due to means-testing of benefits, which do not cover disability-related expenses.

42. The Committee recommends that the State party:

(a) Take steps towards legal reform of Section 13 para. 1(3) of the Twelfth Book of the Social Code (SGB XII) for increased social assistance services to enable inclusion, self-determination and choice to live in the community;

(b) Allocate sufficient financial resources to facilitate de-institutionalisation and promote independent living, including increased financial resources to provide community-based outpatient services providing the required support to persons with intellectual or psychosocial disabilities based on the free and informed consent of the individual concerned across the whole country;

(c) Increase access to programmes and benefits to support living in the community and which cover disability-related costs.

Mongolia (2015)

31. The Committee is concerned about the lack of social assistance programmes aimed at enabling persons with disabilities to live independently in the community as prescribed for in article 19 of the Convention.

32. The Committee recommends that the State party develop a de-institutionalisation plan, in consultations with persons with disabilities, which includes establishing support measures, including personal assistance to persons with disabilities, regardless of whether they have family or not.

37. The Committee is concerned at the absence of an effective roadmap with concrete targets to deinstitutionalize persons with disabilities.

38. The Committee recommends that the State party design and effectively implement a strategy based on measurable targets for the deinstitutionalization of persons with disabilities taking into account the different types of institutions, with a view to promoting community-based services and supporting independent living. The above-mentioned strategy should be developed in consultation with organizations of persons with disabilities. The strategy should provide for sufficient trained therapists, social workers and other relevant specialists.

New Zealand (2014)

39. The Committee notes the independent living model and the Enabling Good Lives project, which both give greater independence to persons with disabilities. However, the Committee is concerned that there appears to be a lack of choice and of a range of supports to ensure that persons with disabilities can freely and by themselves choose to live included in the community, noting especially that persons with disabilities in some cases have no other option than to live in residential facilities for the elderly.

40. The Committee recommends that the independent living model and the Enabling Good Lives programme be extended to enable more persons with disabilities to live independently in the community. The Committee also recommends that a range of supports be made available in the community to ensure that persons with disabilities can exercise choice and control regarding where they live.

42. The Committee is concerned about the increased construction, by municipalities, with State-guaranteed loans, of large institution-like residences for persons with disabilities, with thirty to sixty or even more residents, often outside city centres. It is also concerned about the recent surveys indicating the limited possibility for persons with disabilities to freely choose where to live, which has included instances of forced relocation.

43. The Committee recommends that the State party end the use of State-guaranteed loans to build institution-like residences for persons with disabilities; that it amend the legislation on social services so that persons with disabilities may freely choose where and with whom they live, while enjoying the necessary assistance to live independently; and that it take measures to close existing institution-like residences and to prevent the forced relocation of persons with disabilities, in order to avoid isolation from the community.

37. The Committee is concerned about the lack of efficiency of the deinstitutionalization strategies and the lack of sufficient measures aimed at including persons with disabilities in the community, as reflected by the increase in both the number of institutions for persons with disabilities and the number of residents, and the lack of policies for inclusion in the community with all necessary support services, including personal assistance services.

38. The Committee urges the State party to develop effective deinstitutionalization strategies based on the human rights model of disability and to significantly increase support services in the community, including personal assistance services.

39. The Committee is concerned that the amount that a person with disabilities is required to pay to receive personal assistant services is calculated based on the “degree of impairment” rather than on the characteristics, circumstances and needs of that person and on the income of the family rather than on the income of the person concerned, resulting in the exclusion of some persons with disabilities from receiving personal assistant services.

40. The Committee encourages the State party to ensure that social assistance programmes provide sufficient and fair financial assistance so that persons with disabilities can live independently in the community. The Committee recommends, in particular, that the State party base the amount of payment for the personal assistant services on the characteristics, circumstances and needs of the persons with disabilities, rather than on the “degree of impairment”, and on the income of the person with disabilities concerned, rather than on the income of his or her family.

32. The Committee notes with concern the high rate of referral to institutional care for persons with disabilities in the State party and the lack of deinstitutionalization plans. It also notes that there is insufficient information on opportunities to continue living in society and the community, since institutional care is too often seen as the only lasting solution. Moreover, there are very few opportunities for persons with disabilities to live independently owing to a lack of investment and the inadequacy of personal assistance services. The Committee is concerned about the policy on registration of institutions that care for French persons with disabilities, in particular children with disabilities, in the State party and the lack of monitoring of such institutions.

33. The Committee recommends that the State party work towards deinstitutionalization by reducing investment in collective infrastructure and promoting personal choice. The Committee urges the State party to implement a disability action plan at all levels of the State to guarantee access to services and an independent life for persons with disabilities so that they are able to live in the community. The action plan must eliminate current waiting lists and ensure that persons with disabilities have access to sufficient financial resources and that communities are accessible for persons with disabilities. The Committee recommends that the State party devise international cooperation programmes that respect the right of persons with disabilities to live in the community and involve disabled persons' representatives and their families in their preparation.

34. The Committee is concerned that, although the Joaquín Gallegos Lara vouchers are provided so that persons with disabilities can have assistance in the home, these payments are made to the carers and not to the persons with disabilities themselves.

35. The Committee recommends that the State party review the criteria for issuing Joaquín Gallegos Lara vouchers to persons with disabilities, with a view to ensuring that it is they who receive such support to live independently and be included in the community.

Mexico (2014)

43. The Committee is concerned at the lack of a State strategy for the inclusion of persons with disabilities in society and their ability to live independently. The Committee is further concerned by the absence of a specific and effective strategy for the deinstitutionalization of persons with disabilities.

44. The Committee recommends that the State party:

(a) Adopt legislative, financial and other measures to ensure that persons with disabilities may live autonomously in the community. These measures should include personal assistance services, be culturally appropriate, enable beneficiaries to choose their lifestyle and place of residence and express their preferences and needs, and contain a gender and age perspective;

(b) Urgently define a strategy for the deinstitutionalization of persons with disabilities, including specific time frames and assessment measures.

Sweden (2014)

43. The Committee is concerned that State-funded personal assistance has been withdrawn for a number of people since 2010 due to a revised interpretation of "basic needs" and "other personal needs", and that persons who still receive assistance have experienced sharp cutbacks, the reasons for which are unknown or only seemingly justified. It is further concerned at the reported number of positive decisions under the Swedish Act concerning Support and Service for Persons with Certain Functional Impairments that are not executed.

44. The Committee recommends that the State party ensure that personal assistance programmes provide sufficient and fair financial assistance to ensure that a person can live independently in the community.

Azerbaijan (2014)

32. The Committee is concerned that notwithstanding the State party's efforts to implement the State Programme on De-Institutionalisation and Alternative Care 2006-2015 and to reduce the number of people living in institutions, the level of institutionalisation remains high particularly among children. The Committee is particularly concerned at the lack of information on the promotion of independent living for persons with intellectual disabilities instead of their institutionalisation in psychiatric institutions

33. The Committee recommends that the State party intensify the implementation of its de-institutionalization programme strategies with a view to promoting community based services and support independent living. The Committee further recommends that the State party ensure that social assistance programmes provide sufficient financial assistance to facilitate independent living in the community.

Costa Rica (2014)

39. The Committee regrets that there is no deinstitutionalization strategy for persons with disabilities in the State party. It is also concerned to note that, in the absence of due State supervision and control, the number of private care homes and shelters in which persons with disabilities are institutionalized is rising.

40. The Committee urges the State party to immediately adopt a deinstitutionalization policy for persons with disabilities, including those in psychiatric hospitals, and which incorporates a comprehensive, human rights-centred mental health strategy. It also recommends the establishment of institutional facilities for persons with disabilities to be controlled and discouraged, and urges the State party to adopt a policy of developing community services so as to ensure that persons with disabilities can be included in the community.

41. The Committee is concerned that despite the policy to close large residential centres, new initiatives replicate institutional living arrangements, and many persons with disabilities are still compelled to live in residential institutions in order to receive disability support.

42. The Committee encourages the State party to develop and implement a national framework for the closure of residential institutions and allocate the resources necessary for support services that would enable persons with disabilities to live in their communities. The Committee recommends that the state party takes immediate action to make sure that persons with disabilities are given a free choice of where they want to live and with whom and be able to receive the necessary support regardless of the place of residence. The State party should therefore conduct a mapping of the various forms of living accommodation based on the needs of various kinds of persons with disabilities.

36. The Committee notes with concern reports that over the last twenty years the population of Austrians with disabilities, who are institutional dwellers, has increased. The Committee is particularly concerned by this phenomenon because institutions are contrary to article 19 of the Convention and leave persons vulnerable to violence and to abuse.

37. The Committee recommends that the State party ensure that the Federal Government and the Governments of the Länder place greater efforts on de-institutionalisation and in allowing persons with disabilities to choose where they live.

38. The Committee commends Austria on its various personal assistance programs (at the federal and Länder levels) to assist persons with disabilities. The Committee notes with concern that the personal assistance programs are not available to persons with psychosocial disabilities and that not all cover persons with intellectual disabilities.

39. The Committee recommends that the State party ensure that the assistance programs provide sufficient financial assistance to ensure that persons can live independently in the community. The Committee further recommends that the State Party harmonise and broaden its personal assistance programs by making personal assistants available to all persons with intellectual and psychosocial disabilities.

41. The Committee notes that the State party does not have a legal and public policy framework on the right to live independently and that poverty serves as a background for the abandonment and isolation of persons with disabilities and their separation from their families and communities. The Committee regrets that children with disabilities remain subject to institutional placement.

42. The Committee urges the State party to adopt, in cooperation with organizations of persons with disabilities, an adequately funded strategy to deinstitutionalize persons with disabilities, including children with intellectual and/or psychosocial impairments, and ensure their social inclusion and their right to live independently in the community, with the possibility of a personal assistant or support services in the home. It also recommends the adoption of measures to prevent persons with disabilities being hidden or isolated from society or being separated from their families and social circle, including through granting their families the necessary support.

47. The Committee regrets that the State party has still made no significant progress on a mental health policy that includes measures to deinstitutionalize persons with disabilities who are currently housed in psychiatric hospitals, institutions for children with disabilities and shelters for homeless persons, particularly children, with disabilities.

48. The Committee asks the State party to implement a policy to gradually deinstitutionalize persons with disabilities, with clear time frames and benchmarks, and which includes the setting up of community services, including rights-based mental health services.

49. The Committee is concerned at the lack of understanding of the importance of persons with disabilities being able to live an independent life as part of the community. It is also concerned at the lack of measures and policies aimed at including persons with disabilities in the community and the low level of involvement of local authorities and institutions in this question.

50. The Committee urges the State party to encourage the creation of services aimed at including persons with disabilities in the community and, to that end, to obtain the involvement and commitment of the authorities at all levels, particularly the local and the community levels, and to conduct appropriate consultations and encourage the involvement of disabled persons' organizations in these services.

33. The Committee regrets that the State party's Support Service for Independent Living (SAVA) is not yet operational, and it is concerned that the available resources and services are of insufficient quality and quantity to guarantee the right of persons with disabilities to live independently and to be included in the community.

34. The Committee urges the State party to ensure that the Support Service for Independent Living (SAVA) becomes operational as soon as possible and to develop and implement comprehensive programmes that will enable persons with disabilities to have access to a wide range of in-home, residential, community-based and other rehabilitation services and to freely choose where and how to live.

31. The Committee is concerned about the high number of persons with disabilities living in institutions and about the fact that China maintains institutions with up to 2000 residents. Such institutions are not in compliance with art. 19 CRPD. The Committee is further concerned about the existence of lepers colonies, where people with leprosy live in isolation.

32. The Committee recommends taking immediate steps to phase out and eliminate institutional-based care for people with disabilities. Further, the Committee recommends to State party to consult with organisations of persons with disabilities on developing support services for persons with disabilities to live independently in accordance with their own choice. Support services should also be provided to persons with a high level of support needs. In addition, the Committee suggests that the state party undertake all necessary measures to grant people with leprosy the medical treatment needed and to reintegrate them into the community, thereby eliminating the existence of such lepers' colonies.

Hong-Kong (2012)

69. The Committee is concerned about the shortage of subvented residential homes. It is also worried about the lack of premises for District Support Centres, whose aim is to strengthen the ability of persons with disabilities to live at home in their own community and be integrated into society.

70. The Committee suggests that Hong Kong, China, allocate more resources to setting up more subvented mainstream residential homes and strengthening policies promoting establishment of accessible living facilities to secure the de facto possibility of free choice of accommodation. It calls upon Hong Kong, China, to ensure that the District Support Centres receive the necessary funds and premises in order to enable persons with disabilities to live in the community.

92. The Committee is concerned that the right to live independently and in the community has not yet been fully achieved in the Macao, China.

93. The Committee urges the Macao, China, to prioritize the implementation of this right and shift from institutionalization to in-home or residential living as well as provide other community support services.

Hungary (2012)

33. The Committee takes note that the State party has recognized the need for the replacement of large social institutions for persons with disabilities in community-based settings (deinstitutionalisation). The Committee, however, notes with concern that the State party has set a 30 year time frame for its plan for deinstitutionalisation. It is furthermore concerned that the State party dedicated disproportionately large resources, including regional EU funds, to reconstruction of large institutions, which will lead to continued segregation in comparison to sufficient resources dedicated to setting up of community-based support service networks. The Committee is concerned that the State party fails to provide sufficient and adequate support services in local communities that would enable persons with disabilities to live independently outside the residential institutions settings.

34. The Committee calls upon the State party to ensure that an adequate level of funding is made available to effectively enable persons with disabilities to: enjoy the freedom to choose their residence on an equal basis with others; access a full range of in-home, residential and other community services for daily life, including personal assistance; and enjoy reasonable accommodation with a view to supporting their inclusion in their local communities.

35. The Committee further calls upon the State party to re-examine the allocation of funds, including the regional funds obtained from the EU, dedicated to the provision of support services for persons with disabilities, and the structure and functioning of the small community living centres, and ensure the full compliance with the provisions of article 19 of the Convention.

32. The Committee is concerned at the absence of resources and services to guarantee the right of persons with disabilities to live independently and to be included in the community, in particular in rural areas.

33. The Committee urges the State party to initiate comprehensive programmes to enable persons with disabilities to access a whole range of in-home, residential and other community support services, including personal assistance necessary to support living and inclusion in the community, and to prevent isolation or segregation from the community, especially in rural areas.

39. The Committee is concerned at the lack of resources and services to guarantee the right to live independently and to be included in the community, in particular in rural areas. It is further concerned that the choice of residence of persons with disabilities is limited by the availability of the necessary services, and that those living in residential institutions are reported to have no alternative to institutionalization. Finally, the Committee is concerned about linking eligibility of social services to a specific grade of disability.

40. The Committee encourages the State party to ensure that an adequate level of funding is made available to effectively enable persons with disabilities: to enjoy the freedom to choose their residence on an equal basis with others; to access a full range of in-home, residential and other community services for daily life, including personal assistance; and to so enjoy reasonable accommodation so as to better integrate into their communities.

41. The Committee is concerned that the law for the promotion of autonomy limits the resources to hire personal assistants only to those persons who have level 3 disabilities and only for education and work.

42. The Committee encourages the State party to expand resources for personal assistants to all persons with disabilities in accordance with their requirements.

*Article 20 CRPD
(Personal mobility)*

September 2025

Article 20 - Personal mobility

States Parties shall take effective measures to ensure personal mobility with the greatest possible independence for persons with disabilities, including by:

- a) Facilitating the personal mobility of persons with disabilities in the manner and at the time of their choice, and at affordable cost;*
- b) Facilitating access by persons with disabilities to quality mobility aids, devices, assistive technologies and forms of live assistance and intermediaries, including by making them available at affordable cost;*
- c) Providing training in mobility skills to persons with disabilities and to specialist staff working with persons with disabilities;*
- d) Encouraging entities that produce mobility aids, devices and assistive technologies to take into account all aspects of mobility for persons with disabilities.*

Democratic People's Republic of Korea (2025)

37. The Committee is concerned about:

- (a) The lack of specific mechanisms to provide mobility aids, devices and assistive technologies to persons with disabilities;
- (b) The lack of information provided by the State Party on the accessibility of transport, particularly in rural and remote areas, beyond the existence of a taxi service for persons with disabilities;
- (c) The lack of information provided by the State Party on technical training on personal mobility that includes persons with disabilities.

38. The Committee recommends that the State Party:

- (a) Establish and implement specific, adequately resourced mechanisms to ensure the timely provision, maintenance, and replacement of affordable mobility aids, devices, and assistive technologies for all persons with disabilities, taking into account individual requirements and preferences;
- (b) Systematically collect and publish disaggregated data on the accessibility of public and private transport, including in rural and remote areas, and take targeted measures to ensure that all transport services are physically and technologically accessible as well as affordable to persons with disabilities on an equal basis with others;
- (c) Develop, resource, and implement accessible technical training programmes on personal mobility for persons with disabilities, ensuring their meaningful participation in the design, delivery, and evaluation of such programmes.

Finland (2025)

38. The Committee is concerned at:

- (a) The insufficient availability of accessible public transport and the discretionary criteria from Social Welfare Counties for granting access to transport services;
- (b) Restrictive amendments to criteria for accessing technical aids, and cutbacks on tax exemptions for the acquisition of vehicles and assistive technologies;

39. The Committee recommends that the State party:

- (a) Ensure availability of accessible public transport and private and/or shared complementary transport options throughout the territory, and establish harmonized guidelines across all Social Welfare Counties to ensure transparency and equity in access to mobility services for all persons with disabilities;
- (b) Ensure that budget cuts do not infringe on the autonomy of persons with disabilities, guarantee the provision of technical aids, including vehicles and assistive technologies, at affordable cost, and eliminate bureaucratic barriers in access to technical aids.

Kiribati (2025)

37. The Committee is concerned about:

- (a) The limited availability and affordability of mobility aids, devices, and assistive technologies for persons with disabilities, which remain largely dependent on external donor support;
- (b) The lack of trained personnel for the fitting, repair, and maintenance of mobility devices, the concentration of services in South Tarawa, and the absence of a comprehensive national strategy to guarantee personal mobility for persons with disabilities across all islands.

38. The Committee recommends that the State party:

- (a) Take necessary measures, in cooperation with relevant donors and development partners, to facilitate access for all persons with disabilities, including children with disabilities, to quality mobility aids, devices and assistive technologies at an affordable cost, particularly on the outer islands, as well as measures to provide for fitting, repair and maintenance of those devices through the Tungaru Rehabilitation Service and community-based approaches;

(b) Ensure affordability of assistive devices by introducing incentive measures, including tax and custom exemptions for the purchase of assistive equipment and devices for persons with disabilities.

Maldives (2025)

39. The Committee is concerned about:

(a) The challenges that persons with disabilities face in obtaining, using, and maintaining the mobility aids, assistive devices, and assistive technologies and services, due to the partial subsidies provided by the National Social Protection Agency (NSPA) to cover the cost, the limited range of assistive devices available through current support schemes, and the lack of orientation and mobility practitioners, as well as teachers, to train persons with motor impairments, and blind and visually impaired persons on the use of their assistive technologies;

(b) The barriers that persons with disabilities face with regard to obtaining driver's license;

(c) The absence of locally manufactured assistive aids and devices, which results in a heavy reliance on expensive overseas procurement and external donations for mobility equipment, thereby creating significant barriers for persons with disabilities in accessing the essential support and services needed to ensure their mobility and independence, and that imported assistive devices for persons with disabilities are expensive and not exempted from taxes and additional duties.

40. The Committee recommends that the State party:

(a) Adopt a national strategy, to ensure individualized access of persons with disabilities to mobility aids, assistive technologies, live assistance, and intermediary services for persons with disabilities, including children with disabilities, to quality mobility aids, devices and assistive technologies at an affordable cost, particularly in the outer islands, as well as measures to provide for training, arranging repair and maintenance of those devices and technologies, taking into account the WHO Priority Assistive Products List (APL);

(b) Take measures to ensure that persons with disabilities have equal access to obtaining a driver's license by introducing and enforcing reasonable accommodations in the driver testing and licensing processes;

(c) Ensure affordability of vehicles and assistive devices, including by applying incentive measures and tax and custom exemptions for the purchase of assistive equipment and devices for persons with disabilities, and review taxation laws to allow tax exemption for vehicles and assistive devices for use by persons with all types of disabilities.

Dominican Republic (2025)

37. The Committee notes with concern that mobility equipment and assistive devices remain unaffordable for many persons with disabilities.

38. The Committee recommends that the State party eliminate all barriers to persons with disabilities acquiring affordable and high-quality mobility aids, assistive devices and assistive technologies and services so as to aid their personal mobility and provide the necessary information and training on their usage and maintenance.

European Union (2025)

50. The Committee is concerned that:

(a) Persons with disabilities cannot travel independently and spontaneously due to pre-notification requirements and mobility barriers in all transport modes;

(b) Regulation TSI-PRM allows the use of inaccessible trains and does not address the platform-train interface;

(c) Passenger rights regulations deny transport based on "safety considerations" and do not provide compensation when assistance fails to materialize or when denied boarding; and in air transport, compensation is limited;

(d) Many transport providers do not allow the use of mobility equipment on buses or trains;

(e) Only 250 bus stops in the EU are designated to provide assistance and there is a lack of information on the frequency and content of training of bus and coach staff.

51. The Committee recalls its previous Concluding Observations and Recommendations (para. 53) and recommends that the European Union:

- (a) Revise the passenger rights regulations for all transport modes to eliminate pre-notification requirements and ensure spontaneous travel;
- (b) Include comprehensive accessibility requirements for train stations and rolling stock in the upcoming TSI PRM revision, ensuring independent boarding and removing exceptions for double-decker trains and restaurant cars;
- (c) Prohibit denial of boarding on disability-related grounds and establish compensation mechanisms for violations; ensure full liability of air carriers for damaged or lost mobility equipment and prevent denial of boarding in air transport;
- (d) Develop harmonized accessibility standards for all forms of transport, including urban transport, to ensure accessibility and accommodation of mobility equipment;
- (e) Increase the number of bus stops with assistance for persons with disabilities and provide training on accessibility of persons with disabilities for drivers and personnel operating bus stops.

Palau (2025)

37. The Committee is concerned at:

- (a) The barriers faced by persons with disabilities in accessing, using and maintaining the mobility aids, assistive devices and assistive technologies and services, including accessible transportation and infrastructure, necessary for their personal mobility;
- (b) The reliance on overseas procurement and external donations for specialized mobility equipment, as well as the limited availability of prosthetic and orthotic services.

38. The Committee recommends that the State party:

- (a) Take measures to eliminate all barriers hindering persons with disabilities from acquiring affordable and high-quality mobility aids, assistive devices and assistive technologies and services, including accessible transportation and infrastructure, and ensure the availability of the necessary information and training on their usage and maintenance;
- (b) Ensure affordability of vehicles and assistive devices, including by applying incentive measures and tax and custom exemptions for the purchase of assistive equipment and devices for persons with disabilities, and review taxation laws to allow tax exemption for vehicles and assistive devices for use by persons with all categories of disabilities.

Tuvalu (2025)

37. The Committee is concerned:

- (a) About difficulties faced by persons with disabilities, in particular those with motor and visual impairments, in accessing quality and affordable mobility and assistive technologies, live assistance and intermediaries;
- (b) That imported assistive devices for persons with disabilities are expensive and not exempted from taxes and additional duties.

38. The Committee recommends that the State party:

- (a) Take necessary measures, in cooperation with relevant national and international actors, to facilitate access for all persons with disabilities, including children with disabilities, to quality mobility aids, devices and assistive technologies at an affordable cost, particularly in the outer islands, as well as measures to provide for training, arranging repair and maintenance of those devices and technologies;
- (b) Train and deploy adequate numbers of orientation and mobility instructors for persons with disabilities;
- (c) Ensure affordability of vehicles and assistive devices, including by applying incentive measures and tax and custom exemptions for the purchase of assistive equipment and devices for persons with disabilities, and review taxation laws to allow tax exemption for vehicles and assistive devices for use by persons with all categories of disabilities.

Viet Nam (2025)

39. The Committee is concerned about:

- (a) The persistent inaccessibility of public spaces and sidewalks due to obstacles such as street vendors and parked motorcycles;
- (b) The barriers to obtaining driving licenses for persons with disabilities, including regulations that disproportionately affect them and limited support for acquiring and adapting private vehicles;
- (c) The high cost and limited availability of assistive technologies, despite encouraging policies, and the lack of clear funding or guidelines for accessibility-related innovation.

40. The Committee recommends that the State party:

- (a) Implement regulations to remove obstacles from public pathways, ensuring sidewalks and public spaces remain accessible;
- (b) Review Circular 24/2015 to eliminate disability-based driving restrictions, assessing applicants based on driving capability instead, and provide financial and policy incentives for persons with disabilities to acquire and adapt private vehicles for independent mobility;
- (c) Introduce funding programmes to support the research, development, and distribution of affordable assistive technologies, ensuring wide availability for persons with disabilities.

Belarus (2024)

39. The Committee is concerned about:

- (a) The absence of a comprehensive strategy, action plan or targeted legislation to improve the individual safety of persons with disabilities for their personal mobility, in a manner ensuring universal access to appropriate mobility aids and assistive devices;
- (b) The lack of orientation and mobility training programmes for children and adults with disabilities and the absence of clear mechanisms to provide them with aids and assistive technologies that help them to move around independently and safely.

40. The Committee recommends that the State party:

- (a) Develop a national strategy or targeted legislation on personal mobility, guaranteeing universal access to appropriate mobility aids, and other assistive technologies;
- (b) Develop specialized mobility training for children and adults with disabilities and provide the necessary assistive technology, tools and aids to enable persons with disabilities to exercise their right to mobility safely and independently.

Belgium (2024)

40. The Committee is concerned:

- (a) That accessibility of public transportation and other mobility services continues to be insufficient, and that persons with disabilities over the age of 65 are generally not entitled to mobility aids, devices and assistive technology;
- (b) About the lack of an adequate budget to strengthen the quality of essential services in medical settings, and the provision of guide and assistance dogs;
- (c) About the application of a medical model of disability in the assessment of the need for mobility aids.

41. The Committee recommends that the State party, in close consultation with and with the active involvement of persons with disabilities, through their representative organisations:

- (a) Ensure that mobility policies meet the requirements of persons with disabilities, including persons with disabilities over the age of 65, and that mobility aids are adapted to the requirements of each individual person with disabilities, at affordable cost;
- (b) Develop disability inclusive budgeting plans at all levels of government, to guarantee a sufficient allocation of financial resources to strengthen the quality of essential services, including in medical settings as well as guide and assistance dogs;

(c) Fundamentally reorient its disability assessment systems by replacing elements of the medical model of disability with principles of the human rights model of disability, by establishing systems aimed at the assessment of legal and environmental barriers to persons with disabilities, and by the provision of the support and assistance necessary realize the right to independent living and being included in society of persons with disabilities.

Benin (2024)

39. The Committee notes with concern:

(a) Challenges faced by persons with disabilities, particularly those with mobility and visual impairments, in accessing quality and affordable mobility and assistive technologies, live assistance and intermediaries, in accordance with article 20 (b) of the Convention, especially in rural areas;

(b) The lack of orientation and mobility practitioners, as well as teachers, to train persons with disabilities in remote and rural areas, on the use of their assistive technologies.

40. The Committee recommends that the State party:

(a) Ensure access for all persons with disabilities to quality mobility aids, devices and assistive technologies at an affordable cost, particularly in rural areas, and to provide the National Solidarity Support Fund with sufficient financial resources to enable it to fulfil its mandate on promoting the mobility of persons with disabilities;

(b) Train and deploy adequate numbers of orientation and mobility instructors for persons with disabilities.

38. The Committee is concerned that the benefits of the legislation concerning mobility of persons have been limited, in particular that:

(a) Requests for exemption from custom taxes and VAT are not systematically satisfied and the reduction in acquisition costs provided for by the texts for the benefit of non-indigent people with a disability remains unapplied in reality;

(b) The costs of acquiring mobility equipment remain out of reach for many persons with disabilities, and the State's allocations of mobility equipment are both one-off and derisory;

(c) Persons with disabilities and staff working with persons with disabilities are not trained in mobility skills.

39. The Committee recommends that the State party:

(a) Take the necessary measures for the effective application of Law No. 012-2010/AN of 1 April 2010 on the exemption from import fees for motor or non-motorized vehicles intended for the use of disabled persons, in particular to adopt the necessary regulatory texts to allow the effective application by the competent technical services of these social measures and extend these exemptions to all types of mobility aids, assistive devices and assistive technologies;

(b) Eliminate all barriers hindering persons with disabilities from acquiring affordable and high-quality mobility aids, assistive devices and assistive technologies and services, including accessible transportation and infrastructure, so as to aid their personal mobility, and provide the necessary information and training on their usage and maintenance. It also recommends that the State party create an enabling environment whereby persons with disabilities can procure such devices by developing the means of manufacturing and repairing such devices at an affordable cost;

(c) Provide training to persons with disabilities, including children with disabilities and specialist staff on mobility skills and raise awareness among persons with disabilities and their representative organizations on the legal measures and services for accessing mobility aids and the provision of mobility aids, assistive devices and other assistive technologies and forms of assistance.

Ghana (2024)

38. The Committee is concerned about:

(a) The inapplicability of tax exemption to manufacturers of technical aids or appliances for the use of persons with disabilities given the lack of regulations for Section 36 of the Persons with Disability Act, and the lack of Assistive technologies, including appliances, orthopaedic, prosthesis and optical aids and hearing aids which are not covered by the National Health Insurance Scheme;

(b) The significant and increasing challenges faced by persons with disabilities, in accessing quality and affordable mobility and assistive technologies, live assistance and intermediaries, especially in remote and rural areas, and the lack of orientation and mobility practitioners, as well as teachers, to train persons with disabilities on the use of their assistive technologies to enhance their dignity and respect in society;

(c) The Convention on International Civil Aviation (Chicago Convention, 1944) which has provisions relating to travel by air for persons with disabilities has not been ratified.

39. The Committee recommends that the State Party:

(a) Expedite the development and implementation of regulations for Section 36 of the Persons with Disability Act to ensure tax exemptions for manufacturers of technical aids and appliances are put into effect, and amend the National Health Insurance Scheme, to explicitly require the provision of access to essential assistive devices and technology, in line with the Convention, and ensure these are affordable and accessible to all persons with disabilities;

(b) Adopt measures to facilitate the acquisition of the necessary mobility and assistive technologies, live assistance and intermediaries, particularly for persons with physical and vision impairments , especially in remote and rural areas;

(c) Adopt an effective national strategy for the training and retraining of orientation and mobility practitioners and teachers in the use of devices for persons with physical and vision impairments, particularly in remote and rural areas;

(d) Ratify the Convention on International Civil Aviation (Chicago Convention, 1944) and work with domestic air carriers to address insurance and aircraft design issues, ensuring that air travel is accessible to persons with disabilities, including those using wheelchairs.

Mauritius (2024)

33. The Committee is concerned that:

(a) The financial support provided for assistive devices such as wheelchairs, hearing aids and spectacles is largely insufficient to afford the devices;

(b) The duty-free purchase of adapted cars is only available for persons with disabilities who are employed and under the age of 60 years;

(c) There are limitations in physical access to public transportation, both in urban and rural areas, such as the incomplete accessibility of semi-low floor buses to all persons using mobility aids and assistive devices and the physical difficulty to reach metro stations.

34. The Committee recommends that the State party:

(a) Revert back to the original scheme of directly providing assistive devices such as wheelchairs, hearing aids and spectacles, in lieu of financial support;

(b) Expand the eligibility for duty-free purchase of any type of car to all persons with disabilities requiring a vehicle;

(c) Review the public procurement of transport facilities, vehicles and equipment to ensure that the specifications include accessibility criteria, such as ramps for persons using mobility aids and assistive devices, and take measures to facilitate physical access to the metro stations.

Netherlands (2024)

45. The Committee notes with concern:

- (a) That public transport is not yet fully accessible for persons with disabilities, limiting their ability to move freely and independently, and the problems encountered when combining different types of transport, leading to coordination problems and inconsistent accessibility; the partial replacement of public transport with neighbourhood buses run by volunteers that are not accessible, leading to reliance on segregated target group transport;
- (b) The reported problems with target group transport persons with disabilities are still very much reliant on, such as lacking availability, punctuality, significantly longer travel time compared to regular public transport;
- (c) The different laws and regimes applicable, and the different authorities responsible for the provision of mobility aids, leading to fragmentation and administrative obstacles, such as the need for reapplication upon retirement or moving between municipalities; the contractual limitations in the range of mobility aid instruments provided by support provision organisations in asylum centres and the resulting lower quality.

46. The Committee recommends that the State party:

- (a) Expeditiously ensure full accessibility of public transport, regardless of mode of transportation or provider;
- (b) Minimize the need for target group transport by ensuring all public transport is fully accessible; improve the reliability and efficiency of target group transport;
- (c) Harmonize laws and regulations concerning the provision of mobility aids to maintain continuity of support and services; ensure that all asylum seekers and refugees with disabilities and persons with disabilities in refugee-like situations have access to high-quality mobility aids that meet their specific requirements.

Ukraine (2024)

40. The Committee is concerned about the lack of a comprehensive strategy and plan to provide timely assistive technology products to persons with cognitive, communication, hearing, mobility, and vision impairments in urban and rural areas and conflict-affected territories.

41. The Committee recommends that the State Party adopt a comprehensive strategy and plan to ensure timely access by all persons with disabilities, in particular those with disabilities living in the conflict-affected territories, to quality mobility aids, devices, assistive technologies and all forms of live assistance, including by making them available at an affordable cost.

45. The Committee notes with concern the absence of information about access to quality mobility aids, devices by persons with disabilities, training on mobility skills, particularly in rural areas.

46. The Committee recommends that the State party:

- (a) Ensure that persons with disabilities have access to quality mobility aid, devices, assistive technologies and forms of live assistance and intermediaries at affordable cost;
- (b) Implement monitoring and evaluation mechanisms to assess the effectiveness of initiatives in improving accessibility and personal mobility for persons with disabilities;
- (c) Increase public investment in supports such as affordable assistive devices and accessible public transportation to further promote personal mobility and independence of persons with disabilities.

40. The Committee is concerned about the lack of mobility training programs for persons with disabilities. The Committee is concerned about the lack of mobility training programs for persons with disabilities and the lack of clear mechanisms to provide them with aids and assistive technologies to help them move independently and safely.

41. The Committee recommends that the State party, through close consultation and the active participation of persons with disabilities and their organizations, develop specialized mobility training for children and adults with disabilities and provide the necessary assistive technology, tools and aids to enable persons with disabilities to exercise their right to mobility safely and independently.

Kazakhstan (2024)

43. The Committee is concerned about:

- (a) The lack of national strategy and action plan to promote personal mobility for persons with disabilities and differentiate it from medical rehabilitation and medical aids provision;
- (b) The lack of specialized training for persons with disabilities in particular persons with visual impairment on the orientation skills;
- (c) The lack of training on using the provided technical assistive devices for persons with disabilities to promote their personal mobility and the lack of maintenance services.

44. The Committee recommends that the State party:

- (a) Develop in close consultation with and with the active involvement of persons with disabilities and their representative organizations, a national strategy and action plan on personal mobility, including the provision of training and assistive devices;
- (b) Develop affordable and accessible services to repair and improve the function of the mobility assistive devices for persons with disabilities.

Nicaragua (2024)

40. Al Comité le preocupa:

- a) La falta de información sobre medidas específicas para mejorar la movilidad de las personas con discapacidad, y que estas se enfocan casi exclusivamente hacia personas con discapacidad física;
- b) Que el Programa “Todos con Voz” tenga un enfoque médico contrario a la Convención y no cuente con medidas que faciliten el acceso a tecnologías de alta calidad y fácil uso para las personas con discapacidad y que tampoco cuente con cobertura nacional ni recursos humanos capacitados para atender a todas las personas con discapacidad en el Estado parte.

41. El Comité recomienda al Estado parte que en coordinación y estrecha consulta con las personas con discapacidad y las organizaciones que las representan:

- a) Implemente medidas para mejorar la movilidad de personas con discapacidad y estas se extiendan a todos los tipos de discapacidad, incluidas las personas con discapacidad intelectual y/o psicosocial;
- b) Reoriente el Programa “Todos con Voz” al modelo de derechos humanos que establece la Convención e implemente medidas que garanticen la disponibilidad de tecnologías de alta calidad, el acceso y la asequibilidad de los dispositivos de fácil uso, incluida la capacitación y formación del personal, así como el incremento de presupuesto para ampliar la cobertura del programa a todo el territorio nacional.

Sweden (2024)

45. The Committee is concerned about the lack of ‘accompanying person service’ to support personal mobility, including for persons in special accommodation for older persons and in group homes and for persons who are blind.

46. The Committee recommends that the State party enhance measures to support personal mobility, including a national program for the provision of ‘accompanying person service’ to support personal mobility, in particular for persons in special accommodation for older persons and in group homes and for persons who are blind.

39. The Committee is concerned:

- (a) At the lack of adequate funding of the Zambia Agency for Persons with Disabilities, which impedes it to fulfil its mandate to supply the needed mobility aids and other assistive devices for persons with disabilities, particularly in rural areas;
- (b) That there is a limited number of professionals and teachers able to train persons with disabilities in the use of available devices and equipment;
- (c) That only vehicles which are already adapted from the source and which can be personally driven by the importing individuals are exempted from taxes and additional duties, limiting this benefit to only those who can drive themselves.

40. The Committee recommends that the State party:

- (a) Take necessary measures, in cooperation with relevant national and international actors, to facilitate access for all persons with disabilities to quality mobility aids, devices and assistive technologies at an affordable cost, particularly in rural areas, and provide Zambia Agency for Persons with Disabilities with sufficient financial resources to enable it to fulfil its mandate;
- (b) Train and deploy adequate numbers of orientation and mobility instructors for persons with disabilities;
- (c) Ensure affordability of vehicles and assistive devices, including by applying incentive measures and tax and custom exemptions for the purchase of assistive equipment and devices for persons with disabilities, and provide fiscal and capacity support for local enterprises with the interest and ability to manufacture aids for the local market at affordable prices, and review taxation laws to allow tax exemption for vehicles for use by persons with all categories of disabilities irrespective of whether or not they can personally drive themselves.

Andorra (2023)

41. The Committee notes a range of mobility options available to persons with disabilities, such as a card for free access to public transportation, a parking card to allow persons with reduced mobility to park in reserved spaces, and financial assistance for adapting vehicles of persons with disabilities. Nevertheless, it is concerned about:

- (a) The limited information on the resources invested to improve accessibility in all communes (comuns) according to the Accessibility Catalogue;
- (b) The insufficient access to quality mobility aids and assistive devices and technologies, and forms of life assistance for persons with disabilities.

42. The Committee recommends that the State party:

- (a) Strengthen the accountability of the resources used to improve accessibility in all communes (comuns) according to the Accessibility Catalogue;
- (b) Enhance efforts to ensure that mobility aids and assistive devices and technologies are affordable for all persons with disabilities, including by promoting local repairs, providing government and tax subsidies, and waiving taxes and customs charges.

Austria (2023)

47. The Committee is concerned that:

- (a) State party subsidies for the adaptation of vehicles, including cars of persons with disabilities, are granted solely to employed people, jobseekers, apprentices, and pensioners, that there is no legal right to such subsidies, and that there is insufficient data on them;
- (b) The shortage of training personnel for assistive devices, including mobility devices, and the high cost of assistive devices and equipment restrict access of persons with disabilities to the appropriate assistive devices, modification services and quality mobility aids.

48. The Committee recommends that the State party:

- (a) Guarantee a legal right to mobility subsidies and extend it to persons with disabilities outside of the employment context;
- (b) Ensure the availability of sufficient qualified training personnel for mobility issues and the affordability of appropriate assistive devices, modification services and mobility aids, including assistive technology, for all persons with disabilities.

Germany (2023)

45. The Committee is concerned about the lack of comprehensive and consistent mechanisms across all Länder to ensure that persons with disabilities are provided with affordable, quality mobility aids, devices, assistive technologies and other forms of assistance based on individual requirements.

46. The Committee recommends that the State party establish comprehensive and consistent mechanisms across all Länder to facilitate the provision of affordable, quality mobility aids, devices, assistive technologies and other forms of assistance based on the individual requirements of persons with disabilities.

41. The Committee observes with concern the absence of mechanisms for ensuring access by persons with disabilities, including children, to quality mobility aids, devices, assistive technologies and forms of live assistance and intermediaries. It also notes the absence of training in mobility skills to persons with disabilities and to specialist staff working with persons with disabilities.

42. The Committee recommends that the State party:

- (a) Adopt measures, including through public procurement, to ensure that persons with disabilities have access to necessary personal mobility aids, devices and other assistive technologies and forms of live assistance and intermediaries that are affordable, of acceptable quality, based on universal design and responsive to individualized requirements and that enhance the autonomy of persons with disabilities;

(b) Adopt programmes to promote research, developing, design and production of mobility aids, devices and other assistive technologies to consider all aspects of mobility for persons with disabilities;

(c) Provide training to persons with disabilities, including children, and to specialist staff, on mobility skill and raise awareness among persons with disabilities and their representative organizations of legal measures and services enabling access to mobility aids and the provision of mobility aids, assistive devices and other assistive technologies and forms of assistance.

41. The Committee remains concerned at the lack of progress concerning measures taken to ensure personal mobility of persons with disabilities, including the lack of access to quality and affordable mobility devices and technologies, in particular in rural and remote areas.

42. The Committee reiterates its previous recommendation (CRPD/C/MNG/1, para.33) and recommends that the State party review the List of assistive devices (Ordinance No. 363/2021) and develop a regulation on quality assistive devices, technologies and services, and adopt other appropriate measures, with the support of national and international cooperation, to facilitate the access to necessary and quality mobility aids, devices and assistive technologies, especially in rural and remote areas, free of charge or at an affordable cost.

37. Al Comité le preocupa que no existe una estrategia nacional para el suministro de tecnología de asistencia, además los costos de acceso a los dispositivos y tecnologías de asistencia de calidad sean inasequibles y recaigan principalmente en las propias personas con discapacidad y sus familias, lo que dificulta la provisión de todos los aspectos de la movilidad personal en igualdad de condiciones que los demás.

38. El Comité recomienda al Estado parte que elabore una estrategia para garantizar la disponibilidad, el acceso y la asequibilidad de los dispositivos y tecnologías de asistencia de calidad en todo el país, incluso proporcionando ayuda financiera para cubrir los costos de los dispositivos y tecnologías de asistencia, ya sea total o parcialmente.

33. The Committee notes that the Angolan Executive supports the mobility of persons with disabilities through the provision of Assistive Aid Grants, however, it is concerned that only those who are registered can benefit from the grants, that many of the assistive devices are not locally made yet and therefore depend on importation by private suppliers with high prices, as well as that are reported delays in the delivery of the assistive devices due to long process to approve applications. The Committee also notes that the Angolan Executive intend to build a facility to produce assistive devices to lower the cost of those technologies however, it is concerned that persons with disabilities are not aware of this.

34. The Committee recommends that the State party:

(a) Take available measures to ensure access to quality mobility aids, devices and assistive technologies for all persons with disabilities irrespective of their registration status, in particular those who are unemployed or are low-income earners;

(b) Ensure appropriate budget allocations for assistive aid grants to meet the costs and demand for assistive devices and to ease the burden on the part of the individuals who need them;

(c) Consider the introduction of measures to reduce the costs of acquiring assistive equipment and devices, such as tax or customs exemptions for the purchases, and fiscal and capacity support for local enterprises with the interest and ability to manufacture aids for local markets;

(d) Ensure that persons with disabilities through their representative organisations are meaningfully consulted in the construction of facilities to produce assistive devices for their benefit.

