

JUDICIAL APPOINTMENTS MEMO

Thomas Jipping, Senior Legal Fellow

DATA AS OF MARCH 25 OF EACH PRESIDENT'S SECOND YEAR

ADVANCING AMERICAN
FREEDOM FOUNDATION

Background: Article III of the Constitution created the Supreme Court and gives Congress authority to create "inferior" courts with judges who serve "during good Behaviour."¹ This means they serve until they choose to leave or are removed following House impeachment and Senate conviction. Nominations to Article III courts are referred to the Senate Judiciary Committee and, if approved, listed on the Senate Calendar. The Majority Leader decides which nominations to bring up for action.

Cloture Votes: Debate must end before the Senate can vote on a bill or nomination. Ending debate on bills required unanimous consent between 1806 and 1917, when the Senate adopted Rule 22 to set a specific supermajority – today it's 60 votes. Rule 22 has applied to nominations since 1949, when it was amended to apply to any pending "matter." A filibuster occurs when an attempt to end debate fails.

Traditional Confirmation Process Norms:

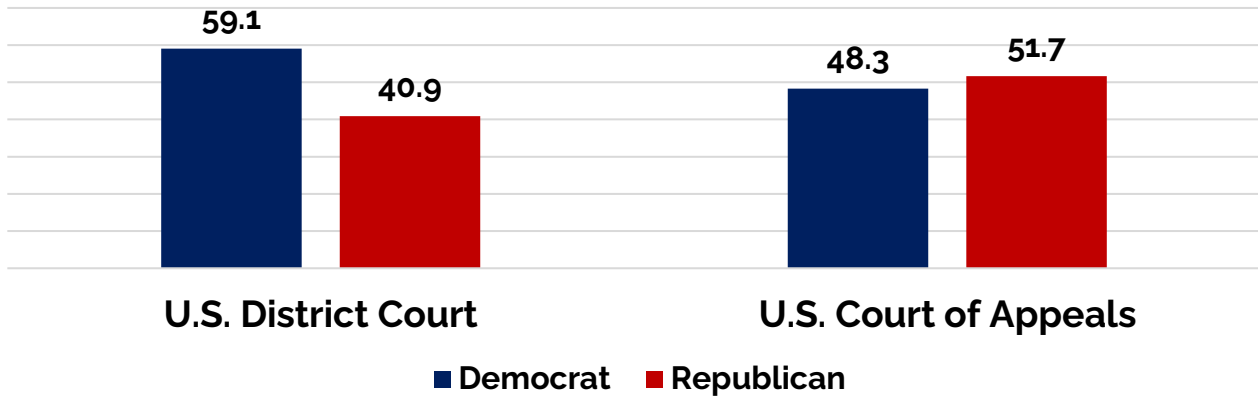

- The Senate confirmed most judicial nominations without opposition.
- Senators opposed very few judicial nominations by presidents of the other party.
- A very small percentage of judicial nominations had a separate vote under Senate Rule 22 to invoke cloture, or end debate, before being confirmed.
