

THE EARTH LINE

“A world redrawn from the centre.”

For centuries, China stood as the Middle Kingdom,
the axis around which the world revolved.
Trade, ideas and earth itself flowed outward, reshaping distant lands.

The Earth Line follows that pull, from Sichuan’s mountains to Sweden’s icebergs, through markets,
empires and frontiers.

Each cocktail marks where the line strikes ground:
rooted in China, shaped by foreign soil
and served with quiet force.

At the edge of the Earth Line, by the Aegean Sea, Greece met the East.
There it shared a philosophy of balance, where freshness, restraint and simplicity lead.

China sent the seeds. The Amazon did the rest.
What took root in that heat and rain grew into something nobody planned: wild, restless and refusing to sit still for a moment.

TART RHUBARB & FRESH FOREST NOTES

HIGHBALL

German brewers came to China with rules, processes and an unshakeable confidence in their craft. China had other ideas. What came out the other side was neither one thing nor the other, and quietly brilliant for it.

BAKED PEAR & WARM SPICE

MILK PUNCH

That pear tree didn't end up in a French orchard by accident. Carried west over centuries of trade, it took root quietly and grew into something the landscape claimed as its own. In the right hands, what hung from its branches became something rich, golden and impossible to rush.

China and Thailand have been in each other's kitchens, markets and fishing villages for so long that neither remembers who arrived first. It seeped in over generations, creating something warm and impossible to separate.

WARM SPICE, TANGY FRUIT & LATE-NIGHT COMFORT

SOUR

It's 2am, the night has gone sideways and someone's made a very good decision outside a Chinese takeaway. Loud, greasy, indulgent and completely without apology. This is what happens when two cultures meet at closing time.

SOUR

Chinese influence crossed the Pacific expecting to leave its mark on Peru. Peru had other plans. What came back was sharp, ferocious and on its own terms: the Earth Line at its most untamed.