39. Al Comité le preocupa lo siguiente:

- a) Las empresas prestadoras no cumplen con el Decreto 38/04, reglamentario de la Ley 22.431, que dispone la gratuidad del transporte a larga distancia para las personas con discapacidad, y en su lugar, se alinean con el Decreto 118/06 que establece un cupo de asientos para las personas con discapacidad en este tipo de transporte;
- b) La falta de inclusión de las personas con discapacidad en el Sistema de Boleto Único Electrónico del Área Metropolitana de Buenos Aires;
- c) El poco acceso a ayudas para la movilidad, ayudas técnicas y tecnologías de apoyo de calidad, y a las formas de asistencia humana o animal e intermediarios, especialmente fuera de las grandes ciudades;
- d) La falta de participación de las personas con discapacidad en el Comité de Asesoramiento y Contralor de la Ley 24.314 sobre accesibilidad de personas con movilidad reducida.

40. El Comité recomienda al Estado parte:

- a) Derogar el Decreto 118/06 que, al establecer un cupo de asientos para las personas con discapacidad en el transporte de larga distancia, limita la posibilidad de obtener pasajes gratuitos, y asegurar que los prestadores de servicio cumplan con el Decreto 38/04;
- b) Incluir a las personas con discapacidad en el Sistema Único de Boleto Electrónico del Área Metropolitana de Buenos Aires y promover la aplicación de medidas similares en otras provincias;
- c) Asegurar que las ayudas para la movilidad, las ayudas técnicas y las tecnologías de apoyo estén al alcance de las personas con discapacidad en todas las jurisdicciones, entre otras cosas mediante el fomento de la reparación local, la concesión de ventajas fiscales y subvenciones públicas, y la exoneración de impuestos y de tasas aduaneras;
- d) Garantizar la participación de personas con discapacidad en el Comité de Asesoramiento y Contralor de la Ley 24.314.

Georgia (2023)

41. The Committee is concerned about the lack of available and affordable assistive devices and related support services for all persons with disabilities. Particularly, it observes the limited coverage of the wheelchair voucher scheme under the sub-program on the "provision of supporting equipment", which is restricted to one type of bus transport organization and accessible to only one type of wheelchair. It is also concerned that personal mobility in public transport is not ensured for persons with visual or hearing impairments.

42. The Committee recommends that the State party:

- (a) Strengthen its measures to ensure that private entities providing transport services introduce a range of measures to facilitate personal mobility, such as guide dogs, mobility aids, devices, and live assistance;
- (b) Develop public policies at the national and municipal level to ensure the availability, equal distribution and affordability of assistive devices for all persons with disabilities and support the development of mobility skills by children with disabilities.

Peru (2023)

40. Al Comité le preocupa que a pesar de la obligación de proporcionar tecnologías de asistencia, particularmente para la movilidad personal, que establece el artículo 33 de la Ley General de la Persona con Discapacidad, no existe una estrategia nacional para el suministro de dicha tecnología, tras identificarse la necesidad y haberse certificado la discapacidad, incluso a las personas suscritas al sistema contributivo o al SIS, por lo tanto las personas con discapacidad a menudo dependen de donaciones de las autoridades locales, del CONADIS, o tienen que comprar sus propios dispositivos de apoyo, lo que dificulta la provisión de todos los aspectos de la movilidad personal en igualdad de condiciones con los demás.

41. El Comité recomienda al Estado parte que elabore e implemente una estrategia coordinada entre el Ministerio de Salud, el Seguro Integral de Salud del Ministerio de Salud y el CONADIS para garantizar la disponibilidad, el acceso y la asequibilidad de los dispositivos y tecnologías de asistencia, incluyendo de movilidad personal, en todo el país, incluso proporcionando ayuda financiera para cubrir los costes de los dispositivos y tecnologías de asistencia, ya sea total o parcialmente.

41. The Committee is concerned that vehicles meant for use by persons with disabilities need to be modified before their importation to the country, which results in high costs and additional taxes and duties, and complex bureaucratic procedures to request exemption of these vehicles and other assistive devices from importation taxes and duties, even when all the conditions have been fulfilled.

42. The Committee recommends that the State party:

(a) Ensure access to quality mobile aids, devices and assistive technologies for all persons with disabilities and simplify procedures to obtain vehicles and other assistive device to ease the burden on the individuals who need them;

(b) Ensure affordability of vehicles and assistive devices, including by applying incentive measures and tax and custom exemptions for the purchase of assistive equipment and devices for persons with disabilities, and provide fiscal and capacity support for local enterprises with the interest and ability to manufacture aids for the local market at affordable prices.

Tunisia (2023)

35. The Committee is concerned by the article 47 of decree n°2022-79 related to the finance law for the year 2023, which may negatively affect persons with disability in need of motor vehicles specially adapted for their personal mobility, in contradiction with the Convention. It is further concerned about the alleged lack of facilities to ensure accessible transport for blind and visually impaired persons.

36. The Committee recommends that the State party:

(a) Review article 47 of the decree n°2022-79 related to the finance law for the year 2023 to ensure that all persons with disabilities, irrespective of their categories of disabilities, have a right to be exempted from paying any fees and taxes on vehicles or medical and assistive devices and equipment;

(b) Review article 47 of the decree n°2022-79 related to the finance law for the year 2023 to ensure that all persons with disabilities, irrespective of their types of disabilities, have the right to be exempted from paying any fees and taxes on vehicles or medical and assistive devices and equipment;

(c) Provide all necessary mobility assistive devices including prosthetic for persons with disabilities and include them in the system of materials supported by the State party;

(d) Take measures to make public transportation accessible to persons with disabilities, especially to persons with physical disabilities as well as the visually impaired persons.

Bangladesh (2022)

41. The Committee is concerned about the barriers often experienced by persons with disabilities, especially women and children with disabilities, in obtaining, using and maintaining mobility aids, assistive devices and assistive technologies and services, including accessible transportation and infrastructure, necessary for their personal mobility, particularly in rural areas.

42. The Committee recommends that the State party eliminate all barriers in the way of persons with disabilities acquiring affordable and quality mobility aids and assistive devices, assistive technologies and services, including accessible transportation and infrastructure, to aid their personal mobility, and provide necessary information and training on their usage and maintenance. It further recommends that the State party create an enabling environment whereby persons with disabilities can procure these devices through reduced customs tariffs from overseas and, in consultation with representative organisations of persons with disabilities, continue developing the means to manufacture and repair such devices at affordable cost.

46. The Committee notes the lack of access to quality mobility aids and assistive devices and technologies that are available at an affordable cost, and the lack of locally made aids and devices which leads to importation with high prices and the imposition by the State Party of additional taxes.

47. The Committee recommends that the State party ensure affordability of assistive devices, including by adopting tax and customs exemptions for the purchase of mobility aids and assistive devices and technologies, and provide financial and capacity support for local enterprises to manufacture aids for the local market.

Japan (2022)

43. The Committee is concerned that:

- (a) Legal restrictions do not allow using community living support services for purposes such as commuting to and from work or school, or for an extended period;
- (b) Insufficient access to quality mobility aids, devices, assistive technologies and forms of life assistance and intermediaries for persons with disabilities, in particular, in regions outside of major cities.

44. The Committee recommends that the State party:

- (a) Eliminate the restrictions under the Act on the Comprehensive Support for the Daily and Social Life of Persons with Disabilities to ensure unrestricted personal mobility of persons with disabilities in all regions;
- (b) Reinforce efforts to ensure that necessary mobility aids and assistive devices and technologies are affordable for all persons with disabilities, including by promoting local repairs, providing government and tax subsidies, and waiving taxes and custom charges.

Lao People's Democratic Republic (2022)

36. The Committee is concerned about:

- (a) Barriers faced by persons with disabilities in acquiring and maintaining the mobility aids and assistive devices, technologies and services necessary for their personal mobility, particularly in rural and remote areas;
- (b) The "good health" certificate as a requirement for driver license applications, which exclude persons with disabilities;
- (c) Limited trained personnel to impart mobility skills to persons with disabilities;
- (d) Insufficient financial support for the Centre of Medical Rehabilitation, the Orthopaedic and Rehabilitation Factory 686, and the provincial rehabilitation centres to producing and providing assistive devices.

37. The Committee recommends that the State party:

- (a) Ensure that persons with disabilities can acquire quality and affordable or free of charge mobility aids and assistive devices, technologies and services necessary for their personal mobility, as well as appropriate information on how to use and maintain them;
- (b) Remove discriminatory requirements in driving license applications that exclude persons with disabilities;

- (c) Guarantee training for orientation and mobility practitioners and teachers in the use of mobility aids and assistive devices and technologies for persons with physical disabilities and persons who are blind or partially sighted;
- (d) Increase budget allocations for the Centre of Medical Rehabilitation, the Orthopaedic and Rehabilitation Factory 686, and the provincial rehabilitation centres to meet the demand for the assistive devices.

New Zealand (2022)

41. The Committee is concerned that as a result of funding caps and the high cost of assistive devices and equipment, persons with disabilities are unable to afford the appropriate assistive devices, modification services and mobility aids.

42. The Committee recommends that the State party take measures to ensure the affordability of necessary assistive devices, modification services and mobility aids, including assistive technology for persons with disabilities.

42. The Committee is concerned about the lack of access to quality mobility aids, devices, assistive technologies and forms of life assistance and intermediaries for persons with disabilities, resulting from their compulsory linkage with health insurance, including the lack of involvement of organizations of persons with disabilities in the licensing of measures aimed at facilitating personal mobility.

43. The Committee recommends that the State party, in close cooperation with organizations of persons with disabilities, revise the mobility aids system for persons with disabilities, including its mechanism for quality assurance, and facilitate the provision of quality mobility aids, devices and assistive technologies for all persons with disabilities, based on their individual needs, with the aim of promoting their autonomy and independent life.

Jamaica (2022)

36. The Committee notes that the Jamaica Council for Persons with Disabilities supports the mobility of persons with disabilities through the provision of Assistive Aid Grants, however it is concerned that the financial support only covers from 25 to 50 per cent of the total cost of some assistive devices, that only persons with disabilities who are registered with the Jamaica Council for Persons with Disabilities can benefit from the grants, that many of the assistive devices are not locally made and therefore depend on importation by private suppliers with high prices, and that are reported delays in the delivery of the assistive devices due to a long process for approving applications.

37. The Committee recommends that the State party:

- (a) Ensure access to quality mobility aids, devices and assistive technologies for all persons with disabilities irrespective of their registration status, in particular those who are unemployed or are low-income earners;
- (b) Increase budget allocations for the Assistive Aid Grants to meet the increased costs and demand for the assistive devices and to ease the burden on the individuals who need them;
- (c) Ensure affordability of assistive devices, including by introducing incentive measures and tax and customs exemptions for the purchase of assistive equipment and devices for persons with disabilities, and provide fiscal and capacity support for local enterprises with the interest and ability to manufacture aids for the local market.

Djibouti (2021)

35. The Committee is concerned about the limited access to mobility aids and assistive devices for persons with disabilities, especially in rural areas, and the limited availability of practitioners and teachers to train persons with disabilities on the use of available assistive aids and devices.

36. The Committee recommends that the State party adopt appropriate measures, with the support of national and international cooperation, to facilitate the access to necessary and quality mobility aids, devices and assistive technologies, especially in rural areas, at an affordable cost for all persons with disabilities.

France (2021)

42. The Committee is concerned about the lack of progress concerning measures to ensure personal mobility of persons with disabilities, including the lack of access to quality and affordable mobility devices.

43. The Committee recommends that the State party adopt measures, including regulations and programmes in metropolitan and in overseas territorial collectivities to ensure accessibility of persons with disabilities to:

- (a) Transport and public places for persons with disabilities with a guide dog;
- (b) Free parking for holders of mobility inclusion cards;
- (c) Quality mobility aids, devices, assistive technologies and forms of live assistance and intermediaries, including by making them free or available at affordable cost.

Estonia (2021)

40. The Committee is concerned about the lack of access for persons with disabilities and the lack of consideration of the individual needs of persons with disabilities for quality mobility aids, devices and assistive technologies due to bureaucratic barriers, particularly for children with disabilities.

41. The Committee recommends that the State party ensure access to quality mobility aids, devices and assistive technologies for all persons with disabilities by eliminating administrative barriers and addressing individual requirements, including age-related requirements.

Albania (2019)

35. The Committee is concerned about the lack of a transparent system for providing assistive devices and aids, and training on their use, without discrimination. The Committee also notes the absence of sufficient funding to support personal mobility and to guarantee universal access to appropriate assistive devices and aids. It is also concerned that there is no comprehensive strategy, action plans or strategies to strengthen individual safety of persons with disabilities in public transport.

36. The Committee recommends that the State party:

- (a) Legislate and take any other appropriate measures to ensure the creation of a fund to support personal mobility and to guarantee universal access to appropriate assistive devices as well as to appropriate training in how to use them;
- (b) Improve access to mobility aids, devices and other assistive technologies;
- (c) Adopt a strategy on public transport standards and services taking into account the requirements of persons with disabilities in rural and urban areas.

Australia (2019)

39. The Committee is concerned about the lack of locally available solutions to address, enhance and promote the use of mobility aids and equipment among persons with disabilities, especially within Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander communities and in remote areas.

40. The Committee recommends that the State party, in partnership with Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander persons with disabilities, through their representative organizations and in their communities, develop locally relevant solutions to address the underlying structural obstacles that can preclude the use of aids and equipment within Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander communities and in remote areas.

El Salvador (2019)

40. The Committee notes that there is no comprehensive mobility plan that includes technical aids, subsidies for the repair and maintenance of such aids and ergonomics for the individual manufacture of wheelchairs, particularly for persons who do not benefit from any social security programme or scheme.

41. The Committee recommends that the State party establish a comprehensive mobility plan, for both urban and rural areas, which takes into account the individual technical assistance requirements of persons with disabilities, including those who do not benefit from any social security programme or scheme.

30. The Committee is concerned about the lack of a transparent system for granting transport benefits and ensuring the mobility of persons with disabilities without any discrimination. It is particularly concerned about the limited and impeded access to parking space and reported instances of denial of exemption from fees and taxes for vehicles of persons with disabilities owing, inter alia, to the requirement for certification of lifelong disability under the current secondary legislation.

31. The Committee recommends that the State party take effective measures to improve the system of personal mobility support, ensuring its transparency and the equal access of all persons with disabilities to benefits and means facilitating their personal mobility. It also recommends that the State party provide specific training in mobility skills for persons with disabilities and specialized staff working with them.

42. The Committee is concerned about the lack of available and affordable assistive devices and related support services for all persons with disabilities, particularly in rural and remote areas, and the lack of involvement of persons with disabilities to act as experts on assistive devices and technology and to encourage the development of local manufacture.

43. The Committee recommends that the State party adopt measures to ensure the availability, equal distribution and affordability of assistive devices. It also recommends that the State party develop training on quality standards and promote the inclusion of local or indigenous manufacturers for the production, maintenance and distribution of assistive devices and appliances, ensuring the involvement of organizations of persons with disabilities at the local level and in rural areas.

37. The Committee is concerned about the difficulties that persons with disabilities face in accessing affordable and high-quality mobility-related technical aids, appliances, equipment and medical devices.

38. The Committee recommends that the State party introduce the necessary measures to enable persons with disabilities to access high-quality personal mobility equipment and aids that are affordable or free of charge.

Kuwait (2019)

40. The Committee is concerned about:

- (a) The absence of a national policy on mobility for persons with disabilities that provides for audible signal indicators at street crossings, especially for blind persons;
- (b) The lack of personnel trained in imparting mobility skills to persons who are blind or otherwise visually impaired.

41. The Committee recommends that the State party:

- (a) Adopt a national policy with adequate measures, in close consultation with and with the active involvement of representative organizations of persons with disabilities, to address the mobility needs of persons with disabilities, including the acquisition of mobility devices;
- (b) Train the necessary personnel to impart mobility skills to persons who are blind or visually impaired.

39. The Committee is concerned about the challenges faced by persons with disabilities in acquiring and maintaining mobility aids and assistive devices, technologies and services necessary for their personal mobility.

40. The Committee recommends that the State party ensure that persons with disabilities can acquire quality and affordable or free of charge mobility aids and assistive devices, technologies and services necessary for their personal mobility, as well as appropriate information and training on how to use and maintain them. The Committee further recommends that the State party ensure that the technology and services necessary for the repair of mobility aids and assistive devices are available locally and at an affordable cost.

33. The Committee is concerned about the absence of a policy on mobility for persons with disabilities; and the lack of trained personnel to impart mobility skills to persons who are blind or visually impaired.

34. The Committee recommends that the State party develop a policy on mobility in consultation with representative organizations of persons with disabilities that addresses the mobility requirements of persons with disabilities, including the acquisition of mobility devices at affordable cost; and train necessary personnel to impart mobility skills to persons who are blind or visually impaired.

37. The Committee is concerned about the insufficient access to affordable mobility aids and assistive devices for persons with disabilities, particularly in rural areas. It is also concerned about the limited availability at the local level of the necessary technology to produce appropriate assistive devices.

Saudi Arabia (2019)

37. The Committee is concerned at:

- (a) Challenges faced by persons with disabilities in acquiring necessary mobility aids and assistive devices, including due to the complex nature of the administrative procedures regarding the special tax and customs exemptions for the purchase of adapted motor vehicles;
- (b) The lack of involvement of organizations led, directed and governed by persons with disabilities in the development and allocation of mobility aids, devices, assistive technologies and forms of live assistance and intermediaries.

38. The Committee recommends that the State party

(a) Take all appropriate measures to ensure the affordability of necessary mobility aids and devices as well as assistive technologies, live assistance and intermediaries, and means of transportation for persons with disabilities, through government subsidies and simplification of administrative procedure;

(b) Ensure the participation of organizations led, directed and governed by persons with disabilities in the development and allocation of mobility aids, devices, assistive technologies, forms of live assistance and intermediaries.

Senegal (2019)

35. The Committee is concerned about the challenges faced by persons with disabilities in acquiring necessary mobility aids and assistive devices, including assistive technologies, and the lack of orientation and mobility practitioners and teachers to train persons with physical disabilities and persons who are blind or visually impaired, particularly in remote and rural areas, on the use of their assistive aids and devices.

36. The Committee recommends that the State party:

(a) Take all necessary steps in partnerships with local, national and international partners to ensure the affordability of necessary mobility aids, assistive devices and technologies for persons with disabilities, including promoting local promotion, the provision of government and tax subsidies, as well as waiving taxes and custom charges;

(b) Provide training for orientation and mobility practitioners and teachers in the use of mobility aids and assistive devices and technologies for persons with physical disabilities and persons who are blind or visually impaired, particularly in remote and rural areas.

Vanuatu (2019)

34. The Committee is concerned about the limited access to personal assistive devices for persons with disabilities, especially in rural areas. It is also concerned at the insufficient financial support for the provisions of assistive devices by the State party.

35. The Committee recommends that the State party:

(a) Adopt measures in the framework of the Community-based rehabilitation Action Plan (2014-2024) to facilitate access to mobility aids, assistive devices and technologies, especially in rural areas, at an affordable cost for all persons with disabilities;

(b) Include persons with disabilities through their representative organizations in the development of provisions on assistive devices and continue strengthening partnerships with their organizations and provincial governments;

(c) Introduce tax and customs exemptions for the purchase of assistive equipment and devices for persons with disabilities.

Algeria (2018)

34. The Committee is concerned about the difficulties that persons with disabilities face to access free personal mobility equipment or to purchase it as well as the insufficient clarity in the eligibility criteria for persons with disabilities to benefit from personal mobility aids.

35. The Committee recommends that the State party introduce the necessary measures to facilitate the access of persons with disabilities to personal mobility equipment and aids that are affordable or free of charge.

Bulgaria (2018)

41. The Committee notes with concern that persons with disabilities still face challenges in accessing mobility related, affordable technical aids, appliances, equipment and medical devices they require.

42. The Committee recommends that the State party intensify its efforts to enhance personal mobility and enable persons with disabilities to access mobility related technical aids, appliances, equipment and medical devices that are affordable and/or free, including by increasing resources for it.

Philippines (2018)

36. The Committee is concerned about the absence of a non-discriminatory and systematic framework with adequate public budgets dedicated to the acquisition of mobility aids and assistive technologies, which are crucial in ensuring the unrestricted personal mobility of persons with disabilities.

37. The Committee recommends that the State party adopt a policy framework including fixed and sufficient human, technical and financial resources to ensure that persons with disabilities acquire quality and affordable mobility aids and assistive devices, technologies and services necessary for their personal mobility. It also recommends that the State party establishes targets to provide universal access to appropriate orthopedic, technological and other assistive devices as well as appropriate information and training on how to use them.

Poland (2018)

34. The Committee is concerned about:

- (a) Barriers that persons with disabilities face when applying for driving license because of lack of accommodation, including sign language interpretation, at the examination;
- (b) The lack of support for persons with disabilities for purchasing adapted vehicles and means of transportation;
- (c) Undue restrictions imposed on blind persons using a guide dog in accessing public buildings, transport and services for persons with disabilities;

35. The Committee recommends that the State Party ensure:

- (a) Full availability of accommodation measures for persons with disabilities at driving examination centers;
- (b) Relevant support for persons with disabilities for purchasing adapted vehicles and means of transportation, or for adding adaptive equipment to a vehicle;
- (c) Access to buildings, transport and services opened to the public for blind persons using a guide dog.

South Africa (2018)

36. The Committee notes with concern:

- (a) The significant and increasing challenges faced by persons with disabilities, particularly those with mobility impairments, blind and visually impaired persons, in accessing quality and affordable mobility and assistive technologies, live assistance and intermediaries, especially in remote and rural areas;
- (b) The lack of orientation and mobility practitioners as well as teachers to train persons with motor impairment, blind and visually impaired persons, particularly in remote and rural areas, on the use of their assistive technologies that will enhance their dignity and respect in society.

37. The Committee recommends that the State party:

- (a) Adopt measures to facilitate the acquisition of necessary mobility and assistive technologies, live assistance and intermediaries, particularly for persons with motor impairments, blind and visually impaired persons, especially in remote and rural areas;
- (b) Adopt an effective national strategy for the training and retraining of orientation and mobility practitioners and teachers in the use of devices for motor impaired, blind and visually impaired persons, particularly in remote and rural areas.

North Macedonia (2018)

36. The Committee notes the efforts taken by the State party to promote access to assistive devices for persons with disabilities. However it is concerned about cost of participation for orthopedic and other mobility aids which makes them unaffordable for persons with disabilities.

37. The Committee recommends that the State party adopt measures to ensure the provision of mobility and assistive devices, including assistance technologies, at affordable costs, for persons with disabilities.

Nepal (2018)

31. The Committee is concerned that a majority of public infrastructure, including, government offices, hospitals, schools, colleges, banks, roads, public buildings and public transportation are not easily accessible for persons with disabilities. The Committee is also concerned that streets are not paved to accommodate users of crutches and wheelchairs. The Committee is further concerned that the situation is even worse in cases where houses, schools and health facilities are located in mountainous and hilly regions where wheelchairs and other devices cannot be used.

32. The Committee urges the State party to adopt appropriate measures to ensure mobility of all persons with disabilities in order to facilitate their participation, inclusion in community in general and in particular, to engage in education and livelihood activities, including access to quality and affordable mobility aids and assistive devices, technologies and services necessary for their unrestricted personal mobility.

37. The Committee is concerned about:

- (a) The absence of a national policy on mobility for persons with disabilities that recognises the provision of audible signal indicators at street crossings for accessibility, especially for persons who are blind;
- (b) The non-inclusion of persons with disabilities in the Transportation and Communication Subcommittee under the National Committee for the Care and Rehabilitation of the Disabled;
- (c) The absence of trained personnel to impart mobility skills to persons who are blind and visually impaired.

38. The Committee recommends that the State party:

- (a) Adopt a national policy with adequate measures to address the mobility needs of persons with disabilities, including the acquisition of mobility devices;
- (b) Include persons with disabilities in the Transportation and Communication Subcommittee under the Care and Rehabilitation of the Disabled to give them an opportunity to contribute to the development of a national policy on mobility for persons with disabilities;
- (c) Train necessary personnel to impart mobility skills to persons who are blind and visually impaired.

Russian Federation (2018)

42. The Committee is concerned that there is no equal access to technical and other means and quality equipment for individualized process of rehabilitation for persons with disabilities living in different regions based on the Technical Means of Rehabilitation system.

43. The Committee urges the State party to revise the current legislation and practice in order to provide equal access to rehabilitation based on services and to quality products provided by the public and regional funds.

Seychelles (2018)

35. The Committee is concerned about the shortage of personal mobility equipment and qualified personnel. It is also concerned that the eligibility criteria for the provision of assistive devices for personal mobility and tax exemptions for such equipment may not be in line with the Convention, and that taxes on certain mobility equipment constitute a burden to persons with disabilities.

36. The Committee recommends that the State party take measures to increase the availability of personal mobility equipment and build the capacity of relevant personnel. It also recommends that the State party formulate clear policy guidelines, in line with the Convention, on eligibility for assistive devices and that it exempt persons with disabilities from taxes on the personal mobility aids and assistive devices, technologies and services they require

Slovenia (2018)

33. The Committee is concerned about the lack of sufficient quality mobility aids available for persons with disabilities and the insufficient support for the acquisition of quality mobility aids and assistive technologies.

34. The Committee recommends that the State party ensure the availability and support for the acquisition of quality mobility aids and assistive technologies, tailored to individual requirements.

Sudan (2018)

41. The Committee notes the efforts taken by the State party to promote access to assistive devices, but is concerned about the challenges faced by persons with disabilities in acquiring necessary mobility aids and assistive devices including assistance technologies, as their cost remain prohibitive.

42. The Committee recommends that the State party adopt measures to ensure the provision of mobility and assistive devices, including assistance technologies, at affordable costs, for persons with disabilities.

Latvia (2017)

32. The Committee is concerned about the lack of availability and support for the timely acquisition of quality mobility aids, devices and adaptations in accordance with the individual needs of persons with disabilities, particularly for women and children with disabilities.

33. The Committee recommends that the State party facilitate access to quality mobility aids, assistive equipment, devices and technologies for all persons with disabilities, including women and children with disabilities, in accordance with the needs of the individuals concerned.

Montenegro (2017)

38. The Committee is concerned that the distribution of mobility aids is not universal and notes that there are insufficient measures to ensure personal mobility.

39. The Committee recommends that the State party improve transparent access to assistive devices and technologies and ensure accessible and fair reimbursement schemes in order to prevent any additional costs and/or administrative burden for persons with disabilities.

Morocco (2017)

40. The Committee notes with concern the challenges faced by persons with disabilities in acquiring necessary mobility aids and assistive devices, including assistance technologies, and live assistance and intermediaries, as well as the complex nature of the administrative procedures regarding the special tax and customs exemptions granted for the purchase of adapted motor vehicles.

41. The Committee recommends that the State party adopt measures to facilitate the acquisition of necessary mobility aids and devices, including assistance technologies, and live assistance and intermediaries, and establish concrete measures to simplify the administrative procedures regarding the special tax and customs exemptions granted for the purchase of adapted motor vehicles.

Armenia (2017)

33. The Committee is concerned about the lack of availability of and support for mobility aids, devices and other assistive technologies and forms of live assistance and intermediaries and about the lack of an individualized approach to their acquisition.

34. The Committee recommends that the State party create a mechanism for facilitating access to quality mobility aids, assistive equipment, devices and technologies at an affordable cost for all persons with disabilities, taking into consideration their individual requirements.

36. The Committee is concerned that a transparent and non-discriminatory system for providing assistive devices and aids is lacking.

37. The Committee recommends that the State party improve transparent access to assistive devices and technologies. It recommends that the State party legislate and take any other appropriate measures to ensure a fund for a transparent system of services to support personal mobility, including universal access to appropriate orthopaedic, typhlotechnical and other assistive devices as well as to appropriate training in how to use them.

Jordan (2017)

39. The Committee notes the absence of a systematic framework and public budget dedicated to the acquisition of mobility aids and assistive technologies necessary for the unrestricted personal mobility of persons with disabilities.

40. The Committee recommends that the State party adopt a dedicated systematic framework and budget to ensure that persons with disabilities can acquire quality and affordable mobility aids and assistive devices, technologies and services necessary for their unrestricted personal mobility.

38. The Committee is concerned about the lack of availability and support for the acquisition of quality mobility aids, devices and adaptations, including driver's licences and vehicle equipment for persons with disabilities. It is also concerned that persons with visual impairments are excluded from programmes that offer assistive equipment.

39. The Committee recommends that the State party establish a mechanism for facilitating access to quality mobility aids, assistive equipment, devices and technologies at an affordable cost for all persons with disabilities, in consultation with organizations of persons with disabilities. It also recommends regular training and capacity-building for staff working on personal mobility.

41. The Committee is concerned that taking part in driving lessons and passing exams with the use of sign language is still limited and that medical assessments of persons who are deaf or hard of hearing for driving courses is not transparently standardised and applied. The Committee is further concerned that, despite the recent adoption of the Guide Dog Assistance Law (2015), there is a lack of trained guide dogs for blind or vision-impaired persons and insufficient availability of training centres for guide dogs.

42. The Committee urges the State party to adopt universally applied measures and harmonise the practice of courses for the deaf and hard of hearing persons using sign language, and to prevent them from being denied driving licences on the basis of their impairment. It further recommends the State party increase its efforts to improve access to trained guide dogs for blind or vision-impaired persons.

59. The Committee is concerned about the insufficient affordability of aids and adaptations and the difficulties encountered in the process of granting allowances to receive assistive devices, in particular for people with complex physical disabilities.

60. The Committee recommends that all aids, adaptations and assistive devices be available, affordable and of good quality for all persons with disabilities, in particular for people with complex physical disabilities.

40. The Committee is concerned about barriers hindering personal mobility of persons with disabilities.

41. The Committee recommends that the State party expedite the enactment of the draft rehabilitation and health-care policy on disability, in line with the Convention, and ensure all appropriate provisions and a public budget for mobility requirements of persons with disabilities.

European Union (2015)

52. The Committee is concerned about the varied practice of different National Enforcement Bodies in charge of implementing the rights of passengers with disabilities in different European Union Member States, which may lead to unequal treatment and restricts the enjoyment of rights of passengers with disabilities.

53. The Committee recommends that the European Union strengthen the monitoring of the implementation of passenger rights' legislation and to harmonise the work of the National Enforcement Bodies in order to ensure the effective and equal enjoyment of rights of all passengers with disabilities across the European Union, including the implementation of the European Mobility Card. It further recommends that the European Union harmonise its existing passenger rights' legislation to be in line with regulations concerning maritime passengers' rights.

46. The Committee is concerned about the lack of affordable assistive devices available to persons with disabilities.

47. The Committee recommends that the State party establish, for all persons with disabilities, the mandatory provision and maintenance of assistive devices which are affordable or free of charge according to those persons' means.

Mongolia (2015)

33. The Committee is concerned about the quality of subsidised mobility and assistive devices and the amount of subsidies which do not reflect today's market prices.

34. The Committee recommends that quality assistive devices and technologies, services (including for repair and manufacturing) are made available through increased subsidies, and to permit persons with disabilities to make their own choices in this regard.

El Salvador (2013)

43. The Committee is concerned that the distribution of mobility aids is not universal and notes that measures ensuring personal mobility are either insufficient or non-existent.

44. The Committee recommends that the State party ensure access to equipment and various other forms of mobility aids, technical aids, live assistance and support technologies for all persons with disabilities, including those living in rural areas and those who do not benefit from any specific social security or insurance.

Paraguay (2013)

51. The Committee is concerned at the lack of any comprehensive strategy for the provision of mobility equipment and aids for persons with disabilities, and including the development of low-cost universal-design appliances.

52. The Committee urges the State party to ensure that persons with disabilities have ready access to the high-quality equipment and aids they need in order to exercise their right to mobility and freedom of movement autonomously and independently. The Committee also urges the State party to encourage research and development into low-cost mobility appliances.

*Article 21 CRPD
(Freedom of expression and opinion, and access to information)*

September 2025

Article 21 - Freedom of expression and opinion, and access to information

States Parties shall take all appropriate measures to ensure that persons with disabilities can exercise the right to freedom of expression and opinion, including the freedom to seek, receive and impart information and ideas on an equal basis with others and through all forms of communication of their choice, as defined in article 2 of the present Convention, including by:

- a) Providing information intended for the general public to persons with disabilities in accessible formats and technologies appropriate to different kinds of disabilities in a timely manner and without additional cost;*
- b) Accepting and facilitating the use of sign languages, Braille, augmentative and alternative communication, and all other accessible means, modes and formats of communication of their choice by persons with disabilities in official interactions;*
- c) Urging private entities that provide services to the general public, including through the Internet, to provide information and services in accessible and usable formats for persons with disabilities;*
- d) Encouraging the mass media, including providers of information through the Internet, to make their services accessible to persons with disabilities;*
- e) Recognizing and promoting the use of sign languages.*

Democratic People's Republic of Korea (2025)

39. The Committee is concerned about:

- (a) The lack of laws and policies that promote and protect the freedom of expression and opinion of persons with disabilities, including persons with psychosocial and/or intellectual disabilities and disability activists;
- (b) Credible reports of general inaccessibility of information, including a lack of captioning and sign language on news and other television programmes and other mass media events, the unavailability of screen readers, the insufficiency of Braille documentation information, on charges and procedures for persons with hearing or visual impairments in detention, and of online services and digital platforms.

40. The Committee recalls its general comment No. 7 (2018) and recommends that the State party:

- (a) Recognize the role of civil society organizations, in particular organizations of persons with disabilities, as human rights defenders;
- (b) Prohibit any reprisals against individuals and organizations and take effective measures to protect the free exchange of ideas in the civic space.

41. The Committee recommends that the State party, in close consultation and with active involvement of persons with disabilities, through their representative organizations:

- (a) Revise its national in accordance with general comments No. 34 (2011) and No. 37 (2020) of the Human Rights Committee and adapt accordingly the jurisprudence of all administrative bodies and courts applying it;
- (b) Enact legislation and policies that guarantee the right to freedom of expression and opinion and access to information of persons with disabilities, particularly persons with psychosocial and/or intellectual disabilities and disability activists, including measures against surveillance, censorship, and acts of reprisals;
- (c) Take all necessary measures, including legislative and policy measures, to ensure the accessibility of all public information, including television and media services as well as ensuring that all government websites and digital platforms are accessible, for example by complying with accessibility standards, such as W3C/WAI/WCAG 2.2 or equivalent, for all persons with disabilities. Provide accessible information and communication formats, such as Braille, deafblind interpretation, sign language, Easy Read, plain language, audio description, captioning and subtitles, and allocate adequate funding for its development, promotion and use, ensuring access to information and communications technology appropriate for the diversity of persons with disabilities, including in places of detention and rural and remote areas.

40. The Committee is concerned at persistent barriers to access to information for persons with disabilities, particularly deaf persons, deaf-blind persons, persons with intellectual and/or psychosocial disabilities and Sámi persons with disabilities whose mother tongue is Finland Swedish, at the limited scope of public information service programming and at the low availability of Finland Swedish sign language interpreters.

41. The Committee recommends that the State party, in close consultation and active involvement of persons with disabilities, through their representative organizations ensure the implementation of the European Union Web Accessibility Directive (2016) and guarantee that official information and websites are accessible, including in audio description, Easy Read, and in Finnish and Finland Swedish sign language and that qualified sign language interpreters in Finnish and Finland Swedish are available, including in the Åland Islands, develop a plan for the implementation of recommendations from the Council for the Study of Sign Language and expand the programming of public information services.

Kiribati (2025)

39. The Committee is concerned about:

- (a) The lack of recognition in law of Kiri Sign Language as an official language, the limited training in the use of sign language and the limited sign language interpretation in all areas of life;
- (b) The absence of legal measures for person with disabilities to seek and receive information in accessible formats, as well as about the gaps in providing information to and supporting the communication of persons with disabilities, particularly persons who are deaf, deafblind, blind and persons with intellectual disabilities;
- (c) The barriers faced by persons with disabilities in gaining access to public information and communication, including information through television programs, websites and other media services and digital means.

40. The Committee recommends that the State party, in close consultation and active involvement of persons with disabilities, through their representative organizations:

- (a) Legally recognize Kiri Sign Language as an official language, promote access to and the use of sign language in all areas of life, and ensure the training and availability of qualified sign language interpreters;
- (b) Adopt legal measures to guarantee the right of persons with disabilities to seek, receive and impart information on an equal basis with others, ensuring sufficient budget for the provision of information in accessible formats, including accessible digital formats and in Braille, Easy Read, audio, captioning, and augmentative and alternative communication;
- (c) Ensure accessibility of all public information and communication platforms, including television programmes, websites, and other media services, by adopting accessibility legislation with reference to accessibility standards, mandating captioning and sign language interpretation in broadcasting, and ensuring compliance through monitoring mechanisms.

Maldives (2025)

41. The Committee is concerned:

- (a) That despite the fact that articles 27 and 29 of the Maldivian Constitution guarantee the right to freedom of speech and expression, as well as freedom of thought, conscience, and access to information for all individuals, persons with disabilities, particularly persons who are deaf, blind, deafblind, and persons with intellectual disabilities, face significant barriers in accessing public information and communication, including information through television programmes, websites, and other media services, such as eFaas, the national digital identity portal;
- (b) The lack of a comprehensive regulatory framework to guarantee the right of persons with disabilities to seek, receive, and impart information in accessible formats, as well as limited awareness among public officials of the State party's obligations under article 21 of the Convention;
- (c) About the lack sign language specialists to train persons with disabilities throughout the State party in the use of sign language.

42. The Committee recommends that the State party:

- (a) Adopt a comprehensive, time-bound national strategy with measurable targets to effectively enforce constitutional provisions to ensure that all public information—including information disseminated via websites, broadcast media, print, and digital platforms such as eFaas is accessible to persons with disabilities, and establish a mechanism, in close consultation and active involvement of persons with disabilities, through their representative organizations, to monitor its implementation;
- (b) Develop and implement legislative and policy measures to guarantee the right of persons with disabilities to access to public information and communication in accessible formats, such as Braille, deafblind interpretation, sign language, Easy Read, plain language, audio description, captioning and subtitles, and raise awareness among public officials about the State party's obligations under article 21 of the Convention;

(c) Develop a sign language development strategy and a pool of qualified sign language interpreters to teach sign language, including on the outer islands.

Canada (2025)

41. The Committee notes that some progress has been made by recognizing American Sign Language, Quebec Sign Language, and Indigenous sign languages as the primary languages for communication by deaf persons in the Accessible Canada Act. However, it is concerned about:

- (a) sign language not being recognized as an official language (American Sign Language, Quebec Sign Language, and Indigenous sign languages);
- (b) Persistent communication barriers and disparities in access to information and technology for persons with disabilities across jurisdictions, the limited nationwide reach of the Video Relay Service and the insufficient compliance with the policy on Communications policy and Federal Identity;
- (c) The lack of comprehensive measures to ensure that all information is available in modes and formats accessible for blind persons, deafblind persons, persons with vision impairment and persons with intellectual and/or psychosocial disabilities, and the insufficient implementation of closed captioning by Canadian English and French language broadcasters;
- (d) The shortage of sign language interpreters, particularly in First Nations, Inuit, and Métis territories, as well as disparities in training and accreditation programmes throughout provinces and territories.

42. The Committee recommends that the State party, in close consultation and active involvement of persons with disabilities including Indigenous persons with disabilities through their representative organisations:

- (a) Recognize sign language as an official language, including American Sign Language, Quebec Sign Language, and Indigenous sign languages;
- (b) Exercise federal leadership to ensure equal access to information for persons with disabilities throughout its territory and in First Nations, Inuit and Métis territories, nationwide access to Video Relay Service for all persons who are deaf and the implementation of the Communications and Federal Identity policy;
- (c) Implement laws and policies to ensure the accessibility of information, communications, including digital technology and public services for the diversity of persons with disabilities in all provinces and territories, including in formats such as Braille, deafblind interpretation, Easy Read, plain language, audio description, captioning and subtitles, and ensure that all programmes aired by English and French broadcasters are closed captioned for persons who are deaf and hard-of-hearing;
- (d) Allocate sufficient funding and resources to develop a pool of qualified sign language interpreters, including in Indigenous sign languages.

Dominican Republic (2025)

39. The Committee is concerned about:

- (a) The shortage of certified National Sign Language interpreters and the delays in implementing a sign language training strategy and certification, despite the legal recognition of National Sign Language as an official language of the State party;
- (b) No appropriate consideration has been given to communication and linguistic needs of persons who are deaf-blind;
- (c) Barriers faced by persons with disabilities in gaining access to public information and communications, including on official websites and in media services.

40. The Committee recommends that the State party, in close consultation with and with the active involvement of persons with disabilities, through their representative organizations:

- (a) Implement a sign language training strategy and an adequate certification process and redouble efforts to increase the number of certified Sign Language interpreters;
- (b) Put in place appropriate supportive measures to facilitate the communication, access to information and linguistic needs of persons who are deaf-blind;
- (c) Approve the National Standard of Universal Accessibility without delay, take measures to ensure their application and promptly allocate sufficient funding for the development, promotion and use of different accessible communication formats on official websites and media services.

European Union (2025)

52. The Committee is concerned that:

- (a) Many persons with disabilities lack equal access to information and communication due to limited availability of accessible formats, and national sign languages (NSLs) are not considered part of the EU's multilingualism;
- (b) The Audiovisual Media Services Directive lacks timelines and targets for implementation, and does not ensure accessibility of video-sharing platforms, social media, and the audiovisual sections of news websites;
- (c) EU institutions' websites and social media, including of the European Parliament, the European Commission and the European Council, are not compliant with web accessibility guidelines;
- (d) The fragmentation of assistive technologies across the EU, with different certification schemes and provision models, creates barriers to access and choice.

53. The Committee recalls its previous Concluding Observations and Recommendations (para. 55) and recommends that the European Union:

- (a) Amend the Rules of Procedure of EU institutions to reflect the rights of deaf persons; recognize the 29 NSLs of the EU as official EU languages and increase availability of information in Easy Read format;
- (b) Set timelines and harmonized EU-wide criteria for audiovisual accessibility in the Audiovisual Media Services Directive, including quantitative and qualitative targets;
- (c) Ensure application of web accessibility standards to all EU institution websites and online platforms in line with the Web Accessibility Action Plan and Web Accessibility Directive;
- (d) Guarantee the availability and affordability of assistive technologies for persons with disabilities across the EU.

Palau (2025)

39. The Committee is concerned at:

- (a) The lack of recognition in law of Palauan Sign Language as an official language, the lack of training in the use of sign language and the lack of sign language interpretation in all areas of life;
- (b) At the lack of legal measures for person with disabilities to seek and receive information in accessible formats, as well as about the gaps in providing information to and supporting the communication of persons with disabilities, particularly persons who are deaf, deafblind, blind and persons with intellectual disabilities;
- (c) The barriers faced by persons with disabilities in gaining access to public information and communication, including information through television programs, websites and other media services.

40. The Committee recommends that the State party, in close consultation and with active involvement of persons with disabilities, through their representative organizations:

- (a) Recognize in law Palauan Sign Language as an official language, promote access to and the use of sign language in all areas of life, and ensure the training and availability of qualified sign language interpreters;
- (b) Establish regulations to ensure the accessibility of public communications and information for persons with various disabilities, and allocate sufficient funding for the development, promotion, and use of accessible communication formats, including Braille, deafblind interpretation, sign language, Easy Read, plain language, audio description, video transcription, captioning, and tactile, augmentative, and alternative means of communication;

(c) Develop a strategy with benchmarks, indicators, and adequate resources to ensure that the information provided to the public, including on websites, television, and other media formats, is accessible to persons with disabilities, and establish a monitoring mechanism.

Tuvalu (2025)

39. The Committee is concerned:

(a) About the lack of sign language specialists to develop national sign language and to train persons with disabilities throughout Tuvalu in the use of sign language;

(b) About the insufficient provision of information in accessible formats and of information and communications technology, such as Easy Read, plain language, captioning, sign language, Braille, audio description, and tactile, augmentative and alternative means of communication, in both public and private media outlets, and in particular on the websites that provide public information, and the lack of access to information and communications technology by persons with disabilities;

(c) The insufficient number of accessible private and public websites as well as captioning and sign language, and audio-description on television for deaf, blind, deafblind and partially sighted persons.

