

June 2026

Our American experiment began with a profound and audacious premise: that free individuals, granted the liberty to innovate and the opportunity to compete, could build the most extraordinary nation on earth.

Today, that promise remains as vital as ever.

From our headquarters in Oklahoma, Sagac works every single day at the intersection of business, advocacy, and public policy. We help corporate leaders, national industries, and trade associations navigate the complexities of Washington, ensuring their voices are not just heard, but are effective. As a specialized firm trusted by some of the nation's largest and most influential organizations, our own journey is a testament to the unique possibilities of the American free enterprise system.

Our daily mission is to protect the competitive marketplace from overregulation. By empowering businesses and trade associations to mobilize financial and political support, we ensure that creators, builders, and employers have a seat at the table where the rules of commerce are written.

The true strength of this country has never resided in its federal institutions or the halls of government. It lives among entrepreneurs willing to take calculated risks, employers creating jobs, the workforce driving our economy forward, and the communities solving problems through local action.

Behind every successful political action committee or advocacy campaign we build is an employer fighting to sustain and grow their workforce. When we help industries successfully navigate complex federal policies, we protect the capital stability businesses need to hire, expand, and invest in their workers.

For two and a half centuries, American enterprise has been the definitive engine of human progress. It has fueled unparalleled innovation, expanded economic opportunity, and provided the foundation for generations of citizens to pursue their version of the American Dream.

True prosperity requires consistency and policy predictability. By bridging the gap between national business leaders and lawmakers, we help foster a pro-growth economic climate.

This strategic advocacy keeps American industries globally competitive and secures a robust economy for families across the nation.

At Sagac, we are privileged to witness this spirit firsthand. We see it in the determination of business executives as they fight to grow their enterprises amid challenging regulatory landscapes. We see it in the dedication of industry champions working to solve complex policy initiatives. Most importantly, we see it in the thousands of individuals who care enough about the future of their industry and country to step forward, engage, and actively participate in our political process.

As we celebrate America, we reflect with deep gratitude on the foundational freedoms that make our work possible: the freedom to build, to compete, to advocate, and to meaningfully contribute to the governance of our republic.

Our vision for the next century is clear. May America always remain a place where enterprise thrives, where hard work is rewarded, and where robust debate strengthens our democracy rather than weakens it. Let us ensure that future generations inherit a nation that is economically resilient, strategically sound, and more prosperous than the one we celebrate today.

Happy 250th Birthday, America.

The work continues. The promise endures.
