What do you hope to contribute as a mentor?

I would like to help a grad student navigate academic and personal responsibilities without feeling overwhelmed. I would like to see them set and meet healthy goals.

What special experiences do you have to contribute?

I have experienced living as an international student through my studies in South Africa for nine months. I also have experienced recovering from the loss of close family and friends.

PROFESSIONAL BIO

Dr. Kimberly Hill is an Associate Professor of U.S. and African American History at the University of Texas at Dallas, where she teaches and researches at the intersection of history, religion, race, and international engagement. Her scholarship focuses particularly on African American Christian internationalism, missionary movements, civil rights, and the ways faith communities have engaged questions of race and social change.

Kimberly is the author of A Higher Mission: The Careers of Alonzo and Althea Brown Edmiston in Central Africa and has contributed extensively to scholarship on Christianity, missions, and African American history. Her work has taken her into archives, classrooms, and international settings, including study and research in South Africa.

An award-winning educator, Kimberly brings years of experience helping students develop as scholars, researchers, and thoughtful leaders. As a mentor, she can offer valuable perspective on navigating graduate education, academic careers, research and writing, teaching, and exploring the relationship between faith, scholarship, and vocation.
