Vince Papale

Resilience, teamwork, leadership and adapting to change

Vince Papale is a former Philadelphia Eagles player, teacher and coach whose journey inspired Disney's 2006 film Invincible. He joined the Eagles at age 30 without having played college football and became a special teams captain. His talks connect that experience with the preparation, trust and persistence that teams need when the outcome is uncertain. A colon cancer survivor, Vince also brings a personal perspective to patient and survivor events. His presentation From Underdog to Invincible: Lessons in Resilience explores purpose, discipline, leadership and adapting to change. He works with event organizers to connect his story to their audience and conference theme.
