Ignacio (Nacho) Redondo is the Chief Financial Officer of Kairos Power. He is responsible for scaling the company's financial strategy and operations including fundraising, investor relations, cost accounting, financial reporting, and other core financial functions to support its continued growth and expansion.

Mr. Redondo has almost three decades of experience in finance and leadership from capital-intensive energy sectors across the United States, Latin America, and Asia. Previously, Mr. Redondo was the Senior Vice President of Finance at Nextracker, a leading provider of utility-scale solar infrastructure, where he led the company through a period of rapid growth and expansion. Prior to that, he held multiple senior finance and divisional CFO roles at public and private companies, with a start to his career as an auditor at a Big Five accounting firm. He has built and led high-performing international finance teams spanning multiple continents, with experience across corporate finance, accounting, financial planning and analysis, compliance, and business operations.

Mr. Redondo holds a master's degree in Agricultural Engineering from the Polytechnic University of Madrid.
