A POWERFUL PERSPECTIVE

A Trusted Global Community for Institutional Investors

For nearly 35 years, the Pacific Pension & Investment Institute (PPI) has convened pension and investment professionals for education, candid dialogue, and lasting connection. Nonpartisan and rooted in Asia and the Pacific Rim, PPI brings diverse perspectives to the issues shaping long-term investment.

Convening

Bringing Leaders Together, In Person

PPI's in-person convenings are designed for serious, participatory exchange among senior institutional investment leaders. Carefully curated groups engage with expert insights, question assumptions, and hear how peers approach consequential issues. Strong facilitation, purposeful interaction, and the Chatham House Rule create an educational, nonpartisan, and non-commercial setting where candor is possible and marketing is absent.

PPI's work continues — for our members today, and for the institutions and beneficiaries they serve for generations to come.

Content

Navigating the Global Investment Landscape

Programs combine expert knowledge with members' practical perspectives. Speakers provide context and pose challenges; participants connect broad developments to the choices and responsibilities facing their own institutions.

PPI's content agenda focuses on the forces shaping long-term institutional investment. Topics are selected for their impact on members and examined across markets, policy, geopolitics, technology, governance, leadership, and institutional resilience.

Trends & Issues

Asia-Pacific Perspectives

Regional perspectives from Asia and the Pacific Rim brought into a broader global investment conversation.

Geopolitics

How competition, fragmentation, conflict, and political change reshape markets, risk, capital flows, and institutional decisions.

Forces Shaping Long-Term Investment

Economic, market, policy, environmental, and societal developments that influence how institutions invest, govern, lead, and adapt.

Technology and AI

How Artificial Intelligence and other technologies are changing investment, risk, governance, operations, leadership, and the information environment.

Community

Establishing Trusted, Long-Lasting Relationships

PPI Membership

PPI is a nonpartisan educational convener of a global community of member organizations spanning pension funds, sovereign wealth funds, endowments, foundations, asset managers, advisors, and other long-term investment institutions. The PPI Community is intentionally curated and asset-owner-centered.

Membership is extended by invitation rather than through an open application process, typically after an introduction by a current member, board director, or PPI team member. The community is strengthened by organizations whose senior leaders contribute substantively, respect the Chatham House Rule and PPI's non-commercial norms, and bring meaningful institutional, geographic, or professional perspectives.

Each organization designates a principal representative who serves as its primary liaison to PPI and helps sustain the community's intimacy, trust, and continuity.