40. The Committee recommends that the State party:

(a) Develop a sign language development strategy and a pool of qualified sign language interpreters to teach sign language, including on the outer islands;

(b) Take all necessary measures, including legislative and policy measures, to ensure the accessibility of all public information, including television and media services, for all persons with disabilities in accessible communication formats such as Braille, deafblind interpretation, sign language, Easy Read, plain language, audio description, captioning and subtitles by allocating adequate funding for its development, promotion and use, and ensure access to information and communications technology appropriate for the diversity of persons with disabilities, including in rural and remote areas;

(c) Adopt and implement legislative and policy measures aimed at ensuring that television stations provide their programmes in accessible formats, including captioning, sign language and audio-description for deaf, blind, deafblind and partially sighted persons, including ensuring that public and private websites are made accessible.

Viet Nam (2025)

41. The Committee is concerned about:

(a) Limited compliance of government websites with accessibility standards and insufficient availability of accessible content, including subtitles and sign language interpretation on national television;

(b) Barriers faced by persons with disabilities, particularly indigenous persons with disabilities and those living in rural and remote areas, to access public information and digital tools;

(c) The adequacy of qualified sign language interpreters available to serve in all public services where they are needed by persons with hearing impairments, such as health, justice, education, and work;

(d) The lack of official recognition of Vietnamese Sign Language;

(e) The lack of accessible modes and methods of information, such as easy-to-read, Braille, sign language and others for persons with disabilities;

(f) Decrees Nos. 15/2020/ND-CP and 119/2020/ND-CP, which have established new and harsher penalties than those already provided for in the Penal code for people who disseminate content classifiable as “divergent political opinions” or “reactionary ideologies” on social media platforms, affecting defenders of the rights of persons with disabilities.

42. The Committee recommends that the State party, in close consultation and with active involvement of persons with disabilities, through their representative organizations:

- (a) Ensure that all government websites and digital platforms are accessible, for example by complying with accessibility standards, such as W3C/WCAG 2.2, or equivalent, and mandate accessible content on all television channels;
- (b) Implement strategies to improve access to public information, especially in rural and remote areas and among indigenous communities, and increase awareness and training programmes on digital accessibility tools for persons with disabilities;
- (c) Establish official training and professionalization of sign language interpreters to ensure their availability in any public service required by persons with hearing impairments;
- (d) Recognize Vietnamese sign language as an official language;
- (e) Introduce legislation to require official documents and public information to be available in easy-to-read formats for persons with intellectual disabilities;
- (f) Revise and reform the Penal Code and decrees 15/2020/ND-CP and 119/2020/ND-CP to eliminate prison sentences for those who freely express their opinions, and remove the concepts of “divergent political opinions” or “reactionary ideologies” that hinder defenders of the rights of persons with disabilities from exercising their freedom of expression, including the founders and members of Christian associations supporting persons with disabilities who face persecution and expulsion.

Belarus (2024)

41. The Committee observes with concern:

- (a) The legal and practical restrictions on the freedom of expression of a number of persons with disabilities, and their representative organizations, in regard to their participation in public demonstrations, of the reported administrative detention and the excessive use of force against them;
- (b) Limitations on access to disability-related information in the State party, including the information about the situation of persons with disabilities under adjudication or those in the prisons due to allegations related to freedom of expression;
- (c) The amendments to the Criminal Code concerning “discreditation of the Republic of Belarus”, classifying any criticism of the State actions and/or activities as a punishable crime, which restrict persons with disabilities from exercising their right to express their views on public affairs, including on matters regarding their rights;
- (d) That sign language is still not considered as a formal language in the State party, insufficient levels of accredited sign interpreters, which restrict deaf persons from exercising their basic freedoms and fundamental rights, including their right to education, access to information, health, freedom of expression.

42. The Committee recommends that in close consultation with and with active involvement of persons with disabilities and their representative organizations, the State party:

- (a) In line with General Comment No. 34 of the Human Rights Committee on Freedoms of opinion and expression, respect the right of persons with disabilities to exercise their freedom of expression on an equal basis with others and not be harassed and/or arrested under the false grounds that they are protesting for “political reasons”;
- (b) Ensure public access to all available information about the situation of persons with disabilities, as well as transparent dialogues on their situation regarding the ongoing trials and in prisons;
- (c) Remove all legal and practical barriers including those in the amended criminal law and ensure persons with disabilities are able to exercise their right of freedom of expression on an equal basis with others;
- (d) Develop plan with a stipulated timeline to adopt sign language as official language in the State party and a national program for trainings of adequately qualified sign interpreters to support deaf persons and their representative organizations.

Belgium (2024)

42. The Committee is concerned:

- (a) About insufficient public information by public authorities, private services providers, and the media, in accessible formats such as Easy Read, plain language, captioning, sign language, Braille, audio description, and tactile, augmentative and alternative means of communication;
- (b) About the lack of recognition of sign languages as official languages in all regions and communities, and about the insufficient number of certified sign language interpreters in the various languages;
- (c) About the limited accessibility of public sector websites and mobile applications, and that the private sector has no legal obligation to render its websites or applications accessible;
- (d) About the insufficient support measures, in particular access to learning sign language, for persons with hearing and visual impairments, for their family members and for their close social circle, and, as a consequence, their severely restricted access to communication and information.

43. The Committee recommends that the State party:

- (a) Provide a legal framework requiring public entities providing general services to the public, to offer information in accessible formats, such as Easy Read, plain language, captioning, sign language, Braille, audio description, and tactile, augmentative and alternative means of communication;
- (b) Expedite the enactment of legislation to recognize sign languages as official languages in all regions and communities, increase financial support for sign language interpretation services, and render the profession of sign language interpreter more attractive;
- (c) Monitor the implementation of the European directive on the accessibility of the websites and mobile applications of public sector bodies at federal, regional and community levels by adopting the necessary legal framework, extend this obligation to the private sector and provide remedies in the event of non-compliance, and extend implementing legislation to appliances not covered by the Directive.

Benin (2024)

41. The Committee notes with concern:

- (a) That the national sign language is not yet recognized as an official language;
- (b) The insufficient provision of information in accessible formats and of information and communications technologies, such as Easy Read, plain language, captioning, sign language, Braille, audio description, and tactile, augmentative and alternative means of communication, in both public and private media outlets, in particular on websites that provide public information, and the lack of access to information and communications technologies for persons with disabilities;
- (c) The insufficient number of accessible private and public websites and the lack of captioning and sign language and of audio description on television.

42. The Committee recommends that the State party:

- (a) Recognize the national sign language as an official language;
- (b) Adopt legislation and public policies to ensure the accessibility of all public information, including television and media services, for all persons with disabilities in accessible communication formats such as Braille, deafblind interpretation, sign language, Easy Read, plain language, audio description, captioning and subtitles by allocating adequate funding for its development, promotion and use, and ensure access to information and communications technologies that are appropriate for all persons with disabilities, including in rural areas;
- (c) Ensure that television stations provide their programmes in accessible formats, including captioning, sign language and audio description for persons with disabilities, and that public and private websites are made accessible;

(d) In close consultation with and with the active involvement of persons with disabilities, through their representative organizations, provide financial resources for the training of qualified sign language interpreters, including relevant professionals in the use of tactile, Braille and Easy Read formats, and develop a pool of qualified sign language interpreters and professionals trained in the use of tactile, Braille and Easy Read formats.

Burkina Faso (2024)

40. The Committee is concerned about:

- (a) The insufficient provision of information in accessible formats and the lack of access to information and communications technology by persons with disabilities;
- (b) The fact that the use of sign language in the audiovisual media and at major events is not mandatory.

41. The Committee recommends that the State party, in close consultation and with the active involvement of persons with disabilities, through their representative organizations:

- (a) Take and implement all necessary measures, including legislative and policy measures, to ensure the accessibility of all public information, including television and media services and administrative information for all persons with disabilities in accessible communication, such as Braille, deafblind interpretation, sign language, Easy Read, plain language, audio description, captioning and subtitles, by allocating adequate funding for its development, promotion and use, and ensuring access to information and communications technology appropriate for the diversity of persons with disabilities, in rural and remote areas, as well as in emergency situations;
- (b) Make it compulsory for all public and private television stations to offer sign language interpretation, in particular on news and national events broadcasts.

59. The Committee notes with concern that:

- (a) It is difficult to access sign language interpretation due to the shortage of sign language interpreters, and that professionals working in nursing homes and residential facilities are not systematically trained in the use of Danish Sign Language, limiting the possibility of persons with hearing disabilities to express themselves and participate in everyday life;
- (b) There are insufficient resources, particularly financial resources, for promoting and enhancing the knowledge and use of Braille.

60. The Committee recommends that the Kingdom of Denmark:

- (a) Take measures to guarantee the right to access interpretation in Danish Sign Language in Denmark, Greenlandic Sign Language in Greenland and Faroese Sign Language (Føroyskt Teknmál) on the Faroe Islands, especially through the training of a sufficient number of sign language interpreters, and provide the requisite funding for the use of Danish Sign Language. It also recommends that the Kingdom of Denmark take measures to ensure training for Danish Sign Language professionals working in nursing homes and residential facilities.
- (b) Take measures to ensure adequate funding for promoting, preserving and enhancing the knowledge and use of Braille, especially through the introduction of common teaching methods.

Ghana (2024)

40. The Committee is concerned that:

- (a) Article 21 of Ghana's Constitution which guarantee the right to freedom of speech and expression, freedom of thought, conscience and information for all persons is not enforced in regard to persons with disabilities as they continue to face barriers in accessing public information and communication, including information through television programmes, websites and other media services;
- (b) The Right to information act 989 of 2019" lack provision for person with disabilities to seek and receive information in accessible formats in accordance with the Convention and there are gaps in providing information to and supporting the communication of persons with disabilities;

(c) Limited steps are being taken to officially recognise Ghanaian Sign Language in the law, and the lack of or insufficient number of trained and qualified sign language interpreters;

(d) Accessible communication methods such as braille, sign language, and Easy Read formats are not widely used or available, making it difficult for persons with disabilities to access essential services and information in the community.

41. The Committee recommends that the State Party:

(a) Develop a comprehensive plan with benchmarks, indicators and timeline, to implement all aspects of article 21 of the Convention at all levels and to ensure the accessibility of information provided to the public, including on websites, television and in other media formats is accessible to persons with disabilities and establish a mechanism to monitor its implementation in close consultation and the active involvement of persons with disabilities through their representative organizations;

(b) Review and amend The Right to Information act 2019 to align it with the Convention and to ensure the accessibility of public communications and information to persons with different disabilities, and allocate sufficient funding for the development, promotion and use of accessible communication formats, such as Braille, deafblind interpretation, sign language, Easy Read, plain language, audio description, video transcription, captioning, and tactile, augmentative and alternative means of communication;

(c) Officially recognize Ghanaian Sign Language and take steps to provide training and certification for professional Ghanaian Sign Language interpreters and

(d) Develop and implement training programmes to increase the number of professionals who are proficient in the use of braille, sign language, and Easy Read to enhance communication and service to persons with disabilities.

Mauritius (2024)

35. The Committee is concerned that the Protection and Promotion of the Rights of Persons with Disabilities Act 2024 omits the right to information in accessible formats, with limited measures in place to promote the accessibility and affordability of printed and electronic information and communications.

36. The Committee recommends that the State party, in close consultation and with active involvement of persons with disabilities, through their representative organizations:

(a) Establish accessibility standards for information and communication media and technologies, as well as websites, in line with universal standards;

(b) Ensure that printed and electronic information and communication are provided in accessible formats such as Braille, Easy Read, sign language, plain language, captioning and tactile, augmentative and alternative forms of communication, and that assistive communication technology is made affordable for persons with disabilities;

(c) Promote the development and use of the Mauritian Sign Language, including its recognition as an official language in law, the training and deployment of professional interpreters and the expanded use on national television and other media services.

Netherlands (2024)

47. The Committee is concerned about:

(a) The lack of a national legislation on audio description;

(b) The shortage of Dutch sign language interpreters and the increased restrictiveness in the allocation of interpreting hours by the Netherlands Employee Insurance Agency (UWV);

(c) Barriers faced by persons with disabilities in gaining access to public information and communication, including on websites and in media services.

48. The Committee recommends that the State party, in close consultation and with active involvement of persons with disabilities, through their representative organizations:

- (a) Enact legislation to guarantee audio description across public and private media;
- (b) Take measures against the shortage of Dutch sign language interpreters and ensure a fair and sufficient allocation of interpreting hours for persons with hearing disabilities;
- (c) Allocate sufficient funding for the development, promotion and use of different accessible communication formats, including but not limited to Braille, deafblind interpretation, sign language, Easy Read, plain language, audio description, video transcription, captioning and tactile, augmentative and alternative means of communication.

Ukraine (2024)

42. The Committee notes with concern:

- (a) That sign language has not yet been officially recognized by the State party;
- (b) The lack of measures to ensure that all public information, including on health, emergency, security and protection, is available in modes and formats that are accessible, especially to blind persons, deafblind persons and persons with intellectual and/or psychosocial disabilities;
- (c) The insufficient number of sign-language interpreters for the users of public services including in the judiciary, health facilities and television broadcasting.

43. The Committee recommends that the State party, in close consultation and with active involvement of persons with disabilities, through their representative organizations:

- (a) Recognize Ukrainian sign language as an official language and adopt capacity-building programmes, including the training of sign language interpreters, ensure their availability in sufficient numbers, and promote the use of sign language to entities that provide services to the public, including through the internet and mass media;
- (b) Increase the provision of accessible information and communication formats and technologies for persons with disabilities, including internet accessibility, sign language, subtitles, Braille, Easy Read, plain language, and tactile, augmentative, and alternative means of communication in relation to all public services, giving special attention to access to information and communication for persons with disabilities in conflict zones.

Azerbaijan (2024)

47. The Committee notes with concern:

- (a) That Easy Read and augmentative and alternative communication have yet to be developed;
- (b) That sign language is yet to be accepted as official language;
- (c) The absence of information about measures taken by private service providers to develop Apps and other digital tools in accessible formats;
- (d) Information about restrictions in freedom of expression affecting persons with dissenting views on official position, including on living conditions, on discrimination, differing religious views, and views on the Nagorno-Karabakh conflict.

48. The Committee recommends that the State party in close consultation and with the active involvement of persons with disabilities through their representative organizations:

- (a) Strengthen its efforts to develop and implement a wide range of accessible communication formats and technologies, including sign language, Braille, augmentative and alternative communication, tactile communication, and Easy Read. The State party should allocate sufficient funding for the development, promotion, and use of these formats;
- (b) Recognize sign language as an official language and develop professional training for sign language interpreters and school teachers, in close consultation and with the active involvement of organizations of persons with hearing impairments.
- (c) Ensure that private service entities provide information in accessible formats;
- (d) Ensure participation of persons with disabilities in the civic space, ensuring peaceful, open and free participation of persons with disabilities and other civil society organizations.

42. The Committee is deeply concerned that:

- (a) The restriction of freedom of expression against a number of persons with disabilities, who have been arrested and sentenced to long prison terms of up to life imprisonment for their political views, with no information revealing their conditions in detention.
- (b) Failure to provide information in accessible formats for persons with disabilities in facilities and institutions.
- (c) The absence of a right to information law that guarantees accessibility and access to information for persons with disabilities.

43. The Committee recommends that the State party:

- (a) Respect the right of persons with disabilities to freedom of expression and not to harass and detain persons with disabilities for their political views, and to disclose the situation of persons with disabilities in detention.

Costa Rica (2024)

35. El Comité expresa su preocupación por:

- a) La falta de implementación del Plan Nacional de Desarrollo de las Telecomunicaciones (PNDT) 2015-2021, específicamente la meta No. 14, cuyo objetivo es instar a las instituciones del Gobierno Central a aplicar criterios de accesibilidad y diseño universal que permitan a las personas con discapacidad el acceso a la información y comunicación publicada en portales y sitios web, así como a los servicios públicos en línea;
- b) Que los sitios web y los canales de televisión no proporcionan información en formatos accesibles para las personas con discapacidad, en particular las personas ciegas y sordas.

36. El Comité solicita al Estado parte:

- a) Adoptar las medidas necesarias para la ejecución efectiva del Plan Nacional de Desarrollo de las Telecomunicaciones 2022-2027, en particular la aplicación de los criterios de accesibilidad y diseño universal que permitan a las personas con discapacidad el acceso a la información y comunicación;
- b) Establecer una obligación legal de los proveedores de servicios de telecomunicaciones, incluidos los servidores de sitios web y los canales de televisión, de hacer que sus servicios de comunicación sean accesibles para las personas con discapacidad, incluidas las personas con discapacidad auditiva y visual, establecer estándares de accesibilidad vinculantes e implementarlos de manera efectiva.

45. The Committee observes with concern:

- (a) Reports about administrative detention and the excessive use of force against persons with disabilities participating in public demonstrations, including mass meetings, processions, and pickets;
- (b) Barriers faced by persons with intellectual and/or psychosocial disabilities to access information;
- (c) The low number of sign language interpreters, the unavailability of “Surdo-Online” service in rural areas, and the insufficient number of screen-readers for persons with visual impairments;
- (d) Limited accessibility of helplines, SMS messages and emergency messengers for persons with disabilities who are victims of violence.

46. The Committee recommends that the State party, in close consultation with and with the active involvement of persons with disabilities, through their representative organizations:

- (a) Ensure that persons with disabilities can exercise their right to freedom of expression and opinion on an equal basis with others, provide redress to persons with disabilities arbitrarily detained, prevent arbitrary detention and excessive use of force in the context of public demonstrations (see Human Rights Committee, General Comment No. 37 on Article 21 ICCPR, CCPR/C/GC/37), including by prohibiting detention for the participation in peaceful assemblies;

(b) Introduce requirements and standards for accessible printed and electronic information by State authorities, and strengthen efforts to ensure that all persons with disabilities have access to all public information, including through augmentative and alternative communication, Easy Read, plain language, tactile communication, sign language interpretation and accessible digital services;

(c) Strengthen its efforts to expand Surdo-Online portals and to train sign language interpreters across the country, including in rural areas, and to increase availability and affordability of screen-readers for persons with disabilities;

(d) Ensure full coverage and accessibility of helplines, SMS messages and other means of reporting and referral mechanisms for women and girls with disabilities facing violence.

Nicaragua (2024)

42. Al Comité le preocupa que, a pesar de estar contemplada en el artículo 30 de la Constitución y en el artículo 30 de la Ley de los Derechos de las Personas con Discapacidad, la libertad de expresión y de opinión no sea un derecho que se pueda ejercer libremente en el Estado parte, al Comité le preocupa en particular:

a) La cancelación de la personalidad jurídica y el cierre forzoso entre 2018 y 2022 de al menos 212 organizaciones de la sociedad civil que trabajan en favor de las mujeres, incluyendo mujeres con discapacidad;

b) Que la Ley No.1040, aprobada en octubre de 2020, exige a las organizaciones no gubernamentales que se abstengan de realizar actividades relacionadas con asuntos políticos en el Estado parte y prohíbe la financiación de las que trabajan en asuntos políticos, que agrupan también a personas con discapacidad;

c) Informes de al menos 7.000 casos de agresiones contra defensoras de los derechos humanos, entre las cuales existen mujeres con discapacidad, que son consideradas traidoras, enemigas de la paz y "golpistas" por el Estado parte, que incluyen intimidación, acoso, represalias, amenazas de muerte, violación, lesiones personales a familiares y daños materiales y de detención arbitraria, arresto y enjuiciamiento de defensores de los derechos humanos, líderes religiosos, periodistas, estudiantes universitarios y jóvenes activistas entre las cuales hay personas con discapacidad, por expresar sus opiniones.

43.El Comité solicita al Estado parte:

a) Se devuelva la personalidad jurídica a las organizaciones defensoras de derechos humanos, específicamente a aquellas de personas con discapacidad;

b) Derogar la Ley 1040 y toda legislación que discrimine por motivos de opiniones políticas y adoptar un plan de acción para proteger la vida y la integridad de los defensores de los derechos humanos, incluidas aquellas de personas con discapacidad y garantizar que tengan acceso a recursos efectivos, para que las organizaciones de la sociedad civil en general y las de personas con discapacidad puedan participar libremente en actividades políticas;

c) Poner inmediatamente en libertad a los defensores de los derechos humanos, incluidos aquellos con discapacidad, detenidos por sus opiniones políticas y su participación en la vida política y pública, garantizar que se salvaguarde su derecho a la vida, a la libertad y a la integridad física y psicológica durante la detención y tras la puesta en libertad.

44. Al Comité también le preocupa:

a) La carencia de medidas para asegurar que toda la información pública, incluyendo en servicios de salud y emergencias, de la policía nacional y de atención a la violencia, esté disponible en los modos y formatos accesibles, particularmente respecto a personas ciegas, sordociegas o con discapacidad intelectual y/o psicosocial;

b) Las barreras que enfrentan las personas con discapacidad para acceder a los medios de información y comunicación pública, como los programas de televisión o los sitios web;

c) Que, aunque se cuenta con la Ley del Lenguaje de Señas Nicaragüense (Ley No. 675), a la fecha no existe un registro de intérpretes de lengua de señas, persiste la poca formación de intérpretes y los escasos servicios de interpretación de la lengua de señas en todos los ámbitos de la vida.

45. El Comité recomienda al Estado parte que, en consulta estrecha y colaboración activa con las personas con discapacidad y las organizaciones que las representan:

a) Asegure que toda la información pública, incluida la información de los servicios de salud y emergencias, sea accesible para las personas con diferentes tipos de discapacidad, y asignar fondos suficientes al desarrollo, promoción y uso de formatos de comunicación accesibles, como el braille, la interpretación para personas sordociegos, la lengua de señas, los formatos de lectura fácil, el lenguaje sencillo, la audiodescripción, la transcripción en vídeo, el subtulado y los medios de comunicación táctiles, alternativos y aumentativos;

b) Garantice la accesibilidad de la información de los medios de información y comunicación pública, incluyendo la televisión, radio y los sitios web como espacios libres para que las personas con discapacidad expresen su opinión de manera libre;

c) Promueva el acceso y el uso de la lengua de señas en todos los ámbitos de la vida, garantizar la formación y disponibilidad de intérpretes cualificados de lengua de señas, elaborar un Registro Nacional de Intérpretes en cumplimiento de la Ley del Lenguaje de Señas Nicaragüense (Ley No. 675).

47. The Committee is concerned about shortcomings in the dissemination of government information in accessible formats, such as accessible information in minority languages, Plain Swedish, sign language, Easy Read, Braille and tactile, augmentative and alternative means of communication.

48. The Committee recommends that the State party, in close consultation and active involvement of persons with disabilities and their representative organizations, take all necessary measures, based on international and European standards, to ensure that information intended for the general public is available in accessible formats and through assistive technology for all persons with disabilities, in a timely manner and without additional costs, in particular during emergencies.

41. The Committee notes the State party's efforts to develop a sign language dictionary. However, it is concerned:

(a) That the sign language is not yet recognized as an official language;

(b) About the insufficient provision of information in accessible formats and of information and communications technology, such as Easy Read, plain language, captioning, sign language, Braille, audio description, and tactile, augmentative and alternative means of communication, in both public and private media outlets, and in particular on the websites that provide public information, and the lack of access to information and communications technology by persons with disabilities;

(c) The insufficient number of accessible private and public websites as well as captioning and sign language, and audio-description on television for deaf, blind, deafblind and partially sighted persons.

42. The Committee recommends that the State party:

(a) Recognize the Zambian sign language as an official language;

(b) Take all necessary measures, including legislative and policy measures, to ensure the accessibility of all public information, including television and media services, for all persons with disabilities in accessible communication formats such as Braille, deafblind interpretation, sign language, Easy Read, plain language, audio description, captioning and subtitles by allocating adequate funding for its development, promotion and use, and ensure access to information and communications technology appropriate for the diversity of persons with disabilities, including in rural and remote areas;

(c) Adopt and implement legislative and policy measures aimed at ensuring that television stations provide their programmes in accessible formats, including captioning, sign language and audio-description for deaf, blind, deafblind and partially sighted persons, including ensuring that public and private websites are made accessible;

(d) In close consultation and active involvement of representative organisations of persons with disabilities, provide financial resources for the training of qualified sign language interpreters, including relevant professionals in the use of tactile, Braille and Easy Read formats and develop a pool of qualified sign language interpreters and professionals trained in the use of tactile, Braille and Easy Read formats.

Andorra (2023)

43. The Committee observes the following with concern:

(a) The delay in amending the Accessibility Act to improve the communication system, especially in the public media and in access to information and communication technologies;

(b) The lack of recognition of Catalan sign language as an official language and the limited number of certified sign language interpreters;

(c) The insufficient progress in the provision of information in accessible formats for all persons with disabilities and the limited provision of information and communications technology, both in public and private media outlets, in particular, on websites that provide public information.

44. The Committee recommends that the State party:

(a) Expedite the amendments to the Accessibility Act to improve the communication system, especially in the public media and in access to information and communication technologies;

(b) Recognize Catalan sign language as an official language, ensure financial resources for the training of sign language interpreters, and develop a pool of qualified sign language interpreters in all areas of life;

(c) Ensure the availability of all public information, including television and media services, for all persons with disabilities, in accessible communication formats, such as Braille, interpretation for deafblind persons, sign language, Easy Read, plain language, audio description, captioning and subtitles, as well as tactile, augmentative and alternative means of communication, by allocating adequate funding for their development, promotion and use, and ensure access to information and communications technology appropriate for the diversity of persons with disabilities.

Austria (2023)

49. The Committee is concerned about:

(a) Shortcomings in the dissemination of government information in accessible formats, such as Plain German, sign language, Easy Read Braille, and tactile, augmentative and alternative means of communication;

(b) The lack of support measures, including financial support, for organizations of persons with disabilities, including organizations of persons with psychosocial and/or intellectual disabilities, of women with disabilities, and of children with disabilities, to facilitate their communicative activities;

(c) The lack of close consultation with and active involvement of organizations of persons with disabilities in the design and review of measures planned or taken to ensure accessibility of information.

50. The Committee recommends that the State party:

(a) Ensure the dissemination of information, particularly of information by the government, in accessible formats and technologies, fully implement the Web Accessibility Directive, and render all websites and mobile applications of public sector entities accessible, in line with European Standard EN 301 549;

(b) Provide support, including financial assistance, to organizations of persons with disabilities, including organizations of persons with psychosocial and/or intellectual disabilities, of women with disabilities, and of children with disabilities, to facilitate their communicative activities;

(c) Closely consult with and actively involve of organizations of persons with disabilities in the design and review of measures planned or taken to ensure accessibility of information.

Germany (2023)

47. The Committee is concerned about the lack of a national standard for, and effective monitoring of, the accessibility of information, leading to a lack of effective access to information in particular in the private broadcasting and websites and the limited accessibility of information during the COVID 19 pandemic, in particular for deaf and hard of hearing and persons with intellectual disability.

48. The Committee recommends that the State party, in close consultation with and active involvement of persons with disabilities and their representative organizations, take all necessary measures, including the adoption of inclusive media regulations and the development and implementation of a national standard of accessibility, and mechanisms of monitoring and sanctioning, based on international and European standards, to ensure that the information intended for the general public is available in accessible formats and via the assistive technology for all persons with disabilities, in a timely manner and without additional costs, in particular during emergency crisis.

45. The Committee observes with concern:

(a) That Israeli Sign Language is not recognised as an official language in the State party and that there is no requirement for qualified sign language interpreters in many areas of life;

(b) The limited public information available in a range of accessible formats;

(c) The limited compliance of public and private websites with accessibility requirements and guidelines, and the exception allowed under the duty of private service providers to meet accessibility requirements.

46. The Committee recommends that the State party, in close consultation and active involvement of organizations of persons with disabilities:

(a) Recognize Israeli Sign Language as an official language, allocate public resources to provide training and increase the availability of qualified sign language interpreters in all areas of life, including in court proceedings, police interviews, on TV broadcasts, and in health-care, education, leisure, religious and cultural services;

(b) Implement measures to ensure that all persons with disabilities have access to all public information and services, including through augmentative and alternative communication, Easy Read, plain language, tactile communication and sign language interpretation, and accessible digital Internet-based services, taking account of internationally recognized accessibility standards;

(c) Raise awareness and ensure compliance with the Israeli Standard IS 5568 relating to the international web content accessibility guidelines of the international organization W3C, and remove exceptions to the duty of private service providers to meet accessibility requirements.

Malawi (2023)

43. The Committee is concerned about:

(a) The lack of recognition of Malawi sign language in law, that private media still do not feature sign language in their broadcast and information about the shortage of qualified sign language interpreters;

(b) The lack of measures to ensure availability of information meant for the general public in accessible formats;

(c) The lack of progress in updating official websites and to make them accessible for persons with disabilities, including persons with vision impairments.

44. The Committee recommends that the State party:

- (a) Recognize Malawi Sign language in law as one of the official languages and adopt measures to set up training programmes to Malawi sign language interpreters, ensuring that training is available in all 32 districts;
- (b) Make it compulsory for all public and private TV stations to offer sign language interpretation in particular during news time and in National events broadcast;
- (c) Take measures to ensure availability of information for the general public in accessible formats for all persons with disabilities including in Braille, sign language, Easy Read and other augmentative means of communication;
- (d) Work in consultation with representative organizations of persons with disabilities to make the State party's websites accessible to all persons with disabilities, including persons with vision impairments.

Mauritania (2023)

35. The Committee is concerned:

- (a) About the insufficient provision of information in accessible formats and of information and communications technology, such as Easy Read, plain language, captioning, sign language, Braille, audio description, and tactile, augmentative and alternative means of communication, in both public and private media outlets, and in particular on the websites that provide public information, and the lack of access to information and communications technology by persons with disabilities;
- (b) The insufficient number of accessible private and public websites as well as captioning and sign language, and audio-description on television for deaf, blind, deafblind and partially sighted persons.

36. The Committee recommends that the State party:

- (a) Take all necessary measures, including legislative and policy measures, to ensure the accessibility of all public information, including television and media services, for all persons with disabilities in accessible communication formats such as Braille, deafblind interpretation, sign language, Easy Read, plain language, audio description, captioning and subtitles by allocating adequate funding for its development, promotion and use, and ensure access to information and communications technology appropriate for the diversity of persons with disabilities, including in rural and remote areas;
- (b) Adopt and implement legislative and policy measures aimed at ensuring that television stations provide their programmes in accessible formats as captioning, sign language and audio-description for deaf, blind, deafblind and partially sighted persons, including ensuring that public and private websites are made accessible;
- (c) In close consultation with and active involvement of representative organisations of persons with disabilities, provide financial resources for the training of qualified sign language interpreters, including relevant professionals in the use of tactile, Braille and Easy Read formats and develop a pool of qualified sign language interpreters and professionals trained in the use of tactile, Braille and Easy Read formats.

Mongolia (2023)

43. The Committee is concerned about the insufficient provision of information in accessible formats and of information and communications technology, such as Easy Read, plain language, captioning, sign language, Braille, audio description, and tactile, augmentative and alternative means of communication, in both public and private media outlets, and in particular on the websites that provide public information, and the lack of access to information and communications technology by persons with disabilities, including persons with disabilities belonging to Kazakh and Tuva ethnic minorities. It is also concerned that the sign language interpretation on national and private broadcasting channels is limited only to news programs.

44. The Committee recommends that the State party:

- (a) Ensure the accessibility of all public information, including television and media services, hotlines and websites, for all persons with disabilities in accessible communication formats such as Braille, deafblind interpretation, sign language, Easy Read, plain language, audio description, captioning and subtitles by allocating adequate funding for its development, promotion and use, and ensure access to information and communications technology appropriate for the diversity of persons with disabilities, including for Kazakh and Tuva ethnic minorities;

(b) Ensure access to public and private broadcasting services and audio-visual content, through the sign language interpretation, subtitles, audio-description and in accessible and usable formats for persons with disabilities.

Paraguay (2023)

39. Al Comité le preocupa:

a) La carencia de medidas para asegurar que toda la información pública, incluyendo en servicios de salud y emergencias, de la policía nacional y de atención a la violencia, no esté disponible en los modos y formatos accesibles, particularmente respecto a personas ciegas, sordociegas o con discapacidad intelectual;

b) Si bien la lengua de señas paraguaya tiene reconocimiento legal, sigue habiendo una falta de intérpretes debido a la ausencia de programas de formación y acreditación descentralizados;

c) La escasez de recursos y personal capacitado en el Centro de Relevos para proporcionar eficazmente el Sistema de Interpretación en Línea (SIEL) a las personas con discapacidad auditiva en todo el territorio del Estado parte;

d) El incumplimiento a la implementación del Tratado de Marrakech.

40. El Comité recomienda al Estado parte:

a) Asegurar que toda la información pública, incluyendo en servicios de salud y emergencias, sea accesible para las personas con diferentes tipos de discapacidad, asignar fondos suficientes al desarrollo, promoción y uso de formatos de comunicación accesibles, como el braille, la interpretación para personas sordociegas, la lengua de señas, los formatos de lectura fácil, el lenguaje sencillo, la audio descripción, la transcripción en vídeo, el subtítulo y los medios de comunicación táctiles, alternativos y aumentativos;

b) Promover el acceso y el uso de la lengua de señas en todos los ámbitos de la vida, garantizar la formación, acreditación y disponibilidad de intérpretes cualificados de lengua de señas en todos los departamentos y municipios y elaborar un Registro Nacional de Intérpretes;

c) Dotar de recursos suficientes al Centro de Relevos para que pueda desempeñar sus funciones eficazmente, incluyendo los servicios de SIEL y asegurar que estén disponibles, incluido para las personas sordas indígenas y las que habitan en lugares remotos y rurales, durante las 24 horas del día los 7 días a la semana;

d) Aplicar eficazmente la legislación sobre derechos de autor promulgada para implementar el Tratado de Marrakech.

Angola (2023)

35. The Committee is concerned about the insufficient provision of information in accessible formats and information and communications technology, such as Easy Read, plain language, captioning, sign language, Braille, audio-description and tactile, augmentative and alternative means of communication, in both public and private media outlets, and in particular on the websites that provide public information, and the lack of access to information and communications technology for persons with disabilities.

36. The Committee recommends that the State party ensure the accessibility of all public information, including television and media services, for all persons with disabilities in accessible communication formats such as Braille, deaf-blind interpretation, sign language, Easy Read, plain language, audio description, captioning and subtitles, such as through the allocation of adequate funding for their development, promotion and use, and ensure access to information and communications technology adapted to the diversity of persons with disabilities. It further recommends that the State party continues to strengthen and expand sign language training.

41. Al Comité le preocupa lo siguiente:

- a) Las deficiencias en la información y el apoyo a la comunicación para las personas con discapacidad, incluidas aquellas que necesitan un apoyo más intenso;
- b) Las barreras que enfrentan las personas con discapacidad para acceder a los medios de información y comunicación pública, como los programas de televisión, los sitios web y la aplicación móvil Mi Argentina;
- c) La falta de reconocimiento legal de la Lengua de Señas Argentina como idioma oficial y de la creación de un Registro Nacional de Intérpretes prevista por el Estado parte, así como la poca formación de intérpretes y los escasos servicios de interpretación de la lengua de señas en todos los ámbitos de la vida;
- d) La inaccesibilidad de los servicios de banca a domicilio y los cajeros automáticos.

42. El Comité recomienda al Estado parte:

- a) Asegurar el cumplimiento de la Ley de Servicios de Comunicación Audiovisual, y asignar fondos suficientes al desarrollo, promoción y uso de formatos de comunicación accesibles, como el braille, la interpretación para personas sordociegas, la lengua de señas, los formatos de lectura fácil, el lenguaje sencillo, la audiodescripción, la transcripción en vídeo, el subtitulado para personas sordas y los medios de comunicación táctiles, alternativos y aumentativos;
- b) Garantizar la accesibilidad de la información de los medios de información y comunicación pública, incluyendo la televisión, los sitios web, y la aplicación móvil Mi Argentina;
- c) Reconocer por ley la Lengua de Señas Argentina como idioma oficial a nivel nacional, promover el acceso y el uso de la lengua de señas en todos los ámbitos de la vida, garantizar la formación y disponibilidad de intérpretes cualificados de lengua de señas y elaborar el Registro Nacional de Intérpretes;
- d) Garantizar que las entidades bancarias cumplan con la normativa para la inclusión financiera de las personas con discapacidad, incluyendo la accesibilidad de la banca a domicilio y los cajeros automáticos.

Georgia (2023)

43. The Committee observes with concern:

- (a) The absence of a national standard and effective monitoring of the accessibility of information, leading to a lack of accessible written, verbal and electronic communication, and information about the lack of resources for the translation of legal documents and public information in municipalities into native languages and in accessible formats, creating barriers for persons with disabilities belonging to ethnic minority groups;
- (b) Limited financial resources for the implementation of Georgian Sign Language, and training of Sign language interpreters being very limited in all regions and fully absent in some of them, in mainstream schools and in Free Legal Aid Service institutions;
- (c) Low wages and the absence of licensing standards for sign language interpreters;
- (d) The slow progress in the promotion of accessibility of websites of public and private entities.

44. The Committee recommends that the State party:

- (a) Develop and implement a unified standard of accessibility, based on international standards, to provide information intended for the general public in accessible formats and technologies accessible to all persons with disabilities, in a timely manner and without additional costs;
- (b) Create and implement monitoring and evaluation of accessibility projects and provide persons with disabilities, including persons with disabilities belonging to ethnic minorities, with free, professional interpretation services in administrative procedures before State agencies, as well as with social workers;

- (c) Allocate sufficient funding to the training and employment of sign language interpreters and define licensing standards. Establish an action plan to ensure sufficient coverage of sign language interpreters, particularly in schools and public services;
- (d) Enact and implement the "Law on Web and Mobile Applications Accessibility" obliging providers of information on the Internet to make their services accessible to persons with disabilities.

Peru (2023)

42. El Comité nota que la televisión pública ofrece interpretación en lengua de señas peruana, sin embargo, al Comité le preocupa que:

- a) La accesibilidad a la información sea aún incipiente y muy básica; no se garantice la interpretación de la lengua de señas peruana en los medios de comunicación ni en las instituciones públicas prestadoras de servicios, tampoco se guíe a intérpretes para personas sordociegas y se carezca de programas de comunicación aumentativa y alternativa;
- b) Si bien la lengua de señas peruana está reconocida, sigue habiendo una falta de intérpretes debido a la ausencia de programas de formación y acreditación;
- c) Existen barreras a las que se enfrentan las personas con discapacidad para acceder a la información y la comunicación públicas, incluidos los sitios web y los servicios de los medios de comunicación, y ausencia de normas de información y comunicación jurídicamente vinculantes que garanticen la accesibilidad a la información facilitada al público.

43. El Comité recomienda al Estado parte que:

- a) Asigne recursos financieros y humanos en las instituciones públicas prestadoras de servicios para que cuenten con intérpretes calificados en lengua de señas, así como la implementación de medidas y monitoreo para que los medios de comunicación difundan en todo momento información acompañada de interpretación en lengua de señas, en toda la programación televisiva más allá de la televisión pública, con un seguimiento regular por parte del Ministerio de Transportes y Comunicaciones;
- b) Desarrolle e implemente una estrategia para la formación y la acreditación de intérpretes y guías intérpretes, así como sobre comunicación aumentativa y alternativa;
- c) En consulta con las organizaciones que representan a las personas con discapacidad, promulgue normas de información y comunicación jurídicamente vinculantes para los sitios web públicos y privados y los servicios de los medios de comunicación, a fin de garantizar la accesibilidad de la información facilitada al público para todas las personas con discapacidad, incluso a través de la comunicación aumentativa y alternativa.

Togo (2023)

43. The Committee is concerned:

- (a) At the lack of recognition of Togolese sign language as an official language, and the limited number of trained and certified sign language interpreters;
- (b) About the insufficient provision of information in accessible formats and of information and communications technology, such as Easy Read, plain language, captioning, sign language, Braille, audio description, and tactile, augmentative and alternative means of communication, in both public and private media outlets, and in particular on the websites that provide public information, and the lack of access to information and communications technology by persons with disabilities;
- (c) The insufficient number of accessible private and public websites as well as captioning and sign language, and audio-description on television for deaf, blind, deafblind and partially sighted persons.

44. The Committee recommends that the State party:

- (a) Take immediate steps to recognise Togolese sign language as an official language;

(b) Take all necessary measures, including legislative and policy measures, to ensure the accessibility of all public information, including television and media services, for all persons with disabilities in accessible communication formats such as Braille, interpretation for deafblind persons, sign language, Easy Read, plain language, audio description, captioning and subtitles by allocating adequate funding for its development, promotion and use, and ensure access to information and communications technology appropriate for the diversity of persons with disabilities, including in rural and remote areas;

(c) Adopt and implement legislative and policy measures aimed at ensuring that television stations provide their programmes in accessible formats as captioning, sign language and audio-description for deaf, blind, deafblind and partially sighted persons, including ensuring that public and private websites are made accessible;

(d) In close consultation with and active involvement of representative organisations of persons with disabilities, provide financial resources for the training of qualified sign language interpreters, including relevant professionals in the use of tactile, Braille and Easy Read formats and develop a pool of qualified sign language interpreters and professionals trained in the use of tactile, Braille and Easy Read formats.

37. The Committee is concerned that the use of sign language by the electronic media remains very limited thus depriving the deaf of information provided through televisions. It is also concerned about the limited or lack of public information in braille and other augmentative means of communication.

38. The Committee recommends that the State party:

(a) Urge the media to increase the presence of sign language interpretation in all television programs;

(b) Provide important public information in braille, Easy Read and other augmentative means of communication.

Bangladesh (2022)

43. The Committee is concerned about:

(a) The insufficient recognition of Bangla sign language as an official language of deaf persons, and the limited number of trained sign language interpreters for use in the judicial process and at public functions;

(b) The absence of information in accessible formats for persons with disabilities, including Braille, Easy Read, tactile communication, accessible multimedia as well as written, audio, human-reader and augmentative and alternative modes, means and formats of communication, including accessible information and communication technology, particularly in rural and remote areas;

(c) The insufficient number of accessible private and public websites as well as captioning and sign language, and audio-description on television for deaf, blind and visually impaired persons respectively;

(d) The lack of financial resources to provide training for sign language interpreters and for professionals in the application of Braille and Easy Read formats, tactile communication, accessible multimedia as well as other augmentative and alternative modes, means and formats of communication.

44. The Committee recommends that the State party:

(a) Recognise Bangla sign language as an official language;

(b) Take all necessary measures, including legislative and policy measures, to ensure that information provided to the general public is available to persons with disabilities in accessible formats, such as Braille, sign language, captioning, Easy Read, audio-description and tactile, augmentative and alternative means of communication, including in rural and remote areas;

- (c) Adopt and implement legislative and policy measures aimed at ensuring that television stations provide their programmes in accessible formats as captioning, sign language and audio-description for deaf and blind and visually impaired persons, including ensuring that public and private websites are made accessible;
- (d) In consultation with representative organisations of persons with disabilities, provide financial resources for the training of qualified sign language interpreters, including relevant professionals in the use of tactile, Braille and Easy Read formats.

China (2022)

42. The Committee observes with concern the lack of access to media, telecommunication and information and communications technology services for persons with disabilities, in particular for persons with visual impairments.

43. The Committee recommends that the State party be guided by the Web Content Accessibility Guidelines 2.1 and take appropriate measures to:

(a) Recognize the Chinese sign language at the constitutional level, promote access to and the use of sign languages (Chinese sign language and the Natural sign language) in all areas of life; ensure the availability of qualified sign language interpreters; and ensure close consultation and engagement with the deaf community, especially in schools and universities;

(b) Allocate sufficient funding for the development, promotion and use of accessible communication formats, such as Braille, interpretation for the deafblind, sign language, Easy Read, plain language, audio description, video transcription, captioning and tactile, augmentative and alternative means of communication.

