Pro-Public Safety Bills Defeated

Committee Composition Makes For An Uphill Battle

Ryan Sherman
Director,
Government Affairs

In legislative action that surprised no one, many of the pro-public safety bills introduced over the last two months were swiftly defeated in the oxymoronically-titled Senate and Assembly “Public Safety” committees.

Bills to crack down on child sex trafficking, organized retail theft, so-called “porch piracy” of package deliveries, were defeated by the committees’ overwhelming democratic majority members.

In the Senate, the Public Safety Committee has five members with four Democrats - one from Berkeley, one from San Francisco and two from Los Angeles. Just one member of the committee is Republican, representing the Inland Empire.

Similarly, the Assembly Public Safety Committee has a membership of eight, with Democrats comprising six, whose membership represents Los Angeles and the Bay Area with one Democrat vacancy waiting to be filled. The committee has two Republicans, one representing the Antelope Valley and the other, Riverside County.

The composition of these committees makes the passage of even the most modest pro-public safety bills nearly impossible, as it takes three votes in the senate and five votes in the assembly committee for the bills to advance.

// The composition of these committees makes the passage of even the most modest pro-public safety bills nearly impossible //

As detrimental to public safety as the stacking of the committees with legislators from extremely progressive districts is, it is not, however, a new phenomenon. This practice has been going on in Sacramento for decades, but is more lop-sided than ever.

Compounding efforts to provide more “balance” on these and other committees is the significantly reduced numbers of Republican legislators being sent to the capital by California’s voters.

Looking back on 1994, the numbers of Republicans and Democrats in the Assembly and Senate were much more evenly divided. Of the 40 seats in the senate, nearly one half (17) were held by Republicans. Today, there are just 9 GOP state senators. Similarly, Republicans actually held a majority for a short while in the mid-1990’s, winning 41 of the lower house’s 80 seats, but there are just 20 Republicans in the Assembly now.

In January of this year, the California Secretary of State reported the following voter registration numbers:

	Democrats	Republican	No Party Pref	Other
Statewide	10,275,371 46.7%	5,271,141 24%	5,039,628 22.9%	1,419,103 6.4%
Riverside	40.29%	31.65%	20.81%	7.25%

As you can see, Republicans represent about 25% of the registered voters and hold about 25% of the seats in the legislature.

Fewer members in the legislature results in fewer members serving on the various policy committees.

To be clear, not all Democrats in the legislature view law enforcement and public safety concerns as something to be rejected on the spot. There are many Democrats that are extremely pro-public safety. Conversely, while Republican lawmakers generally tend to vote to improve public safety, a handful of these conservatives will occasionally support efforts that are contrary to these goals.

However, rampant crime in both progressive and conservative communities has turned the issue of public safety policy into a top issue on voters' minds - and since 2022 is an election year, lawmakers and candidates are beginning to take voters' concerns into consideration.

// Voters throughout California will have an opportunity to decide the direction that they would like their elected leaders to take //

The majority of liberal school board members was recalled in San Francisco last month. The district attorney there is also facing a recall in June over voters' frustration with spiking crime and his refusal to prosecute offenders. Recent polling revealed that 68% of likely voters want him removed from office.

Los Angeles District Attorney George Gascon is also facing another recall attempt over his implementation of policies that treat offenders as victims and the actual victims of violent crime as the problem. Gascon has recently repealed some of his most criminal-coddling policies in an effort to blunt the recall proponents' momentum. Many observers have commented that it may be "too little, too late" for him to reverse the likely electoral damage he has caused.

The candidate filing deadline for the June 2022 mid-term primary elections passed mid-March, so now voters throughout California will have an opportunity to decide the direction that they would like their elected leaders to take.

Sheriffs, district attorneys, legislators and school board members will all begin to clamor for your votes.

The RSA will continue to advocate for your interests in Riverside and Sacramento and support those candidates and causes - regardless of party affiliation - that support and honor the work that you do.

Until next month, be safe. ★

Senate Bill 1127 Will Prove Beneficial To Both Injured Employees And Employers

By Scott O'Mara
Law Offices Of Scott O'Mara

Senate Bill 1127, introduced by Sen. Toni Atkins on February 16, 2022, acknowledges the unique demands placed upon first responders who develop specified work-related injuries, such as cancer, hernias, heart conditions, pneumonia, tuberculosis, PTSD, COVID-19, meningitis and back injuries.

This new legislation provides greater economic protection for the first responders who develop these injuries which can be presumed to be job-related by mandating a quicker response time by employers in providing medical care needed by the first responders to cure or relieve the effects of their injuries. Employers who do not meet these parameters are subject to a penalty of up to $100,000 for failure to make timely and appropriate determinations.

Previous harmful legislation was enacted that lowered the period of time during which workers could receive compensation for disabling injury conditions to 104 weeks – including cancer – while going through their recovery. S.B. 1127 will extend the period during which compensation is available to 240 weeks for injuries occurring on or after 1/1/23 for cancer. This positive development provides recognition of the extensive period of time it can take to recover from a complex medical condition such as cancer.

Also, employers by law have had 90 days to accept or deny the notice of a claim for Workers' Compensation benefits. S.B. 1127 now reduces that window to accept or deny to 30 days from the date of knowledge of the claim in the case of injuries such as cancer, hernias, heart conditions, pneumonia, tuberculosis, PTSD, COVID-19, meningitis and back injuries. If the employer fails to meet that 30-day deadline, the claimed injuries are presumed to be work-related. For other types of injuries, the employer's window to accept or deny is reduced from 90 days to 60 days, or else the presumption of compensability can apply.

If an employer unreasonably rejects a claim pursuant to Labor Code 3212-3213.2, the employer can be subject to payment of five times the amount of the benefits unreasonably delayed up to a penalty of $100,000.

The goal of S.B. 1127 is to reduce the level of a worker's disability and time missed from work, thereby potentially reducing the necessity for a disability retirement. This goal can be achieved by employers responding promptly to claims made and providing appropriate medical care as needed. The current system has been flawed in allowing employers more time than is reasonably needed to make appropriate determinations regarding the medical status of their employees - such as 90 days to accept or deny notice of a claim for Workers' Compensation benefits, which will be reduced to 30 or 60 days (depending upon the nature of the employee's injury) pursuant to S.B. 1127. This change will force employers and adjusting agencies to prioritize cases and move them along without delays which can slow a worker's recovery and cause economic hardship.

This new legislation provides greater economic protection for the first responders who develop these injuries which can be presumed to be job-related

The new 30-day limit for employers to accept or deny presumptive injuries creates a higher standard of care than previously has been the case. Similarly, the extension of the period during which workers with disabling cancer conditions can receive compensation from 104 weeks to 240 weeks also creates a higher standard of care and acknowledges the unique complexities and demands of cancer patients.

Previous articles have contained discussions regarding PTSD - including 2021 Issue #13 and 2021 Issue #15 - and how employers' costs could be lowered by expediting determinations regarding work-relatedness. Thus, S.B. 1127 will have benefits for both injured employees and their employers. ★
