What do you hope to contribute as a mentor?

I hope to shine the light of Jesus into another's life. To help give counsel that will be for the good of this young woman and glory of God.

What special experiences do you have to contribute?

I completed my Ph.D. while raising a family, learning to balance academics, family, and faith through reliance on God. I also started a Bible study for international peers and bring a heart for cross-cultural relationships, along with experience transitioning from academia and clinical research into industry.

PROFESSIONAL BIO

Dr. Celee Spidel earned her Ph.D. in Biomedical Sciences from Texas Tech University Health Sciences Center, specializing in pharmaceutical sciences and cancer biology. She has successfully transitioned from academia and clinical research into the pharmaceutical industry, where she works as a Medical Science Liaison. Her experience spans pharmaceutical research and laboratory diagnostics giving her valuable insight into both academic and industry career paths.

As a mother of six who returned to graduate school while raising a family, Celee understands the challenges of balancing academic demands, family responsibilities, and faith. Her own journey taught her to rely on God's grace while navigating the pressures of graduate school. She has a special heart for international students and previously started a Bible study for peers from other countries who wanted to practice English. Celee is passionate about encouraging young women, helping them navigate life's challenges, grow spiritually, and discover their calling.
