4 Special Circumstances

What are 'special circumstances'?

Circumstances are beyond your control if a situation occurs which a reasonable person would consider is not due to your action or inaction, either direct or indirect, and for which you are not responsible. This situation must be unusual, uncommon or abnormal, or be based on compassionate or compelling grounds.

2. The circumstances made their full impact on you, on or after the census date

3. The circumstances have made it impracticable for you to complete the requirements for a unit of study.

Circumstances that make it impracticable for you to complete the requirements for your unit(s) of study include:

- Medical circumstances – for example, where your medical condition has changed to such an extent that you are unable to continue studying;
- Family/person circumstances – for example, death or severe medical problems within a family, or unforeseen family financial difficulties, so that it is unreasonable to expect you to continue your studies;
- Employment related circumstances – for example, where your employment status or arrangements have changed so that you are unable to continue your studies, and this change is beyond your control.