44. The Committee is deeply concerned about the reports of continuing pressure on, and censorship of, human rights defenders and civil society organizations for their advocacy work on disability rights; and of reprisals against them, in particular for their cooperation with the United Nations.

45. The Committee urges the State party to take all measures necessary to ensure that persons with disabilities are able to enjoy the right to freedom of expression and opinion, including the freedom to seek, receive and impart information and ideas, including in their cooperation with the United Nations.

Hong-Kong (2022)

73. The Committee is deeply concerned about the reports of reprisals against and continuing pressure on human rights defenders and civil society organizations for their advocacy work, including on the rights of persons with disabilities. The Committee further notes with concern the use of the Law of the People's Republic of China on Safeguarding National Security in the Hong Kong Special Administrative Region to brand human rights defenders as "foreign agents" and to bring charges of terrorism and sedition against them; to restrict human rights organizations' access to foreign funding; and to restrict and repress the legitimate activities of human rights organizations, including organizations of women with disabilities.

74. The Committee urges Hong Kong SAR, China to:

(a) Urgently repeal and independently review the Law of the People's Republic of China on Safeguarding National Security Law in the Hong Kong Special Administrative Region to ensure it is both human rights and international law compliant;

(b) Take prompt action to release human rights defenders with disabilities who were arbitrarily deprived of their liberty under charges of terrorism and subversion of national security;

(c) Adopt measures to ensure that human rights organizations, including organizations of persons with disabilities operate in safe environments and can seek, receive and use funding from foreign or international sources, without undue impediments.

Indonesia (2022)

48. The Committee notes with concern:

- (a) The lack of age-appropriate mechanisms to ensure access to information, communication, assistive devices and assistive technologies and sign language for children with disabilities;
- (b) The lack of sign language interpreters and programs to ensure that Deaf people have access to sign language interpreters of their choice in official interactions;
- (c) The lack of information in accessible formats, such as Easy Read, plain language, captioning, sign language, Braille, audio description, and tactile, augmentative and alternative means of communication from government, public and private media outlets, and on websites that provide public information.

49. The Committee recommends that the State party:

- (a) Establish age-appropriate mechanisms to ensure access to information, communication, assistive devices and assistive technologies and sign language for children with disabilities;
- (b) Implement measures, in close consultation and active involvement of the Deaf community to increase the number of sign language interpreters and to facilitate access to sign language interpreters of choice for official interactions;
- (c) Establish a legal and policy framework to ensure the accessibility of all public information, including from television and media services, for all persons with disabilities in accessible formats such as Braille, deafblind interpretation, sign language, Easy Read, plain language, audio description, captioning and subtitles, and allocate adequate funding for implementation.

Japan (2022)

45. The Committee is concerned about:

- (a) Lacks in providing information and supporting communication of all persons with disabilities, including those with more intensive support, such as the deafblind;
- (b) Barriers faced by persons with disabilities in gaining access to public information and communication, including on television programmes and websites, and gaps among local governments;
- (c) The lack of recognition in law of Japanese sign language as an official language, lack of training of sign language and lack of sign language interpretations across all areas of life.

46. The Committee recommends that the State party:

- (a) Develop legally binding information and communication standards at all levels to ensure the accessibility of information provided to the public, including on websites, television and media services;
- (b) Allocate sufficient funding for the development, promotion and use of accessible communication formats, such as Braille, deafblind interpretation, sign language, Easy Read, plain language, audio description, video transcription, captioning and tactile, augmentative and alternative means of communication;
- (c) Recognize in law Japanese sign language as an official language at the national level, promote access to and the use of sign language in all areas of life, and ensure the trainings and availability of qualified sign language interpreters.

Lao People's Democratic Republic (2022)

38. The Committee notes with concern:

- (a) The insufficient provision of information in accessible formats and of communications technology, in both public and private media outlets, and absence of accessible websites that provide public information;
- (b) The lack of recognition of the Lao sign language as an official language;
- (c) The lack of professionals trained in the use of sign language and tactile, Braille and Easy Read formats, particularly for persons who are deaf, deafblind, blind or visually impaired, persons with intellectual disabilities, and autistic persons;

(d) The cancellation of the radio programme “Friends of the Disabled” dedicated to disseminating essential information to and about persons with disabilities, due to insufficient funding in 2010.

39. The Committee recommends that the State party:

(a) Ensure that information provided to the general public is available to persons with disabilities in accessible formats, such as Braille, sign language, Easy Read, plain language, captioning, audio-description and tactile, augmentative and alternative means of communication, and ensure that websites are accessible and comply with the standards developed by the Web Accessibility Initiative of the World Wide Web Consortium;

(b) Recognize the Lao sign language as official language, promote the access to and the use of sign language in all areas of life, and ensure the availability of qualified sign language interpreters;

(c) Guarantee a pool of qualified relevant professionals trained in the use of tactile, Braille and Easy Read formats, in consultation with organizations of persons with disabilities;

(d) Re-establish the “Friends of the Disabled” radio programme, and consider integrating broadcasting and community engagement across social media platforms, and similar initiatives led by persons with disabilities.

New Zealand (2022)

43. The Committee is concerned about:

(a) Gaps in the provision of government information in accessible formats, such as Easy Read, sign language, Braille, and tactile, augmentative and alternative means of communication;

(b) The shortage of New Zealand Sign Language (NZSL) interpreters, including trilingual interpreters who can interpret between NZSL, English and Te Reo Māori.

(c) The limited television channels that provide captioning and audio description with funding only provided on a yearly basis;

(d) The lack of specific initiatives to increase the provision of accessible information and communications for Māori persons with disabilities.

44. The Committee recommends that the State party:

(a) Strengthen implementation of the Accessibility Charter by expanding its coverage to local authorities and district health boards, and increasing funding and capacity for the provision of accessible information and communication formats and technologies;

(b) Implement incentives and increase funding for the training and employment of sign language interpreters, including trilingual interpreters who can interpret between NZSL, English and Te Reo Māori, and adopt a national standardised accreditation framework for sign language;

(c) Adopt legislation to ensure captioning and audio description is provided on television channels with funding security;

(d) Develop specific initiatives to increase the provision of culturally appropriate, accessible information and communications for Māori persons with disabilities.

Republic of Korea (2022)

43. The Committee is concerned:

(a) About the insufficient provision of information in accessible formats and of information and communications technology, such as Easy Read, plain language, captioning, sign language, Braille, audio description, and tactile, augmentative and alternative means of communication, in both public and private media outlets, and in particular on the websites that provide public information, and the lack of access to information and communications technology by persons with disabilities;

(b) That the provision of Broadcast Programs Accessible for the Persons with Disabilities fails to include requirement for provision of adequate accessible information through easy-to-read/easy-to-understand content and through other access formats, modes and means of communication.

44. The Committee recommends that the State party:

- (a) Ensure the accessibility of all public information, including television and media services, for all persons with disabilities in accessible communication formats such as Braille, deafblind interpretation, sign language, Easy Read, plain language, audio description, captioning and subtitles by allocating adequate funding for its development, promotion and use, and ensure access to information and communications technology appropriate for the diversity of persons with disabilities;
- (b) Review the Guidelines on the Provision of Broadcast Programs Accessible for the Persons with Disabilities to include standards on providing adequate accessible information through Easy-to-Read/Easy-to-Understand content and through other access formats, modes and means of communication.

39. The Committee is concerned about the infringement on freedom of expression and opinion, peaceful assembly and freedom of association of persons with disabilities and their representative organizations in the national legislation and its practical application, and about reports of reprisals against and continuing pressure on civil society organizations for their advocacy work on the rights of persons with disabilities.

40. The Committee recalls its general comment No. 7 (2018) on the participation of persons with disabilities, including children with disabilities, through their representative organizations, in the implementation and monitoring of the Convention, and recommends that the State party recognize the role of civil society organizations, in particular organizations of persons with disabilities, as human rights defenders, prohibit any reprisals against individuals and organizations and take effective measures to protect the free exchange of ideas in the civic space. It also recommends that the State party revise its national legislation, in particular the Protection from Online Falsehoods and Manipulation Act 2019, the Foreign Interference (Countermeasures) Act 2021, the Administration of Justice (Protection) Act 2016 and the Public Order Act 2009, in accordance with the Human Rights Committee's General Comments No. 34 (2011) and No. 37 (2020), and adapt the jurisprudence of all administrative bodies and courts applying it accordingly.

41. The Committee notes with concern:

- (a) The lack of recognition of the Singapore sign language as an official language;
- (b) Barriers faced by persons with disabilities in gaining access to public information and communication, including to websites and media services, and the absence of legally binding information and communication standards for non-governmental websites and media services to ensure accessibility to information provided to the public.

42. The Committee recommends that the State party:

- (a) Recognize the Singapore sign language as an official language and promote access to and the use of sign language in all areas of life, ensure the availability of qualified sign language interpreters, and ensure close consultation and engagement with the deaf community, especially in schools, universities and other settings;
- (b) Enact legally binding information and communication standards for public and private websites and media services to ensure the accessibility of information provided to the public for all persons with disabilities.

Hungary (2022)

44. The Committee observes with concern the lack of access to media, telecommunication and information and communications technology services for persons with disabilities, in particular for persons with visual impairments, in the State party.

45. The Committee recommends that the State party be guided by the Web Content Accessibility Guidelines 2.1 and take appropriate measures to:

- (a) Ensure that persons with disabilities can exercise their right to freedom of expression and opinion, including the freedom to seek, receive and impart information and ideas on an equal basis with others and through all forms of communication of their choice, including but not limited to sign language, Braille, Easy Read, symbol systems, induction loops, subtitles, audio description, transcription and all other accessible means, modes and formats of communication;

(b) Fully transpose the Audiovisual Media Services Directive ((EU) 2018/1808) into the State party's legislation.

Jamaica (2022)

38. The Committee is concerned:

(a) About the insufficient provision of information in accessible formats and of information and communications technology, such as Easy Read, plain language, captioning, sign language, Braille, audio description, and tactile, augmentative and alternative means of communication, in both public and private media outlets, and in particular on the websites that provide public information, and the lack of access to information and communications technology by persons with disabilities;

(b) That despite the widespread use of Jamaican Sign Language, it has not been recognized as a national language, and that the Special Education Policy in which it would be made official is pending adoption.

39. The Committee recommends that the State party:

(a) Ensure the accessibility of all public information, including television and media services, for all persons with disabilities in accessible communication formats such as Braille, deafblind interpretation, sign language, Easy Read, plain language, audio description, captioning and subtitles by allocating adequate funding for its development, promotion and use, and ensure access to information and communications technology appropriate for the diversity of persons with disabilities;

(b) Strengthen sign language training, and that sign language be recognized as an official language of the State party.

Switzerland (2022)

41. The Committee notes with concern:

(a) The lack of recognition of the three Swiss sign languages as official languages;

(b) Barriers faced by persons with disabilities in gaining access to public information and communications, including on websites and media services.

42. The Committee recommends that the State party:

(a) Recognize the three Swiss sign languages as official languages at both the federal and the cantonal levels, promote access to and the use of sign languages in all areas of life, ensure the availability of qualified sign language interpreters, and ensure close consultation and engagement with the deaf community, especially in schools, universities and other settings;

(b) Develop legally binding information and communications standards at the federal, cantonal and municipal levels to ensure the accessibility of information provided to the public, including at public events and on websites, television and media services;

(c) Allocate sufficient funding for the development, promotion and use of accessible communication formats, such as Braille, deafblind interpretation, sign language, Easy Read, plain language, audio description, video transcription, captioning and tactile, augmentative and alternative means of communication.

Venezuela (2022)

38. It is of concern to the Committee that:

(a) There is no information on compliance with the Act on Social Responsibility in Radio, Television and Electronic Media, which makes compulsory the use of subtitles, translation into Venezuelan sign language and other necessary measures, and that not all official websites are accessible;

(b) Venezuelan sign language is not recognized as an official language;

(c) Certified interpreter training courses are inadequate or insufficient to meet the demand for translation services from deaf persons;

(d) Persons with disabilities do not have accessible and easily available information on the implementation of programmes and policies that concern them or on the action taken by the National Council for Persons with Disabilities.

39. The Committee recommends that the State party:

(a) Take steps to promote access to information and communications in public services and in the media in accessible formats, including news broadcasts and television and radio programmes;

(b) Recognize Venezuelan sign language as an official language of the State party;

(c) Increase the number of certified interpreter training courses with the effective participation of organizations of deaf persons in identifying their specific needs;

(d) Disseminate widely information on the implementation of programmes for persons with disabilities by the Government and the National Council for Persons with Disabilities in accessible media and formats.

Djibouti (2021)

37. The Committee observes with concern:

(a) The absence of a national sign language;

(b) The insufficient level of information in accessible format for persons with disabilities, including Braille, sign language and Easy Read formats and the lack of teachers and relevant professionals trained in the use of such assessable means and formats;

(c) Limited accessible information over websites and television channels for persons with disabilities, including those who are blind, deaf or hard of hearing.

38. The Committee recommends that the State party:

(a) Support deaf persons and their representative organizations to develop a national sign language and recognize it as an official language;

(b) Develop a pool of qualified sign language interpreters and teachers trained in the use of tactile, Braille and Easy Read formats;

(c) Adopt measures to strengthen the work of the National Commission on Communication, including through allocating adequate budget, to ensure the accessibility of information on television and websites, for all persons with disabilities, particularly for blind or partially sighted persons.

France (2021)

44. The Committee observes with concern:

(a) Information about the lack of access to broadcasting services and audio-visual content, including public debates, movies in French on media (TV);

(b) That sign language is recognised only in certain areas, such as education;

(c) That sign language interpretation is not recognised as a profession, and the lack of professional requirements and specific training for sign language interpreters;

(d) The lack of information about measures aimed at facilitating the exercise of the right of persons with disabilities to freedom of expression and opinion, including the freedom to seek, receive and impart information and ideas on an equal basis with others and through all forms of communication of their choice.

The Committee recommends that the State party:

(a) Ensure access to public and private broadcasting services and audio-visual content, through the sign language interpretation, subtitles audio-description and in accessible and usable formats for persons with disabilities;

(b) Recognise French Sign Language as an official language, including at the constitutional level, and promote access to and the use of sign languages in all areas of life;

(c) Recognise professional status to sign language interpreters, set up the professional standards of sign language interpretation, and deliver systematic and extensive trainings of language interpreters;

(d) Develop augmentative and alternative, and all other accessible means, modes and formats of communication of their choice by persons with disabilities, including Braille, Easy Read and autism referent persons.

Estonia (2021)

42. The Committee observes with concern:

- (a) Information about the lack of access to sign language interpretation and speech-to-text services for hard-of-hearing and deaf persons, particularly in education programmes, employment, health services and cultural activities, and in rural areas;
- (b) The low number of sign language interpreters;
- (c) The lack of measures to facilitate the use of Braille;
- (d) The barriers faced by persons with vision impairments, deaf or hard-of-hearing persons and persons with intellectual disabilities in gaining access to public information and mass media, including television and public media services.

43. The Committee recommends that the State party:

- (a) Ensure access to sign language interpretation and speech-to-text services for deaf and hard-of-hearing persons in all areas of life;
- (b) Strengthen measures, including through grants and other incentives, to increase the official training of sign language interpreters, including at the university level, and adopt measures to raise awareness about deaf culture and the Estonian sign language;
- (c) Adopt a strategy to promote the teaching and use of Braille in society and allocate financial resources to facilitate access to the equipment necessary for producing information in Braille;
- (d) Ensure the accessibility of all public information, including television and media services, for all persons with disabilities in accessible communication formats such as Braille, deaf-blind interpretation, sign language, Easy Read, plain language, audio description, captioning and subtitles by allocating adequate funding for its development, promotion and use;
- (e) Take measures to transpose into the State party's legislation Directive 2018/1808 of the European Parliament and of the Council of 14 November 2018 amending Directive 2010/13/EU on the coordination of certain provisions laid down by law, regulation or administrative action in member States concerning the provision of audiovisual media services (Audiovisual Media Services Directive) in view of changing market realities.

Albania (2019)

37. The Committee is concerned:

- (a) That there is a lack of data on national action plans or long-term strategies to strengthen the availability of accessible services and information, including media services and Internet pages provided to the public in sign language, captioning, Braille, Easy Read and plain language;
- (b) That sign language is not adequately recognized as an official language of the State party;
- (c) About the insufficient measures to increase access to sign language interpretation services and other means and modes of communication for persons with disabilities.

38. The Committee recommends that the State party:

- (a) Implement national action plans or long-term strategies with a clear roadmap to strengthen the availability of accessible information and communications services open to or provided to the public, including media services, telecoms operators and the Internet pages in sign language, captioning, Braille, Easy Read and plain language;
- (b) Adopt effective legislation and strategies to ensure the full recognition of sign language and provision of Braille with the involvement of the relevant organisations of persons with disabilities;

(c) Adopt capacity-building programmes, including training on accessible modes, means and formats, including Easy Read and sign language, and provide sign language interpretation for services open to the public.

Australia (2019)

41. The Committee is concerned that, besides a provision under the Disability Discrimination Act, there are no legally binding information and communications standards that require information to be fully accessible.

42. The Committee recommends that the State party develop a plain language law requiring government agencies to use clear communication and that it also develop legally binding information and communications standards so that information, particularly all information about significant changes to laws, policies, systems and obligations, is provided in accessible modes, means and formats, including Braille, Easy Read and sign language (Auslan), and that communication supports are routinely available. It also recommends that the State party promote and support the use of sign language (Auslan) and take steps to ensure the availability of qualified sign language interpreters.

39. It is of concern to the Committee that:

- (a) Measures to promote access to information provided in the media in accessible formats are lacking and not all government websites are accessible;
- (b) Ecuadorian Sign Language is not recognized as an official language of the State party;
- (c) Qualified interpreter training courses are not sufficient or adequate given the number of deaf persons.

40. The Committee recommends that the State party:

- (a) Take steps to promote access to information and communications in public institutions and in the media in accessible formats, including news broadcasts and television and radio programmes;
- (b) Recognize Ecuadorian Sign Language as an official language of the State party;
- (c) Increase the number of certified interpreter training courses with the effective participation of organizations of deaf persons in identifying their specific needs.

El Salvador (2019)

42. The Committee is concerned:

- (a) By several government websites that continue to be inaccessible, and that there is no legal provision ensuring the existence and availability of information in accessible formats;
- (b) About the limited availability of professional Salvadoran Sign Language interpreters, and the lack of an official register of Salvadoran Sign Language interpreters and of technical aids for persons who are deaf or hard of hearing.

43. The Committee recommends that the State party:

- (a) Ensure that all government sites are accessible, and adopt measures to promote the use of accessible communication formats by the media sector such as websites and television and radio programmes that are provided to or open to the public;
- (b) Increase training courses for qualified Salvadoran Sign Language interpreters, and establish a register of Salvadoran Sign Language interpreters.

Greece (2019)

32. The Committee is concerned about:

- (a) The barriers that persons with disabilities face in accessing information, particularly in the public sector, owing, inter alia, to the lack of documents in accessible formats and the lack of sign language interpretation;

(b) Insufficient information on national action plans or long-term strategies to improve the accessibility of persons with disabilities to information, including audiovisual media services and the Internet, by, inter alia, providing sign language interpretation, captioning and documentation in Braille and Easy Read formats.

33. The Committee recommends that the State party ensure that providers of services to the public, particularly public broadcasters, telecommunications operators and public libraries, progressively provide information for persons with disabilities in accessible formats, such as sign language, Braille, Easy Read formats and captioning, based on an established and monitored action plan. It also recommends that the State party adopt effective measures to facilitate the use of sign language, Easy Read formats and Braille, with the active involvement of the relevant organizations of persons with disabilities.

India (2019)

44. The Committee is concerned about:

- (a) The lack of recognition of sign language as an official language and the very low number of sign language interpreters;
- (b) The lack of measures to provide Easy Read and tactile forms of communications and to improve information services, particularly for augmentative and alternative communication;
- (c) The low number of television channels that provide closed captioning and sign language interpretation, and the attitudinal barriers in private broadcast service providers regarding accessibility of information for persons with disabilities.

45. The Committee recommends that the State party:

- (a) Recognize sign language as official language, allocate public resources to provide training and increase the availability of sign language interpreters in court proceedings and in health-care, education, leisure, religious and cultural services;
- (b) Ensure that all persons with disabilities have access to all public information and services using augmentative and alternative communication, Easy Read, plain language, tactile communication and accessible digital Internet-based services, taking account of internationally recognized accessibility standards;
- (c) Enforce the national broadcast legislation that introduced sanctions for lack of compliance with the accessibility requirements.

Iraq (2019)

39. The Committee is concerned about:

- (a) The lack of official recognition of Iraqi sign language, the insufficient number of vocational training programmes in sign language interpretation and the limited involvement of persons with disabilities in the teaching of sign language and in the certification of sign language interpreters;
- (b) The insufficient provision of information and communications technologies and of information in accessible formats such as Easy Read, plain language, captioning, sign language, Braille, audio-description and tactile, augmentative and alternative means of communication;
- (c) The inaccessibility of most television programmes and websites.

40. The Committee recommends that the State party:

- (a) Officially recognize Iraqi sign language, increase the number of vocational training programmes in sign language interpretation and of persons with disabilities among sign language teachers and establish, in close consultation with and with the active involvement of persons with hearing impairments through their representative organizations, a mechanism to certify the quality of sign language interpretation services;
- (b) Promote and facilitate the use of Easy Read and other accessible formats, modes and means of communication and facilitate persons with disabilities' access to information and communications technologies, including through the provision of low-cost software and assistive devices to all persons with disabilities, including those living in rural areas;

(c) Redouble its efforts to ensure the accessibility of television programmes and government websites, ensure that private entities providing services to the public through the Internet do so in accessible formats and also ensure that websites comply with the standards developed by the Web Accessibility Initiative of the World Wide Web Consortium.

Kuwait (2019)

42. The Committee is concerned about:

(a) The absence of a coherent policy to promote and protect the right of access to information and communications in accessible formats, including Braille, accessible digital formats and Easy Read;

(b) The limited use of sign language and the lack of recognition of Kuwaiti sign language.

43. The Committee recommends that the State party:

(a) Develop a coherent policy to ensure access to information and communications in accessible formats, including Braille, accessible digital formats and Easy Read;

(b) In close consultation with and with the active participation of organizations of deaf persons, raise awareness about sign language and promote the learning of sign language, the availability of qualified sign language interpreters and the use of sign language in all settings, particularly in education, the workplace and community settings;

(c) Recognize and use Kuwaiti sign language as an official language, having due regard for the language of communication of choice of persons with disabilities.

Myanmar (2019)

41. The Committee is concerned about:

(a) The shrinking space for the enjoyment of the right to freedom of expression and opinion, including the freedom to seek, receive and impart information and ideas, that affects persons with disabilities;

(b) The insufficient provision of information intended for the general public to persons with disabilities in accessible formats and technologies, in both public and private media outlets;

(c) The lack of access to information and communication technology and the absence of accessible websites for persons with disabilities;

(d) The lack of relevant professionals trained in the use of sign language and tactile, Braille and Easy Read formats, particularly for persons who are deaf, deafblind, blind or visually impaired and persons with intellectual disabilities.

42. The Committee recommends that the State party:

(a) Take all measures necessary to ensure that persons with disabilities are able to enjoy the right to freedom of expression and opinion, including the freedom to seek, receive and impart information and ideas, including in its efforts to achieve Sustainable Development Goal 16;

(b) Adopt and implement legislative and policy measures to ensure that information provided to the general public is available to persons with disabilities in accessible formats, such as Easy Read, plain language, captioning, sign language, Braille, audio-description and tactile, augmentative and alternative means of communication;

(c) Ensure access to information and communications technology taking into account the diversity of persons with disabilities, including by ensuring that websites are accessible and comply with the standards developed by the Web Accessibility Initiative of the World Wide Web Consortium (W3C) ;

(d) Develop a pool of qualified sign language interpreters and other relevant professionals trained in the use of tactile, Braille and Easy Read formats, in consultation with organizations of persons with disabilities.

Cuba (2019)

37. The Committee is concerned about the insufficient provision of information in accessible formats and information and communications technology, such as Easy Read, plain language, subtitles, sign language, Braille, audio-description, and tactile, augmentative and alternative means of communication, in both public and private media outlets.

38. The Committee recommends that the State party ensure that information provided to the general public through mass media is available to persons with disabilities in accessible formats, such as Braille, Easy Read and sign language, and technologies appropriate for different impairments, including by ensuring that websites are accessible and comply with the standards developed by the Web Accessibility Initiative of the World Wide Web Consortium. It further recommends that training on sign language is strengthened and that sign language be recognized as an official language of the State party.

35. The Committee is concerned about the absence of information in accessible formats for persons with disabilities, including Braille, sign language and Easy Read; the low level of information provided to persons with disabilities in the electronic media; the lack of accessible websites for persons with disabilities; the absence of a national sign language; and the lack of trained teachers in sign language, tactile, translators on Easy Read and Braille.

36. The Committee recommends that the State Party:

- (a) Support deaf persons and their representative organisations to develop a national sign language and recognize it as an official language; and establish a pool of qualified sign language interpreters and teachers in tactile, Braille and Easy Read translation skills;
- (b) Adopt appropriate legislation and measures to ensure that website owners and designers make their websites accessible to persons with disabilities, especially for blind or visually impaired persons, and ensure that television stations provide news and programmes in accessible formats, especially for persons who are deaf or hard of hearing.

Norway (2019)

33. The Committee is concerned about:

- (a) The insufficient provision of information and communication in accessible formats and technologies, such as Easy Read, plain language, captioning, sign language, Braille, and audio-description, particularly in official interactions;
- (b) The lack of accessibility of most television live broadcast and mass media;
- (c) The Broadcasting Act that only requires commercial television broadcasters with more than five percent viewers to caption their broadcasts for a limited time from 6pm to 11pm.

34. The Committee recommends that the State party:

- (a) Increase the provision of accessible information and communication formats and assistive technologies available, which are appropriate for persons with disabilities, including web accessibility, sign language, captioning, Braille, Easy Read and plain language in relation to all public services;
- (b) Increase the accessibility in mass media, particularly in live broadcasting;
- (c) Strengthen requirements of the Broadcasting Act to ensure captioning of all broadcasters at all times.

Rwanda (2019)

39. The Committee is concerned that:

- (a) The provision of information in accessible formats for persons with disabilities is not mandatory under article 2 of the Ministerial Order No. 01/09/MININFOR of 10 August 2009;
- (b) Sign language is not recognized as an official language under the law, that the Rwanda sign language dictionary is yet to be finalized and that sign language interpretation services are not fully available;
- (c) Persons with disabilities do not have access to public information and mass media in accessible formats, and to information technology, on an equal basis with others.

40. The Committee recommends that the State party:

- (a) Review article 2 of the aforementioned ministerial order to make mandatory for both public and private media to provide information in accessible formats for persons with disabilities;
- (b) Recognize Rwandan sign language as an official language, expedite the completion of the Rwanda sign language dictionary and put into place training, standardization and certification programmes for sign language interpreters and ensure that sign language interpretation services are available to persons who are deaf;
- (c) Ensure access to public information for all persons with disabilities, and develop and use accessible communication formats and technology for mass media, including websites and software applications, and ensure access to information technology for persons with disabilities, on an equal basis with others.

Saudi Arabia (2019)

39. The Committee is concerned at:

- (a) The non-recognition of Saudi sign language as an official language in the State party's legislation, as well as at the absence of certification programmes and code of ethics for sign language interpreters;
- (b) The insufficient number of teachers trained in sign language and tactile formats, and of translators able to render texts in Easy Read and Braille;
- (c) The absence of captioned services in Arabic language on TV programmes and public events, the small display of sign language interpreters on TV, and female sign language interpreters covering their faces in public meetings resulting in inaccessibility;
- (d) Slow progress in the implementation of accessibility standards for websites.

40. The Committee recommends that the State party:

- (a) Adopt legislation to ensure the full recognition of the Saudi sign language as an official language, teach it in schools, and develop a mandatory certification programme and code of ethics for sign language interpreters;
- (b) Reinforce training of teachers at all educational levels in tactile format, Braille and Easy Read translation skills;
- (c) Ensure that public broadcasters, telecom operators and organizers of public events provide information in accessible forms such as Easy Read, captioning for all persons with disabilities, and that sign language interpreters are displayed large enough on TV, as well as that their faces are visible to ensure accessibility;
- (d) Redouble efforts to ensure the implementation of the World Wide Web Consortium (W3C) Web Content Accessibility Guidelines (WCAG) to all public websites, and encourage private entities providing services through the internet do so in accessible formats for all persons with disabilities.

Senegal (2019)

37. The Committee is concerned about:

- (a) The lack of recognition of sign language as an official language in the State party;
- (b) The limited number of trained teachers in sign language, tactile, Braille and translators on Easy Read, particularly for persons who are deaf, deafblind, blind or visually impaired and persons with intellectual disabilities;
- (c) The inaccessibility of websites and television channels to provide information in accessible formats for persons with disabilities, particularly those who are blind, deaf or hard of hearing.

38. The Committee recommends that the State party:

- (a) Adopt concrete measures to recognize and promote sign language as an official language;
- (b) Develop a pool of qualified sign language interpreters, and teachers in tactile, Braille and Easy-Read translation skills;
- (c) Adopt appropriate legislation and effective measures to ensure that all websites are accessible to persons with disabilities, especially persons who are blind and visually impaired and that television channels provide news and programmes in accessible formats, including audio-description, sign language and captioning, especially for persons who are blind, deaf or hard of hearing.

Spain (2019)

39. The Committee is concerned about the limited availability of:

- (a) Sign language interpreters in the State party;
- (b) Technical aids for persons with hearing impairments due to the eligibility age limits and lack of measures to ensure affordability;
- (c) Public information and mass media in accessible and usable formats for persons with disabilities.

40. The Committee recommends that the State party:

- (a) Ensure full access to sign language interpretation services for persons who are deaf and increase the training of sign language interpreters, particularly in rural areas;
- (b) Ensure all persons with hearing impairments are eligible for affordable technical aids;
- (c) Take measures to promote accessibility of websites and mobile applications in the private sector;
- (d) Develop and use accessible communication formats, such as Braille, deaf-blind interpretation, sign language, Easy Read and plain language, audio description, captioning, subtitles and others, for mass media and public information, and allocate adequate funding for their development, promotion and use, in accordance with articles 24 (3) and 29 (b) of the Convention, as well as general comment No. 2 (2014) on accessibility and art. 7 of the European Union Directive 2018/1808.

Türkiye (2019)

44. The Committee is concerned about the absence of:

- (a) A mechanism to certify qualified Turkish Sign Language interpreters, and insufficient measures to disseminate and promote the use of Turkish Sign Language in public offices, schools, cultural facilities;
- (b) Sufficient measures to provide persons with disabilities living in rural areas with information in accessible formats, including in Braille, Easy Read and accessible information and communications technology;
- (c) The insufficient enforcement of the Web Content Accessibility Guidelines and the low percentage of public websites compliant with these guidelines and that only some broadcasters apply sign language interpretation and audio description.

45. The Committee recommends that the State party:

- (a) In conjunction with organizations of Deaf persons, establish a mechanism to ensure the quality of interpretation services;
- (b) Promote and facilitate the use of accessible formats, modes and means of communication, including in Braille, Easy Read, and grant persons with disabilities, including those living in rural areas, access to information and communications technology, including the provision of low-cost software and assistive devices;
- (c) Redouble its efforts to ensure accessibility of government websites, ensure that private entities providing information service through the internet do so in accessible formats for all persons with disabilities, and apply sanctions to broadcast companies in case of lack of compliance with accessibility standards.

Vanuatu (2019)

36. The Committee is concerned about the challenges faced by persons with disabilities to exercise their right to freedom of expression and access to information due to the lack of information in accessible formats and communication barriers. It is also concerned at the lack of official recognition of sign languages.

37. The Committee recommends that the State party:

- (a) Continue its efforts to facilitate that the local Deaf community, in cooperation with the regional and international Deaf community, develop a national sign language for recognition by the State party, provide training of sign language interpreters and introduce a certification system;
- (b) Adopt legislative and other measures to improve the availability of all public information in accessible formats, such as the use of Braille and Easy Read.

Algeria (2018)

36. The Committee is concerned by the absence of a coherent policy to promote and protect the right of access to information in accessible formats including Braille, Easy Read and to officially recognize Algerian sign language.

37. The Committee recommends that the State party develop a coherent policy for the promotion and protection of information in accessible formats including Braille, accessible digital formats, Easy Read and the recognition of Algerian sign language.

Bulgaria (2018)

43. The Committee notes with concern that Bulgarian Sign Language is still not officially recognized and that Bulgarian Sign Language Act is yet to be adopted. It is also concerned about lack of government support for the work being done to provide information in Easy Read. Furthermore, it is concerned about insufficient implementation of the EU Directive 2016/2102 on the accessibility of the websites and mobile applications of public sector bodies.

44. The Committee recommends that the State party:

(a) Officially recognizes Bulgarian Sign Language by adopting and implementing the Bulgarian Sign Language Act;

(b) Take measures to provide information in Easy Read and strengthen the efforts and entities that are already supporting and using Easy Read and other accessible formats;

(c) Take measures to progressively implement the European Union Directive 2016/2102 on the accessibility of the websites and mobile applications of public sector bodies in order to ensure full accessibility of websites.

Malta (2018)

31. The Committee is concerned about:

(a) The insufficient provision of information in accessible formats and information and communication technologies, such as Easy Read, plain language, subtitles, sign language, Braille, audio-description, and tactile, augmentative and alternative means of communication;

(b) The lack of accessibility of most television broadcast and mass media, beyond news bulletins and political debates;

(c) The limited number of sign language interpreters.

32. The Committee recommends that the State party:

(a) Increase the provision of accessible information and communication formats and technologies, which are appropriate for persons with disabilities, including web accessibility, sign language, subtitles, Braille, Easy Read, plain language, and tactile, augmentative and alternative means of communication in relation to all public services;

(b) Ensure that persons with disabilities have access to television broadcast and mass media;

(c) Adopt capacity-building programmes, including the training of sign language interpreters, and ensure the availability of sufficient sign language interpreters.

Philippines (2018)

38. The Committee is concerned about:

(a) The lack of recognition and support of the specific cultural and linguistic identity of persons who are deaf through the promotion of the Filipino Sign Language and deaf culture;

(b) The lack of Easy Read materials available for persons with intellectual disabilities;

(c) The fact that the Sign language interpreter subtitles were not enacted by the Congress, and that the bill of Filipino Sign Language has yet to be adopted.

39. The Committee recommends that the State party adopt R.A. No. 7277 Section 22, and Rule VI A and other related measures to ensure persons with hearing impairments be provided with language subtitles in its newscast program.

Poland (2018)

36. The Committee is concerned about the lack of:

- (a) Promotion of Braille, augmentative and alternative modes of communication, including Easy Read;
- (b) Accessibility of public e-services for persons with disabilities;
- (c) Effective implementation of the Act on sign language due to its narrow scope, lack of clarity and obligations for public and private service providers to make sign language interpretation available, especially in health care services;
- (d) Clear obligation within the Broadcasting Act for the use of sign language interpretation, subtitles and audio description at TV and radio programmes; it is further concerned by formal requirements in the Copyright Act that hinder the use of sign language.

37. The Committee recommends that the State party:

- (a) Develop the use of Braille, augmentative and alternative modes of communication and Easy Read across all sectors;
- (b) Expedite the adaptation of websites of public institutions to the needs of all persons with disabilities and carry out regular monitoring;
- (c) Update and give effect to the Act on sign language to ensure effective implementation of the rights of deaf persons, including access to sign language interpretation in all sectors at the expense of the State;
- (d) Develop clear and progressive obligations for public and private broadcasters within the Broadcasting Act for the use of sign language interpretation, subtitles and audio description, and amend the Copyright Act to ensure unrestricted access to interpretation into sign language for all broadcasts.

South Africa (2018)

38. The Committee is concerned about:

- (a) The slow pace in amending the Constitution to reflect the adoption of the South African Sign Language as an official language of deaf persons;
- (b) The lack of sufficient teachers trained in sign language, tactile, translators on Easy-Read Braille, the inaccessibility of websites and inability of television stations to provide information in accessible formats for persons who are deaf and hard of hearing;
- (c) The lack of meaningful consultation with representative organisations of deaf persons in assigning sign language interpreters at important national functions.

39. The Committee recommends that the State party:

- (a) Expedite the amendment of the constitution to reflect the adoption of the South African Sign Language as the 12th official language and conduct effective training for sign language interpreters;
- (b) Adopt legislative provisions to ensure that information provided to the general public through the mass media is available to persons with disabilities in accessible formats, such as Braille, Easy-Read and sign language, and technologies appropriate to different impairments, including by ensuring that websites are accessible and comply with the standards developed by the Web Accessibility Initiative (WAI) of the World Wide Web Consortium (W3C);
- (c) Make the rights of persons with disabilities as an integral part of the teacher-training courses mandatory and ensure that television stations provide news and programmes in accessible formats for all persons with disabilities, including deaf persons.

North Macedonia (2018)

38. The Committee is concerned about the very limited public information that is accessible to persons with disabilities, including through sign language interpretation, tactile, braille and Easy Read and other alternative forms of communication in both public and private media outlets. The Committee is also concerned about the lack of standardisation, recognition and implementation of sign language as an official language.

39. The Committee recommends that the State party:

(a) Consider adopting the bill on the right to access information and eliminate any limitation that hinders the exercise by persons with disabilities of their freedom to seek, receive and impart information and ideas on an equal basis with others, including by ensuring that website owners and designers make their websites accessible to persons with disabilities, especially blind, and visually impaired persons;

(b) Adopt concrete legal and implementation measures to standardise, recognize and use sign language as an official language and to be taught in schools; develop a pool of qualified sign language interpreters, and teachers in tactile, Braille and Easy Read skills and ensure that television stations provide news and programmes in accessible formats, especially for deaf, deaf-blind and hard of hearing persons.

Haiti (2018)

38. The Committee is concerned about:

(a) Delays in the development and recognition of Haitian sign language and the limited number of sign language interpreters;

(b) The insufficient provision of information in accessible formats and technologies such as Easy Read, plain language, subtitles, sign language, Braille, and audio-description, particularly in official interactions;

(c) Inaccessible information in the media, including radio, television, newspapers and public websites.

39. The Committee recommends that the State party:

(a) Codify Haitian sign language and expedite the enactment of legislation to recognize it as an official language for official interaction;

(b) Take measures to improve accessibility of information and communication formats and technologies, which are appropriate for persons with disabilities, including web accessibility, sign language, subtitles, Braille, Easy Read and plain language in relation to all public services and implement capacity-building programmes for personnel delivering services to persons with disabilities, including training in Braille, Easy Read, tactile communication and sign language;

(c) Increase accessibility in the media, particularly in live broadcasting.

Nepal (2018)

33. The Committee is concerned at the absence of a Centre for Sign Language Research and Training of Sign Language Interpreters, and at the absence of a state system for certification and approval of sign language interpreters' qualification.

34. The Committee recommends that the State party take appropriate measures to establish a Centre for Sign Language Research and Training of Sign Language Interpreters, and ensure their certification involving representative organisations for the deaf.

Oman

39. The Committee is concerned about the absence of standards to ensure the accessibility by persons with disabilities of information provided to the public, including through the media, in particular for persons that are blind, visually impaired, deaf or have a hearing disability, and persons with intellectual disabilities. The Committee is also concerned about the insufficient number of teachers trained in sign language, tactile, Easy Read and Braille to ensure accessible formats to persons with disabilities.

40. The Committee recommends that the State party:

(a) Adopt legislative provisions to ensure that information provided to the general public through mass media is also available to persons with disabilities in accessible formats and technologies appropriate to different kinds of impairments, for example, Braille, sign language and Easy-Read, including by ensuring that web sites are accessible and comply with the standards developed by the Web Accessibility Initiative (WAI) of the World Wide Web Consortium (W3C);

(b) Continue to promote sign language, including by expanding the “Understand Me” programme and through the establishment of a visual communication service, as well as intensify training and accreditation programmes for sign language interpreters.

44. The Committee welcomes that the number of sign language interpretation hours has recently increased. It is however concerned about the insufficient number of sign language interpreters and non-transparent monitoring of quality of their services with special regards to public service providers. The Committee is also concerned about the lack of public service information available in Easy Read format. It is furthermore concerned about the lack of information on the implementation of the recently ratified Marrakesh treaty.

45. The Committee urges the State party to establish clear and binding obligations and standards for public services in ensuring info-communication accessibility with regard to all types of disabilities with the relevant and effective safeguards after consultations with organizations of persons with disabilities. In relation to this, according to paragraph 141 of written replies (CRPD/C/ RUS /Q/1/Add.1) to the list of issues, the Committee recommends to set up a national register to monitor in a transparent manner the facilities of particular importance to persons with disabilities. The Committee recommends that the State party provide information on the progressive implementation of the Marrakesh treaty based on a clear roadmap in its next periodic report.

37. The Committee is concerned about the insufficiency of studies carried out by the State party to promote the recognition of Creole sign language as an official language and about the insufficient efforts to ensure that public information is accessible to persons with disabilities, including through accessible formats such as Braille, sign language interpretation, audio description and Easy Read. It is also concerned about the lack of accessibility of information in the mass media.

38. The Committee recommends that the State party:

(a) Formally develop Creole sign language, in collaboration with organizations of persons with disabilities and academia from other neighbouring Creole language-speaking countries, and officially recognize Creole sign language;

(b) Take measures to improve the accessibility of information and communications formats and technologies that are appropriate for persons with disabilities, including web accessibility, sign language, subtitles, Braille, Easy Read and plain language, in relation to all public services;

(c) Increase the accessibility of the mass media, particularly with respect to live broadcasting.

Slovenia (2018)

35. The Committee is concerned about:

(a) The insufficient accessibility to all, public and private services of information and communication, including TV and Internet, for all persons with disabilities, especially for persons with intellectual disabilities;

(b) The insufficient provision of sign languages, Braille, augmentative and alternative communication, and all other accessible means, modes and formats of communication, including Easy Read, by public authorities at the national and municipal level;

(c) The lack of implementation of the Law on the use of the Slovenian sign language.

36. The Committee recommends that the State party develop time-bound strategies and allocate budget for ensuring:

(a) Accessibility of information and communication provided by all, public and private, mass media services, including TV and Internet, for all persons with disabilities;

(b) The development of standards of the use of sign language, Braille, augmentative and alternative communication, including Easy Read, and all other accessible means, modes and formats of communication, including mobile applications, and its implementation in overall public and municipal sector;

(c) Recognition of the Slovene sign language as an official language in the State party, and training of sign language and tactile interpreters as well as teachers, public authorities, parents on Slovenian sign language.

Sudan (2018)

43. The Committee is concerned about how little public information is accessible to persons with disabilities, including through sign language interpretation, tactile, braille and Easy Read and other alternative forms of communication in both public and private media outlets. The Committee is also concerned about the lack of recognition of sign language as an official language.

44. The Committee recommends that the State party:

(a) Consider adopting the bill on the right to access information and eliminate any limitation that hinders the exercise by persons with disabilities of their freedom to seek, receive and impart information and ideas on an equal basis with others, including by ensuring that website owners and designers make their websites accessible to persons with disabilities, especially blind and visually impaired persons;

(b) Adopt concrete measures to recognize sign language as an official language and to be taught in schools; develop a pool of qualified sign language interpreters, and teachers in tactile, Braille and Easy Read skills and ensure that television stations provide news and programmes in accessible formats, especially for deaf and hard of hearing persons.

34. The Committee is concerned about the absence of a comprehensive legal framework to ensure that both public and private entities providing services to the general public and mass media providing information, including through the Internet, do so in accessible forms and formats for all persons with disabilities, including Easy Read formats on websites, subtitling and sign language interpretation on television.

