New York 2026 — International artist Ute Lemper announces MOTHERS, a new global music project that brings together art, humanity, and social conscience in a powerful tribute to mothers across the world. Performed in multiple languages and accompanied by a large-scale visual concept, MOTHERS is both a song and an international message of peace, dignity, unity, and hope.

Written as an anthem for mothers and children everywhere, MOTHERS celebrates the women who protect, nurture, guide, endure, and fight for the future of the next generation. The project honors mothers of all cultures, religions, nations, and social realities — from those raising families in peace to those surviving war, displacement, poverty, and injustice.

At its core, MOTHERS is a call to recognize mothers as one of the most powerful moral and emotional forces in the world. Through music, storytelling, and imagery, the project speaks to the universal values of compassion, resilience, equality, and the protection of children.

Presented in multiple languages, MOTHERS is designed to cross borders and reach audiences internationally, creating an emotional connection between communities that may be separated by geography, politics, language, or faith, but united by the experience of care, love, responsibility, and hope for the future.

"No mother wants to send her child to war.

MOTHERS is dedicated to the women who carry the world — often quietly, often under immense pressure, and always with courage, love, a vision and endurance. This project is a song for peace, for children, and for the dignity of all mothers everywhere.

We mothers are are worried about the future of our children. We demand peace and humanity, sanity and empathy for all victims of political madness. What unites us all, people from all nations and religions is more wonderful and important than what separates us. Borders are arbitrary and made up by political leaders to divide. But we mothers must unite for the world our children will share."

— Ute Lemper

With MOTHERS, Ute Lemper invites listeners, cultural institutions, humanitarian organizations, women's groups, educators, and global audiences to join in amplifying a message that is both intimate and universal: that the future of humanity depends on how deeply we value care, protect children, and listen to the wisdom and worry of mothers.
