the 1990s, the number of people in the UK who are aged 65 and over has increased from 10.5 million to 13.5 million (19.5% of the population).

There is a growing awareness of the need to address the needs of older people, and the Government has set out a strategy for doing so in the White Paper on Ageing Better: A Strategy for Meeting the Needs of Older People (Department of Health, 2002). The White Paper sets out a number of key objectives, including:

- to improve the health and well-being of older people;
- to improve the quality of life of older people;
- to improve the opportunities for older people to participate in society;
- to improve the support available to older people.

The White Paper also sets out a number of key principles, including:

- older people should be treated as individuals, not as a homogeneous group;
- older people should be able to live independently and in their own homes;
- older people should be able to participate in society and to contribute to it;
- older people should be able to live in a safe and secure environment;
- older people should be able to access the services and support they need.

The White Paper also sets out a number of key actions, including:

- to improve the health and well-being of older people, the Government will:
 - invest in research and innovation to develop new treatments and services for older people;
 - invest in the training and development of health professionals to improve their skills and knowledge in caring for older people;
 - invest in the development of new services and facilities to improve the care of older people.