35. The Committee recommends that the State party adopt a comprehensive legal framework to ensure that all information and communications provided to the general public are available to all persons with disabilities, including access to the Internet, Easy Read texts, subtitling, Braille and sign language interpretation.

Luxembourg (2017)

38. The Committee is concerned about:

(a) The insufficient provision of information and communication in accessible formats and technologies, such as Easy Read, plain language, subtitles, sign language, Braille, and audio-description, particularly in official interactions;

(b) The lack of accessibility of most television live broadcast and mass media;

(c) The lack of official recognition of sign language and the limited number of interpreters;

(d) The insufficient number of Easy Read translators.

39. The Committee recommends that the State party:

(a) Increase the provision of accessible information and communication formats and technologies, which are appropriate for persons with disabilities, including web accessibility, sign language, subtitles, Braille, Easy Read and plain language in relation to all public services;

(b) Expedite the enactment of legislation to recognize German sign language with a possibility of using it in official interaction, and promoting other sign languages to respect the multilingual character of the State party;

- (c) Adopt capacity-building programmes, including the training of Easy Read translators and sign language interpreters, and provide sign language interpretation for services open to the public;
- (d) (d) Increase accessibility in mass media, particularly in live broadcasting.

Montenegro (2017)

40. The Committee is concerned about the largely insufficient availability of public information and mass media for persons with disabilities in accessible and usable formats, such as Braille, deaf-blind interpretation, sign language, easy and plain language, audio description, captioning, subtitles and others. It is also concerned about:

- (a) The non-recognition of Montenegrin sign language as an official language and the State party's insufficient efforts to effectively promote and facilitate the use of sign language, as well as the use of all other alternative methods and accessible formats of communication, particularly when persons with disabilities are engaged in official interactions;
- (b) The absence of information about the established and reliable procedures to apply for sign language interpretation in public proceedings and in public life events.

41. The Committee recommends that the State party develop and use accessible communication formats, as listed above, for mass media and public information, and allocate adequate funding for their development, promotion and use, in accordance with articles 24 (3) and 29 (b) of the Convention, as well as general comment No. 2 (2014) on accessibility. In this regard, it also recommends that the State party provide for the full legal recognition of the sign language of the Montenegrin deaf community and of Braille.

Morocco (2017)

42. The Committee is concerned about the lack of a unified sign language in Morocco that can be taught in public and private schools and recognized as an official language of deaf persons. It is also concerned about the lack of teachers trained in sign language and tactile formats and of translators able to render texts in Easy Read and Braille, the inaccessibility of websites and the inability of television stations to provide information in accessible formats for persons who are deaf or hard of hearing.

43. The Committee recommends that the State party:

- (a) Adopt concrete measures to develop a unified Moroccan sign language that will be recognized as an official language of deaf persons and taught in schools, develop a pool of qualified sign language interpreters and teachers trained in tactile format, Braille and Easy Read translation skills and ensure that television stations provide news and programmes in accessible formats, especially for persons who are deaf or hard of hearing;
- (b) Adopt appropriate legislation and measures to ensure that website owners and designers make their websites accessible to persons with disabilities, especially blind and visually impaired persons;
- (c) Expedite action on the adoption of the bill on the right of access to information and eliminate any limitation therein that hinders the enjoyment by persons with disabilities of that right.

Panama (2017)

44. The Committee regrets how little public information is accessible to persons with disabilities, including through sign language interpretation, audio description and Easy Read on television.

45. The Committee recommends that the State party make accessible the broadcasting of all public information, especially with regard to national processes of concern to all inhabitants and to emergency situations and/or natural disasters, irrespective of the media used, for all persons with disabilities, through accessible formats and technology adapted to the various types of disabilities, which should also be available in the native languages of the country's indigenous communities.

United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland (2017)

46. The Committee notes with concern:

- (a) The limited provision of accessible information from public services and authorities and the insufficient obligatory standards for making websites accessible and for monitoring ICT-accessibility;
- (b) The insufficient resources for the education and training of sign language interpreters and the insufficient availability of and access to high-quality educated sign language interpreters, especially in relation to education, employment, health and leisure activities;
- (c) The lack of training and education for families, classmates and co-workers in high-quality sign language communication in order to better provide for the inclusion within the community of deaf persons and hard of hearing persons.

47. The Committee recommends that the State party, in consultation with organizations representing persons with disabilities:

- (a) Identify outstanding gaps in the implementation of obligatory accessibility standards on information channels based on ICT;
- (b) Ensure that legislation provides for the right to high-quality sign language interpretation and other forms of alternative communication in all spheres of life for deaf persons and hard of hearing persons, in accordance with the Convention;
- (c) Allocate resources for the education of children with hearing impairments, their families and others, such as classmates and co-workers, in British Sign Language and tactile language.

Armenia (2017)

35. The Committee is concerned that accessibility of information and communication is very limited for persons with disabilities, and that:

- (a) Training of sign language interpreters is insufficient, resulting in an inadequate number of interpreters in public and private services, and that television programmes lack subtitles for persons with hearing impairment;
- (b) Accessible technologies and formats of information and communication, including Internet websites and easy-read formats, are critically limited, particularly for persons with visual impairments and those with intellectual disabilities, and the use of Braille is restricted to specialized, segregated settings;
- (c) Sign language is not recognized as an official language of the State party.

36. The Committee recommends that the State party:

- (a) Invest in the systematic training of sign language interpreters and provide sign language interpretation in public and private services, and ensure that television programmes are duly interpreted and subtitled for persons with hearing impairment;
- (b) Adopt accessible information and communication formats and technologies that are appropriate for persons with disabilities, including web accessibility, Braille and easy-read and plain formats, in relation to all public services;
- (c) Recognize the use of sign language in official interactions.

38. The Committee is concerned that there is a lack of data on the existence of a standardized unified Braille code to enhance its usage in education and employment, as well as on available applications of information and communications technology. It is also concerned that there is a lack of information on procedures for deaf persons to request sign language interpretation in public proceedings and in public life events, with the exception of in the justice system and as regards effective access to electronic media.

39. The Committee recommends that the State party ensure that public broadcasters and telecoms operators provide information in accessible forms such as Easy Read, closed captioning and subtitling for all persons with disabilities, and that it adopt effective legislation to ensure full recognition of sign language(s) and Braille.

Canada (2017)

39. The Committee is concerned by:

- (a) The lack of official recognition of sign languages and that the training programmes for sign language interpreters do not meet minimum requirements to provide a high quality of interpretation;
- (b) The limited amount of information in easy-read or any other augmentative and alternative modes, means and formats of communication and communication technologies for persons with disabilities;
- (c) The absence of information about compliance with standards of accessibility for websites in the public and private sectors.

40. The Committee recommends that the State party:

- (a) Recognize, in consultation with organizations of deaf persons, American Sign Language and Quebec Sign Language (Langue des signes Québécoise) as official languages and their use in schools, and establish jointly with organizations of deaf persons a mechanism to certify the quality of interpretation services and ensure that opportunities for continuous training are provided for sign language interpreters;
- (b) Promote and facilitate the use of easy-read and other accessible formats, modes and means of communication and grant persons with disabilities access to information and communications technology, including through the provision of software and assistive devices to all persons with disabilities;
- (c) Redouble its efforts to ensure the accessibility of government websites and ensure that private entities providing services through the Internet do so in formats accessible to all persons with disabilities;
- (d) Translate the Convention on the Rights of Persons with Disabilities into sign languages.

Cyprus (2017)

45. The Committee notes with concern that funding for sign language interpreters is inadequate and that their appearance in broadcasting is limited. It is furthermore concerned about the insufficient availability of sign language interpretation in public services and leisure and cultural facilities, and about the limited opportunities to learn and communicate in Cypriot sign language and tactile communication.

46. The Committee recommends that the State party:

- (a) Allocate sufficient financial resources for high quality education of sign- language interpreters in the area of public services, leisure and cultural activities and in broadcasting;
- (b) Recognize and promote the right for persons with hearing and/or visual impairments, including deaf and deafblind persons, and their environment, including family members, to learn and communicate in Cypriot sign language and tactile communication, including by developing a Cypriot sign language dictionary, to ensure their participation and recognition in all spheres of life on an equal basis with others.

47. The Committee is concerned about the absence of any effectively guaranteed access to information by persons with intellectual and/or psychosocial disabilities in accessible, alternative and augmentative modes and formats of communication.

48. The Committee recommends that the State party support the development and promotion of augmentative and alternative modes of accessible communication for and to persons with intellectual and/or psychosocial disabilities. It also recommends that the State party monitor effectively the compliance of the use of augmentative and alternative modes of communication with international standards, especially regarding persons with intellectual and/or psychosocial disabilities.

Honduras (2017)

47. Al Comité le preocupa la no aplicación de las normas sobre la accesibilidad en programas oficiales televisivos, relativos a procesos electorales o en situaciones de emergencia y desastres naturales, así como la ineficacia de los mecanismos administrativos y judiciales en caso de incumplimiento. Le preocupa también que las normas y los procedimientos sobre el uso del braille, la lectura fácil y otras formas de comunicación no se ajusten a lo dispuesto en la Convención. Asimismo, le preocupa la falta de formatos accesibles y tecnologías adecuadas a los diferentes tipos de discapacidad.

48. El Comité recomienda al Estado parte que adopte las medidas necesarias para asegurar la aplicación de la normativa relevante y que transmita, en medios y formatos accesibles y tecnologías adecuadas a los diferentes tipos de discapacidad, toda información pública destinada a la población en general, particularmente la referida a procesos nacionales y a situaciones de emergencia y/o desastres naturales. Asimismo, le recomienda que promueva el reconocimiento oficial de la lengua de señas hondureñas, y del sistema braille como código oficial de lectoescritura de las personas ciegas y sordociegas.

42. The Committee is concerned by:

- (a) The lack of recognition of Persian Sign Language and the limited provision of sign language interpreters;
- (b) The lack of availability of accessible information and communications technology for persons with disabilities, including easy-read; and
- (c) The lack of accessible public information, including accessible websites.

43. The Committee recommends that the State party:

- (a) Recognise Persian Sign Language as official language and its use in schools, and establish jointly with organizations of deaf persons a mechanism to certify the quality of interpretation services ensuring opportunities for continuous training for sign language interpreters;
- (b) Promote and facilitate the use of easy-read, other accessible formats, modes and means of communication and grant persons with disabilities access to information and communications technology, including the provision of assistive technologies to all persons with disabilities, including those living in rural areas; and
- (c) Ensure accessibility of government websites and those of private entities which provide public services.

Jordan (2017)

41. The Committee notes the absence of standards to ensure the accessibility by all of information provided to the public, including through the mass media. It is concerned that the State party has not formally recognized sign language.

42. The Committee recommends that the State party:

- (a) Adopt legislative provisions to ensure that information provided to the general public is also available to persons with disabilities in accessible formats and technologies appropriate to different kinds of impairments, in a timely manner and at no additional cost;
- (b) Officially recognize sign language and promote its use, including by intensifying training and accreditation programmes for sign language interpretation.

Republic of Moldova

40. The Committee is concerned that sign language is not adequately recognized as an official language of the State party, that insufficient training given to sign language interpreters has resulted in an inadequate number of interpreters in public and private services and that deaf children lack access to bilingual education. It is also concerned that the provision of technology and accessible information and communication formats, including easy read, is severely limited, particularly for persons with visual impairments and those with intellectual disabilities.

41. The Committee recommends that the State party:

(a) Recognize sign language as a means of communication in official interactions;

(b) Invest in training sign language interpreters and provide sign language interpretation for services open to the public and ensure that deaf children have equal access to quality, inclusive education;

(c) Use accessible information and communication formats and technologies that are appropriate for persons with disabilities, with special regard for children with disabilities in inclusive education, including web accessibility, Braille, easy-read and plain formats in relation to all public services.

Bolivia (2016)

51. The Committee is concerned that Bolivian sign language is not recognized as an official language of the State party, which limits the freedom of expression and communication of persons with disabilities, particularly in terms of accessing and availing themselves of public services such as health, education, justice and others.

52. The Committee recommends that the State party expedite the recognition of Bolivian sign language as an official language, promote the accreditation of qualified Bolivian sign language interpreters throughout the State party, and increase the availability of sign language interpreters in public services in order to promote the integration of the culture and linguistic identity of deaf persons, in collaboration with organizations of persons with disabilities.

50. The Committee is concerned about the limited progress made to provide persons with disabilities with access to information, using accessible modes, means and formats of communication, and the lack of resources for implementing Act No. 1680 of 2013.

51. The Committee recommends that the State party ensure the provision of adequate economic, human, technical, digital and other resources to facilitate access to information in accessible modes, means and formats of communication and to adequately implement Act No. 1680 of 2013, in consultation with organizations of persons with disabilities.

45. The Committee is concerned that freedom of expression of persons with disabilities is restricted and that necessary support is not provided for them to fully enjoy that right.

46. The Committee recommends that the State party ensure that freedom of expression is protected in law and in practice for persons with disabilities, and that necessary support is provided for them to fully enjoy that right, including by the provision of reasonable accommodation.

47. The Committee is concerned that Ethiopian Sign Language is not recognized as an official language of the State party and at the lack of or insufficient number of trained and qualified sign language interpreters.

48. The Committee recommends that the State party take all legislative and other measures to significantly increase the number of trained and qualified sign language interpreters throughout the territory and to recognize and promote the use of sign language as an official language.

55. The Committee is concerned that persons with disabilities are limited in their communication and access to information due to the lack of accessible formats and technologies appropriate to different kinds of disabilities. It is also concerned that indigenous persons with disabilities are not provided with any such support for communication and access to information in their native languages.

56. The Committee recommends that the State party adopt the necessary measures to ensure the implementation of its legislation on access to information and communication in order to facilitate the access of all persons with disabilities to accessible formats and technologies appropriate to different kinds of disabilities. The latter should also be available in the native languages of the country's indigenous communities. The Committee further recommends promoting the official recognition of Guatemalan Sign Language and of Braille as the official reading and writing code for blind and deaf-blind persons.

49. The Committee is concerned at the lack of official recognition of sign language, and its limited use in broadcast purposes. It is also concerned about the lack of acknowledgement of Braille and tactile communication as effective tools for the education of blind or deaf-blind persons.

50. The Committee recommends that the State party expedite the enactment of legislation on the proposed provisions to remove communication barriers, recognize the Italian sign and tactile languages and promote inclusion for deaf and deaf-blind persons and those with hearing disabilities in general. It also recommends that the State party significantly increase the provision of sign language in public broadcasting, and that it take concrete measures to ensure the teaching of standardized Braille to blind persons and tactile communications to deaf-blind persons to enable them to gain access to information, rather than assistive technology alone.

United Arab Emirates (2016)

39. The Committee is concerned that the sign languages of the United Arab Emirates are not officially recognized and that efforts to train qualified sign language interpreters have been insufficient.

40. The Committee recommends that the State party take measures to officially recognize the sign languages of the United Arab Emirates and to intensify its efforts to train qualified sign language interpreters.

Uruguay (2016)

47. Al Comité le preocupa la no aplicación de las normas sobre la accesibilidad en programas oficiales televisivos, relativos a procesos electorales o en situaciones de emergencia y desastres naturales, así como la ineficacia de los mecanismos administrativos y judiciales en caso de incumplimiento. Preocupa también que las normas y los procedimientos sobre el uso del Braille, la lengua de señas y otras formas de comunicación no se ajusten a lo dispuesto en la Convención.

45. Al Comité le preocupa que la lengua de señas chilena y el sistema Braille no sean reconocidos como oficiales en el Estado Parte. También le preocupa la no aplicación de las normas sobre la accesibilidad en programas oficiales televisivos (Ley núm. 20422), relativos a procesos electorales o en situaciones de emergencia y desastres naturales, y la ineficacia de los mecanismos administrativos y judiciales en caso de incumplimiento.

46. El Comité recomienda al Estado parte que reconozca como oficiales la lengua de señas chilena y el sistema Braille y haga accesible la transmisión de toda información pública en cualquiera de los medios de información, particularmente la referida a procesos nacionales que afectan a todas las personas, y la relativa a situaciones de emergencia y/o desastres naturales.

40. The Committee is concerned about the lack of access to information and Communication for persons with disabilities in the State party due to the lack of accessible formats and appropriate technologies for different types of disabilities, such as sign language, including tactile-sign language and braille, augmentative and alternative communication modes, and other accessible means, modes and formats of communication chosen by persons with disabilities, including easy- read formats.

41. The Committee recommends that the State party adopt the necessary measures to ensure enforcement of its legislation regarding access to information and communication in order to facilitate access by persons with all types of disability to accessible formats and appropriate technologies for all kinds of disability, such as sign language and interpreters of tactile-sign system, braille, augmentative and alternative communication modes, and other accessible means, modes and formats of communication chosen by persons with disabilities, including easy- read formats. Furthermore, it recommends that the State party promotes the official recognition of Portuguese sign language and the braille system.

43. The Committee is concerned that a national Braille authority has not been established yet in Serbia to guarantee the existence of a standardized unified Braille code needed for extensive enhancement of its use in education, employment and applications of ICT.

44. The Committee recommends that the State party take necessary steps to establish the Serbian national Braille authority and ensure creation of the standardized Serbian Braille code.

Slovakia (2016)

61. The Committee is concerned about the lack of registered sign language interpreters and the lack of sign language interpretation on public television, in courts of justice and in public services such as education, health and social care.

62. The Committee recommends that the State party significantly increase the numbers of trained sign language interpreters to provide services in public broadcasting, courts of law, and other public areas.

63. The Committee is concerned that a national Braille authority has not yet been established to guarantee the existence of a standardized unified Braille code needed for extensive enhancement of its use in education, employment and information and communications technology applications.

64. The Committee recommends that the State party encourage the establishment of a Slovak national Braille authority and ensure the creation of a standardized Slovak Braille code.

41. The Committee is concerned at the lack of availability of public information and mass media for persons with disabilities in accessible and usable formats, that Thai Sign Language is only recognized in a government resolution of 17 August 1999 signed by the Permanent Secretary for Education on behalf of the Government, and that provision of sign language interpreters in public offices is very limited, especially in rural and remote areas.

42. The Committee recommends that the State party develop and use accessible communication formats, such as Braille, tactile formats, sign language, easy-read and others, for mass media and public information ensure the accessibility of government websites, and take with concrete and effective measures to control and monitor accessibility and apply sanctions for non-compliance. It also recommends that the State party officially recognize Thai Sign Language in legislation to ensure its full and effective application in the State party and increase training and certification initiatives to ensure the availability of professional Thai Sign Language interpreters.

42. The Committee is concerned about the lack of public information in Braille and of sign language interpreters, the non-recognition of Ugandan Sign Language as legally enforceable, the lack of trained teachers in sign language, tactile communication, easy-read teaching material and Braille to make it beneficial to persons with disabilities. It is also concerned about the inaccessibility of websites, the absence of easy-to-read information and the inability of television stations to provide information in accessible formats for deaf persons and persons with visual impairments.

43. The Committee recommends that the State party:

(a) Take measures to recognize Ugandan Sign Language as an official language with enforceable duties in the State party, improve access to information through, inter alia, Braille, public information, increasing the number of sign language interpreters and recognizing that deaf persons have a substantive right to use Ugandan Sign Language as an official language, train teachers in sign language, tactile communication, Braille and easy-to-read formats;

(b) Require television stations to provide news and programmes of national importance in accessible formats, in particular for deaf persons.

(c) Ensure that government websites and websites targeting the public are accessible to persons who require easy-to-read texts, and ensure that owners and designers of websites make them accessible to persons with disabilities, particularly persons with visual impairment;

(d) Invest significant resources in training of sign language interpreters and introduce a certification system, particularly in rural areas, to ensure greater availability and enhanced quality of sign language interpretation in public services, and develop a sign language dictionary.

Brazil (2015)

38. The Committee is concerned that information intended for the general public, including official pronouncements and political campaigns, is still not fully available in accessible formats, such as Braille, Brazilian sign language (LIBRAS), and other accessible modes, means and forms of communication, including easy to read format.

39. The Committee recommends the State party to provide the necessary resources and training to ensure that all information intended for the general public is available in a timely manner in accessible formats and technologies.

54. The Committee is concerned that across the European Union persons with disabilities cannot always access information and communication in accessible formats and technologies appropriate to different kinds of disabilities, including in sign languages, Braille, augmentative and alternative communication, and other accessible means, modes and formats of communication of their choice, including easy-to-read formats.

55. The Committee recommends that the European Union take measures and enforce the implementation of its legislation on access to information and communication to facilitate access in accessible languages, formats and technologies appropriate to different kinds of disabilities, including in sign languages, Braille, augmentative and alternative communication, and other accessible means, modes and formats of communication of their choice, including easy-to-read formats, for all persons with all types of disabilities and to promote official recognition of sign language and braille.

EU Institutions compliance with the Convention (as public administrations)

82. The Committee is concerned that not all websites of various European Union institutions are fully implementing accessibility standards. It furthermore notes with concern the lack of information in sign languages, Braille, augmentative and alternative communication, and other accessible means, modes and formats of communication, including easy-to-read format.

83. The Committee recommends that the European Union take necessary measures to ensure full application of web accessibility standards to websites of all European Union institutions and to offer information in sign languages, Braille, augmentative and alternative communication, and other accessible means, modes and formats of communication of persons with disabilities' choice, including in easy-to-read format, in official interactions.

48. The Committee is concerned at the lack of availability of public information and mass media for persons with disabilities in accessible and usable formats such as Braille, sign language, easy to read, and others and at the absence of steps being taken to officially recognise Gabonese Sign Language in the law.

49. The Committee recommends that the State party develop and use accessible communication formats, as listed above, for mass media and public information, allocating adequate funding accordingly, and officially recognising Gabonese Sign Language and Braille and taking steps to establish training and certification for professional Gabonese Sign Language interpreters.

Kenya (2015)

39. The Committee is concerned by:

(a) The limited provision of sign language interpreters in public offices and to facilitate access to public services free of charge; and

(b) The lack of information on information and communication technologies at low cost for persons with disabilities, including those living in rural areas.

40. The Committee recommends that the State party:

(a) Establish jointly with organizations of deaf persons and Kenyan sign language interpreters, a mechanism to certify the quality of interpretation services and ensure that opportunities for continuous training are provided for interpreters; and

(b) Strengthen measures to grant access by persons with disabilities to technologies of information and communication, including by the provision of low cost software and assistive devices for all persons with disabilities, including those living in rural areas.

39. The Committee is concerned about the State party's actions, without the full participation and consultation of persons with hearing impairments, to standardize sign language in the Arabic region.

40. The Committee urges the State party to recognize and promote the use of Qatari Sign Language and to ensure the involvement of and consultation with the Qatari Deaf community in the formulation, implementation and monitoring of all sign language policies, projects and activities of the State party at the national and regional levels.

Ukraine (2015)

38. The Committee notes with concern the lack of accessible public broadcasting services, as well as limited number of sign language interpreters for the users of public services.

39. The Committee calls upon the State party to allocate sufficient financial resources for training and hiring of sign language interpreters in the area of public services and ensure sufficient amount of broadcasting services accessible to persons with hearing impairments.

40. The Committee is concerned about the significant reduction of government support for Braille and audio publication as well as the absence of Ukrainian language audio description and captioning from video content.

41. The Committee calls upon the State party to take measures to invest in Braille and audio publications as well as make available Ukrainian language audio description and captioning of video content.

Cook Islands (2015)

41. The Committee is concerned at the lack of access to ICT, the availability of Braille, sign language, easy read and digital communication.

42. The Committee recommends that the State party, in accordance with General Comment No. 2:

(a) Enact legislation to ensure that all information and communications provided to the general public are available to all persons with disabilities in accessible formats, including sign language, Braille and other accessible modes, means and formats of communication, and ICTs;

(b) Make sign language and Braille training available so sign language and Braille can be used by Deaf and Blind cook islanders in schools and in public;

Croatia (2015)

31. The Committee remains concerned by the failure to provide all information in accessible formats and to effectively promote and facilitate the use of Croatian sign language as Croatia's official sign language, as well as the use of all other forms of accessible formats of communication.

32. The Committee recommends the State party to further its effort to adapt the e- citizens project to meet the need of people with disabilities and to ensure that they have access to information on equal basis with others by promoting and facilitating the use of easy to read, Braille, audio formats, and other augmentative and alternative communication in official interactions, and by making public websites accessible. It further recommends that the State party adopt and foresee measures to effectively and timely implement the Act on Croatian Sign Language and Other Forms of Communication Support for the Deaf and Deaf-blind Persons, including its regulation, in close consultation and with the active involvement of persons with disabilities. It is also recommended to ensure that deaf persons are provided with sign language interpretation in all judicial procedures.

Czech Republic (2015)

40. The Committee notes with concern the lack of investment of resources into sign language interpretation and lack of trained sign language interpreters, which restricts the effective enjoyment of right to use the Czech Sign Language by the deaf persons and their families.

41. The Committee calls upon the State party to allocate sufficient financial resources for training and hiring of sign language interpreters that would enable deaf persons to effectively enjoy the right to use the Czech Sign Language.

42. The Committee notes that the State party still has not amended the Act No. 231/2001 Coll., which should make audiovisual content of broadcasts accessible to persons with hearing or visual impairments.

43. The Committee calls upon the State party to amend the Act No 231/2001 Coll., and ensure the accessibility of audiovisual content of broadcasts to persons with hearing or visual impairment.

40. Preocupa al Comité que todavía no se haya reconocido la lengua de señas dominicana como lengua oficial en el país, y la ausencia de estrategias para la formación profesional de intérpretes de lengua de señas dominicana y una entidad que los certifique.

41. El Comité recomienda al Estado parte adoptar inmediatamente legislación que reconozca la lengua de señas dominicana como lengua oficial e implemente una estrategia de formación en lengua de señas dirigida a personal del sector público, promueva la formación profesional de intérpretes de lengua de señas y aliente la inclusión de la enseñanza de lengua de señas en instituciones educativas desde el nivel de primaria.

39. The Committee is concerned about the insufficient measures taken to ensure that all information is provided to persons with disabilities in accessible formats. It is also concerned that standards and procedures on the use of Braille, sign language and other forms of communication, are not in compliance with the Convention. It is particularly concerned that sign language is only considered as a means of interpersonal communication and not as an official language on its own.

40. The Committee recommends that the State party take steps to ensure accessible communication formats in line with international standards by allocating adequate funding for their development, promotion and use with the involvement of the relevant DPOs, as well as for professional training for sign language interpreters, teachers, parents and family members of the deaf included. The State party should also recognize State sign language as an official language.

41. The Committee notes the limited number of sign language interpreters in the State party.

42. The Committee recommends that the Sign Language Board work to ensure funding for the training and employment of sufficient numbers of sign language interpreters, as well as an increased use of New Zealand Sign Language in all aspects of life, including educational and cultural activities.

43. The Committee is concerned that it is still the case that Maori people with disabilities find it more difficult to access information in their own language. Maori people who are deaf find accessing information in New Zealand Sign Language even more difficult, owing to the lack of interpreters from Maori into New Zealand Sign Language.

44. The Committee recommends that greater efforts be made to enable Maori and Pacific people with disabilities, and especially those who are deaf and deaf-blind, to access information.

44. The Committee is concerned that certain groups of deaf persons, in particular children born deaf who have been implanted with cochlear implants, are reportedly prevented from learning and communicating in Danish Sign Language. The Committee is also concerned that the recent amendment to the Danish Language Council Act does not promote Danish Sign Language through research or training.

45. The Committee recommends that the State party recognize the right of all deaf persons and born deaf persons to have the possibility to learn and communicate in Danish Sign Language, regardless of medical treatments undergone; take effective measures to promote Danish Sign Language as a communication method, without necessarily resorting to speech therapy; carry out research into Danish Sign Language, including the development of a Danish Sign Language dictionary; and promote the use of Danish Sign Language in all areas of deaf persons' lives to ensure their participation in particular in employment, education and cultural life. The Committee furthermore recommends that the Government of the Faroe Islands recognize Faroese sign language as an official language.

46. The Committee acknowledges that Braille is an important communication tool for blind persons in education and employment. It is, however, concerned that education in Braille is not systematically provided to all blind pupils, as they are scattered and few in number. The Committee is also concerned that the decentralized structure and responsibility of municipalities may not be appropriate to maintaining such a specialized tool, and that the State party perceives a risk of dilution of knowledge in education with specialized support, as indicated during the dialogue.

47. The Committee recommends that the State party establish a Braille Council tasked with promoting, preserving and enhancing knowledge and use of Braille as a communication tool for blind persons, including in education.

48. The Committee is concerned that the State party does not effectively guarantee provision of information to people with intellectual and mental disabilities, in accessible, alternative and augmentative modes and formats of communication.

49. The Committee recommends that the State party accord equal recognition to the development and promotion of augmentative and alternative modes of communication that are accessible to people with intellectual and mental disabilities. The State party should take appropriate measures to ensure that all actors are familiar with the established standards for using augmentative and alternative modes of communication and should put into place effective monitoring procedures that prevent acts of substituted information and communication, especially in decision-making mechanisms regarding people with intellectual and mental disabilities.

41. The Committee is concerned that the sign language used in the Republic of Korea is not recognized as an official language in the State party and that the draft law declaring Braille as an official script is still pending before the National Assembly. It is also concerned that the regulation ensuring access to broadcast material for persons with disabilities, in particular television programmes, includes a standard on programming quantity but fails to include standards to ensure the quality of the programmes and to provide adequate accessible information through sign language, closed-captioning, descriptive video/audio description, easy-to-read/easy-to-understand content and through other access formats, modes and means of communication.

42. The Committee encourages the State party to recognize Korean Sign Language as an official language of the Republic of Korea, and to adopt the draft law recognizing Braille as an official script of the State party. It further recommends that the regulation on ensuring access to broadcast material for persons with disabilities include standards on programming quality and on providing adequate, accessible information through sign language, closed-captioning, descriptive video/audio description, easy-to-read/easy-to-understand content and through other access formats, modes and means of communication.

34. The Committee also notes that while progress has been made to provide information in accessible formats and to effectively promote as well as to facilitate the use of braille and sign language, gaps still persist.

35. It should also develop the use of other accessible formats of communication in line with international standards by allocating adequate funding for their development, promotion and use as well as for professional training of sign language interpreters and teachers including for the public service, in accordance with articles 9, 21, 24, paragraph 3, and 29 (b) of the Convention in cooperation with DPOs including deaf persons' organisations.

Costa Rica (2014)

41. The Committee is concerned that information disseminated through the media is not accessible in Costa Rican sign language and that institutions – in particular, institutions working to protect the rights of persons with disabilities – do not have sign language interpreters.

42. The Committee recommends that the State party comply with legislation on the Costa Rican sign language interpretation of news programmes broadcast by the media, and on the hiring of Costa Rican sign language interpreters in institutions, in particular those working to safeguard human rights.

Australia (2013)

43. The Committee is concerned by the failure to provide all information in accessible formats and to effectively promote and facilitate the use of Australian sign language (Auslan) as Australia's official sign language and the use of all other forms of accessible formats of communication (deafblind interpretation, braille, easy and plain English, audio description), in particular when persons with disabilities are in official interactions.

44. The Committee recommends that the State party recognizes Australian Sign Language as one of the national languages of Australia and develops the use of other forms of accessible formats by allocating adequate funding for their development, promotion, and use in accordance with Articles 24(3) and 29 (b) of the Convention.

El Salvador (2013)

45. The Committee is concerned that Salvadoran sign language does not enjoy official recognition and that insufficient steps have been taken to develop and provide augmentative and alternative communication. It is also concerned at the limited access to and promotion of Braille and other forms of accessible communication for persons with visual impairments, especially new information technologies.

46. The Committee recommends that the State party:

(a) Recognize Salvadoran sign language as an official language and encourage its dissemination, including through the training of professional interpreters, and its use as a means of ensuring access to information for persons with hearing impairments;

(b) Ensure that the necessary resources are available to provide public information in accessible formats, including augmentative and alternative communication for persons with intellectual or psychosocial impairments and accessible information technologies for persons with visual impairments.

Paraguay (2013)

53. The Committee takes note with satisfaction of the adoption of Act No. 4336 of 2011, making it compulsory to use sign language in information and news broadcasts in the audiovisual media. It is nevertheless concerned that this effort is not sufficient to guarantee freedom of expression and opinion and access to information, in particular in public and private services and institutions for the general public.

54. The Committee recommends that the State party adopt the Act giving official recognition to sign languages used by persons with disabilities and ensure that all public information is available in accessible forms and formats, in accordance with the Convention.

71. The Committee takes note of the difficult situation of persons with hearing impairments in accessing information due to lack of official recognition of the significance of sign language by Hong Kong, China. The Committee is concerned about the lack of training for and services provided by sign-language interpreters.

72. The Committee recommends that Hong Kong, China, increase training for and the services provided by sign-language interpreters. It should also recognize the public examination and assessment of such interpreters.

*Article 22 CRPD
(Respect for privacy)*

September 2025

Article 22 – Right for privacy

1. No person with disabilities, regardless of place of residence or living arrangements, shall be subjected to arbitrary or unlawful interference with his or her privacy, family, or correspondence or other types of communication or to unlawful attacks on his or her honour and reputation. Persons with disabilities have the right to the protection of the law against such interference or attacks.

2. States Parties shall protect the privacy of personal, health and rehabilitation information of persons with disabilities on an equal basis with others.

Democratic People's Republic of Korea (2025)

42. The Committee is concerned that persons with disabilities in detention are subjected to strip searches and groping under the guise of hygiene checks without privacy, explanation or justification.

43. The Committee recommends that the State Party prohibit and prevent any form of invasive physical searches or hygiene checks in detention unless strictly necessary for a legitimate purpose and carried out in accordance with the principles of dignity, autonomy, privacy, and non-discrimination.

42. The Committee is concerned at:

(a) The lack of awareness of mechanisms to protect the privacy of persons with disabilities in institutions, including the lack of awareness of complaint and accountability mechanisms;

(b) The potential invasive nature of procedures to evaluate personal assistance requirements and other in-home supports.

43. The Committee recommends that the State party, in close consultation and active involvement of persons with disabilities, through their representative organizations:

(a) Considering that access to justice is key to deinstitutionalization, develop awareness of procedures for persons with disabilities in institutions to lodge complaints in cases of violation of their rights, including their right to privacy, for the investigation of such violations and to ensure accountability;

(b) Ensure that evaluation procedures for personal assistance and other in-home supports respect the right to privacy and carry out capacity building for public officers on the matter.

Kiribati (2025)

41. The Committee is concerned about the absence of legal and policy measures to protect the privacy and confidentiality of persons with disabilities, particularly with regard to personal, health, and rehabilitation information and that existing safeguards rely on informal ethical practices rather than enforceable standards.

42. The Committee recommends that the State party adopt legal and policy measures guaranteeing the right to privacy of persons with disabilities, including explicit provisions on the confidentiality and protection of personal, health, and rehabilitation information within the draft Disability Inclusion Act and other relevant legislation, and establish clear standards and protocols for the handling of such data including the explicit request of informed consent of persons with disabilities.

43. The Committee is concerned that the existing legislation does not fully ensure the confidentiality and protection of the privacy of persons with disabilities, particularly for those lodging complaints, who are at increased risk of retaliation.

44. The Committee recommends that the State party strengthen its legislation on data protection for persons with disabilities to ensure their privacy, particularly for persons with intellectual and/or psychosocial disabilities, by safeguarding information such as personal medical records held by institutions and within mental health systems and services, and especially in relation to those lodging complaints.

43. The Committee is concerned about insufficient information on measures to protect the right to privacy of persons with disabilities, including migrants, asylum seekers and refugees with disabilities in migration and cross-border processing of personal data.

establish privacy protection procedures and develop policies to guarantee that migration and cross-border processing of personal data of migrants, asylum seekers and refugees with disabilities respects their right to privacy.

European Union (2025)

54. The Committee is concerned about:

- (a) Privacy risks from emerging technologies, including the use of artificial intelligence and automated decision-making, data practices linked to assistive technologies that may reveal sensitive disability-related information and the restriction of full access to vital features of assistive devices if data collection permissions are not granted;
- (b) Persons with intellectual and/or psychosocial disabilities cannot effectively provide or refuse consent to data processing due to substitute decision-making arrangements.

55. The Committee recommends that the European Union:

- (a) Ensure that persons with disabilities receive clear, accessible information about their data rights, that data collection is limited to what is necessary for the purpose, and that assistive technology remains available, regardless of data-sharing decisions;
- (b) Amend legal provisions to ensure that persons with disabilities have effective rights to consent or object to data processing and can control their health data, and provide user-friendly, accessible interfaces that allow for opting out of data sharing.

41. The Committee is concerned that confidentiality and protection of the privacy of persons with disabilities are not fully ensured by existing legislation.

42. The Committee recommends that the State party strengthen its legislation on data protection for persons with disabilities to ensure the privacy of persons with disabilities, in particular persons with intellectual and or psychosocial disabilities, including protection of information on their personal medical records in institutions and mental health systems and services.

Viet Nam (2025)

43. The Committee is concerned about:

- (a) Unlawful sharing of personal and medical information of persons with disabilities, especially in medical and social service settings;
- (b) Surveillance or monitoring of persons with disabilities, particularly those with intellectual and/or psychosocial disabilities, without consent in institutional settings;
- (c) Digital privacy risks, including unauthorized use of personal data and images, and online exploitation or abuse;
- (d) Unauthorized use of images and personal stories of persons with disabilities for fundraising purposes;
- (e) Data collection practices in institutions and public services that may violate privacy protections;
- (f) The persecution of organizations advocating for the rights of persons with disabilities.

44. The Committee recommends that the State party:

- (a) Implement measures to prevent unauthorized disclosure of personal and medical records, ensuring privacy protections in all settings;
- (b) Ensure that monitoring and surveillance of persons with disabilities in institutional settings comply with legal safeguards;
- (c) Strengthen digital privacy protections for persons with disabilities, including measures against online exploitation and unauthorized data sharing;
- (d) Prevent the unauthorized use of personal images and stories for fundraising or promotional purposes;
- (e) Ensure that data collection practices respect privacy rights and allow persons with disabilities to control how their personal information is used;

(f) Cease the persecution and suppression of digital platforms that advocate for the rights of persons with disabilities, and refrain from modifying anti-terrorism laws to unjustly target these organizations.

Belarus (2024)

43. The Committee is concerned about the lack of privacy in information, for persons with disabilities, in particular, persons with psychosocial disabilities and/or intellectual disabilities;

44. The Committee recommends that the State party strengthen its legal provisions for the protection of personal data and privacy of persons with disabilities, including by establishing safeguards in the Online Platforms and Online Advertising Act and other relevant legislation, including by setting up data protection protocols and securing systems to guarantee the privacy on matters of personal details, health and rehabilitation, while providing effective remedies for any breaches of privacy.

Belgium (2024)

44. The Committee is concerned about the low level of protection of privacy of personal, health and rehabilitation records of persons with disabilities declared incompetent under the Law on Patients' Rights.

45. The Committee recommends that the State party, in close consultation with and with the active involvement of persons with disabilities, through their representative organisations:

(a) Ensure that personal, health, and rehabilitation data is protected from any use not within the purposes for which it was obtained, is updated and validated at regular intervals, and is deleted once its purposes have been achieved;

(b) Incorporate the European Union Artificial Intelligence Act into national law and establish a monitoring body with expertise in the rights of the Convention, data protection and privacy, to oversee its implementation.

Benin (2024)

43. The Committee notes with concern the restrictions on the privacy of persons with disabilities in institutions.

44. The Committee remands the state party to :

(a) Raise awareness among persons with disabilities and their families with regard to the legislation on the protection of personal data;

(b) Raise awareness among persons with disabilities and their representative organizations and families on respect for privacy and data protection.

Denmark (2024)

61. The Committee is concerned that no efforts have been made to amend the Psychiatric Act, which allows psychiatric hospitals to transfer strictly private and confidential information to third parties without the consent of the person concerned.

62. The Committee recalls its previous recommendation and urges Denmark to amend the Psychiatric Act so as to prohibit the transfer of the private and confidential information of patients in psychiatric hospitals to third parties without the consent of the person concerned, in order to comply with the principle of respect for privacy. It recommends the Faroe Islands and Greenland adopt analogous legislation.

Ghana (2024)

42. The Committee is concerned that Confidentiality and protection of the privacy of persons with disabilities is not fully ensured by existing legislation, including the Data Protection Act, 2012 (Act 843).

43. The Committee recommends that the State Party strengthen its legislation on data protection for persons with disabilities to ensure the privacy of persons with disabilities, in particular persons with intellectual and/or psychosocial disabilities, including protection of information on their personal medical records in institutions and mental health systems and services.

Mauritius (2024)

37. The Committee is concerned that the Data Protection Act 2017 and other relevant laws fail to explicitly protect and facilitate the privacy of persons with disabilities and neglect procedures to ensure the confidentiality of their data, including in health-related situations.

38. The Committee recommends that the State party introduce legal provisions to protect the privacy and integrity of all persons with disabilities in all situations, including persons with intellectual and/or psychosocial disabilities, and develop a clear and accessible legal mechanism to protect their personal data and respond to reports of privacy breaches.

49. The Committee is concerned about the lack of legislation regulating the exchange of non-medical privacy-sensitive data, and the lack of clarity in the rules on processing of medical and non-medical data outside of the WZD and the WVGZZ.

50. The Committee recommends that the State party establish clear rules to minimize the personal and medical data required from persons with disabilities when applying for welfare, insurance, and other entitlement, ensuring that only essential information is collected, and provide measures to protect individuals from undue pressure to disclose personal data.

Ukraine (2024)

44. The Committee is concerned about:

- (a) The processing, under the Martial Law, of sensitive and high-risk data related to court convictions, counterintelligence activity and fight against terrorism;
- (b) The absence of comprehensive provisions for the protection of personal data and records about persons with disabilities, including in health-related situations.

45. The Committee recommend that the State party adopt legislation and protocols to protect the privacy of personal data, health, and rehabilitation information of persons with disabilities on an equal basis with others, and to prohibit arbitrary and unlawful interference to their privacy and families.

Azerbaijan (2024)

49. The Committee is concerned about the lack of information concerning protection of personal data and records about persons with disabilities, including health related situations.

50. The Committee recommends that the State party:

- (a) Protect the right of persons with disabilities to respect for privacy, family life, correspondence, honour and reputation on an equal basis with others, regardless of disability, sex, gender, age and place of residence;
- (b) Introduce the duty for public and private actors to safeguard personal data, digitalized databases and records of persons with disabilities from unlawful and arbitrary interference, including health records and rehabilitation-related information;
- (c) Ensure implementation of the Convention for the Protection of Individuals with regard to Automatic Processing of Personal Data (CETS No. 108) and ratify the Protocol amending it (CETS No. 223) amendments to the Council of Europe Convention 108+.

The Committee is concerned about the following:

¹ When compiling the recommendations, the Concluding Observations were only available in Arabic. This document includes an automated translation to English by DeepL.

(a) The exceptions contained in Law No. 30 of 2018 promulgating the Personal Data Protection Law in its fifth article, which allows access to and processing of personal data without the consent of the data subject, including its classification, use and disclosure to third parties, for the purposes of medical diagnosis, treatment and prevention, as well as for persons under guardianship and trusteeship; (b) The lack of mechanisms to protect the personal data of persons with disabilities who are users of mental health services and in care homes and beneficiaries of the disability allowance.

(b) The lack of personal data protection mechanisms for persons with disabilities using mental health services, in care homes, and benefiting from the disability allowance.

45. The Committee recommends that the State party

(a) Repeal the exceptions contained in the Personal Data Protection Law No. 30 of 2018 that allow access, circulation, disclosure and publication of data without the consent of the data subject for the purposes of diagnosis, treatment and prevention and for those under guardianship and wardship;

(b) Develop a clear and accessible mechanism to protect the personal data of persons with disabilities who are users of mental health services, care homes and beneficiaries of the disability allowance.

(c) Develop a clear and accessible mechanism for persons with disabilities to protect their personal data and report any breaches of privacy.

