ABSTRACT

Institutional Profile

Ariana Nexus is an institutional orchestration firm specializing in Afghan linguistic and cultural intelligence across 24 Afghan languages. It serves healthcare systems, federal agencies and their prime contractors, school districts, frontier AI laboratories, consulting firms and research institutions.

This profile sets out how the firm is built, rather than what it sells.

It describes the three-layer operating model — the Human Intelligence Collective, the AI Data Factory and the Cultural Compliance Bureau — and how work moves between them within a single engagement. It sets out the practice lines the firm operates, the standard every engagement is held to before it leaves the building, and the governance behind that standard.

It describes the people. The firm's team is drawn from the Afghan community and includes alumni of Cornell, Harvard, Brown, UBC, NYU and Columbia. Every interpreter is a college graduate; for medical assignments, the firm assigns interpreters whose academic background is close to medicine, so that clinical content can be explained and not merely relayed.

It sets out the delivery doctrine: engagements are produced in-house, with no subcontractors, no referrals and no brokered specialists — one engagement, one point of accountability.

And it states the compliance boundary the firm operates within, including that Ariana Nexus does not route documents, data or inquiries through channels controlled by the de facto authorities in Afghanistan.

The profile is written for institutions evaluating the firm — contracting officers, prime contractors, hospital leadership and research partners — who need to understand the operating model before they can assess the capability.
