

I also look at how the images feel shown one after another, as in a slideshow, and frequently zoom out and look at the grid as if each image was a scene in film – checking does the story make sense to me visually and meaning-wise. That way I sort of weave the tissue of my edit, till I get to place I'm content with.