Kazakhstan (2024)

47. The Committee is concerned about:

(a) Cross-border processing of personal data of persons with disabilities accessing medical, health and rehabilitation services and of information on their health to third countries, and its impact on the right to privacy of persons with disabilities.

48. The Committee recommends that the State party strengthen legal provisions for the protection of personal data and privacy of persons with disabilities, including by establishing safeguards in the Law on Online Platforms and Online Advertising and other relevant legislation, setting up data protection protocols and secure systems to guarantee the privacy of personal, health and rehabilitation information of persons with disabilities, and by providing effective remedies for breaches of privacy.

46. Al Comité le preocupa que no exista la información necesaria en formatos y modos alternos de comunicación y/o intérpretes de lengua de señas nicaragüense, lo que obliga a las personas con discapacidad a recurrir a terceros en sus asuntos judiciales, bancarios y crediticios, correspondencia privada o a asuntos de otra índole, violando su derecho a la privacidad contemplado en el artículo 27 de la Ley de los Derechos de Personas con Discapacidad (Ley 763).

47. El Comité recomienda al Estado parte que implemente los artículos 24 y 27 de la Ley de los Derechos de Personas con Discapacidad (Ley 763) y tome medidas para que el uso de formatos de comunicación accesibles, como el braille, la lengua de señas, los formatos de lectura fácil, el lenguaje sencillo, la audio descripción, la transcripción en vídeo, el subtítulo para personas sordas y los medios de comunicación táctiles, alternativos y aumentativos, estén disponibles para las personas con discapacidad cuando los requieran para poder acceder a las diferentes instituciones con respeto a su privacidad.

49. The Committee is concerned about the lack of comprehensive measures ensuring data protection and the right to privacy concerning the personal, medical and rehabilitation information of persons with disabilities, in particular with regard to assessments of needs for services, including personal assistance.

50. The Committee recommends that the State party adopt all necessary measures, including the revision of data protection laws, to ensure data protection and the right to privacy, and set up data protection protocols and secure systems to guarantee the privacy of the personal, health and rehabilitation information of persons with disabilities, on an equal basis with others.

Zambia (2024)

43. The Committee notes with concern the absence of provisions to protect the privacy of persons with disabilities in the Persons with Disabilities Act, the National Policy on Disability or any legislation.

44. The Committee recommends that the State party amend its national legislation to introduce legal provisions to protect the privacy of all persons with disabilities in all situations, in line with the Convention.

Andorra (2023)

45. The Committee expresses its concern about insufficient protection of data of persons with disabilities in the health-care system, including in private practices, hospitals and institutions.

46. The Committee recommends that the State party implement effective measures to ensure the privacy of persons with disabilities, in particular persons with intellectual and/or psychosocial disabilities, including the confidentiality of information and of their personal medical records, in institutions and mental health systems and services.

Austria (2023)

51. The Committee is concerned about:

(a) The constraints for persons with disabilities in institutions to decide on and enter into a personal relationship, especially same-sex relationships, largely due to a lack of privacy and stymieing interference by personnel and legal representatives;

(b) The deterring effect of anti-prostitution laws of the Länder on publicly funded facilitation services of sexual companionship for persons with disabilities.

52. The Committee recommends that the State Party:

(a) Ensure respect for the right to private life, including sexual self-determination, of persons with disabilities living in institutions, and end deterring interference by personnel and guardians;

(b) Harmonize federal and Länder legislation on prostitution and sexual companionship to ensure the provision of publicly funded facilitation services of sexual companionship for persons with disabilities.

Germany (2023)

49. The Committee is concerned about the lack of comprehensive measures ensuring data protection and the right to privacy concerning personal, medical and rehabilitation information of persons with disabilities in institutions and sheltered workshops, and the absence of confidentiality protocols concerning data protection of disability certificate holders vis-à-vis data exchange amongst institutions and service providers.

50. The Committee recommends that the State party adopt all necessary measures, including the revision of data protection laws, to ensure the data protection and the right to privacy in hospitals, institutions and sheltered workshops, and set up data protection protocols and secured systems to guarantee the privacy of personal, health and rehabilitation information of persons with disabilities, on an equal basis with others.

47. The Committee is concerned that the medical records and personal data of persons with psychosocial disabilities who are current or former patients of the Sheba Medical Center have been released to doctors without the consent of patients and without notification of this disclosure of information.

48. The Committee calls upon the State party to recall medical records and personal data of current and former patients of the Sheba Medical Center, strengthen and adopt data and privacy protection measures, including in relation to arbitrary or unlawful interference, and provide information about this situation and a formal apology to current and former patients.

Malawi (2023)

45. The Committee is concerned about the absence of provisions regarding the protection of privacy of persons with disabilities, in areas, such as health care, support services for persons with disabilities, and other situations in which data is collected.

46. The Committee recommends that the State party make provision in law for the protection of the privacy of all persons with disabilities in all situations in line with the Convention.

Mauritania (2023)

37. The Committee is concerned about the lack of information related to the laws on data protection and the lack of awareness on the part of persons with disabilities about their rights to data protection and privacy.

38. The Committee recommends that the State party:

- (a) Adopt measures to train and sensitize persons with disabilities and their families with regard to the legislation on the protection of personal data;
- (b) Raise awareness among persons with disabilities, and their representative organizations, as well as their families, on the respect for privacy and data protection;
- (c) Set up a national strategy, in close consultation with, and the active involvement of, persons with disabilities through their representative organizations, to ensure the respect for their privacy and the protection of their personal data as well as of their families.

Georgia (2023)

45. The Committee expresses concern about the lack of comprehensive measures ensuring data protection and privacy practices in hospitals and institutions for persons with disabilities.

46. The Committee recommends that the State party review and revise the Law on Personal Data Protection to include data protection and privacy practices of hospitals and institutions and set up data protection protocols in both health and institutions for persons with disabilities, guaranteeing the privacy of personal, health and rehabilitation information of persons with disabilities, on an equal basis with others.

44. Preocupa al Comité que el Registro Nacional de Identificación y Estado Civil (RENIEC), a petición de empresas privadas, facilita, sin previo consentimiento informado, datos confidenciales de personas con discapacidad e información sensible, lo que supone una clara violación de su derecho a la privacidad con altas posibilidades de excluirles de algunos servicios que prestan estas empresas por razón de su discapacidad.

45. El Comité recomienda al Estado parte que prohíba expresamente en la ley al Registro Nacional de Identificación y Estado Civil (RENIEC) la divulgación a terceros de datos de su registro, incluidos los datos relacionados con la discapacidad de las personas, a través de su sistema, y que se adopten disposiciones de confidencialidad y privacidad, incluidas medidas correctivas para dichas infracciones.

Tunisia (2023)

39. The Committee is concerned about the lack of information related to the laws on data protection and the lack of awareness on the part of persons with disabilities about their right to data protection and privacy.

40. The Committee recommends that the State party:

- (a) Adopt measures to train and sensitize persons with disabilities and their families with regard to the legislation on the protection of personal data;

- (b) Raise awareness among persons with disabilities and their representative organisations as well as their families on the respect for privacy and data protection;
- (c) Set up a national strategy, with close consultation with and meaningful involvement of persons with disabilities and their representative organizations, to ensure the respect for their privacy and protection of their personal data as well as of their families.

China (2022)

46. The Committee is concerned about the insufficient information provided on measures taken to protect persons with disabilities from arbitrary or unlawful interference with their privacy, to protect the privacy of personal data and records of persons with disabilities from arbitrary or unlawful interference, including in the registration system of persons with “mental disorders”, and on the available remedies in case of violation of the right to privacy.

47. The Committee recommends that the State party ensure that the privacy of personal data of persons with disabilities is comprehensively protected by data protection laws across the State party, including a right of action and access to a remedy.

47. The Committee is concerned that information about persons with disabilities may be collected without neither their consent nor reasonable purpose by service providers within private and public sectors, and that confidentiality and the protection of privacy of persons with disabilities are not fully ensured by existing legislation, including the My Number Act and the Act on the Protection of Personal Information.

48. The Committee recommends that the State party strengthen its legislation on data protection for persons with disabilities by ensuring that it is processed either on the basis of the personal, free and informed consent of the data subject or other legitimate non-discriminatory basis laid down by law, and that it is collected for explicit, specified and legitimate purposes and not processed in a way incompatible with those purposes, that it is processed lawfully, fairly and in a transparent manner, and that the data subject has a right to an effective remedy.

Lao People's Democratic Republic (2022)

40. The Committee is concerned about the lack of information in the State party on progress made as regards the protection of the right to privacy of persons with disabilities.

41. The Committee recommends that the State party ensure the privacy of persons with disabilities, in particular persons with intellectual and/or psychosocial disabilities, including the confidentiality of information and of their personal medical records, in institutions and mental health systems and services.

Republic of Korea (2022)

45. The Committee observes with concern that in order to prevent disappearances GPS tracking devices are being issued to autistic persons, persons with intellectual and/or psychosocial disabilities without their free and informed consent, violating their right to privacy.

46. The Committee recommends that the State party:

- (a) Take measures to respect the privacy of persons with disabilities, in particular autistic persons, persons with intellectual disabilities, persons with psychosocial disabilities, neurodivergent persons, and to ensure that GPS tracking devices are issued based on their consent;
- (b) Take appropriate measures, including policies to prevent disappearances, which are in line with the Convention and the human rights model of disability.

Singapore (2022)

43. The Committee is concerned about the protection of data of persons with disabilities in the health care system, including in private practices, hospitals and institutions. It is also concerned about practices that require persons with disabilities to disclose their impairments in relationships with private entities such as employers and insurance providers.

44. The Committee recommends that the State party substantially strengthen its legislation on data protection for persons with disabilities, particularly in the health care system, by ensuring that it is processed either on the basis of the personal, free and informed consent of the data subject or some other legitimate non-discriminatory basis laid down by law, and that it is collected for explicit, specified and legitimate purposes and not processed in a way incompatible with those purposes, that it is processed without discrimination, lawfully, fairly and in a transparent manner, and that the data subject has a right to an effective remedy.

Switzerland (2022)

43. The Committee notes with concern:

- (a) The unnecessarily large amount of personal data required from persons with disabilities who apply for social insurance and other entitlements;
- (b) The lack of a right of action, given that the Disability Discrimination Act does not apply to services provided by cantons and municipalities.

44. The Committee recommends that the State party:

- (a) Ensure, through legislation and policy at the federal and cantonal levels, that data collection is limited to data that are specifically relevant, that personal data are disclosed with the consent of the individual only, and that data protection covers the personal data of those living in institutions;
- (b) Ensure that the privacy of the personal data of persons with disabilities is comprehensively protected by data protection laws across all cantons, including a right of action and access to remedy.

France (2021)

46. The Committee notes with concern provisions in the Decree 2019-412 of 2019 and the Decree 2018-383 of 23 2018, so-called HOPSYWEB hindering the protection of personal data particularly concerning persons with psychosocial disabilities relating them with high risk of radicalisation and terrorism, and reinforcing surveillance and control of their activities, in the areas of employment and public housing.

47. The Committee recommends that the State party repeal regulations and cease discriminatory data collection concerning persons with psychosocial disabilities, including in relating them with high risk of radicalisation and terrorism, and prevent the use of their personal data and their medical records without their consent or following the consent provided by third parties.

46. The Committee is concerned that persons with disabilities who are Aadhaar (unique identification number) holders have experienced interference in their privacy, with their personal data having been compromised.

47. The Committee recommends that the State party take measures to ensure that all identification processes guarantee individuals' privacy, and enact legislation for the protection of the privacy of person with disabilities, particularly in their interaction with service providers or personnel providing support.

Spain (2019)

41. The Committee is concerned that the right to privacy of persons with intellectual or psychosocial disabilities is widely violated in institutions and mental health facilities, including by depriving persons of their personal belongings, and an inflexible and minimal regime of visits and contacts with people outside the facilities. The Committee is also concerned by reports of video surveillance cameras placed in the rooms of patients and leaks of confidential information about patients through the mental health care sector.

42. The Committee recommends that the State party implement effective measures to ensure the privacy of persons with intellectual or psychosocial disabilities in institutions and mental health systems and services including the confidentiality of information and of their personal medical records.

Latvia (2017)

36. The Committee is concerned about:

(a) The lack of safeguards in place to protect the privacy of persons with psychosocial and/or intellectual disabilities who are listed on the register of patients suffering from certain diseases and the consequent adverse impact of being so listed when accessing particular services or applying for jobs;

(b) The allegedly ineffective means of recourse to contest third-party access to the personal data of persons with intellectual and/or psychosocial disabilities that is collected by hospitals without the authorization of the individuals concerned;

(c) The practice of public officials demanding medical certificates as proof of disability and their consequent disregard of State-issued disability certificates.

37. The Committee recommends that the State party:

(a) Reinforce the protection of privacy, including personal data, in, among other places, psychiatric hospitals and institutions;

(b) Improve public officials' awareness of a human rights-based approach to disability and sanction the reported practice of demanding medical certificates to prove disability.

Armenia (2017)

37. The Committee is concerned that children with disabilities are publicly displayed for medical or charity purposes.

38. The Committee recommends that the State party protect the privacy of all children with disabilities, in particular in relation to their personal, health, habilitation and rehabilitation status.

Uganda (2016)

44. The Committee is concerned about the lack of provision of sign language interpreters and information in accessible formats in the health and banking sectors.

45. The Committee recommends that the State party ensure the protection of personal data of persons with disabilities in protocols in the health and banking sectors.

Denmark (2014)

50. The Committee is concerned that psychiatric hospitals are allowed, under the Psychiatric Act, to transfer strictly private and confidential information to third parties without the consent of the person concerned.

51. The Committee recommends that the State party amend the Psychiatric Act so as to prohibit the transfer of the private and confidential information of patients in psychiatric hospitals to third parties without the consent of the person concerned, in order to comply with the principle of respect for privacy.

*Article 23 CRPD
(Respect for home and the family)*

September 2025

Article 23 - Respect for home and the family

1. States Parties shall take effective and appropriate measures to eliminate discrimination against persons with disabilities in all matters relating to marriage, family, parenthood and relationships, on an equal basis with others, so as to ensure that:

a) The right of all persons with disabilities who are of marriageable age to marry and to found a family on the basis of free and full consent of the intending spouses is recognized;

b) The rights of persons with disabilities to decide freely and responsibly on the number and spacing of their children and to have access to age-appropriate information, reproductive and family planning education are recognized, and the means necessary to enable them to exercise these rights are provided;

c) Persons with disabilities, including children, retain their fertility on an equal basis with others.

2. States Parties shall ensure the rights and responsibilities of persons with disabilities, with regard to guardianship, wardship, trusteeship, adoption of children or similar institutions, where these concepts exist in national legislation; in all cases the best interests of the child shall be paramount. States Parties shall render appropriate assistance to persons with disabilities in the performance of their child-rearing responsibilities.

3. States Parties shall ensure that children with disabilities have equal rights with respect to family life. With a view to realizing these rights, and to prevent concealment, abandonment, neglect and segregation of children with disabilities, States Parties shall undertake to provide early and comprehensive information, services and support to children with disabilities and their families.

4. States Parties shall ensure that a child shall not be separated from his or her parents against their will, except when competent authorities subject to judicial review determine, in accordance with applicable law and procedures, that such separation is necessary for the best interests of the child. In no case shall a child be separated from parents on the basis of a disability of either the child or one or both of the parents.

5. States Parties shall, where the immediate family is unable to care for a child with disabilities, undertake every effort to provide alternative care within the wider family, and failing that, within the community in a family setting.

Democratic People's Republic of Korea (2025)

44. The Committee is concerned that:

- (a) According to credible reports, persons with disabilities face restrictions on marrying, and social stigma continues to discourage marriages between persons with and without disabilities;
- (b) Persons with disabilities are denied the opportunity to be adoptive parents, guardians, or trustees of children, and it is unknown whether parents of children with disabilities are provided with financial support, counseling, and personal assistants to provide their children with the universal rights outlined in their laws;
- (c) There is no mechanism to monitor implementation of provisions of the Law of the Democratic People's Republic of Korea on the Provision of Persons with Disabilities on the rights of persons with disabilities regarding respect for their home and the family.

45. The Committee recommends that the State Party:

- (a) Conduct public awareness campaigns to foster understanding that persons with disabilities have the right, on an equal basis with others, to marry persons of their choice, with or without disabilities, and to have or adopt children, if they so wish;
- (b) Ensure that laws, policies, and practices protect the right of parents with disabilities to raise their children on an equal basis with others, and establish comprehensive support services, including financial assistance, personal assistance, counselling, and care to enable families to remain together;
- (c) Take the necessary legislative measures to ensure monitoring of the right to respect for home and the family of persons with disabilities.

Finland (2025)

44. The Committee is concerned that:

- (a) Information on family planning, artificial fertilization procedures, or adoption is not accessible and not available in sign language, including Finland Swedish sign language;
- (b) General and specialized family services lack sufficient training to provide support to persons with disabilities, whether parents or children.

45. The Committee recommends that the State party:

- (a) Ensure that all policies and information on family planning, including artificial fertilization procedures and adoption procedures, are accessible for persons with disabilities and available in sign language, including Finland Swedish sign language;
- (b) Increase awareness and capacity building on the rights of persons with disabilities for officers providing general and family services and ensure adequately funded community-based services for children with disabilities and their families to prevent out-of-home placement and to support parents with disabilities in caring for their children.

Kiribati (2025)

43. The Committee is concerned that:

- (a) Despite the absence of legal restrictions, persons with disabilities, particularly women and girls, face stigma, discrimination, and barriers in exercising their right to marry, found a family, and decide freely and responsibly on the number and spacing of their children;
- (b) There is a lack of accessible sexual and reproductive health services for persons with disabilities and an absence of measures to support parents with disabilities and parents of children with disabilities, and the risk of family separation in the absence of adequate state support services.

44. The Committee recommends that the State Party in close consultation and active involvement of persons with disabilities, through their representative organisations:

- (a) Take measures to eliminate stigma and discrimination against persons with disabilities in marriage and family life, including through legislative measures and awareness-raising campaigns, particularly addressing negative stereotypes about women and girls with disabilities;

(b) Ensure that sexual and reproductive health services are accessible to persons with disabilities, including through training of health workers, provision of information in accessible formats, and physical accessibility of facilities;

(c) Develop and implement support services for parents with disabilities and for families of children with disabilities, to enable them to exercise their parental responsibilities and obligations on an equal basis with others, and to ensure that children with disabilities can grow up in their families, with access to appropriate community-based support.

Maldives (2025)

45. The Committee is concerned:

(a) That persons with disabilities, particularly those with intellectual and/or psychosocial disabilities, continue to face persistent barriers in exercising their rights to marriage, family, parenthood, and relationships, due to stereotypes, stigma, and misconceptions, and that in many cases family members make decisions related to healthcare and family planning on behalf of persons with disabilities, and confine them to the home;

(b) At the lack of adequate support for parents with disabilities in exercising their parental rights, as well as for parents of children with disabilities, including households with members with disabilities, who face multiple barriers such as discrimination by association, social isolation, limited societal support, economic hardship, and disproportionate caregiving responsibilities, as well as the about the marginalization of families of persons with disabilities living in the outer islands, with extremely limited access to essential services and support.

46. The Committee recommends that the State party:

(a) Raise awareness in society of the rights of persons with disabilities with respect to sexual expression, choice of relationships, family and parenthood, and remove all obstacles preventing persons with disabilities, in particular women with disabilities and persons with intellectual and/or psychosocial disabilities, from exercising their rights on an equal basis as others;

(b) Adopt programmes and policies to provide persons with disabilities, in particular persons with disabilities living on the outer islands, with family planning education in accessible formats and age-appropriate information on sexual and reproductive rights;

(c) Adopt legislative and policy measures to ensure support for families of children with disabilities and for parents with disabilities, in particular those on the outer islands, to enable them to raise their children in the family settings.

45. The Committee notes with concern:

(a) The inconsistencies in federal, provincial and territorial legislation on the legal capacity of persons with intellectual and/or psychosocial disabilities to marry and adopt children, as well as discrepancies in judicial interpretation on the legal capacity of persons with psychosocial disabilities to marry and divorce;

(b) The insufficient support to children with disabilities and their families, and to parents with disabilities, to carry out their parental responsibilities, especially in First Nations, Inuit, and Métis territories.

(a) Recognise the legal capacity of persons with disabilities to ensure their right to marry, divorce, adopt and raise children;

(b) Adopt policy measures, to ensure adequate support to children with disabilities and their families, to parents with disabilities and to prevent separation of children from their families on the basis of disability of either the child or one or both of their parents, including in First Nations, Inuit, and Métis territories.

Dominican Republic (2025)

41. The Committee is concerned about:

- (a) The lack of sufficient support provided to children with disabilities and their families and to parents with disabilities to carry out their parental responsibilities;
- (b) The lack of measures to ensure that persons with disabilities have access to age-appropriate and gender-responsive information and education on sexual and reproductive health and rights, including family planning.

42. The Committee recommends that the State party:

- (a) Reinforce measures to ensure effective support for families of persons with disabilities to raise their children in a family setting;
- (b) Adopt policies to provide persons with disabilities, with age-appropriate and gender-responsive information and education in accessible formats on sexual and reproductive health and rights, including family planning.

European Union (2025)

56. The Committee is concerned that:

- (a) The EU Care Strategy and the two accompanying Regulations do not encourage Member States to provide persons with disabilities with self-directed services in their home and in the community;
- (b) During the COVID-19 pandemic, persons with disabilities in institutions were often separated from their families;
- (c) None of the matters related to the home and the family of persons with disabilities raised in the European Semester process were carried through to the Country-Specific Recommendations.

57. The Committee recommends that the European Union:

- (a) Provide guidance on and encourage Member States to provide persons with disabilities with self-directed services in their home and their community, and closely consult and actively involve persons with disabilities through their representative organizations in its implementation;
- (b) Support Member States to prevent the separation of persons with disabilities in institutions from their families in emergencies;
- (c) Strengthen support for persons with disabilities in the next cycle of the European Semester.

Palau (2025)

43. The Committee is concerned:

- (a) That persons with disabilities, particularly women with disabilities, are often deprived of their right to marry, to sexual expression, to exercise their choice of relationship, family and parenting rights, due to discriminatory and negative perceptions in the society;
- (b) The fact that persons with disabilities, particularly persons with intellectual and/or psychosocial disabilities, especially those deprived of their legal capacity under the Palau Family Protection Act RPPL 8-51 (2012), may be denied the right to marry, establish a family, and adopt and raise children.

44. The Committee recommends that the State party:

- (a) Raise awareness in the society on the rights of persons with disabilities with respect to sexual expression, choice of relationships, family and parenthood, including adoption, and remove all obstacles preventing persons with disabilities, in particular women with disabilities, and persons with intellectual and/or psychosocial disabilities to exercise their rights on an equal basis with others;

(b) Repeal provisions in existing legislations including Palau Family Protection Act, that restrict the rights of persons with disabilities and provide adequate support services to ensure that families with parents and/or children with disabilities have the right to a family and a home.

Tuvalu (2025)

41. The Committee is concerned about the information received on the constraints faced by persons with disabilities, in particular women with disabilities, and persons with intellectual and/or psychosocial disabilities with regard to all discriminatory provisions that impede the access of persons with disabilities to the exercise of their freedom to marry and found a family.

42. The Committee recommends that the State party:

(a) Raise awareness in the society on the rights of persons with disabilities with respect to sexual expression, choice of relationships, family and parenthood, including adoption, and remove all obstacles preventing persons with disabilities, in particular women with disabilities, and persons with intellectual and/or psychosocial disabilities to exercise their rights on an equal basis with others;

(b) Repeal the discriminatory provisions and include assisted decision-making in marriages, family planning and other rights for persons with disabilities.

Viet Nam (2025)

45. The Committee notes with concern:

(a) The lack of periodic evaluation of foster families by a State agency to assess the conditions in which they keep children with disabilities and their needs;

(b) The absence of specific support for persons with disabilities who wish to marry and have children, and the lack of systematic training in sexual and reproductive rights and health for persons with disabilities;

(c) The lack of adequate counselling in regard to genetic tests, which may coerce persons with disabilities into considering abortion if they are going to have a child with a disability.

46. The Committee recommends that the State party:

(a) Establish a mechanism for evaluating and following up with families with children with disabilities and foster families, ensuring their inclusion into family and community life and identification of their needs for financial, counselling, or other support;

(b) Ensure that persons with disabilities have access to the necessary support services to effectively fulfil their roles as parents, and provide systematic sexual and reproductive health and rights education to young persons with disabilities;

(c) Accompany genetic tests offered to the general population, and particularly to persons with disabilities, with appropriate counselling, and ensure that parents have the right to make their own decisions without coercion.

Belarus (2024)

45. The Committee is concerned about:

(a) The lack of parental rights and barriers in exercising parenthood, including the right to adopt children, particularly for persons with psychosocial disabilities and/or intellectual disabilities, autistic persons and those who are living in rural areas;

(b) Insufficient measures to support parents with disabilities to retain custody and to prevent the voluntary and involuntary abandonment of their children with disabilities, in particular affecting women with disabilities.

(c) The prevalence of forced abandonment of children with disabilities.

46. The Committee recommends that the State party:

- (a) Develop legislation, policy and effective mechanism for implementation regarding the right to parenthood including the right to adopt children for persons with disabilities;
- (b) Ensure support, awareness raising and dissemination of information for parents with disabilities to raise their children in a family setting, including for those living in rural areas;
- (c) Take legal and practical measures to eliminate child abandonment, in particular on the basis of disability, and provide support that is practically effective for children with disabilities and their families.

Belgium (2024)

46. The Committee is concerned about:

- (a) The lack of legal measures to ensure persons with disabilities have access to age-appropriate and gender-responsive information and education on sexual and reproductive health and rights, including family planning;
- (b) Persons with disabilities often being left with no alternative than to rely on informal caregivers, due to a lack of personal assistance;
- (c) The lack of support for parents of children with disabilities, and for parents with disabilities confronted with a lack of support services that would allow them to exercise the right to be a parent, on an equal basis with others.

47. The Committee recommends that the State party, in close consultation with and with the active involvement of persons with disabilities, through their representative organizations:

- (a) Adopt measures to train and sensitize health personnel on the rights of persons with disabilities and on how to provide unbiased guidance and support to prospective parents following prenatal diagnoses of Down syndrome or other impairments in order to allow them to take fully informed decisions on the pregnancy;
- (b) Adopt policies to provide persons with disabilities, including children with disabilities, with age-appropriate and gender-responsive information and education in accessible formats on sexual and reproductive health and rights, including family planning;
- (c) Ensure access of persons with disabilities to the services of personal assistants and not of those of informal caregivers to exercise their right to family life and to live independently and being included in the community, and, to this end, review the Law of 17 May 2019 on recognition of informal caregivers and explicitly recognize the support requirements of persons with disabilities;
- (d) Adopt legislative and policy measures to ensure adequate support for parents of children with disabilities, to allow them to raise their children in a family setting without having to leave the labour market.

Benin (2024)

45. The Committee is concerned by the information received on constraints for persons with disabilities living in institutions in terms of deciding on and entering into personal relationships,, largely owing to a lack of privacy and to interference by personnel and legal representatives; The Committee also regrets the lack of information on measures to promote inclusive foster care in family settings for children with disabilities without parental care, and the increasing number of cases of separation of children with disabilities to live in segregated residential settings;

46. The Committee recommends the State party to :

- (a) Ensure respect for the right to private life, including sexual self determination, of persons with disabilities still living in institutions, and end interference in this regard by staff and legal representatives;

- (b) Increase resources to ensure that children with disabilities receive the support that they require to enjoy their rights on an equal basis with others;
- (c) Encourage foster care in family settings for children with disabilities without parental care, and reduce the institutionalization and number of cases of separation of children with disabilities from their families.

Burkina Faso (2024)

42. The Committee noted with concern:

- (a) That Articles 243, 264 and 265 of the Personal and Family Code restrict the right to marry for persons with disabilities under guardianship, and article 518 of the Code concerning the restriction of parental rights;
- (b) The lack of sufficient support provided to children with disabilities and their families, and to parents with disabilities to carry out their parental responsibilities, which provision is limited to the support of children with intense support needs.

43. The Committee recommends that the State party:

- (a) Closely consult and actively involve persons with disabilities, through their representative organizations, in the revision of the Personal and Family Code and amend articles 243, 264 and 265 which restricts the right to marry for persons with disabilities under guardianship, as well as article 518 concerning the restriction of parental rights to allow free will and preference of individual and adopt supported decision-making in place of restriction;
- (b) Provide support services for children with disabilities to live with their families and provide parents with disabilities the support they require to exercise their parental responsibilities.

63. The Committee is concerned about situations in which parents with disabilities receive insufficient or belated support, which may significantly influence the assessment of their parenting skills and, as a consequence, may deny them their right to exercise parental responsibility. It is also concerned about the increase in the number of adoptions carried out without the consent of the parents in recent years.

64. The Committee recommends that the Kingdom of Denmark adopt legislative and policy measures to ensure effective and timely support for parents with disabilities and for parents of children with disabilities to raise their children in a family setting. It also recommends that the Kingdom of Denmark further improve its measures to ensure that the disability of a parent or the disability of a child is not a permissible ground for adoption, and monitor the adoption process accordingly.

44. The Committee note with concerned that:

- (a) Persons with disabilities, particularly persons with albinism, intellectual and/or psychosocial disabilities face challenges in exercising their rights to marriage, family, parenthood and relationships, due to stereotypes and stigma about them;
- (b) Parents with disabilities do not have adequate support to exercise their parental rights and parents of children with disabilities face such barriers as discrimination by association, isolation, lack of societal support, economic challenges;;
- (c) There is lack of promotion of inclusive alternative care in family-based, rather than institutional settings for children with disabilities who lack parental care.

45. The Committee recommends that the State Party:

- (a) Develop and implement targeted awareness raising campaigns to combat cultural and religious misconceptions, myths and stereotypes about marriage, family, parenthood and relationships of persons with disabilities, particularly persons with albinism and promote the rights, inclusivity and respect for individual with disabilities choices and preference;
- (b) In close consultation and with the active involvement of persons with disabilities through their representative organizations, establish comprehensive support programmes with adequate resources for parents with disabilities and parents with children with disabilities, ensuring that the parents exercise their full parental rights and providing them with early and comprehensive information, and support services ensuring they are safeguarded against stigma, abuse and discrimination on the basis of disability;
- (c) Establish a robust system to address violations of the rights of children with disabilities throughout the country in all settings.

Mauritius (2024)

39. The Committee is concerned about:

- (a) The lack of express recognition in the law of the rights of persons with disabilities with respect to family, parenthood and relationships;
- (b) The challenges faced by families in raising their children, including parents with disabilities, parents of children with disabilities and single parents;
- (c) The absence of information in accessible formats on the sexual and reproductive health and rights of persons with disabilities, particularly women and girls with disabilities.

40. The Committee recommends that the State party:

- (a) Recognize explicitly in the law the rights of persons with disabilities, including women with disabilities and persons with intellectual and/or psychosocial disabilities, to marry, found a family and exercise parental responsibilities on an equal basis with others;
- (b) Strengthen measures to provide appropriate support and accessible training programmes to ensure that all parents with disabilities and parents of children with disabilities can exercise their parental rights and fulfil their child-rearing responsibilities, including in the areas of child development, health and education;
- (c) Adopt programmes and policies to provide persons with disabilities with family planning education in accessible formats and age-appropriate information on sexual and reproductive health and rights.

Netherlands (2024)

51. The Committee is concerned about:

- (a) The interpretative declaration to art. 23 of the Convention;
- (b) Restrictions in national legislation of the right to custody, the right to marriage and the right to parenthood for persons with intellectual and/or psychosocial disabilities;
- (c) Professionals evaluating persons with intellectual and/or psychosocial disabilities as 'not good enough for parenting', and supporting the use of contraception as well as discouraging them to start a family.

52. The Committee welcomes the information received by the State party during the Constructive dialogue about the ongoing discussion concerning the withdrawal of the interpretative declaration to art. 23, and recommends the State party:

- (a) Withdraw its interpretative declaration to art. 23 of the Convention;
- (b) Take concrete steps to review the provisions contained in the national legislation restricting the right to custody, to marriage and to parenthood of persons with intellectual and/or psychosocial disabilities and replace them with provisions establishing a supported decision-making model;

(c) Take measures to safeguard the reproductive health and rights of persons with disabilities, including education and awareness programs and training for healthcare professionals on the reproductive health and rights of persons with disabilities and their right for autonomous decision-making without any form of discrimination.

Ukraine (2024)

46. The Committee notes with concern that:

(a) The legal framework of the State party (Articles 24 and 39 of the Family Code of Ukraine) sets forth that the marriage with a person deprived of their legal capacity is void and its registration invalid;

(b) The State party does not ensure the right of persons with disabilities to decide freely and responsibly on the number and spacing of their children, to have access to age-appropriate information, reproductive and family planning education;

(c) During the conflict, children and older persons with disabilities are involuntary displaced and separated from their parents, families, and friends without keeping official records of these cases. This practice amounts to a relocation of orphaned children, adult, and older persons with disabilities from one institution to another.

47. The Committee recommends that the State Party:

(a) Repeal articles 24 and 39 of the Family Code, and all other regulations that discriminate against persons with disabilities in matters relating to marriage, family, parenthood and relationships, and fully recognize the legal capacity of all persons with disabilities to get married, adopt or have children, form a family and have access to related information on an equal basis with others;

(b) Guarantee the respect of the right to sexual and reproductive health of persons with disabilities and ensure that they have all the conditions to enforce them, especially women and girls with disabilities, including the right to retain fertility–;

(c) Provide parents of children with disabilities the necessary information and support to raise them in the most appropriate and facilitating way, including financial support and personal assistants;

(d) Adopt measures to ensure that no children and older persons with disabilities are separated from his or her parents, families, and friends against their will, as well as ensure access to alternative care where the immediate family is unable to care for them.

Azerbaijan (2024)

51. The Committee notes the information about the Decree “On some issues related to prevention of children’s deprivation of parental care and strengthening the protection of their rights” (No.1599) adopted in February 2022 and the competencies of the Ministry of Labour and Social Protection of Population of the Republic of Azerbaijan, in this realm. The Committee observes with concern:

(a) That guardianship deprives persons with intellectual and/or psychosocial disabilities to enter into marriage and the exercise of their parental rights;

(b) The secondary legislation that retains disability and guardianship among the criteria for prohibiting adoption and the lack of information about applications and consideration of persons with disabilities as adoptive or foster parents;

(c) The lack of information and support to parents with disabilities to carry out their parental responsibilities and the fact that they are told that because of their condition, they should not have children;

(d) Separation from parents and abandonment of children with disabilities in residential institutions.

52. The Committee recommends that the State party:

- (a) Recognize equal rights of persons with disabilities in relation to marriage, family and parenthood;
- (b) Repeal legislation that restrict the right to adopt children on the basis of disability, in particular paragraph 7 of the "List of Diseases Prohibiting Adoption, Guardianship, and Custody," (Resolution No. 141) of the Cabinet of Ministers;
- (c) Ensure support and provide information for parents with disabilities to raise their children in a family setting, including for those living in rural areas;
- (d) Respect the right of children with disabilities to family life on an equal basis with others, including by repealing legislation and practices allowing for separation of children from their parents on the basis of disability and by developing support for children with disabilities and their families in the community, including information centres and tools to develop parental skills, counselling and in-home support.

46. The Committee is concerned about:

- (a) The fact that the marriage of persons with psychosocial disabilities and persons with intellectual disabilities is subject to the approval of the Sharia Court, noting that Family Law No. 19 of 2017 uses discriminatory language against them in articles 21 and 22.
- (b) Denying persons with disabilities their right to custody on the basis of disability in accordance with the provisions of Articles 126 and 136 of Family Law No. 19 of 2017, which sets vague and interpretable requirements such as "freedom from contagious and dangerous diseases" (Article 126-f);
- (c) Allowing the marriage of children with psychosocial disabilities and persons with intellectual disabilities, noting the use of discriminatory language against them in Articles 21 and 22.
- (c) Allowing the marriage of children 16 years old and younger with the permission of the court, especially for girls.
- (d) Lack of measures to allow persons with disabilities to access sexual and reproductive health services for persons with disabilities independently and privately
- (e) The decriminalization of marital rape, which puts women with disabilities, especially women with psychosocial disabilities and women with intellectual disabilities, at risk of marital rape.

47. The Committee recommends that the State party should

- (a) Repeal provisions that restrict the right of persons with psychosocial disabilities and persons with intellectual disabilities to marry and found a family
- (b) Ensure that persons with disabilities are not denied custody on the basis of disability and provide them with family support programs.
- (c) Repeal legal provisions and eliminate social practices that allow for the marriage of children under the age of 18 and repeal any powers given to the court to marry girls under the age of 16.
- (d) Provide sexual and reproductive health services for persons with disabilities, especially for women with disabilities in remote areas
- (e) Taking into account the recommendation of the Committee on the Elimination of Discrimination against Women (CEDAW/C/BHR/CO/4, Para. 27-A), criminalize marital rape and consider disability as an aggravating circumstance.

Costa Rica (2024)

37. El Comité toma nota de las aclaraciones por escrito proporcionadas por el Estado parte al concluir el dialogo constructivo. Sin embargo, le preocupa la persistencia de los procedimientos mediante los cuales las mujeres con discapacidad son declaradas madres no aptas.

38. El Comité recomienda al Estado parte ampliar sus esfuerzos para revisar los procedimientos en los cuales se declara a mujeres con discapacidad como madres no aptas, y restituya plenamente el derecho a tener un hogar y conformar una familia, asegurando que cuenten con los apoyos necesarios para hacer tales derechos efectivos, conforme la recomendación CRPD/C/CRI/CO/1, párr. 44.

Kazakhstan (2024)

49. The Committee notes with concern:

(a) Severe restrictions of marriage for persons with intellectual and/or psychosocial disabilities in the Marriage and Family Code;

(b) Barriers for persons with disabilities, including women with disabilities, to exercise their autonomy on the number and spacing of children, including the low prevalence in the use of contraception among women and men with disabilities, in particular in rural areas, insufficient information and education about reproductive and family planning, affecting in particular persons with intellectual and/or psychosocial disabilities, persons with disabilities in institutions and persons with hearing, vision and/or speech impairments, and that women and men with disabilities are not considered in fertility programmes;

(c) The denial of parental rights, including the right to adopt children, to persons with intellectual and/or psychosocial disabilities;

(d) Insufficient measures to support parents of children with disabilities to prevent abandonment, and to provide pregnant women whose foetus has been diagnosed with an impairment with human rights-based information on the impairment and on health and support service options, including peer support;

(e) A widely held perception in society that children with disabilities should be separated from their parents and the insufficient support for parents and families of children with disabilities in the community.

50. The Committee recommends that the State party, in close consultation with and with the active involvement of persons with disabilities, through their representative organizations:

(a) Repeal provisions in the Marriage and Family Code restricting the right to marry of persons with disabilities, in particular persons with intellectual and/or psychosocial disabilities, and establish mechanisms for supported decision-making on marriage and family relations, including by providing information on the right to marriage and parental rights, in accessible formats;

(b) Develop and provide age-appropriate reproductive and family planning information and education for persons with disabilities, including women and girls with disabilities, across the State party, including in rural areas, and ensure that contraception and assisted reproductive technologies and fertility programmes are available, accessible and affordable for women and men with disabilities;

(c) Guarantee the right of persons with disabilities to adopt children on an equal basis with others, in law and in practice;

(d) Provide continuous support and information to parents of children with disabilities and to pregnant women whose foetus has been diagnosed with an impairment;

(e) Prevent the removal of children with disabilities from their parents, recognize the right of parents to decide on the upbringing of their children with disabilities, take measures to return children with disabilities taken from their parents, foster public-private partnerships to improve the availability and accessibility of support for families with children with disabilities to live in the community, including family-based and community-based support.

Nicaragua (2024)

48. Al Comité le preocupa:

a) Que el Código Civil, particularmente su artículo 111(2), contenga descripciones peyorativas hacia las personas con discapacidad intelectual y/o psicosocial, incluso prohibiendo su derecho a contraer matrimonio y considerando esto un motivo de disolución del mismo (artículo 145), también le preocupa que no se contemple ninguna referencia a la adopción, todo esto en contravención al Artículo 31 de la Ley para Personas con Discapacidad (Ley 763) que consagra el derecho a contraer matrimonio, a formar un hogar, a decidir sobre su fertilidad y de no ser separados de sus hijos;

b) La falta de reconocimiento legal, en virtud del Código de Familia, del matrimonio y/o las uniones de hecho de parejas LGBTTIQ+, lo que afecta a personas con discapacidad de ese colectivo;

49. El Comité recomienda al Estado parte que, en consulta estrecha y colaboración activa con las personas con discapacidad y las organizaciones que las representan:

a) Reformar el Código Civil, eliminando toda descripción peyorativa referida a personas con discapacidad y armonizarlo con la Ley para Personas con Discapacidad, permitiendo que ejerzan su derecho al matrimonio, formar un hogar y a tener hijos, especificando la posibilidad de adopción de niños y niñas con discapacidad por personas con y sin discapacidad;

b) Reformar el Código de Familia para permitir el matrimonio y/o la unión de hecho de parejas LGBTTIQ+ , incluyendo personas con discapacidad, contemplando la posibilidad de formar una familia teniendo o adoptando hijos.

Sweden (2024)

51. The Committee is concerned:

(a) About the lack of resources and adequate support mechanisms from the municipal authorities to support parents with disabilities and families with children with disabilities.

(b) About the discrimination of persons with disabilities during family reunification procedure, as the right to family unification is conditional on detailed income and housing requirements.

52. The Committee recommends that the State party, in close consultation and active involvement of persons with disabilities and their representative organizations:

(a) Ensure the realization of the right to family life, to support parents with disabilities, to support parents of children with disabilities and to eradicate prejudices among the service providers in the municipal authorities, particularly in remote areas;

(b) Review the rules on family reunification to ensure that persons with disabilities are not disadvantaged by the maintenance requirement.

Zambia (2024)

45. The Committee is concerned:

(a) That persons with disabilities, particularly women with disabilities, are often deprived of their right to marry, to sexual expression, to exercise their choice of relationship, family and parenting rights, due to discriminatory and negative perceptions in the society;

(b) That article 17 of the Marriage Act requires a person with intellectual and/or psychosocial disability to obtain the consent of a guardian to contract a marriage;

(c) The absence of information in accessible formats on the sexual and reproductive rights and health of persons with disabilities, particularly women and girls with disabilities;

(d) The lack of sufficient support to children with disabilities and their families, and parents with disabilities to carry out their parental responsibilities, and the risk for children with disabilities being separated from their parents.

46. The Committee recommends that the State party:

(a) Raise awareness in the society on the rights of persons with disabilities with respect to sexual expression, choice of relationships, family and parenthood, and remove all obstacles preventing persons with disabilities, in particular women with disabilities, and persons with intellectual and/or psychosocial disabilities to exercise their rights on an equal basis with others;

(b) Amend the Marriage Act to repeal the discriminatory provisions and include assisted decision-making in marriages, family planning and other rights for persons with disabilities;

(c) Adopt programmes and policies to provide persons with disabilities, including persons with disabilities living in rural and remote areas, with family planning education in accessible formats and age-appropriate information on sexual and reproductive health;

(d) Adopt legislative and policy measures to ensure support for families of children with disabilities, including support for parents with disabilities to raise their children in a family setting, including for those in rural areas.

Andorra (2023)

47. The Committee notes that the Act 30/2022, Qualified Act on the Person and the Family replaces the Qualified Marriage Act of 1995. However, it observes with concern:

(a) The limited awareness about the right of persons with intellectual and/or psychosocial disabilities to marry owing to discriminatory and negative perceptions in society;

(b) The insufficient support for children with disabilities and their families and for parents with disabilities to carry out their parental responsibilities.

