Jody Gunn

CEO, Australian Land
Conservation Alliance

On behalf of the Australian Land Conservation Alliance board and team, I invite you to partner with us for the 2026 ALCA Conference.

ALCA and our members are at the forefront of nature action and innovation, driving scalable conservation that creates enduring ecological, social, cultural and economic value.

Our 11th conference – Nature-Climate Action: Our Opportunity to Lead – builds on a decade of world class conferences and attendance growth, signalling the sector's role as essential to Australia's prosperity and resilience.

Climate impacts and nature loss are accelerating. But this is both a time of urgency, and opportunity. Momentum is building behind nature-positive outcomes, climate adaptation, and Australia's commitments to protect and restore biodiversity. At the same time, new approaches to investment, partnership and stewardship are gaining traction, offering powerful ways to deliver nature and climate outcomes – together.

This year's program, in advance of COP31 in Türkiye, will spotlight how land conservation is contributing to climate mitigation and adaptation, supporting biodiversity, and delivering benefits for regional economies and communities. It will showcase the diverse leaders and partnerships driving on-ground solutions, demonstrate the strong business case for backing nature action, and explore the partnerships needed to unlock greater impact – across sectors, across landscapes, and across generations. What an opportunity to showcase how Australia can both lead, and learn.

More than sponsorship, this is an opportunity to collaborate with other leaders and organisations at the intersection of climate and nature solutions – and to help define the next chapter of conservation impact.

We hope you will join us.

Building towards a Global Stage in 2027

Image by: Biodiversity Legacy

This year's conference marks an important step in a broader journey connecting Australian conservation leadership to the global stage, as we build momentum toward the 2027 International Land Conservation Network (ILCN) Global Congress.

Held every three years, this global gathering brings together land conservation leaders from around the world. The Congress showcases global best practice, advances transformative solutions, strengthens high-level partnerships, and helps shape the future of land conservation internationally.

ALCA is proud to host the Congress in Melbourne - the first time it will be held in the Southern Hemisphere. We welcome partnerships with organisations across the Asia-Pacific to help deliver this landmark event, and encourage early conversations to maximise visibility, collaboration, and connection to a global audience.

Limited dual conference sponsorship packages are available for organisations that would like to commit to support both ALCA26 and ILCN27.
