

Deputy General Manager for Namibia

Azule Energy is pleased to announce the appointment of Rachel Msiska as Deputy General Manager for our operations in Namibia.

Rachel brings more than 12 years of experience in the energy and petroleum sector, with expertise in stakeholder engagement, public and government affairs, corporate governance, and community investment. Founder and Chairperson of the Women in Oil, Gas & Energy Network Namibia (WOGEN), she has built strong relationships across government, industry and civil society.

Prior to this role, Rachel served as Deputy General Manager and Public & Government Affairs Manager at ExxonMobil Namibia and held leadership positions within the Namibia Petroleum Operators Association (NAMPOA) and NAMCOR.

In her new role, Rachel will support Country General Manager Giovanni Aquilina in strengthening Azule Energy's presence and stakeholder relationships in Namibia as the company advances its long-term ambitions in the country.

"Rachel's appointment is an important step for Azule Energy in Namibia. Her experience, leadership and deep understanding of the sector will be invaluable as we continue building strong partnerships across the country. I am looking forward to working closely with Rachel as we support Namibia's energy ambitions," said Giovanni Aquilina, Country General Manager.

Rachel will be based in Windhoek.

Welcome to the team, Rachel.