48. The Committee recommends that the State party:

(a) Ensure the right of all persons with disabilities, including persons with intellectual and/or psychosocial disabilities, who are of marriageable age to marry and to have a family on the basis of the free and full consent of the intending spouses;

(b) Reinforce measures to guarantee support and services for children with disabilities and their families in the community, including training on parental skills, information centres and tools to develop parental skills in Easy Read, the provision of appropriate levels of income, counselling, in-home care support and information about such services in accessible formats.

Austria (2023)

53. The Committee is concerned about:

(a) The denial of the right to marry to persons with disabilities under adult or court-appointed representation without the consent of their legal representative;

(b) The lack of support services for persons with intellectual and/or psychosocial disabilities and their children and the latter's removal from their parents.

54. The Committee recalls its joint statement with the Committee on the Rights of the Child on the rights of children with disabilities, and recommends that the State party:

(a) Recognize the right to marry of all persons with disabilities on the basis of their personal consent;

(b) Provide the support services necessary for persons with intellectual and/or psychosocial disabilities to effectively exercise their right to family life with their children, and cease the latter's removal from their parents and their placement in institutions, including in residential specialist schools.

Germany (2023)

51. The Committee is concerned about certain provisions of the Civil Code BGB, which may lead to violations of the rights of persons with disabilities, in particular persons with psychosocial and persons with intellectual disabilities, to home and family life, namely:

(a) Section 1304 of the Civil Code BGB, which prohibits a person who is "incapable of contracting" to enter into marriage;

(b) Section 1673 of the Civil Code BGB, which determines the suspension of the parental custody of persons who are "incapable of contracting";

(c) Section 1748 of the Civil Code BGB, which foresees substituted consent for adoption in cases of parents' "serious psychological illness or a particularly serious mental or psychological handicap";

(d) Section 1905 of the Civil Code BGB, which foresees the possibility of sterilization of a person under custodianship without free and informed consent.

52. The Committee recommends that the State party revise the Civil Code BGB and abolish all provisions which may restrict persons with disabilities' full enjoyment and exercise of the right to marriage, parenthood and reproductive rights and to promote the supported decision-making model in all matters related to home and family life.

Israel (2023)

49. The Committee notes with concern:

(a) Reports about insufficient support for persons with disabilities to exercise their parental rights and support them in child rearing responsibilities;

(b) The health sector priority for 'healthy parents' that devalues persons with disabilities, in particular women with disabilities and prevents access to available fertility procedures and technologies, adoption and foster care;

(c) Provisions in the Child Adoption Law (Section 13 (A) (7)), that allows adoption of children born to parents with intellectual disabilities without their informed personal consent;

(d) Decisions taken by welfare authorities and courts to separate children from their parents with disabilities, in particular parents with intellectual disabilities, on the basis of parental capacity assessments;

(e) Reports of lack of support to parents of children with disabilities leading to abandonment and institutionalization.

50. The Committee recommends that, in close consultation and active involvement of organisations of persons with disabilities, the State party:

(a) Implement measures for the provision of appropriate support and accessible training programmes to ensure all parents with disabilities can exercise their parental rights and to support them in child rearing responsibilities, including in the area of child development, health and education and review eligibility criteria to access to disability allowances and economic support to ensure that all parents with disabilities benefit from them;

(b) Adopt programmes to address stigma, ableism and discrimination in the health sector, and provide persons with disabilities, in particular women with disabilities with access to available fertility procedures and technologies, adoption and foster care on an equal basis with others;

(c) Repeal provisions in adoption legislation that allows for adoption of children born to parents with intellectual disabilities without their informed personal consent;

(d) Implement measures to prevent the removal of children from parents on the basis of disability, including by adopting measures to replace parental capacity assessments with evaluation of the support needs of parents with disabilities for parenting and child-rearing responsibilities, and providing legal aid and appropriate procedural accommodations.

(e) Raise awareness among parents of children with disabilities about the equal rights of children with disabilities with respect to family life and ensure that parents and families of children with disabilities have access to adequate support to raise their children.

Malawi (2023)

47. The Committee is concerned that Section 14 and 77 (C) of Marriage, Divorce and Family Relations Act of 2015, denies the legal capacity of persons with intellectual or psychosocial disabilities to marry. It also notes with concern the lack of support available for parents with disabilities and for families with children with disabilities, including women heads of household and that children with disabilities are denied the right to be raised by their parents and subjected to institutionalization in special needs centers and orphanages.

48. The Committee recommends that the State party:

- (a) Revise Sections 14 and 77 (C) of Marriage, Divorce and Family Relations Act of 2015 and withdraw measures denying the legal capacity of persons with intellectual and persons with psychosocial disabilities to marry;
- (b) Provide support to single women with disabilities who are heads of household and prevent separation from their children on the grounds of disability;
- (c) Withdraw alternative care placement of children with disabilities in institutions and provide support for families to raise their children and adopt measures to ensure availability of alternative care within the wider family.

Mauritania (2023)

39. The Committee is concerned:

- (a) The lack of express recognition in the State party's legislation of the right of persons with disabilities, in particular women with disabilities and persons with intellectual and/or psychosocial disabilities placed under guardianship, with respect to family, parenthood, and relationships;
- (b) The absence of information in accessible formats on the sexual and reproductive rights and health of persons with disabilities, particularly women and girls with disabilities;
- (c) The lack of sufficient support to children with disabilities and their families, and parents with disabilities to carry out their parental responsibilities.

40. The Committee recommends that the State party:

- (a) Remove all obstacles preventing persons with intellectual disabilities and persons with psychosocial disabilities who are deprived of their legal capacity from entering into marriage, exercising their family and parental rights and all forms of adoption of children on an equal basis with others;
- (b) Adopt programmes and policies to provide persons with disabilities, including persons with disabilities living in rural and remote areas, with family planning education in accessible formats and age-appropriate information on sexual and reproductive health;
- (c) Adopt legislative and policy measures to ensure support for families of children with disabilities, including support for parents with disabilities to raise their children in a family setting, including for those living in rural areas.

Mongolia (2023)

45. The Committee is concerned:

- (a) That the Family Law limits the rights of persons with intellectual disabilities and persons with psychosocial disabilities placed under guardianship, with respect to family, parenthood, and relationships;
- (b) The lack of sufficient support to children with disabilities and their families, and parents with disabilities to carry out their parental responsibilities, in particular for children with disabilities who require a high level support, including children with severe palsy and children with swallowing difficulties.

46. The Committee recommends that the State party:

- (a) Amend its legislation to explicitly recognize the right of persons with disabilities, including women with disabilities, persons with intellectual and/or psychosocial disabilities, to marry, found a family and exercise parental responsibilities on an equal basis with others;
- (b) Repeal the laws and regulations that prevent persons with disabilities from exercising their parental rights and adopt legislative and policy measures to ensure effective support for families of persons with disabilities to raise their children in a family setting, in particular for children with disabilities who require a high-level support, including children with severe palsy and children with swallowing difficulties.

41. El Comité reconoce los esfuerzos realizados para encontrar familias de acogida para las personas con discapacidad, sin embargo, le preocupa el poco seguimiento y apoyo financiero que se le da a las mismas.

42. El Comité recomienda al Estado parte instituir un sistema de seguimiento estrecho a las familias de acogida, crear iniciativas para alentar a más familias a sumarse y asegurarse de proporcionar los recursos necesarios.

Angola (2023)

37. The Committee is concerned about the level of support for persons affected by leprosy and persons with albinism, and the extent to which they are supported by their families.

38. The Committee recommends that the State party strengthen its efforts to ensure support for persons affected by leprosy and persons with albinism, including support for their families.

Argentina (2023)

43. El Comité observa con preocupación lo siguiente:

a) El artículo 403 del Código Civil y Comercial establece como uno de los impedimentos matrimoniales a la falta permanente o transitoria de salud mental;

b) La separación de madres y padres con discapacidad, en particular aquellos en situación de pobreza, de sus hijos o hijas debido a prejuicios sobre su supuesta incapacidad para cuidarlos, y el insuficiente apoyo para las familias de padres o madres con discapacidad y/o que tienen niños o niñas con discapacidad.

44. El Comité recomienda al Estado parte:

a) Derogar el artículo 403 inciso (g) del Código Civil y Comercial que incluye una disposición discriminatoria afectando el derecho de las personas con discapacidad psicosocial a contraer matrimonio;

b) Prestar la oportuna asistencia, en particular en términos de intervención temprana y apoyo a la inclusión, a las familias de los niños y las niñas con discapacidad y a los padres y las madres con discapacidad para que puedan ejercer sus responsabilidades parentales, con el fin de evitar que las familias se separen por motivos de discapacidad y, cuando la familia inmediata no pueda ocuparse de ellos, haga todo lo posible para proporcionarles modalidades alternativas de cuidado en la comunidad en un entorno familiar.

Georgia (2023)

47. The Committee notes with concern:

(a) The restriction of parental rights to persons with psychosocial disabilities, particularly women living in institutions, solely on the basis of medical assessments and entailing separation from their children;

(b) Limited coverage of programmes to support the inclusion of children with disabilities and their families in the community, resulting in heightened exposure to abandonment and institutionalization;

(c) That programmes and subprogrammes on the rehabilitation of children and on child care lack measures to support parents with disabilities in their child-rearing responsibilities.

48. The Committee recommends that the State party:

(a) Withdraw legislation and practices restricting parental rights of persons with disabilities whose legal capacity has been restricted and enforce provisions in the Code of the Rights of the Child prohibiting separation of children from their parents on the basis of disability of the child or the parent, as indicated by the State party in its replies to the list of issues to the Committee (CRPD/C/GEO/RQ/1, para. 115);

(b) Conduct consultations with organizations of persons with disabilities, including children with disabilities, at the national and municipal level to adopt strategies in the short- and long-term aimed at providing support and services for children with disabilities and their families in the community, including training on parental skills, information centres and tools to develop parental skills in Easy Read, the provision of appropriate levels of income, counseling, in-home care support, and information about these services in accessible formats;

(c) Support parents with disabilities in their child rearing responsibilities, and monitor periodically programmes and subprogrammes on child rehabilitation and child care, and introduce the necessary adjustments.

Peru (2023)

46. Preocupa profundamente al Comité la falta de apoyo a las familias para evitar la separación familiar y la retirada de los niños con discapacidad y su ingreso en centros de acogida residencial (CAR), donde los niños permanecen más allá de la mayoría de edad. También le preocupa que, entre 2015 y 2021, solo se adoptó a un niño con discapacidad y muy pocos tienen acceso a las familias de acogida, no hay una estrategia clara para promover la adopción de niños con discapacidad para ser reubicados en hogares y familias con dignidad y que a las mujeres con discapacidad que acuden a parir se les desincentive a tener más hijos.

47. El Comité insta al Estado parte que preste apoyo a las familias de las personas con discapacidad, incluidos los padres con discapacidad, para que cumplan sus responsabilidades parentales y garanticen el derecho de las niñas y niños, incluidos los niños con discapacidad, a crecer en el seno de una familia o en un entorno familiar cuando su familia inmediata no pueda ocuparse de ellos, y a que se comprometa con un plan de inversión en servicios comunitarios de apoyo a las familias, incluidas las familias extensas, y la promoción de familias de acogida, así como la puesta en marcha de campañas de información y sensibilización de la población, promoviendo la adopción de niños con discapacidad y capacite al personal de salud y a la sociedad en general en el respeto del derecho de las personas con discapacidad a tomar sus propias decisiones, incluyendo en temas sexuales y reproductivos.

45. The Committee is concerned:

(a) That despite the existing legal provisions stating that “spouses marry by mutual consent” (art 81 of the Individuals and Family Code), persons with disabilities, particularly women with disabilities are often deprived of their right to marry due to discriminatory and negative perceptions in the society;

(b) At the lack of measures to prevent separation of children from their parents on the basis of disability, particularly article 39 of Act No. 2004-005, which results in mothers with disabilities losing custody of their children owing to their disability;

(c) The absence of information in accessible formats on the sexual and reproductive rights and health of persons with disabilities, particularly women and girls with disabilities.

(d) The lack of express recognition in the State party’s legislation of the right of persons with disabilities, in particular women with disabilities and persons with intellectual and/or psychosocial disabilities placed under guardianship, with respect to family, parenthood, and relationships;

(e) The lack of sufficient support to children with disabilities and their families, and parents with disabilities to carry out their parental responsibilities.

46. The Committee recommends that the State party:

(a) Take measures to ensure the implementation of article 81 of the Individuals and Family Code and ensure the right of all persons with disabilities who are of marriageable age to marry and to found a family on the basis of free and full consent of the intending spouses;

(b) Amend article 39 of Act No. 2004-005 to ensure that mothers with disabilities do not lose custody of their children owing to their disability and can exercise parental responsibilities on an equal basis with others;

- (c) Adopt programmes and policies to provide persons with disabilities, including persons with disabilities living in rural and remote areas, with family planning education in accessible formats and age-appropriate information on sexual and reproductive health;
- (d) Adopt legislative and policy measures to ensure support for families of children with disabilities, including support for parents with disabilities to raise their children in a family setting, including for those in rural areas.

Tunisia (2023)

41. The Committee is concerned about the legislation and the practice that allows a judge to remove the parenthood from a parent with disability while granting the responsibility to larger family relatives or to social affairs centre, which is contrary to the provisions of the Convention that no child shall be separated with the parents on the grounds of either their disability or that of the parent.

42. The Committee recommends that the State party:

- (a) Repeal any legislation that allows the judge to remove the parenthood from a parent with a disability and to place the child away from close family;
- (b) Strengthen the mechanisms of protection and support of the families, especially where either member has intellectual or psychosocial disabilities, against abuse and deprivation of their parenthood.

Bangladesh (2022)

45. The Committee is concerned about:

- (a) Religious laws that discriminate against or deny the right to marriage of persons with disabilities, particularly women with disabilities, persons affected by leprosy and persons with intellectual and/or psychosocial disabilities, including laws allowing for divorce on grounds of disability and restrictions on rights and responsibilities of parents with disabilities and their right to adopt children;
- (b) The lack of measures to prevent separation of children from their parents on the basis of disability;
- (c) The absence of information in accessible formats on the sexual and reproductive rights and health of persons with disabilities, particularly women and girls with disabilities, including lack of training for personnel as well as the lack of meaningful consultation and effective participation of persons with disabilities in any initiatives on family education.

46. The Committee recommends that the State party:

- (a) Eliminate religious laws that discriminate against and deny the right to marriage of persons with disabilities, particularly women with disabilities, persons affected by leprosy, persons with intellectual and/or psychosocial disabilities, and enact legislation against arbitrary divorce of women with disabilities, and laws to enable parents with disabilities to adopt children;
- (b) Adopt and implement effective measures to prevent separation of children from their parents on the basis of disability, and provide all necessary support services, including financial support, counselling, and community-based support and services for children with disabilities, their parents and families as well as for parents with disabilities, to guarantee their enjoyment on an equal basis with others of their rights with respect to family life;
- (c) Adopt and implement measures to provide comprehensive information and support services to children with disabilities and their families, including programmes and policies to provide persons with disabilities, including those living in rural and remote areas, with family planning education in accessible formats and accessible and age-appropriate information on sexual and reproductive health;

China (2022)

48. The Committee is concerned about:

(a) The lack of measures to support parents with disabilities to carry out parental responsibilities, to prevent the separation of children from their parents on the basis of the disability of the parents or the child, and to ensure that alternative care is provided by the wider family or an alternative family instead of placement in institutions;

(b) The lack of in-home and community-based services for families with a member with disability, particularly those with autistic children and children requiring higher levels of support, especially in rural areas.

49. The Committee recalls its joint statement with the Committee on the Rights of the Child on the rights of children with disabilities (2022) and recommends that the State party:

(a) Implement the provisions of the National Population Development Plan (2016–2030) prioritizing increased support for families of persons with disabilities to strengthen home education support services for children with learning disabilities, provide regularized and professionalized family support as well as the referral services needed for children with disabilities, and reinforce the responsibilities of parents as the primary guardians of children;

(b) Ensure the accessibility and availability of in-home and community-based services for families with a member with disability across the territory of the State party;

(c) Provide specific support services to parents with disabilities, prohibit the separation of children from their parents on the basis of the disability of either the child or one or both of the parents, and ensure that alternative care is only provided within the extended family or an alternative family instead of placement in institutions.

Macao

86. The Committee is concerned about the legal restrictions in the Civil Code depriving persons with disabilities, who have been placed under substitute decision-making, of their rights to marriage and family life.

87. The Committee recommends that Macao SAR, China repeal all legal restrictions on marriage and family life for persons with disabilities on the grounds of their impairment and ensure their rights in relation to marriage, family and parenthood on an equal basis with others.

Indonesia (2022)

50. The Committee is concerned about the lack of support for children with disabilities and their families, in particular children who require high levels of support in rural and remote areas, and for parents with disabilities to carry out their parental responsibilities.

51. The Committee recommends that the State party adopt legislative and other measures to ensure adequate support for children with disabilities and their families, including those who require high levels of support in rural and remote areas, and to ensure support for parents with disabilities to raise their children, including for those in rural and remote areas.

49. The Committee notes with concern the:

(a) Provision of the Civil Code (Article 770), discriminating persons on the grounds of their psychosocial disability as setting it as condition of divorce;

(b) Separation of children with disabilities from their families and their institutionalization in particular living arrangements on the basis of their disability.

50. The Committee recommends that the State party:

(a) Repeal discriminatory provisions against persons with disabilities, including Article 770 Paragraph 1 item iv of the Civil Code that sets psychosocial disability as a condition of divorce;

(b) Recognise the right of children with disabilities to family life and render appropriate assistance, including early intervention and inclusive support, to parents of children with disabilities, including to parents with disabilities, in the performance of their child-rearing responsibilities to prevent families from being separated on the basis of disability, and, when the immediate family is unable to care for them, undertake every effort to provide them alternative care within the community in a family setting.

Lao People's Democratic Republic (2022)

42. The Committee observes with concern:

- (a) The limited support for the parents and families of children with disabilities and for parents with disabilities to ensure their right to a family life and prevent involuntary family separation on the basis of disability;
- (b) The lack of information on whether the rights of persons with disabilities, including persons with intellectual and/or psychosocial disabilities, to enter into marriage, exercise parental responsibilities and adopt children are ensured on an equal basis with others;
- (c) The fact that many ethnic groups consider the marriage between the perpetrator of a rape and the victim as the only remedy for restoring harmony;

43. The Committee recommends that the State party:

- (a) Support children with disabilities and their families and prevent separation of children from their families on the basis of disability of either the child or one or both of their parents, including for those in rural areas;
- (b) Ensure that all persons with disabilities, including persons with intellectual and/or psychosocial disabilities, may enter into marriage, exercise parental responsibilities and adopt children on an equal basis with others;
- (c) Adopt measures to eradicate patriarchal attitudes and deep-rooted stereotypes that justify the marriage between the perpetrator of a rape and the victim, especially in rural and remote areas in Northern Lao and within some ethnic groups.

New Zealand (2022)

45. The Committee is concerned about:

- (a) The lack of response by the State Party to the Committee's 2014 concluding observations to repeal section 8 of the Adoption Act 1955, which allows for children to be removed for adoption from parents with disabilities without their consent;
- (b) The lack of suitable family placements for children with disabilities taken into care, including the ability for siblings to be placed together in families;
- (c) The lack of comprehensive information, services and supports for children with disabilities and their families resulting in out of home placements, including placements in residential specialist schools;
- (d) The lack of specific policies and guidelines concerning parents with disabilities within Oranga Tamariki (Ministry for Children) and a limited human rights understanding of disability resulting in the removal of children, including newborn babies from their parents with disabilities, particularly parents with intellectual disabilities and Māori parents with disabilities.

46. The Committee recalls the Joint Statement of the Committee on the Rights of the Child and the Committee on the Rights of Persons with Disabilities on the rights of children with disabilities (2022), and recommends that the State party:

- (a) Repeal section 8 of the Adoption Act 1955 and amend the statute to ensure that parents with disabilities are treated on an equal basis with other parents with respect to adoption;
- (b) Implement strategies to increase family placements for children with disabilities and to ensure that siblings can remain together in these placements;

- (c) Significantly increase and resource comprehensive information, services and supports for children with disabilities and their families to prevent out of home placements and placements in institutions, including residential specialist schools;
- (d) Take immediate action within Oranga Tamariki (Ministry for Children) to implement the recommendations from the 2020 Ombudsman report, “A Matter of Urgency”, and increase disability, gender and culturally appropriate expertise, policies and guidelines that adhere to the Convention in order to ensure that newborn babies and children are not removed from parents with disabilities, particularly parents with intellectual disabilities and Māori parents with disabilities, on the basis of impairment.

45. The Committee is concerned that the State party does that persons with intellectual and persons with psychosocial disabilities deprived of the right of equal recognition before the law cannot enter into marriage and exercise their family and parental rights and adopt children on an equal basis with others.

46. The Committee recommends that the State party remove all obstacles preventing persons with intellectual disabilities and persons with psychosocial disabilities deprived of their legal capacity from entering into marriage, exercise their family and parental rights and adopt children on an equal basis with others.

40. The Committee is concerned about the lack of support for children with disabilities and their families, in particular children who require high levels of support in rural areas, and for parents with disabilities to carry out their parental responsibilities.

41. The Committee recommends that the State party strengthen its efforts by adopting legislative and other measures to ensure support for families of persons with disabilities, including support for parents with disabilities to raise their children in a family setting, including for those in rural areas.

Jamaica (2022)

46. The Committee is concerned about:

- (a) Legal restrictions under the Civil Code depriving persons with disabilities, who have been placed under substitute decision-making, of their rights to marriage and family life;
- (b) The lack of in-home and community-based services for families with a member with disability, particularly those with autistic children and children requiring higher levels of support, especially in areas outside the capital and in rural areas;
- (c) The risk for children with disabilities of being separated from their parents based on their impairment or socioeconomic status and resulting in their institutionalization.

47. The Committee recommends that the State party:

- (a) Repeal all legal restrictions on marriage and family life for persons with disabilities on the grounds of their impairment and ensure their rights in relation to marriage, family and parenthood on an equal basis with others;
- (b) Ensure the accessibility and availability of in-home and community-based services for families with a member with disability across the territory of the State Party;
- (c) Prevent the separation of children with disabilities from their parents based on their impairment or socioeconomic status and ensure all necessary community-based support and services in the performance of their child-rearing responsibilities.

Mexico (2022)

52. The Committee is concerned that the Civil Code restricts the right of some persons with disabilities to marry, and their right to have custody and guardianship of their children on an equal basis with others. It is further concerned about the lack of disaggregated data on persons with disabilities who are victims of domestic violence.

53. The Committee recommends that the State party:

- (a) Amend the Civil Code to ensure that all persons with disabilities have the right to marry and to have custody or guardianship of their children, and can in fact exercise it;
- (b) Provide support to parents with intellectual disabilities and parents with psychosocial disabilities for the discharge of their responsibilities towards their children;
- (c) Provide financial, organizational and administrative support to effectively guarantee the right of children with disabilities to live with their families or to family life;
- (d) Establish family support mechanisms, in keeping with the recommendation made by the Committee on the Rights of the Child, following its consideration of the combined fourth and fifth periodic reports of Mexico;
- (e) Compile disaggregated data on persons with disabilities, including women and children with disabilities, who are victims of domestic violence.

Switzerland (2022)

45. The Committee notes with concern:

- (a) The insufficient support available for children with disabilities and their families to ensure the enjoyment by children with disabilities, on an equal basis with others, of their rights with respect to family life, and to prevent institutionalization;
- (b) The lack of measures to support parents with disabilities to carry out parental responsibilities, to prevent the separation of children from their parents on the basis of the disability of the parents or the child, and to ensure that alternative care is provided by the wider family or an alternative family instead of placement in institutions.

46. Recalling its joint statement with the Committee on the Rights of the Child on the rights of children with disabilities (2022), the Committee recommends that the State party:

- (a) Ensure the enjoyment by children with disabilities, on an equal basis with others, of their rights with respect to family life, including by providing appropriate support and assistance to children with disabilities and their families to prevent institutionalization;
- (b) Provide specific support services to parents with disabilities, prohibit the separation of children from their parents on the basis of the disability of either the child or one or both of the parents, and ensure that alternative care is only provided within the extended family or an alternative family instead of placement in institutions, including group homes.

40. The Committee is concerned that there are statutory restrictions on the rights of persons with psychosocial or intellectual disabilities to start a family, raise their children or adopt.

41. The Committee recommends that the State party review its legislation and explicitly recognize the right of persons with disabilities, including persons with psychosocial or intellectual disabilities, to marry, start a family, assume parental responsibilities and adopt on an equal footing with others.

Djibouti (2021)

39. The Committee notes with concern:

- (a) The lack of measures to protect the rights of persons with disabilities, particularly women with disabilities and persons with intellectual or psychosocial disabilities placed under guardianship in light of the Civil Code, with respect to family, parenthood, and relationships;
- (b) The lack of support to children with disabilities and their families, and parents with disabilities to carry out their parental support.

40. The Committee recommends that the State party:

- (a) Repeal discriminatory provisions in the Family Code and Civil Code and recognize the right of persons with disabilities, particularly women with disabilities and persons with intellectual or psychosocial disabilities, to found a family and exercise parental responsibilities on an equal basis with others;
- (b) Adopt legislative and policy measures to ensure support for families of persons with disabilities, including support for parents with disabilities to raise their children in a family setting, including for those in rural areas.

France (2021)

48. The Committee notes with concern:

- (a) That marriage of persons with disabilities under guardianship or with restricted legal capacity are subject to objection by guardians;
- (b) That the disability allowances, particularly the Disability Compensation Allowance and the education allowance for children with disabilities remain insufficient, are unevenly applied across the territory of the State party, and do not cover all required expenses;
- (c) The negative effects of the calculation of the adult disability allowances hindering the autonomy of women with disabilities, by taking into account the spouse's income or combining allowances of married women with disabilities with those of their partners, and the impact of the reduction of income support for couples of persons with disabilities living together, and parents of children with disabilities;
- (d) Information about separation of a child from his or her parents against their will on the basis of a disability of either the child or one or both of the parents;
- (e) Lack of early and comprehensive information, services and support to children with disabilities and their families, in particular parents with intellectual or psychosocial disabilities.

49. The Committee recommends that the State party:

- (a) Raise awareness about the equality of persons with disabilities concerning marriage and family matters and adopt measures to prevent opposition to marriages of persons with disabilities by third parties, due to stigma;
- (b) Identify, in consultation with organizations of persons with disabilities, actual barriers to exercise parental rights, and undertake plans to eliminate stereotypes that undermine the rights of persons with disabilities to establish a family;
- (c) Undertake legal reforms to the Disability Compensation Benefit in order to ensure access to allowances by all eligible parents with disabilities, eliminate disparities in its recognition across the territory of the State party, and ensure an increase in the support provided in accordance with actual disability costs;
- (d) Reform the regulations of the adult disability allowance in order to separate the income of persons with disabilities from that of their spouses, and take measures to ensure and promote autonomy and independence of women with disabilities who live in couples, and strength measures to support couples composed by persons with disabilities and parents of children with disabilities;
- (e) Prohibit the separation of children from their parents on the basis of disability of either the child or one or both of the parents, and ensure that alternative care is only provided within a safe family environment for children with disabilities;
- (f) Provide early and comprehensive information and support to children with disabilities and their families, especially autistic parents, parents with intellectual or psychosocial disabilities to exercise their rights with respect to family life.

Estonia (2021)

44. The Committee notes with concern:

- (a) The provisions in the Registered Partnership Act denying the right of persons with disabilities subject to guardianship to marry, on the assumption that persons with disabilities lack understanding about the legal consequences of marriage or registered partnership contracts, and the provisions in the Family Law Act requiring a guardian's consent for persons with disabilities to exercise parental responsibilities;
- (b) The insufficient in-home and inclusive community services for biological and foster families of children with disabilities, in particular families of children with autism, and single-parent families;
- (c) The provisions in the Social Welfare Act allowing for the provision of alternative care for children with disabilities, including institutional settings, on the basis of disability.

45. The Committee recommends that the State party:

- (a) Remove discriminatory provisions in the Registered Partnership Act and the Family Law Act and recognize the right of persons with disabilities to found a family and exercise parental responsibilities on an equal basis with others;
- (b) Provide biological and foster families of children with disabilities and single-parent families of children with disabilities with the support required to exercise their rights with respect to family life;
- (c) Set up a legal and policy framework to promote a safe family environment for children with disabilities, in line with the principle of the best interest of the child, prohibit the separation of children from their parents on the basis of disability and ensure that alternative care is only provided within the biological, extended, foster or adoptive family.

Australia (2019)

43. The Committee is concerned about:

- (a) The fact that parents with disabilities are more likely than other parents to have their child removed from their care, often on the basis of disability, and about the lack of support provided to parents with disabilities in the exercise of parental responsibilities;
- (b) The reported discrimination suffered, in particular by women with disabilities and by lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, intersex and queer persons with disabilities, in accessing assisted reproductive technologies.

44. The Committee recommends that the State party:

- (a) Ensure that no child is separated from his or her parents because of the disability of either the child or one or both of the parents;
- (b) Adopt comprehensive and gender- and culturally-specific parenting and family support measures for parents with disabilities;
- (c) Ensure that women with disabilities and lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender, intersex and queer persons with disabilities have equal access to assisted reproductive technologies.

Ecuador (2019)

41. The Committee is concerned at the lack of express recognition in the State party's laws of the right of persons with disabilities to marry or of respect for home and the family.

42. The Committee reiterates its recommendation that the State party amend its legislation so that it explicitly recognizes the right of persons with disabilities, including those with intellectual or psychosocial disabilities, to marry, found a family, exercise parental responsibilities and adopt children on an equal footing with others.

El Salvador (2019)

44. The Committee is concerned:

- (a) That laws, particularly articles 171, 292 and 301 of the Family Code and articles 1317 and 1318 of the Civil Code, continue to restrict rights and declare persons with disabilities incapable of marrying, forming a family and being parents on an equal basis with others;
- (b) About the lack of information on the rights of persons with disabilities to retain parental responsibility, as well as on rights to adoption on an equal basis with others.

45. The Committee recommends that the State party review and repeal any legislation or policy, particularly the Family Code and the Civil Code, that restricts the rights of persons with disabilities to marriage, to form a family and to be a parent, including adoption on an equal basis with others.

India (2019)

48. The Committee is concerned about religious personal laws restricting the right to marriage of persons with disabilities, including women with disabilities and persons affected by leprosy, those at the state level allowing for divorce on grounds of disability and restricting parental responsibilities of persons with disabilities and their right to adopt children. It is also concerned at the lack of measures to prevent the separation of children from their parents on the basis of disability.

49. The Committee recommends that the State party:

- (a) Repeal from personal laws on marriage and divorce all restrictions relating to the marriage and family of persons with disabilities, including persons with intellectual or psychosocial disabilities and those requiring higher levels of support;
- (b) Repeal provisions from the Adoption Regulations (2017) under which persons with disabilities may be declared ineligible for the adoption of children based on assessments of physical, mental, emotional or life-threatening medical conditions, and ensure human rights-based monitoring of adoption procedures by the Central Adoption Resource Authority;
- (c) Adopt policy measures, in accordance with article 23 (3) and (4) of the Convention, to support children with disabilities and their families and prevent separation of children from their families on the basis of disability of either the child or one or both of their parents.

41. The Committee is concerned about restrictions to the rights of persons with disabilities related to marriage, family and parenthood, such as those set out in article 7 of Law No. 188 (1959).

42. The Committee recommends that the State party:

- (a) Amend or repeal legislation that prevents persons with disabilities from exercising their right to marriage and parenthood on an equal basis with others;
- (b) Adopt measures to support parents with disabilities to raise their children at home and to eliminate social stigma against persons with disabilities regarding marriage and parenthood.

Kuwait (2019)

44. The Committee is concerned about:

- (a) (a) Legislation that restricts marriage on the basis of disability and requires a prenuptial medical examination;
- (b) (b) The lack of information on the measures taken to prevent the abandonment, neglect and institutionalization of children with disabilities.

45. The Committee recommends that the State party:

- (a) (a) Repeal legislation restricting marriage on the basis of disability and requiring a prenuptial medical examination, ensure that all women and men with disabilities are able to enjoy their rights to marriage, a family, adoption and parenthood on an equal basis with others and with their free consent;

(b) Ensure support to parents with disabilities and to families of children with disabilities, including Bidoon families, families of Kuwaiti women married to non-Kuwaiti nationals and non-Kuwaiti families, and ensure access to inclusive community-based services and alternative care in family settings for all children with disabilities, regardless of their origins.

Myanmar (2019)

43. The Committee is concerned about:

- (a) The fact that sexual and reproductive health and rights of women with intellectual or psychosocial disabilities is subject to the consent of their parents or guardians, under article 27 (f) of the Rights of Persons with Disabilities Law;
- (b) The limited support for the parents and families of children with disabilities and for parents with disabilities to ensure their right to a family life and prevent involuntary family separation on the basis of disability.

44. The Committee recommends that the State party:

- (a) Repeal the legislation that allows for non-consensual intervention regarding the sexual and reproductive rights of women with disabilities, and take all legal and policy measures necessary to ensure that all persons with disabilities, including those with intellectual or psychosocial disabilities, may enter into marriage, exercise parental responsibilities and adopt children, on the basis of free and full consent, on an equal basis with others;
- (b) Abolish the practice of involuntary family separation on the basis of disability and provide the necessary support, including financial support, counselling, and community-based support and services for children with disabilities, their parents and families as well as for parents with disabilities, to guarantee their enjoyment on an equal basis with others of their rights with respect to family life.

Cuba (2019)

39. The Committee is concerned that:

- (a) Article 4 of the Family Code (1975) still contains provisions that deny persons with intellectual disabilities or with psychosocial disabilities the right to marry and to found a family on the basis of free and full consent of the intending spouses;
- (b) There is a lack of necessary support for persons with disabilities to exercise their reproductive rights on an equal basis with others;
- (c) Article 138 of the Family Code (1975) provides for guardianship of 'incapacitated persons'.

40. The Committee recommends that the State party:

- (a) Repeal legal provisions that prohibit persons with intellectual disabilities or psychosocial disabilities to marry;
- (b) Adopt the necessary support measures, including personal assistance, with a view to enabling persons with disabilities, especially women with disabilities, to exercise their right to maternity or paternity free from prejudice and on an equal basis with others, and ensure the availability of community-based support for parents with disabilities and families with children with disabilities to guarantee enjoyment of the right to family on an equal basis with others;
- (c) Repeal or amend article 138 of the Family Code.

Niger (2019)

37. The Committee is concerned about the lack of measures to ensure the right to marry and have a family for persons with disabilities, including those placed under guardianship; the lack of information in accessible formats on the right to marry and on sexual and reproductive health; and the lack of support services to protect the parental rights and responsibilities of persons with disabilities.

38. The Committee recommends that the State party:

- (a) Adopt legislative measures to prohibit discrimination against persons with disabilities in marriage and family matters, especially persons with disabilities placed under guardianship, women, and persons with psychosocial or intellectual disabilities;
- (b) Ensure that information is provided in accessible formats to persons with disabilities on the right to marry and have a family, including information on sexual and reproductive health;
- (c) Protect the parental rights and responsibilities of persons with disabilities and ensure that parents of children with disabilities are provided with adequate information, awareness, support and training to allow them to raise their children in the family setting.

Norway (2019)

35. The Committee is concerned that:

- (a) The State party does not provide adequate support for parents with disabilities to bring up their children and exercise their parental responsibilities;
- (b) One of the factors contributing to children being separated from parents and placed in care homes or taken by child welfare services, is their own or their parents' disability.

36. The Committee recommends that the State party:

- (a) Ensure that accessible and inclusive community support and safeguard mechanisms are available for parents with disabilities to exercise parental responsibilities;
- (b) Take measures to ensure explicitly in the law the prohibition of the removal of children from their parents on the basis of their parents' or their own disability.

Rwanda (2019)

41. The Committee is concerned about:

- (a) Cases where children have been taken away from their parents on the ground of disability, inter alia owing to poverty;
- (b) The lack of awareness, especially in the justice system and the child protection system, about the rights of persons with disabilities, especially persons with psychosocial disabilities.

42. The Committee recommends that the State party:

- (a) Provide adequate and appropriate information, services and support to families that have members with disabilities, including in the form of social protection to families living in poverty headed by persons with disabilities and those with children with disabilities, ensuring that children can enjoy their right to be raised within families and at home;
- (b) Increase awareness in the general community, in the justice system and agencies involved in child protection about the rights of persons with disabilities, in particular the right to respect for home and the family, especially for persons with psychosocial disabilities.

Saudi Arabia (2019)

41. The Committee is concerned at:

- (a) The absence of a legally prescribed minimum age of marriage, and at the consequently high proportion of girls with disabilities who marry before the age of 18 years;
- (b) The lack of information on whether the rights and responsibilities of persons with disabilities, including those with intellectual or psychosocial disabilities, to enter into marriage, exercise guardianship, wardship, trusteeship and adopt children are ensured on an equal basis with others;
- (c) The obligation imposed on couples aiming to marry to undergo prenuptial medical examinations, which restricts the right of all persons with disabilities to marry on an equal basis with others due to impairment;
- (d) The practice of collective marriages for persons with disabilities.

42. The Committee recommends that the State party, in line with its General comment No. 3 (2016) on women and girls with disabilities:

- (a) Define and enforce a legal minimum age of marriage of 18 years for both women and men, including persons with disabilities (CEDAW/C/SAU/CO/3-4, para. 64 (c));
- (b) Take all necessary legal and policy measures to ensure that all persons with disabilities, including those with intellectual or psychosocial disabilities, may enter into marriage, exercise guardianship, wardship, trusteeship and adopt children on an equal basis with others;
- (c) Repeal the Marriage Contract Licensing Regulations imposing the obligation to undergo prenuptial medical examinations to enter into marriage so as to allow persons with disabilities to freely choose their partner, irrespective of impairment;
- (d) Introduce the necessary safeguards to ensure that all marriages, including collective marriages, respect the right of persons with disabilities, including those with intellectual or psychosocial disabilities, to freely choose their partner

39. The Committee is concerned about:

- (a) The reported insufficiency of support to families with members with disabilities and its inavailability to all such families;
- (b) The absence of education and information in accessible formats for persons with disabilities on sexual and reproductive health and rights and family planning and the right to marry for persons with disabilities, including persons with psychosocial or intellectual disabilities.

40. The Committee recommends that the State party:

- (a) Take measures to ensure support to families with persons with disabilities, including parents with disabilities, to raise their children at home; and
- (b) Take measures to provide access to information, in accessible formats, to persons with disabilities on the right to marry and sexual and reproductive health and rights, including family planning.

Spain (2019)

- (a) Lack of adequate policies and related services to support families of children with disabilities;
- (b) Persistence of biases and stereotypes by staff of the justice and social service administrations on the parenthood capacity of parents with disabilities.

44. The Committee recommends to:

- (a) Develop adequate policies and provide the support necessary for children with disabilities to remain in the family, including through the promotion of foster family-related services;
- (b) Provide support for parents with disabilities to retain full parental responsibility of their children and promote a positive image of their capacities and rights to parenthood and family life.

Türkiye (2019)

46. The Committee is concerned about provisions in the Civil Code restricting the rights of persons with intellectual or psychosocial disabilities to marry and found a family by requiring health reports certifying absence of 'medical impediments'. It is also concerned about stigmatization of persons with disabilities preventing their parenthood roles, and the limited access to support for parents of children with disabilities, which is limited only to parents of children with high support requirements.

47. The Committee recommends that the State party:

- (a) Repeal provisions in the Civil Code that deny the right of persons with disabilities to marry, and ensure they can exercise their rights relating to marriage, family, parenthood and relationships on an equal basis with others;
- (b) Adopt measures to support parents and families with disabilities to raise their children at home and to eliminate social stigma against persons with disabilities regarding parenthood, including through an adequate provision of allowances and support.

Vanuatu (2019)

38. The Committee is concerned about discriminatory legislation on family and marriage, including sections 1 and 2 of the Matrimonial Causes Act (1986) that prohibit marriage on grounds of disability including psychosocial or intellectual disabilities, and the insufficient support services provided for children with disabilities and their families, especially in rural areas.

39. The Committee recommends that the State party:

- (a) Repeal or amend legislation on family and marriage that discriminates against persons with disabilities, including sections 1 and 2 of the Matrimonial Causes Act (1986);
- (b) Provide adequate support for parents and families of children with disabilities, including counselling services, to ensure that children with disabilities are not separated from their family on the grounds of disability and that children are not separated from their parents with disabilities.

Algeria (2018)

38. The Committee is concerned with the lack of financial and counseling support as well as the absence of community-based support to parents and families of children with disabilities and for parents with disabilities.

39. The Committee recommends that the State party provide the necessary financial and counseling support and ensure the availability of community-based support for parents with disabilities and families with children with disabilities to guarantee enjoyment of the right to family on an equal basis with others.

45. The Committee notes with concern that the network of primary support services for children with disabilities and their families is not sufficiently and evenly developed across the State party.

46. The Committee recommends that the State party increase human, technical and financial resources at the national and local level for providing primary support services for children with disabilities. It also recommends that the State party involve organizations of persons with disabilities, in particular organizations of children with disabilities concerning the implementation of support services.

47. The Committee notes with concern that the Family Code restricts the right of persons with disabilities under full guardianship to marry.

48. The Committee recommends that the State party amend its Family Code and withdraw any restriction of the right to marry for persons with disabilities of marriageable age.

Malta (2018)

33. The Committee is concerned about the existence of discriminatory laws relating to the right to marry and found a family, in particular the Marriage Act (Cap. 255), which contradict the Equal Opportunities (Persons with Disability) Act (Cap. 413).

34. The Committee recommends that the State party amend or repeal all legislations, which do not respect and protect persons with disabilities from enjoying to right to marry and found a family, in particular The Marriage Act (Cap. 255).

Poland (2018)

38. The Committee is concerned about the reservation by the State Party to article 23(1)(a) of the Convention; it is further concerned by the:

- (a) Practice to take children away from their parents with disabilities arguing that the family is incapable of providing care for them;
- (b) Prohibition to marry for persons deprived of their legal capacity, as well as for persons with psychosocial and/or intellectual disabilities or with cerebral palsy, considering disability as an aggravating factor for a marriage and children; also the prohibition for deaf persons to obtain custody of children through adoption.

39. The Committee recommends that the State party withdraw its reservation to Article 23(1)(a) and (b) of the Convention and abolish all legal provisions preventing persons with disabilities to marry and to found a family. The Committee also recommends to develop inclusive support systems to assist families with children with disabilities as well as parents with disabilities, in supporting their parenthood.

North Macedonia (2018)

40. The Committee is concerned about the legal provisions in the Law on Family that discriminate against persons with psychosocial disabilities and/or persons with intellectual disabilities to marry and form a family. The Committee is further concerned about the provisions in the aforementioned Law that requires a person with intellectual disabilities and/or a person with psychosocial disabilities to be certified as 'knowledgeable and understanding'.

41. The Committee recommends that the State party:

- (a) Review the Law on Family to ensure that persons with disabilities can exercise their rights relating to marriage, family, parenthood and relationships on an equal basis with others and on the basis of their free and informed consent;
- (b) Adopt measures to promote adequate legal protection and training of judicial and social workers to ensure that persons with disabilities are not discriminated against during legal and administrative proceedings concerning their sexual and reproductive rights, right to create a family and legal custody of their children.

Haiti (2018)

40. The Committee is concerned about:

- (a) Discriminatory legislation, including article 8 of the Act on the Inclusion of Persons with Disabilities (2012), which provides for the exceptional removal of the custody of a child from a person with a disability and the civil Code, which restricts persons declared "interdicted" to enter into acts of civil life, including marriage;
- (b) The insufficient support services to strengthen the capacity of parents and families of children with disabilities, particularly single mothers of children with disabilities;
- (c) The reinforcement of the medical model to disability resulting from the legal requirement of a prenuptial certificate from couples prior to marriage to prevent impairments;
- (d) The absence of education and information programmes for persons with disabilities, particularly women and girls, on sexual and reproductive health and rights and family planning in accessible formats.

