Important information about Intelligent, its services and your rights.

1. Overview

Intelligent presents an ecosystem of financial technology, research and AI-assisted digital tools. This legal centre sets out general website terms, risk information and notices relating to available products and services.

This information is general. Where an account, transaction, advice or another regulated activity is offered, its separate product terms and disclosures identify the responsible service provider and the applicable arrangements.

2. Before using a service

Review the applicable agreement and disclosures before using an account-based or investment service. Access to a public website, demonstration, waitlist or educational material does not alone establish a client or advisory relationship.

3. Our legal documents

Regulatory Status & Licenses describes the service-specific nature of authorisation. Client Agreement and Terms of Use address the relevant service and website conditions. Risk Disclosure covers financial and technology risks. Privacy Policy, Cookie Policy and Data Management & Data Rights concern information handling. Security & Client Asset Protection distinguishes digital security from asset custody.

4. General information

Unless expressly identified as personalised advice under an applicable service agreement, website content, research, forecasts, examples and AI-generated outputs are informational and should not be treated as an instruction to trade or a promise of performance.

5. Questions

For questions about the documents or the terms applicable to a particular product, use the contact options provided on the Intelligent website or the relevant service interface.
