

Azule Energy celebrates the next generation of Chevening scholars

Azule Energy proudly joined the British Embassy's farewell ceremony for the 2026/2027 Chevening Scholars, celebrating a new cohort of talented young Angolans as they prepare to begin their postgraduate studies at leading universities across the United Kingdom.

The event brought together scholars, programme partners and representatives from government and industry to recognise the achievements of these future leaders and wish them success on their academic journeys.

The Chevening Scholarship Programme is the UK Government's global scholarship initiative, designed to develop future leaders, decision-makers and influencers. In Angola, the programme is supported through a partnership between ANPG and the Block 31 partners, including Azule Energy, Sonangol, Equinor and Sinopec.

Since 2018, this collaboration has helped provide scholarships to talented Angolans pursuing advanced studies in fields such as energy, environment, economics and law.

By investing in education and leadership development, Azule Energy continues to support the growth of local talent and contribute to Angola's long-term sustainable development. The company believes that empowering young professionals with world-class learning opportunities creates lasting value for both individuals and the country as a whole.

At Azule Energy, we are proud to support initiatives that create lasting impact by investing in people, strengthening institutions, and helping build a healthier and more sustainable future for Angola.

We congratulate the 2026/2027 Chevening Scholars and look forward to seeing the positive impact they will make in their communities, organisations and across Angola in the years ahead.