41. The Committee urges the State party to:

- (a) Take all measures necessary to repeal or amend legislation that discriminates against persons with disabilities, including article 8 of the Act on the Inclusion of Persons with Disabilities (2012) and the Civil Code;
- (b) Allocate sufficient resources to support parents and families of children with disabilities - especially single mothers - and parents with disabilities;

(c) Consider modifying the focus of premarital medical examinations to sexually transmitted diseases;

(d) Ensure equal access to sexual and reproductive health-care services, as set out in target 3.7 of the Sustainable Development Goals, and provide information and education on sexual and reproductive health and rights and family planning for persons with disabilities in accessible formats, including Easy Read.

Oman (2018)

41. The Committee is concerned about:

(a) The absence of measures to ensure the right of persons with disabilities, including those placed under guardianship, and in particular women and persons with psychosocial disabilities, to freely marry and have a family;

(b) The lack of provision of information in accessible formats for persons with disabilities on the right to marry and information on sexual and reproductive rights;

(c) The lack of support services to protect the parental rights of persons with disabilities.

42. The Committee recommends that the State party:

(a) Adopt legislative measures in order to abolish all legislation and practices that discriminate against women with disabilities in marriage and family matters, especially those persons with disabilities placed under guardianship, and in particular women and persons with psychosocial disabilities, to marry and have children;

(b) Take measures to ensure that information is provided in accessible formats to persons with disabilities on the right to marry and have a family, including information on reproductive health and rights;

(c) Adopt measures to protect the parental rights of persons with disabilities and further adopt measures to ensure that parents of children with disabilities are provided with adequate support and training to allow them to raise their children in the family home.

Russian Federation (2018)

46. The Committee is concerned about the Government's decision of 2013 and the Family Code of the Russian Federation, which do not allow a person with certain types of intellectual and/or psychosocial disability to marry and adopt a child irrespective of the possible best interest of the child concerned.

47. The Committee urges the State party to review the current legislation and available safeguards as well as provide incentives for ensuring the right of all persons with disability to marry and to have a family on an equal basis with others.

Seychelles (2018)

39. The Committee is concerned about the insufficient support services available to strengthen the capacity of parents and families of children with disabilities.

40. The Committee recommends that the State party allocate sufficient resources to support parents and families of children with disabilities, especially single parents and parents with disabilities.

Slovenia (2018)

37. The Committee is concerned about:

(a) The lack of support and services for families with members with disabilities, including children, especially single female-headed families, increasing their risk of poverty and social exclusion;

(b) Barriers to marry and to raise children for persons with psychosocial and/or intellectual disabilities when assessing their capacities for the exercising of their rights.

38. The Committee recommends that the State party:

- (a) Adopt and develop support measures for families, including single female-headed families, that have a member with a disability to ensure their decent standard of living and social inclusion;
- (b) Repeal all discriminatory provisions and practices preventing the right to marry and parental responsibilities for persons with psychosocial and/or intellectual disabilities and ensure support for them for exercising their responsibilities.

Sudan (2018)

45. The Committee is concerned about provisions in the Personal Status Act of 1991 which limit the rights of persons with disabilities to forming families and exercising parental rights, by stipulating legal capacity as a pre-requisite or to do so through their guardian.

46. The Committee recommends that the State party:

- (a) Review the Personal Status Act of 1991 to ensure that persons with disabilities can exercise their rights relating to marriage, family, parenthood and relationships on an equal basis with others and on the basis of their free and informed consent;
- (b) Adopt measures to support parents with disabilities to exercise their parental rights at home and to eliminate social stigma against persons with disabilities regarding marriage and parenthood.

Latvia (2017)

38. The Committee is concerned about:

- (a) Persons with disabilities living in institutions who are married and are forced to live separately either in the same institution or in a different one if either of the spouses is transferred;
- (b) The disability of a parent being used by courts as justification to discontinue or remove custody rights;
- (c) The lack of support services for parents with intellectual disabilities, including appropriate services for mothers, depriving them of their parental rights.

39. The Committee recommends that the State party ensure the right to marriage, family and parenthood for all persons with disabilities, including persons with intellectual disabilities, providing them with inclusive support services and an adequate standard of living.

Luxembourg (2017)

40. The Committee is concerned about discriminatory laws and policies that restrict the rights of persons with disabilities relating to marriage, the family, parenthood and relationships.

41. The Committee recommends that the State party take the measures necessary, including the repeal of legislation, to eliminate discrimination against persons with disabilities, in all matters relating to marriage, family, parenthood and relationships.

Montenegro (2017)

42. The Committee notes with grave concern that:

- (a) Montenegrin legislation restricts the right of persons with disabilities under guardianship to marry and restricts their parental rights;
- (b) Parents with disabilities, particularly women, lack sufficient measures of support from the State in their exercise of parental responsibility for their children and, when raising their children alone, may risk having them taken away from them.

43. The Committee recommends that the State party speedily harmonize its legislation with the Convention and ensure that persons with disabilities can exercise their right to marry, their parental rights and their right to adopt on an equal basis with others, and that support services are provided in the community for parents with disabilities. In this regard, it also recommends that the State party take all necessary measures, including legislative measures, to ensure that women with disabilities under no circumstances lose custody of and/or contact with their children based on their disability or on the fact that they are raising their children on their own, and provide these mothers with community support if needed.

Morocco (2017)

44. The Committee is concerned about:

- (a) The absence of support services available to families of children with disabilities and the absence of education and information on sexual and reproductive health and family planning for persons with disabilities;
- (b) Restrictions in the Family Code placed on persons with psychosocial and/or intellectual disabilities, in particular the requirement to obtain prior judicial authorization before marriage.

45. The Committee recommends that the State party:

- (a) Take measures to ensure support for families of persons with disabilities, including parents with disabilities, to raise their children at home;
- (b) Take measures to provide persons with disabilities with access to information, in appropriate formats, on sexual and reproductive health and family planning and amend the Family Code to ensure the enjoyment of the right to marriage by persons with psychosocial and/or intellectual disabilities.

Panama (2017)

46. The Committee is concerned that the Civil Code still contains provisions that prevent persons with disabilities from exercising the right to marry and to find a family on the basis of free and full consent of the intending spouses, and that there is a lack of necessary support for persons with disabilities to exercise their reproductive rights on an equal basis with others.

47. The Committee recommends that the State party eliminate barriers to marriage for persons with disabilities and that it adopt the necessary support measures, including personal assistance, with a view to enabling persons with disabilities, especially women, to exercise their right to maternity or paternity free from prejudice and on an equal basis with others. In addition, it should introduce a review mechanism to restore custody of children to women with disabilities whose children were removed on grounds of disability. The Committee urges the State party to take measures to provide appropriate support to families that include persons with disabilities.

United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland (2017)

48. The Committee is concerned that parents with disabilities do not receive appropriate services and support, resulting in children being removed from the family environment and placed in foster care, group homes or institutions. It is also concerned at the insufficient funding for parents of deaf children to learn sign language.

49. The Committee recommends that the State party:

- (a) Ensure appropriate support for parents with disabilities to effectively fulfil their role as parents and ensure that disability is not used as a reason to place their children in care or remove them from the family home;
- (b) Ensure that local authorities have the legal duty to allocate and provide funds for parents wishing to learn sign language.

Armenia (2017)

39. The Committee is concerned about provisions in the Family Code that prevent persons with specific forms of impairments from adopting children and exercising parental rights and that prevent persons who have been deprived of their legal capacity from marrying. It is also concerned about the lack of services for families that have members with disabilities.

40. The Committee recommends that the State party take the measures necessary, including the repeal of legislation, to eliminate discrimination against persons with disabilities in all matters relating to marriage, family and parental rights. It also recommends that the State party develop the inclusive support measures necessary in this regard, including access to personal assistance and mainstream services, to ensure adequate support for families that have a member with a disability.

40. The Committee is concerned that women with disabilities, especially those with psychosocial and/or intellectual disabilities, can be separated from their children on the grounds of their disability.

41. The Committee recommends that the State party provide sufficient resources to support families with children with disabilities so that the family can remain together. This means providing sufficient support to allow children with disabilities to remain in the family, including through the promotion of foster family-related services, and support for parents with disabilities to retain full parental responsibility of their children.

Canada (2017)

41. The Committee is concerned that parents with disabilities do not receive adequate and appropriate services and support from provincial and territorial child welfare agencies, resulting in children being removed from the home. It is also concerned that parents of children with disabilities do not receive adequate support to maintain their children in their home, which at times forces them to place their child in foster care, group homes or institutions.

42. The Committee recommends that the State party work with the provinces and territories to ensure that parents with disabilities have access to the support and services they require to fulfil effectively their role as parents and that disability is not used as a reason to place their children in care or remove their child from the home. The Committee further recommends that the State party consider the provision of timely support necessary to maintain the optimal family environment for children with disabilities.

49. Al Comité le preocupa que aún existen normas vigentes en el Código Civil que impiden el matrimonio a personas con discapacidad intelectual y/o psicosocial y niegan el derecho al matrimonio y a formar una familia sobre la base de la voluntad de las parejas. También preocupa al Comité la ausencia de apoyos necesarios para que las personas con discapacidad puedan ejercer su derecho a fundar una familia en igualdad de condiciones con las demás.

50. El Comité recomienda al Estado parte que derogue las disposiciones que limitan el matrimonio a personas con discapacidad intelectual y/o psicosocial y que adopte las medidas de apoyo necesarias para que las personas con discapacidad, especialmente las mujeres, puedan ejercer sus derechos a la maternidad o paternidad libre de prejuicios y en igualdad de condiciones con las demás.

Iran (Islamic Republic of) (2017)

44. The Committee is concerned about restrictions in the exercise of the rights of persons with disabilities related to marriage, family, and parenthood, particularly in relation to persons deprived of their legal capacity. It is further concerned about restrictions to adoption by persons with disabilities and the lack of measures to prevent removal of children born to parents with disabilities.

45. The Committee recommends that the State party:

- (a) Repeal laws that prevent persons with disabilities from exercising their right to marriage and parenthood;
- (b) Provide access to reproductive and family planning education for all persons with disabilities; and
- (c) Ensure that persons with disabilities can exercise their parental rights and adopt children.

Jordan (2017)

43. The Committee notes with concern that article 12 of the Personal Status Law (No. 36 of 2010) require that persons with intellectual and psychosocial disabilities obtain judicial authorization in order to marry.

44. The Committee recommends that the State party repeal article 12 of the Personal Status Law to ensure that persons with disabilities can exercise their right to marry on an equal basis with others and found a family on the basis of their full and free consent.

Republic of Moldova (2017)

42. The Committee is concerned about discriminatory laws and policies that restrict the rights of persons with disabilities relating to marriage, the family and parenthood, and that:

- (a) The lack of services for families that have members with disabilities, particularly persons with autistic spectrum disorders, places an undue burden on families, especially single female-headed families, increasing their risk of poverty and social exclusion;
- (b) Prejudice against persons with disabilities persists, particularly against women with psychosocial and/or intellectual disabilities, in matters relating to family and parenthood;
- (c) There are reports that child protection authorities request that mothers with disabilities be deprived of their legal capacity and separated from their children.

43. The Committee recommends that the State party take the measures, including the repeal of legislation, necessary to eliminate discrimination against persons with disabilities, particularly women with psychosocial and/or intellectual disabilities, in all matters relating to marriage, family and parenthood. It also recommends that the State party:

- (a) Develop the inclusive support measures necessary in this regard, including personal assistance and respite care services, for families that have a member with a disability, to ensure an adequate standard of living and social participation;
- (b) Take measures to ensure that parents with disabilities have the means necessary to exercise their rights, including the right to motherhood.

Bolivia (2016)

53. The Committee is concerned that persons under legal interdiction cannot exercise their right to marry or start a family.

54. The Committee urges the State party to repeal any legal provision that restricts the right of persons with disabilities to marry freely and on the basis of the consent of the couple, and their access to information enabling them to exercise their sexual and reproductive rights.

Colombia (2016)

52. The Committee expresses its concern that persons with disabilities whose legal capacity is restricted owing to a declaration of judicial interdiction cannot marry or form a family without judicial authorization.

53. The Committee urges the State party to repeal any restrictions that limit or prevent persons with disabilities from marrying and forming a family on the basis of the prior consent of the couple. It further recommends that the State party take steps to explicitly prohibit by law the placement of children outside their families on the basis of disability and to ensure that community support mechanisms are available to parents with disabilities.

Ethiopia (2016)

49. The Committee is concerned that legislation of the State party entails discrimination on the basis of disability regarding the rights of the family, namely, articles 34, 51 and 220 of the Family Code. The Committee notes with concern the inadequate availability of community-based support for families with children with disabilities and also for parents with disabilities.

50. The Committee recommends that the State party repeal the provisions of the Family Code that entail discrimination on the basis of disability, such as articles 34, 51 and 220 and other legislation based on negative stereotypes of persons with disabilities regarding family life. It also recommends that the State party ensure the availability of community-based support for parents with disabilities and families with children with disabilities to guarantee enjoyment of the right to family on an equal basis with others.

57. The Committee notes that the Civil Code restricts the right to marry and the parental rights of some persons with disabilities. It further notes that children with disabilities living in poverty are at greater risk of abandonment and institutionalization.

58. The Committee recommends that the State party:

- (a) Review and harmonize the Civil Code to guarantee the right to marry and the parental rights of all persons with disabilities;
- (b) Set up programmes to provide appropriate assistance to mothers with disabilities in the performance of their child-rearing responsibilities;
- (c) Establish support mechanisms for families of children with disabilities to prevent abandonment;
- (d) Replace measures to institutionalize all abandoned children with disabilities with measures to promote their adoption or placement in foster care and ensure that foster families receive the requisite support for their care.

Italy (2016)

51. The Committee is concerned at the lack of specific measures to support families of children with disabilities or adults with high levels of support, including financial support.

52. The Committee recommends that the State party allocate specific financial, social and other resources across all regions to ensure all families with members with disabilities, including those members with high support needs, can gain access to all the support they require, beyond the list of tax exemptions listed by the State party (see CRPD/C/ITA/Q/1/Add.1, para. 52), to ensure the right to home and family and to inclusion and participation in their local communities, and to eliminate resorting to institutionalization.

53. The Committee is deeply concerned that administrative barriers, including inaccessible procedures, still exist to parents with disabilities to adopt children with or without disabilities.

54. The Committee recommends that the State party review current laws, policies and practices relating to adoption, and provide support to parents with disabilities to retain full parental responsibility for their children.

United Arab Emirates (2016)

41. The Committee is concerned that:

- (a) The national legislation restricts marriage on the basis of disability and requires a prenuptial medical examination for persons with disabilities to receive a financial assistance grant;
- (b) Discriminatory laws and policies prevent persons with disabilities, in particular women, from enjoying their rights on an equal basis with others in all matters relating to marriage, the family, parenthood and relationships;
- (c) The State party has not adopted any measures to ensure adequate support to families of children with disabilities or adults who require a high degree of support.

42. The Committee recommends that the State party:

- (a) Repeal legislation restricting marriage on the basis of disability and requiring a prenuptial medical examination for persons with disabilities;
- (b) Repeal the discriminatory provisions in family and other law to ensure that all women and men with disabilities are able to enjoy, on an equal basis with others, their rights in matters related to marriage, family, parenthood and relationships;
- (c) Ensure support to parents with disabilities and to families of children with disabilities, including adults who require a high degree of support.

Uruguay (2016)

49. Al Comité le preocupa que aún existen normas vigentes en el Código Civil que impiden el matrimonio a personas con discapacidad psicosocial e intelectual y niegan el derecho al matrimonio y a formar una familia sobre la base de las preferencias de las personas con discapacidad de contraer matrimonio y a formar una familia. También preocupa al Comité la ausencia de apoyos necesarios para que las personas con discapacidad puedan ejercer sus derechos reproductivos en igualdad de condiciones con las demás.

50. El Comité recomienda al Estado parte que derogue las disposiciones que limitan el matrimonio a personas con discapacidad psicosocial e intelectual y que adopte las medidas de apoyo necesarias para apoyar a las familias que tienen niños con discapacidad y para que las personas con discapacidad, especialmente las mujeres, puedan ejercer su maternidad o paternidad sin discriminación y en igualdad de condiciones con las demás.

47. Preocupa al Comité:

- (a) La vigencia de normas en el Código Civil que impiden el matrimonio a personas con discapacidad intelectual o psicosocial, y a personas sordas y sordociegas;
- (b) La discriminación y las prácticas de negar el derecho al matrimonio y a formar una familia sobre la base de la voluntad de las parejas;
- (c) La ausencia de apoyos necesarios para que las personas con discapacidad puedan ejercer sus derechos reproductivos en igualdad de condiciones con las demás, como se evidencia en el caso de Valeria Riveros.

48. El Comité recomienda que el Estado parte:

- (a) Derogue las disposiciones discriminatorias que limitan el matrimonio a las personas con discapacidad;
- (b) Adopte las medidas de apoyo necesarias, que incluyan la asistencia personal, con el propósito de que las personas con discapacidad, especialmente las mujeres, puedan ejercer sus derechos libres de prejuicios y en igualdad de condiciones con las demás;
- (c) Instaure un mecanismo de revisión para el restablecimiento de la custodia de los hijos a las mujeres con discapacidad a quienes se les ha privado por motivo de la discapacidad.

Lithuania (2016)

43. The Committee is deeply concerned that persons with disabilities, especially those deprived of their legal capacity, can be denied the right to marry, found a family and adopt and raise children.

44. The Committee calls upon the State party to repeal provisions restricting these rights and to provide adequate support services to ensure that families with parents with disabilities and/or children with disabilities have the right to a family and a home.

Portugal (2016)

42. The Committee notes that the Civil Code in the State party restricts the right of certain persons with disabilities to marry, to hold custody of their sons and daughters, and to adopt. It also noted that austerity measures have resulted in cutbacks, among other things, in social services and financial support for families, with particularly negative consequences for women “carers” of persons with disabilities.

43. The Committee recommends that the State party review and harmonise its Civil Code to safeguard the rights of all persons with disabilities to marry, to hold custody of their sons and daughters, and to adopt. It further recommends that States Party adopts appropriate steps to ensure that its financial and social austerity policies and measures promote financial support for families with a member with disabilities, providing particular protection and support to women personal assistants of persons with disabilities.

45. The Committee is deeply concerned that women with disabilities, especially those with psychosocial and intellectual disabilities, are separated from their children on grounds of their disability

46. The Committee urges the State party to review the procedures by which women with disabilities are declared unfit mothers on the basis of disability and fully restore their rights to have a home and found a family, ensuring that they have the support necessary to make these rights effective.

Slovakia (2016)

65. The Committee is deeply concerned that section 12 of the Family Act restricts the right to marriage of persons with intellectual and psychosocial disabilities. The Committee is also concerned about the lack of provision of support to children with disabilities to remain in the family and of means to avoid their placement in institutions, and the lack of measures to support parents with disabilities.

66. The Committee recommends that the State party repeal section 12 of the Family Act; provide adequate support for children with disabilities to reside in the family; and provide support to parents with disabilities to retain full parental responsibility for their children.

Thailand (2016)

43. The Committee is concerned that family law (Commercial and Civil Code, book V) prevents some persons with disabilities from marrying and founding a family. It is also concerned that parents of children with disabilities encounter obstacles to gaining access to specific support for exercising their parental responsibilities and preventing abandonment.

44. The Committee recommends that the State party repeal section 1449 and related provisions of the family law that discriminate against certain persons with disabilities with respect to their right to marry and found a family, and that it increase the availability of early and comprehensive information, services and support to children with disabilities and their families.

Uganda (2016)

46. The Committee is concerned about the legislation that infringes the right to marry of persons with disabilities, such as the Divorce Act (1904) and the Hindu Marriage and Divorce Act 1961. It is further concerned about the absence of information on sexual and reproductive health and family planning for persons with disabilities due to lack of accessible formats, means and modes of information, negative attitudes, myths and stereotypes against them.

47. The Committee recommends that the State party:

- (a) Repeal discriminatory provisions of the marriage and divorce acts and guarantee persons with intellectual and/or psychosocial disabilities, regardless of their legal capacity status, the right to marry and to adopt on an equal basis with others;
- (b) Enact legislation which prohibits the separation of children from their parents on the basis of the disability of either the child or one or both of the parents;
- (c) Ensure support to families with persons with disabilities for raising their children at home;
- (d) Ensure access to information, in appropriate formats, to persons with disabilities on sexual and reproductive health and family planning.

Brazil (2015)

40. The Committee is concerned that persons with disabilities are separated from their children on the basis of impairment.

41. The Committee recommends the State party to take legal action to explicitly prohibit the removal of children on the basis of their parents' impairment, including where the parent is subject to interdiction.

42. The Committee is concerned at the lack of disaggregated data on the number of families of children with disabilities who have access to community-based supports, such as the Specialized Social Assistance Reference Centers (Centro de Referência Especializado da Assistência Social – CREAS).

43. The Committee recommends the State party to collect and report disaggregated data on the availability of community-based supports for families of children with disabilities, and the number of families who access those services.

European Union (2015)

56. The Committee is concerned that austerity measures have resulted in cuts in social services and support to families and community-based services, among others, which restrict the right of persons with disabilities to family life and the right of children with disabilities to live in family settings.

57. The Committee recommends that the European Union take measures to ensure that its economic and social policy and its recommendations promote support to families with persons with disabilities and ensure the right of children with disabilities to live in their communities.

58. The Committee is concerned that the long awaited maternity leave directive has been withdrawn, and is further concerned that equal rights for women, for mothers, for fathers, and for children and adults with disabilities are not adequately addressed in European Union work and life-balance policy.

59. The Committee recommends that the European Union ensure that people with disabilities and families of persons with disabilities be included in the newly announced roadmap "New start to address the challenges of work-life balance faced by working families".

50. The Committee is concerned that Article 204 of the Civil Code restricts persons with psychosocial disabilities ("aliénés interdits") from marrying on an equal basis with others. In addition, the Committee is concerned about: a) Inadequate support measures for parents with disabilities to exercise their parental rights; and b) The fact that parents of children with disabilities are not able to access specific support for health, education and training.

51. The Committee recommends that the State party immediately repeal Article 204 and related provisions of the Civil Code restricting marriage on an equal basis with others. Furthermore, the Committee recommends that the State party a) Provide support to parents with disabilities to exercise their full parental rights, and b) Allocate adequate resources to strengthen services for children with disabilities, to support their families and for training of professionals in the field.

41. The Committee is concerned about the absence of measures to return children with disabilities currently in orphanages to a family setting. It is also concerned about the measures of the Marriage Act (2014) that prevent persons with intellectual and psychosocial disabilities to get marriage.

42. The Committee recommends that the State party:

(a) Take steps to increase information and support to families of children with disabilities to ensure they can be raised within the family home, and expand the scope of the transfer fund for children with "severe" disabilities to benefit all children with disabilities and that it establishes a monitoring mechanisms on the effective disbursement of the resources through the country; and

(b) Review the Marriage Act 2014 in order to repeal provisions that discriminate against persons with psychosocial and/or intellectual disabilities on their right to marriage.

41. The Committee is concerned about discriminatory laws and policies which restrict the rights of persons with disabilities, in particularly women, in all matters relating to marriage, family, parenthood and relationships, on an equal basis with others.

42. The Committee recommends that the State party repeal discriminatory provisions of family and other laws to ensure equal rights of all women and men with disabilities in matters related to marriage, family, parenthood and relationships.

Ukraine (2015)

42. The Committee is concerned about the reports of pressure on families imposed by public officials and professionals to place their children with disabilities in institutions and deny the right of persons with disabilities to a family life.

43. The Committee recommends that the State party take measures to provide necessary support to families with children with disabilities in order to guarantee the right of children with disabilities to grow up in a family environment and right to have a family life.

Croatia (2015)

33. The Committee is concerned that parental rights of persons with disabilities have not been recognized.

34. The Committee recommends the State party to take legal and practical action to ensure that persons with disabilities can exercise their parental rights and adopt children on an equal basis with others. It recommends that the State party provide accessible information on the sexual and reproductive rights to all persons with disabilities and to provide access to adoption services and to community-based support services for parents with disabilities.

Czech Republic (2015)

44. The Committee is concerned that provisions of the new Civil Code and the Act on Social and Legal Protection of Children (Act No. 359/1999 Coll., on Social and Legal Protection of Children, as amended.) explicitly allow for restriction of legal capacity in family matters, especially the right to marriage, parental responsibility, and adoption.

45. The Committee recommends that these provisions of the Civil Code and the Act on Social and Legal Protection of Children are repealed to ensure that persons with disabilities exercise their right to marry, parental rights and right to adopt on an equal basis with other and that support services are provided to parents with disabilities in the community.

Dominican Republic (2015)

42. Al Comité le preocupa la ausencia en el Estado parte de políticas para la protección de padres y madres con discapacidad referidas a la custodia de sus hijos e hijas; también le preocupan las prácticas discriminatorias contra personas con discapacidad, especialmente mujeres que desean mantener su fertilidad.

43. El Comité recomienda al Estado parte adoptar medidas para proteger a padres y madres con discapacidad para mantener la custodia de sus hijos e hijas; también le recomienda proteger los derechos sexuales y reproductivos de las personas con discapacidad, en igualdad de condiciones con las demás personas para que puedan mantener su fertilidad y fomentar la toma de conciencia de profesionales de la salud en esta materia.

43. The Committee is concerned that the State party does not provide adequate support to parents with disabilities to bring up their children, exercise their parental rights and to facilitate the adoption of children with disabilities.

44. The Committee recommends that the State party: a) Take measures to ensure explicitly in the law the prohibition of removal of children from their parents on the basis of their parents' disability; b) Ensure accessible and inclusive community support and safeguard mechanisms are available for parents with disabilities to exercise parental rights; c) Provide increased opportunities for the adoption of children with disabilities.

Mongolia (2015)

35. The Committee notes that the State party does not ensure the rights and responsibilities of all persons with disabilities, with regard to guardianship, wardship and trusteeship of their sons and daughters, including access to adoption. It also notes that it does not render appropriate assistance to persons with disabilities in the performance of their child-rearing responsibilities.

36. The Committee urges the State party to review and repeal all existing laws that prevent people with disabilities from exercising their parental rights, including the right to adoption, and to render appropriate assistance to people with disabilities in the performance of their child-rearing responsibilities.

Turkmenistan (2015)

41. The Committee is concerned that some persons with disabilities are not allowed to enter marriage based on the State party's concept of legal capacity. It also notes that the State party does not provide adequate assistance to persons with disabilities in performing their child-rearing responsibilities.

42. The Committee recommends that the State party review and repeal all existing legislation that prevents persons with disabilities from marrying or adopting children on the basis of disability of a person alone and adopt a new legislative framework and financial incentives that includes additional measures to enhance their parenting skills.

New Zealand (2014)

45. The Committee is concerned that sections 141, 142, and 144 (2) of the Children, Young Persons and Their Families Act 1989 appear not to give children with disabilities the same protections as other children when they are placed in out-of-home care. The Committee notes the passage of the Vulnerable Children Act 2014.

46. The Committee recommends that these two statutes be re-examined to ensure that children with disabilities have the same safeguards as other children when they are placed in out-of-home care.

47. The Committee is concerned that section 8 (1) (b) of the Adoption Act 1955 subjects disabled birth parents to differential treatment based on their disability. This provision enables consent to an adoption order to be dispensed with if the court is satisfied that the parent or guardian is unfit, by reason of any physical or mental incapacity, to be entrusted with the care and control of the child.

48. The Committee recommends that section 8 of the Adoption Act 1955 be repealed and that the statute be amended to ensure that parents with disabilities are treated on an equal basis with other parents with respect to adoption.

43. The Committee is concerned that support services provided to families of children with disabilities is limited to low-income families that include persons with severe disabilities. Due to short supply, even such services are insufficient. The Committee is furthermore concerned that the Government provides more subsidies and benefits to families adopting children with disabilities than to their families of origin, which encourages the abandonment of children with disabilities by their own families, in particular by single mothers who face compounded stigmatization, and denies the child's right to family.

44. The Committee recommends that the State party provide the legal basis for, and implement, comprehensive policies to enable parents, including single mothers, of children with disabilities to receive support to raise their child within the family and to ensure the child's rights to family and to participation in the community on an equal basis with other children.

34. The Committee is concerned about the lack of support for parents of children with disabilities, particularly mothers, who often leave their jobs to care for their children. It is also concerned that the minimum requirements for protecting the private life of persons with disabilities living in institutions are not guaranteed. Similarly, it regrets that persons with disabilities do not have access to age-appropriate information and education on reproduction and family planning matters.

35. The Committee strongly recommends the establishment of a support mechanism for families of children with disabilities with a view to preventing their abandonment or institutionalization. The Committee recommends that the State party take adequate measures to ensure that service providers respect and protect the right of persons with disabilities to a private and family life. It also recommends that access to age-appropriate information and education on reproduction and family planning should be made available to all persons with disabilities.

45. The Committee notes that the Civil Code restricts the right of some persons with disabilities to marry and their right to custody and guardianship of their children. It further notes that children with disabilities living in poverty are at greater risk of abandonment and placement in institutions.

46. The Committee urges the State party to:

- (a) Review and harmonize the Civil Code to ensure that all persons with disabilities have the right to marry and to have custody or guardianship of their children;
- (b) Set up programmes to provide sufficient support to mothers with psychosocial disabilities so that they may discharge their responsibilities towards their children;
- (c) Establish family support mechanisms in keeping with the recommendation made by the Committee on the Rights of the Child following the consideration of the third periodic report (CRC/C/MEX/CO/3, para. 55); and
- (d) Opt for the placement of all abandoned children with disabilities in foster care instead of in institutions and ensure that foster families receive the requisite support for their care.

Sweden (2014)

45. The Committee is concerned that social services can, upon requirement by a country of origin, deny the international adoption of a child to families where one partner has a disability; it is also concerned about families with disabilities being subjected to additional investigations, carried out by local authorities and social services in the framework of the national adoption system, to assess their parenting ability.

46. The Committee recommends that the State party ensure the prohibition of discrimination on the basis of disability in adoption procedures.

Azerbaijan (2014)

36. The Committee is concerned about the existing laws that prevent persons with specific forms of disability to adopt children and have a family.

37. The Committee urges the State party to repeal all existing legislation that prevents persons with disabilities from adopting children and provide a new legislative framework that includes support for parenting.

38. The Committee also expresses its concern about the legislation in force in the State party which allows parents of a new born boy or girl to place them under the custody of the State solely on the basis of their disability, without taking into account the best interests of the child. The Committee is further concerned that legislation in the State only allows for the adoption of children who are under five years old, which limits their rights under article 23.

39. The Committee recommends that the State party prohibit the placement of new born boys and girls with disabilities under the custody of the State by their fathers and mothers solely based on their disability. It further recommends that such a prohibition should be complemented with the strengthening of support measures so that mothers and fathers can take care of their children with disabilities, and that in those cases in which the possibility of placement is considered as a measure of protection, the best interests of the child should be duly respected. Furthermore, the Committee urges the State party to widen the age limit for adoption purposes.

43. El Comité expresa su preocupación porque mujeres con discapacidad, especialmente con discapacidad psicosocial e intelectual, sean separadas de sus hijos por motivo de su discapacidad;

44. El Comité exhorta al Estado Parte revisar los procedimientos en que se declare a mujeres con discapacidad como madres no aptas, y restituya plenamente el derecho a tener un hogar y conformar una familia, asegurando que cuenten con los apoyos necesarios para hacer tales derechos efectivos.

El Salvador (2013)

47. The Committee is concerned about the rules depriving persons with intellectual, psychosocial or hearing impairments of their legal capacity and about other barriers preventing them from entering into marriage and exercising their rights regarding family, maternity and personal relationships.

48. The Committee urges the State party to put in place adequate measures to make it easier for persons with disabilities to exercise their family and maternity rights.

55. The Committee is concerned at the State party's expansion of its schemes for homes for children with disabilities, undermining their right to live in a family.

56. The Committee urges the State party to adopt measures to encourage foster families and to provide financial support to low-income families with children with disabilities to enable the children to live with their families and be active members of the community. The Committee also urges the State party to guarantee equality of treatment for children with disabilities in the Family Placement Programme for Children and Adolescents requiring Protection and Support, and to revise the draft rules on subsidies to foster families and residential care institutions and bring them into line with the provisions of article 23 of the Convention.

Argentina (2012)

35. The Committee notes with concern that the right to form a family is denied to some persons with disabilities, especially those declared "insane" or "lacking legal capacity", in accordance with article 309 of the State party's Civil Code.

36. The Committee urges the State party to amend the Civil Code to bring it into line with article 12 and article 23, paragraph 1 (b), of the Convention and to make support services to assist with the demands of parenthood available to persons with disabilities who require them.

China (2012)

33. The Committee is deeply concerned that both the state party's laws as well as its society accept the practice of forced sterilization and forced abortion on women with disabilities without free and informed consent

34. The Committee calls upon the State party to revise its laws and policies in order to prohibit compulsory sterilization and forced abortion on women with disabilities.

Hungary (2012)

36. The Committee notes with concern that persons with disabilities still face various financial, physical and attitudinal barriers to founding a family and that scarcity of the support services for independent living, as elaborated in the above paragraphs 34 and 35, presents a de facto barrier to the full and effective enjoyment of the rights laid out in article 23 of the Convention.

37. The Committee calls upon the State party to take appropriate measures to enable men and women with disabilities who are of marriageable age to marry and found a family, as well as to provide adequate support services to men and women, boys and girls with disabilities to enable them to live with their families, with a view to prevent and reduce the risk of placement in an institution.

38. The Committee calls upon the State party to take appropriate and urgent measures to protect persons with disabilities from forced sterilisation.

Peru (2012)

34. The Committee is deeply concerned that, according to the technical Norm for Family Planning 536/2005 - MINSA from 26 July 2005, persons with “mental incompetence” can be sterilized without their free and informed consent, as a method of contraception.

35. The Committee urges the State party to abolish administrative directives on forced sterilization of persons with disabilities.

*Article 24 CRPD
(Education)*

September 2025

Article 24 – Education

1. States Parties recognize the right of persons with disabilities to education. With a view to realizing this right without discrimination and on the basis of equal opportunity, States Parties shall ensure an inclusive education system at all levels and lifelong learning directed to:
 - a) The full development of human potential and sense of dignity and self-worth, and the strengthening of respect for human rights, fundamental freedoms and human diversity;
 - b) The development by persons with disabilities of their personality, talents and creativity, as well as their mental and physical abilities, to their fullest potential;
 - c) Enabling persons with disabilities to participate effectively in a free society.
2. In realizing this right, States Parties shall ensure that:
 - a) Persons with disabilities are not excluded from the general education system on the basis of disability, and that children with disabilities are not excluded from free and compulsory primary education, or from secondary education, on the basis of disability;
 - b) Persons with disabilities can access an inclusive, quality and free primary education and secondary education on an equal basis with others in the communities in which they live;
 - c) Reasonable accommodation of the individual's requirements is provided;
 - d) Persons with disabilities receive the support required, within the general education system, to facilitate their effective education;
 - e) Effective individualized support measures are provided in environments that maximize academic and social development, consistent with the goal of full inclusion.
3. States Parties shall enable persons with disabilities to learn life and social development skills to facilitate their full and equal participation in education and as members of the community. To this end, States Parties shall take appropriate measures, including:
 - a) Facilitating the learning of Braille, alternative script, augmentative and alternative modes, means and formats of communication and orientation and mobility skills, and facilitating peer support and mentoring;
 - b) Facilitating the learning of sign language and the promotion of the linguistic identity of the deaf community;
 - c) Ensuring that the education of persons, and in particular children, who are blind, deaf or deafblind, is delivered in the most appropriate languages and modes and means of communication for the individual, and in environments which maximize academic and social development.
4. In order to help ensure the realization of this right, States Parties shall take appropriate measures to employ teachers, including teachers with disabilities, who are qualified in sign language and/or Braille, and to train professionals and staff who work at all levels of education. Such training shall incorporate disability awareness and the use of appropriate augmentative and alternative modes, means and formats of communication, educational techniques and materials to support persons with disabilities.
5. States Parties shall ensure that persons with disabilities are able to access general tertiary education, vocational training, adult education and lifelong learning without discrimination and on an equal basis with others. To this end, States Parties shall ensure that reasonable accommodation is provided to persons with disabilities.

Democratic People's Republic of Korea (2025)

46. The Committee is concerned about:

- (a) The promotion of a segregated learning environment in the Law of the Democratic People's Republic of Korea on the Provision of the Rights of Persons with Disabilities;
- (b) Insufficient progress in the provision of inclusive education, including the transition from segregated, special education to inclusive education and the lack of quality inclusive education, particularly due to the inadequate allocation of resources and the lack of reasonable accommodation based on individual requirements, leading to the seclusion of children with disabilities;
- (c) Insufficient training of teachers and non-teaching staff on the right to inclusive education, proficiency in Braille, sign language and disability-inclusive modes of teaching;
- (d) Limited accessible materials, adaptive learning environments, lack of sign language, alternative and augmentative modes and methods of communication;
- (e) The challenges faced by persons with disabilities, particularly women with disabilities and persons with intellectual, psychosocial or multiple disabilities, in accessing tertiary education and obtaining reasonable accommodation;
- (f) The absence of accurate, reliable data on students with disabilities receiving non-inclusive education, disaggregated by age, sex, school level and type of impairment, in both urban and rural areas.

47. Recalling its general comment No. 4 (2016) on the right to inclusive education, and targets 4.5 and 4.a of the Sustainable Development Goals, in close consultation and with active involvement of organizations of persons with disabilities, learners with disabilities and their families, the Committee recommends that the State Party:

- (a) Review its legislation and policies in the field of education, including the Law of the Democratic People's Republic of Korea on the Provision of the Rights of Persons with Disabilities, to bring them in line with the Convention, and ensure the participation of persons with disabilities, including children and youth, in its implementation and evaluation;
- (b) Develop and implement a comprehensive strategy with clear targets, indicators, and a concrete timeframe for the effective implementation of inclusive education policies, by reviewing existing strategies, ensuring adequate budgetary allocations, and mobilizing technical and human resources to provide all students with disabilities with reasonable accommodation and individualized support at all levels of education. The strategy should include a detailed plan to phase out segregated learning environments through the implementation of transition programmes that facilitate the systematic transfer of children from special to inclusive schools;
- (c) Ensure the training of regular education teachers and non-teaching education personnel on inclusive education and raise their awareness about the human rights model of disability;
- (d) Provide students with disabilities with learning support based on individual requirements, including classroom support and accessible learning environments, teaching methods and learning materials in alternative and accessible formats, such as inclusive digital access, and other modes and means of communication including Easy Read, communication aids, and assistive and information technology;
- (e) Take measures to ensure the full and equal inclusion of persons with disabilities in tertiary education, including through the provision of inclusive curricula, reasonable accommodations, and accessible physical environments, as well as by implementing targeted programmes aimed at expanding and diversifying vocational training and employment opportunities beyond traditional or stereotypical fields. Particular attention should be given to the requirements of persons who are deafblind, women with disabilities, persons with intellectual and/or psychosocial disabilities, and those with multiple disabilities;
- (f) Establish a comprehensive data collection system to gather accurate, disaggregated information on the educational participation of persons with disabilities at all levels, capturing participation rates by mainstream schools, special schools, rehabilitation centres, education at home and other types of schooling, disaggregated by age, sex, type of impairment, school level, and geographic location, to inform inclusive education policies and monitor their implementation.

Finland (2025)

46. The Committee is concerned at:

- (a) The lack of implementation of inclusive education, leading to the prevalence of segregated education;
- (b) The lack of qualified teachers to provide inclusive education;
- (c) The inaccessibility of the education system on the Åland Islands as well as the lack of retention, and limited educational development of students with disabilities;
- (d) The denial of enrolment to students with disabilities in higher education based on safety criteria and by the inaccessibility of university student information systems and websites.

47. The Committee recommends that the State party, in close consultation and active involvement of persons with disabilities, through their representative organizations:

- (a) Transform the education system into an inclusive education system, by, inter alia, implementing capacity building programs on the right to inclusive education of persons with disabilities, converting segregated education centers into support centers for inclusive education, reorienting the resources to support mainstream educational centers, ensuring the provision of reasonable accommodation for students with disabilities, including individualized learning plans, and guaranteeing educational performance evaluations without discrimination;
- (b) Improve training in educational settings on the rights of persons with disabilities and inclusive education, expand the number of qualified teachers, increase the recruitment of teachers with disabilities and ensure they are provided with reasonable accommodation, including in the Åland Islands;
- (c) Ensure that the regulatory review of the Åland Islands education system is in line with the Convention, and allocate sufficient resources to ensure all students with disabilities can access, remain, and pursue their education on an equal basis with others;
- (d) Review admissions procedures in higher education to ensure access for students with disabilities and that they can pursue their professional training on an equal basis with other students, eliminate requirements restricting or limiting their academic training based on the student's disability, and ensure that student information systems and university websites are accessible, including for blind students and students with visual impairments.

Kiribati (2025)

45. The Committee is concerned:

- (a) That many children with disabilities, particularly on the outer islands, continue to face barriers to inclusive, quality education;
- (b) About the lack of accessible school infrastructure, limited number of trained teachers, insufficient learning materials and the inadequate provision of assistive devices;
- (c) That the Kiribati School and Centre for Children with Special Needs, which was established and continues to be operated by a faith-based organisation, is not formally integrated into the national education system, relies heavily on external donor support and has insufficient and unstable funding, staffing, and resources, which limits its capacity to provide quality education to children with disabilities and to contribute effectively to advancing inclusive education across the country.

46. Recalling its general comment No. 4 (2016) on the right to inclusive education, and target 4.5 of the Sustainable Development Goals, the Committee recommends that the State party, in close consultation and active involvement of persons with disabilities through their representative organizations:

- (a) Ensure the full implementation of the Inclusive Education Policy and allocate adequate financial and human resources for its effective application on all islands;

- (b) Allocate sufficient resources to make all schools, including those on the outer islands, physically accessible and adequately equipped, through upgrading infrastructure in line with international accessibility standards, expanding teacher training in inclusive education, and ensuring the provision of adequate and accessible learning materials and assistive devices, including accessible digital formats, Braille, audio, Easy Read, and augmentative and alternative communication as well as ensure that funding provided by donors is spent in a disability inclusive manner and ensures accessibility for persons with disabilities;
- (c) Integrate the Kiribati School and Centre for Children with Special Needs into the formal national education system, to ensure sustainable funding, adequate staffing, and alignment with inclusive education policies, while at the same time strengthening its role in supporting and complementing inclusive education in mainstream schools, including on the outer islands;
- (d) Closely monitor and report on the enrolment and educational attainment of all children with disabilities and evaluate the results obtained through the Kiribati Inclusive Education Policy as well as undertake audits at schools in relation to compliance with the Convention and adjust their policies to address shortcomings and improve the results.

Maldives (2025)

47. The Committee is concerned:

- (a) That the Inclusive Education Policy (2021) does not cover all types of disabilities, and does not provide for reasonable accommodation, individualized assessment mechanisms and accessible formats of information and communication;
- (b) That despite the adoption of the Inclusive Education Policy (2021), many children with disabilities remain at home and do not receive support to access inclusive education due to barriers to inclusive education, including discriminatory attitudes towards children with disabilities that prevent them from enrolling in school, bullying, , resistance on the part of teachers, the school community and families, inaccessibility of school premises and recreational areas, including playgrounds;
- (c) About insufficient training for teachers and non-teaching staff on the right to inclusive education, proficiency in Braille, sign language and accessible modes of teaching;
- (d) About barriers faced by students with disabilities in accessing higher education.

48. Recalling its general comment No. 4 (2016) on the right to inclusive education, and target 4.5 of the Sustainable Development Goals, the Committee recommends that the State party, in close consultation and active involvement of persons with disabilities through their representative organizations:
